Dismiss Motion By Ratepayers

GUELPH (CP) Holding that proceedings had been improperly launched, county judge R. S. Clark Wednesday dismissed a motion brought by ratepayers of the town of Harriston in an effort to unseat three members of the municipal board for alleged irregularities.

Judge Clark found several discrepancies in the proceedings that were brought by John W. McNabb, Harrison lawyer. He also upheld the objection of Roy Grant, counsel for the school board, that the motion was not in order.

The three ratepayers, Roy Corman, John Fawcett and William Neil, claim irregularities and want to unseat trustees W. A. Robins, J. E. Davidson and Hugh Murray. It is alleged the trustees accepted monies from the school board, one for the sale of roofing, another for work in applying the roofing to a school and a third for travelling expenses to a board meeting.

Coat Of Arms Outlines Life Of Bishop

The coat of arms of Bishop Benjamin I. Webster was displayed to the people of the diocese of Peterborough for the first time Wednesday when the Bishop was installed at St. Peter's cathedral.

Painted on a wooden panel by Edgar Boland, principal of St. Anne's school, it was mounted for the ceremony over the entrance of the cathedral.

From medieval times heraldic artists have devised shields for dioceses and ruling bishops in a manner wholly in the spirit whereby a country has its flag and the chief officers of the state their identifying standards.

Upon elevation to the episcopacy it is the custom and the privilege of a bishop-elect to select his coat-of-arms. In the choice of the various emblems that enter into the make-up of the shield and the motto, the bishop is guided by his personal views and tastes, by the See that he is to occupy, his diocese of origin or his family crest. Upon transfer to another See, the bishop changes only the part which designates his diocese.

THREE SECTIONS

The coat-of-arm has three distinct parts: the crest, proclaiming his official position in the church; the shield telling the story of the bishop and his diocese, and the motto expresing the policy or line of conduct by which he lives and acts.

The crest declares that the bearer of the arms is a bishop: the green hat with the 12 tassels, a processional cross, a mitre and a crozier all join to explain the characteristics of a resident bishop. The crozier is a sign of jurisdiction and is placed to the right of the beholder and its crook turned outward to denote a reign over definite territory. The simple cross and the mitre in its position to the left of the beholder denote the degree of dignity of the bearer.

The shield is divided into two parts by a vertical line and each side tells of one of the units of the union of loving care of a bishop to his diocese. The section of the shield to the left pertains to the diocese of Peterborough. On a red background, there are two golden keys with a maple leaf in gold displayed behind the keys. Since one interpretation of the meaning of Peterborough is "the borough or city of Peter," the new bishop's see is symbolized by the traditional symbol of Peter and his successors in the papacy. The maple leaf denotes that this city of Peter is in Canada.

The section of the shield to the right is divided into three parts. This section of the shield remains as it was while Bishop Webster was auxiliary bishop of Toronto. The red hearts enshrined in gold on a blue background represent his excellency's personal devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus and Mary. The red lion on gold refer to his birthplace, England. The silver swan in a gold ring on a blue background is the heraldic emblem of the Webster family.

His excellency's motto is taken from St. Paul's second epistle to the Corinthians, chapter three, verse five, "Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think anything as from ourselves, but our sufficiency is from God."

Instability In N. Africa Dangerous To NATO Allies

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

RABAT, French Morocco (AP)—Instability in North Africa has grave meaning for the allies in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. What if North Africa, and particularly Morocco, should blow up in internal strife?

The United States, in co-operation with the French, has three air bases completed and one nearly completed in Morocco, at a cost of more than $300,000,000. The bases were begun shortly after the Korean war exploded. The French permitted 7,500 Americans to be based permanently in Morocco to run the installations. Almost all are skilled personnel.

Present plans call for five bases in Spain to complement the North African program. This will make up a great single defence complex. There is an inner ring of bases in North Africa, England, Spain and Turkey and an outer ring forged by Iceland, Greenland and the Pacific area.

Experts say these rings are so formidable that Russia must keep its air force at 50 per cent fighters to offset the bomber threat.

Loss of Morocco would make a strategic bomber counter-offensive much more difficult. It would mean loss of an area within easy striking distance of strategic targets, an area whose weather permits take-offs all but 17 days a year.

The bases have brought frictions with them. Americans pay good wages to Moroccans to get work done well and quickly. This annoys many of the French who say American money in Moroccan pockets upsets the country's economy.

Communists are outlawed both in Tunis and Morocco, but there is a hard core of 500 Moroccan Communists, built up by French Reds.

Obviously under orders from outside, the Communist party of Morocco has become supernationalist—more than that, monarchist—in its attempts to woo and infiltrate the nationalist movement.

The Communists play constantly on an anti-American theme, trying to whip up local and nationalist sentiment against the U. S.

Atomic Light Danger To Eyes

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The light from an atomic explosion can cause fluid in the eyes to turn to steam and explode, four doctors from the school of aviation medicine at Randolph Field, Texas, reported Wednesday.

Rays from a bomb of the Hiroshima type can injure eyes 40 miles away, they told the American Medical Association.

The physicians tested the effects of atomic light at the atomic tests on the Nevada desert. They used rabbits for subjects.

If you should happen to be looking in the direction of an atomic explosion when it happens it won't do you any good to blink, the doctors said. The damage is done in a thousandth of a second. It takes one-tenth of a second to blink.

You owe yourself a change— try the whole-egg mayonnaise!

Do you ever get a little bored with salads that taste the same, year in, year out?

You can change all that, you know, with a different dressing. Of course, we mean "Switch to Hellmann's Mayonnaise." This rich, smooth mayonnaise is made with whole eggs, freshly broken. Whole eggs, for better flavor and smoother texture.

You'll find this real mayonnaise isn't strong and mustardy tasting like an average salad-dressing. It's mild, the way a mayonnaise should be. Hellmann's doesn't overwhelm your other salad ingredients.

Another reason you'll like Hellmann's . . . it goes farther! An ordinary salad dressing has a starch filler . . . but not Hellmann's! This means you can blend Hellmann's with other ingredients (fruit juice, cream, etc.) and still have a rich result.

Give yourself a change . . . try Hellmann's. Then you'll know why so many women are glad to pay a little more (and get a whole lot more) for the whole-egg mayonnaise!

Must Get Applications For Elevator Licence

TORONTO (CP) — Applications for licences to operate all freight and passenger elevators in Ontario except passenger elevators in Toronto, must be made by building owners immediately, Labor Minister Daley of Ontario announced Wednesday.

Regulations governing elevators, passed in 1953, came into effect last week, Mr. Daley said. Elevators are to be licensed by the province, with inspectors holding provincial certificates.

Contractors building or repairing elevators must be registered annually with the labor department.

The legislation does not apply to passenger elevators in the city of Toronto, where a municipal licensing service is already in effect.

Protocol Chief Dies

WASHINGTON (AP)—Raymond D. Muir, 57, deputy chief of protocol for the United States state department, died Wednesday. It was his job to arrange the itinerary of travelling foreign dignitaries and deal with such problems as the immunity of diplomats from arrest. His last big job was handling the visit of the king and queen of Greece to the U. S. last fall.

Witnesses Blame Too Fast Traffic Light Change For Death Of Small Child

A coroner's jury attached no blame to G. Ronald Reynolds, 26, truck driver, of 27 Braidwood Ave., in the death of Robert McCarthy, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward McCarthy, 230 Perry St., at the corner of Park St. and Lansdowne St., on May 25.

The McCarthy child, 13 months old, was instantly killed when his head was crushed by the wheels of the truck. He was being pushed across the intersection in his stroller, south along Park St., by his brother Terry, 9, when the accident occurred. The truck passed over Terry too, but he managed to roll clear from the wheels.

Coroner Dr. Herbert Young told the jury: "It was truly a miracle that Terry was not killed as well."

Edward J. McCarthy testified he did not see his child after the accident, even at the funeral. He thought one reason for the accident was a too fast change of lights at this intersection.

TRAPPED IN MID-INTERSECTION

Terry was trapped in mid-intersection, in front of the truck, waiting for a car and a truck which were beating the light and turning east on Lansdowne. Reynolds was parked waiting for a light facing west on Lansdowne. When it changed and Reynolds moved ahead, Terry and his brother were still in front of the truck.

FAILED TO TRACE TRUCK

Police have not been able to trace the truck turning east, although it was identified by Mr. Reynolds as a bright orange model from Marmora.

Crown attorney John A. Bradshaw said that the question of too fast light changes at all city intersections had been drawn to the attention of the city and the utilities commission at least two years ago.

One of he best witnesses was Terry himself. He said he was five feet in front of the truck, still trying to get across the street when the caution signal flashed. He thinks he tried to move on further but "I forget just what I did." He said the truck "just started up and went" before he had a chance to get out of the way.

ATTENTION DIVERTED

Gerald Fitzgerald, of 658 McKellar St., driving behind the Reynolds truck, said the truck pulled away, on the green light, "at a good even speed." He confirmed that a bright-colored Marmora truck had apparently diverted Reynolds' attention from pedestrian traffic.

The first he saw of the accident, said Mr. Fitzgerald, was Terry rolling out from between the left front and rear wheels.

While the parents of the dead child retired, Mr. Fitzgerald testified that the baby's head had been completely smashed. He said he threw a coat over the child's body.

VIEW LIMITED

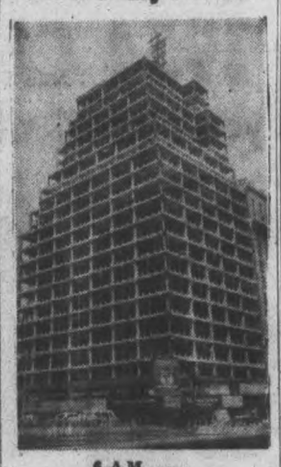
Const. Patrick Gillis testified he investigated the accident with Const. Dennis Smith. He told the jury he thought the view of a driver would be limited from the high seat of a large truck. A pedestrian approaching from the right would be hidden if any closer than 18 feet.

Dr. Young interjected that it might be wise to have separate stopping lines at intersections, one for cars and one for large trucks.

Juryman Fred Tuggey, a former alderman, quizzed Ronald Reynolds on his physical and mental condition the day of the accident. Reynolds said he had had a busy day, but was not overtired. He attributed his failure to see the pedestrians to the missing Marmora truck.

Since Reynolds was under the protection of the evidence acts, Mr. Bradshaw told Mr. Tuggey he could not cross-examine the witness. He said it was up to the jury to draw what conclusions it wished, not to ask Reynolds how he could have avoided the accident.

In his summation, Dr. Young said it "doesn't look like anybody was at fault in this accident." After about 30 minutes, the jury brought in a verdict exonerating Reynolds from responsibility.



Edward O. Fanjoy, on behalf of the McCarthy family indicated there may be a suit for civil damages.

Members of the jury were T. H. Glover (foreman), Fred Tuggey, Ezra Ray, Hugh Cruikshank and C. E. Coleman.

Committee Tours Place Of Missing Bridge

By WALTER GRAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TERRACE BAY, Ont. (CP)The Ontario legislature's highways investigation committee Wednesday toured the road of the "missing" bridge. It also decided to summon key officials of the highways department from Toronto to appear before the committee in Fort William Friday.

The committee crossed temporary bridges over the Prairie, Steel and Little Pic rivers, sites for future spans. Chairman Kelso Roberts (PC — Toronto-St. Patrick) said it could be assumed the widely publicized missing bridge, reported to have been paid for but not erected, was to have been located over the Little Pic gorge, so the bridge is not lost and there has been no payment for something that isn't there, he said.

Hugh McMillan, an engineer of the highways department, said the bridge was still on the drafting boards. Construction problems faced at Little Pic have delayed its erection. On one side of the gorge is solid rock, on the other sand.

Meanwhile a detour had to be cut down the side of the 500 foot deep gorge and a Bailey bridge erected over the river.

Clare Mapledoram (PC — Fort William) said it was originally intended to keep the highway closed until the bridges were constructed but strong pressure exerted by Lake Superior communities forced the highways department to open the road for travel. Two of the contracts for the highway were awarded to Tomlinson Bros. Ltd., one of the contracting firms charged with conspiracy. Three contracts were held by Wolfe Construction Ltd. and one by Fort York construction. These two firms went broke on the job.

During the day an argument developed between Opposition Leader Farquhar Oliver and chairman Roberts.

Won't Reveal Methods Of Fighting Reds In Canada, Prime Minister Declares

OTTAWA (CP) — The government declines to give any information on its knowledge of communism in Canada or methods of fighting it.

That kind of information, Justice Minister Garson told the Commons Wednesday night, is just what the Communists want.

Mr. Garson made the reply to questions by John Blackmore (SC—Lethbridge) regarding steps being taken to counteract communism.

Mr. Blackmore, who has made repeated Commons speeches about communism, said the Red high command "just plays across the world like a skillful performer playing the piano."

SAYS STAGE SET

Communists planned every move in advance and "have the stage all set for British Columbia next." A newspaper report had said B.C. had 90,000 Communists "and they are probably all ready to march." He did not elaborate.

"We are losing the cold war," Mr. Blackmore declared.

When one member said that statement gave comfort to the enemy, he replied: "That is true; it is comfort to the enemy. But we may just as well confess it and then try to do something about it."

He asked what has been done to discover Communist techniques, what success communism has achieved in Canada and what means are available to combat communism.

"I am afraid the answer to every one of these things would be just plain nothing."

COMPLETE RETICENCE

Mr. Garson replied that complete reticence is the only safe policy in discussing the counter-espionage work of the RCMP's special branch, which deals with subversives.

"There is nothing in the world that would be more helpful to the Communists than to know what we know about them and precisely how much we do know and therefore by inference what we do not know."

Nothing would help Communists more than to disclose the opinions of RCMP experts on the success of communism.

To say what counter-measures are available "would be giving away our whole program of counter-espionage and by that means largely destroying its usefulness."

RELUCTANT DECISION

Mr. Garson said he made the decision reluctantly. He was sure Mr. Blackmore would be the last member of the House to ask questions whose answers would give comfort to the enemy.

Mr. Blackmore, who charged in a previous speech that some CBC broadcasts follow the Communist line, said the government should know what that line is.

If radio speakers were following the Communist line, perhaps unwittingly, the government should be able "to detect all these speeches which are along the Communist line and could cause them to be modified; or if it is deemed wise that such speeches should be given, why not have speeches that will answer them?"

To a member's question as to who would censor the speeches, he replied: "We can easily find people to censor them."

REFERS TO TALK

Mr. Blackmore referred to a CBC radio talk May 9 by J. B. McGeachy, who is a member of the editorial page staff of the Toronto Globe and Mail.

He read the following excerpt he said was monitored from Mr. McGeachy's talk on the Indo-China war:

"But without going in for prophecy, I will venture these opinions: First that the best result to be hoped for in Indo-China is an armistice, followed by some compromise arrangement which, if possible, will give the Indo-Chinese a chance to decide what form of government they prefer; and second, that the West must come somehow to terms with and live with the Asian social revolution whether it takes a Communist form or, as in India, Pakistan and elsewhere, a non-Communist form. No amount of military force exercised by the West will decide, from this day forward, the destiny of any Asian state."

GIVES OPINION

Mr. Blackmore said he feels Mr. McGeachy had no intention of following the Communist line, but was doing so in that speech. It was an announcement to China and Russia that they had a green light for aggression and an announcement to freedom-loving Asians that they should not fight communism.

Mr. Garson said Mr. McGeachy has a distinguished journalistic and broadcasting career.

"As one who knows Mr. McGeachy I can say that whatever one might think about his views he is certainly not a Communist by any stretch of the imagination.

"He is a good, loyal Canadian and while my honorable friend may not agree with all of his opinions I do not think that that warrants any accusation of him being in any way disposed to favor the Communists or communism."

Mr. Blackmore, speaking later, said that all he has heard about Mr. McGeachy indicates Mr. Garson's statement was "exactly right."

Joseph Habel (L — Cochrane) said Mr. Blackmore should give any information to the RCMP.

"By so doing he would certainly serve his country better than to try to start in this country what other countries have tried to do by throwing smears. . . "

Mr. Blackmore replied: "I am telling the absolute truth, not smearing anyone. If the facts are smearing a man, it is his own fault."

D. R. Michener (PC—Toronto St. Paul's) said he resents "highly improper aspersions against a very reputable journalist."

Most Rev. B. I. Webster Installed 8th Bishop Of Peterborough Diocese

Impressive Ceremony In St. Peter's By James Cardinal McGuigan Witnessed By Capacity Congregation

Most Reverend Benjamin Iberson Webster was solemnly installed as the eighth Bishop of Peterborough Wednesday evening in the cathedral of the Roman Catholic diocese, and its see, the church of St. Peter in Chains.

Apart from its investing formality, the ceremony was essentially simple as conducted by James C. Cardinal McGuigan, of Toronto, whom Bishop Webster has served as auxiliary bishop since his consecration in November 1946.

Respect and goodwill, and a palpable atmosphere of felicity in the reception of Bishop Webster was reflected in the large congregation that filled the Cathedral. Incidental effects of color were woven into the scene by the scarlet of Cardinal McGuigan's robes, the purple of the Bishops and Monsignors, the khaki uniforms of four chaplains of the armed services, the plain black and white of the Sisters occupying the east wing, the white surplices of the many priests in a central part of the nave, the formal dress of Knights of Columbus of the city and district, and the kaleidoscope of the summer gowns of the women of the congregation.

WATCHED PROCESSION

Bishop Webster began his episcopate in broadened jurisdiction with manifest evidence of a sincere desire to welcome him and wish him well in his new responsibility. Many people lined Reid St. from the rectory to the church for the procession of the attending clergy.

Cardinal McGuigan was attended by his secretary, Rev. William O'Meara of Toronto, and Very Rev. J. J. Garvey of Hastings, and Bishop Webster's attendants were Rev. J. V. Gillogly of Port Hope and Rev. John Ryan of Britt. They were met at the inner door of the cathedral by the rector, Rev. J. F. McGuire, in the brief reception ritual for prelates. The choir, whose singing was an impressive feature, greeted them with the hymn, "Ecce Sacerdos Magnus."

In the sanctuary, prescribed prayers for the rite of installation were offered by Cardinal McGuigan and Bishop Webster.

Cardinal McGuigan vacated the chair of the resident bishop and walked to the altar in front of which Bishop Webster had been provided with a briefly occupied seat. The installation led from the altar to the throne, and as Bishop Webster took his place there, Cardinal McGuigan crossed the sanctuary to a secondary chair after presenting His Excellency with a crozier, suggesting the Shepherd's staff, and emblem of episcopacy.

That essence of the effect of the new episcopal appointment followed the reading of the apostolic mandate by Rev. V. J. Corkery, diocesan administrator, in the English translation. Actually, Bishop Webster, arriving in the afternoon from Toronto, had met the members of the diocesan council, and presented that papal credential to them. The members of the council, who in the evening accompanied the bishop in the procession, were: Monsignor F. J. O'Sullivan, Monsignor J. V. McAuley of Lindsay, Monsignor P. P. Bench; the Rev. J. P. Collins, Cobourg; the Rev. J. J. McCarthy, Douro; the Rev. C. J. Moloney, Campbellford, and the Rev. V. J. Corkery.

From the act of installing, Cardinal McGuigan proceeded with the rest of the order for the evening, addressing the congregation and Bishop Webster.

VISITORS

Among a group of representative citizens present were noticed: Premier Leslie M. Frost, to whom Bishop Webster bowed in recognition as the processional moved from the church; Senator J. J. Duffus, Hon. Harold R. Scott, Gordon K. Fraser, MP; Duncan Sinclair of Lindsay, a friend of the Premier; Ald. A. B. Burrows, Maurice E. Holt accompanying his wife, Ald. Alene Holt, Robertson Davies. Ald. P. J. Anglesey was with the Knights of Columbus, and also Dr. Gerald Lunz, Supreme Physician, K. of C., New Haven, Conn., formerly of Hamilton. Senator Duffus was accompanied by Mrs. Duffus.

Bishops present from other dioceses were: Most Rev. J. F. Ryan, DD, Hamilton; Bishop Rossario Brodeur, DD, Alexandria; Bishop J. C. Cody, DD, London; Bishop L. P. Whelan, DD, Montreal; Bishop Edouard Jette, DD, auxiliary Bishop of Joliette, Que.

Other bishops were represented by priests. They were: Bishop P. F. Pocock, Winnipeg; Bishop M. Johnson, Nelson, B.C.; Bishop M. J. Lemieux, Ottawa; Bishop Isodore Borecky, Apostolic Exarch of Eastern Canada.

Occupying the central front seats were the sisters of Bishop Webster, Mrs. M. J. O'Brien, and her husband, and Miss Mary Webster, both of St. Catharines.

Archbishop J. A. O'Sullivan of Kingston arrived here this morning for the first high mass Bishop Webster celebrated in the cathedral. His Grace preached the sermon.

In his address to the congregation, Cardinal McGuigan said he was presiding at the sacred function with mingled feelings — of regret at losing a devoted coworker, "and of joy in the thought that he is now a Bishop in his own right and in one of the most beautiful dioceses of our country."

He spoke on a text from Ezekiel: "And I will set up a shepherd over them; and he shall feed them even my servant David."

All through the old law as well as in the new testament, the pastoral office has been portrayed as that of a shepherd looking after his flock, defending them in times of danger, and tending to their spiritual needs.

City's Total Assessment $58,307,975 For 1953

Peterborough's total 1953 assessment has been reported as $58,307,975 in the annual report of the assessment department to city council. This is an increase of $16,043,213 over the 1952 total.

This increase of approximately 30 per cent was largely attributable to the re-assessment of all property in the city last year.

Final computation of figures was made some days ago and did not take into account the $248,220 reduction, arrived at in a settlement Wednesday, of the assessment of the Canadian General Electric Company, who had appealed to the county judge from a decision by the court of revision. This would bring the total 1953 assessment for the city down to $58,059,755.

LITTLE EFFECT

The reduction was less than one half of one per cent of the total figures for the city, however, and did not seriously upset the ratio of residential to industrial and commercial assessments.

Working with the totals in the report, the grand total was made up of $30,665,400 residential assessment, $8,987,515 commercial, $9,802,950 industrial, and $357,330 miscellaneous. (Miscellaneous includes assessments of such properties as farms, clubs, halls and non-profit organizations.)

Adding $2,737,920 to commercial assessments and $5,756,860 to industrial assessments for business taxes, shows the properties of the total assessment of the city to be 52.59 per cent on residential property, 20.11 commercial, 26.69 industrial and 0.61 miscellaneous.

Value of properties exempt from municipal taxes, except for local improvements, by provincial statute included: churches, $1,081,660; schools, $1,875,050; federal government property, $906,480; provincial government property, $330; cemeteries, $77,900; Ontario Hydro, $205,500; PUC, $80,000; hospitals and charitable institutions, $1,871,150; county property, $148,950; city property, $986,320; vacant city property, $16,470.

Under section 51 of the Assessment Act, dealing with buildings not built or incomplete at the time

Bishop Webster Born In England, Pastor In Toronto

Bishop B. I. Webster, newly installed Roman Catholic Bishop of Peterborough was born in Hull, England, and as a small child was brought to Canada by his parents. Their destination was St. Catharines, and it was there that Bishop Webster grew up and received his early education. He completed his academic studies at St. Michael's College, subsequently at St. Augustine's Seminary, and was ordained for the diocese of Toronto in 1923.

Bishop Webster's first priestly appointment was assistant in Our Lady of Lourdes parish, Toronto, and after several transfers he was assigned to his first pastorate at Grimsby, 1936 to 1942. He also served at Welland, and was finally consecrated bishop in St. Michael's Cathedral, Nov. 21, 1946, by Cardinal McGuigan. In the last few years he has been pastor of St. Joseph's church, Toronto.

Tributes to the work of Bishop Webster were recently paid at a parting dinner by the Holy Name Society, and also other groups including the Catholic Women's League, of which he was diocesan director.

FIRST IN 1874

The first Bishop of Peterborough was J. F. Jamot, 1874-1887, who was sent out from France as vicar apostolic before the establishment of the diocese in 1882.

The others in succession were: T. J. Dowling, 1887-89, being transferred to Hamilton. Richard Alphonsus O'Conner, 1889-1913. Michael J. O'Brien, 1913-29, the first and only native of the city and diocese to attain its leadership.

About that time or a little earlier, Rev. David Joseph Scollard, a son of Ennismore township, and the rector of St. Peter's, was appointed the first bishop of North Bay. The educational institution, Scollard Hall, perpetuates his name in remembrance of the pioneer work he performed in what was previously the far western section of the old diocese of Peterborough.

In 1929, Bishop O'Brien was appointd coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston.

Denis O'Connor, 1930-42, coming from London, Ontario, and an academic background.

John R. MacDonald, 1943-1945, now Bishop of Antigonish.

Joseph Gerald Berry, 1945-1954, of recent memory in his nine years in Peterborough ending with promotion to be Archbishop of Halifax.

Theft Of School Radios May Be Part Of Pattern

Provincial police are investigating what may be a pattern of thieving from rural schools.

Within three days last week two radios were stolen from public schools in Otonabee township.

On June 17 a $35 mantel radio, donated by the Home and School Club, was stolen from the Rifle Range school in Otonabee township. A door was jimmied by the thief to get in.

Then on Saturday another radio, valued at $22.50, was stolen from SS No. 5 on the 6th line of Otonabee, reported Mrs. Helen Robertson, teacher at the school.

FORCED WINDOW

The thief is believed to have forced the window of the girls' cloakroom, removing a dustpan from the ledge inside the cloakroom window as he got in. Passers by, late Saturday afternoon, noticed the dustpan outside the school.

The radio was bought in 1951 from money raised by the children at a Christmas concert.

"I'd like to warn other teachers in case a series of thefts are planned," Mrs. Robertson told the Examiner.

Heavy Trailer Crushes Cab Driver Killed

LINDSAY (ENS) — Clifford Mallon 26, of Manilla, was killed Wednesday night when the heavy trailer he was hauling flipped on the top of the cab of his truck after a collision with another truck on a Mariposa township road some 20 miles north west of here.

Mallon's tractor trailer and a heavy gravel truck which was leaving a pit near the township road south of Woodville collided. The impact turned the gravel truck around and Mallon's truck went into the east ditch. After the cab dropped down the two foot incline the trailer flipped over crushing in the top of the cab. Another occupant of the cab, Stanley Burke, 50, also of Manilla was not seriously injured.

Police said the gravel truck owned by Fred Nelson of Keene was driven by Ronald Mounteny of Bancroft. After the accident the heavy power shovel from the pit was used to lift the trailer from the cab to free the dead and injured man.

Constable Jim Hall investigated the fatality the second in the Lindsay area this year.

Milkman Convicted

DETROIT (AP)—A jury Wednesday convicted John P. Lange, 51-year-old milkman, of murder in the shooting of his love rival, John W. Mattson, 53, a steel company executive. The verdict calls for mandatory life imprisonment. Police said Lange confessed to killing Mattson as he sat at his desk last Jan. 25 at the Atlas Steel Co. offices.

2,000,000 Acres Out Of Production

TORONTO (CP) — Two million acres of Ontario farm land went out of production in the years between 1931 and 1951, the Chemical Institute of Canada was told Wednesday.

A corrective policy in the treatment of renewable natural resources is urgently needed if the annual loss of agricultural land and depletion of the forests is to end, F. H. Kortright, president of the Conservation Council of Ontario, told the institute.

Six Of Injured In Truck Crash Still In Hospital

Six of 14 Burleigh Falls young people, injured Tuesday night when they were tumbled out of a truck north of Buckhorn, are still in hospital.

Two of them are in critical condition in Civic Hospital. They are Stewart Whetung, 17, scalp wounds, head injuries, and an injured left arm and right knee; and Kenneth Boast, 15, a fractured jaw, fractured wrist, and head injuries.

Another one of the Boast family, 16-year-old Gweneth, is described as "seriously ill" with chest injuries and shock. Altogether six of the family were involved in the accident. Alvin Boast, 14, was killed and five brothers and sisters were hospitalized.

Larry Boast, 18, who received two cut fingers on his left hand and a bruising, was released Wednesday afternoon from St. Joseph's Hospital.

In satisfactory condition in Civic are Grace Brown, 21, concussion and shock; Mrs. Lloyd Brown, 28, an injured knee; and Jesse Spencley, 34, a broken collarbone.

Seven others—members of the Burleigh Falls softball team and team supporters—were given outpatient treatment at the two hospitals Tuesday night.

Finds Prisoners' Hobbies May Be Useful

OTTAWA (CP) — A gorgeous hand-painted tie, matching an ice-green suit, was offered to the Commons Wednesday night as an example of prison - made goods which should be given wider public sale.

Harold E. Winch (CCF—Vancouver East), wearer of both tie and suit, said the tie was painted in the British Columbia penitentiary by a man serving a seven-year sentence.

It was made as part of an excellent hobby program in the prison, he said, and he urged Justice Minister Garson to encourage the sale of such hobby products to help prisoners save money for rehabilitation after release.

Justice Minister Garson said he is happy to hear such opinions. Genuine work was the best thing that could be provided for prisoners.

The value of production in federal prisons was $1,200,000 a year. Some of that was used in the prisons. Prisoners could send hobby products to relatives, or sell them to officers and visitors. From time to time a public hobbycraft sale was sponsored by some service club.

YOUNGEST RADIO HAM — Believed the youngest amateur radio operator in Canada, nine-year-old Judy Kannegiesser, of North Bay, has received her government licence. To get it, she had to master the theory of radio and electricity, draw a circuit for a three-tube radio and send code at the rate of 13 words a minute. Daughter of Gordon Kannegiesser, 34-year-old railway conductor, she first became interested in radio in her father's basement radio "shack." Her mother also has a radio ham's licence.—(CP Photo).

Test Strength Of Adenauer

By BRACK CURRY

DUESSELDORF (AP) — Nine million Germans in the Ruhr industrial belt will vote Sunday in a state election testing Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's grip for the first time since his successful 1953 campaign.

Adenauer's Christian Democrats and a potent opposition array headed by the Socialists stake the outcome in North Rhine - Westphalia on foreign policy.

Adenauer wants a renewed vote of confidence in European unity, while the Socialists say unity between Germany's eastern and western wings should come first.

The rightist Free Democrats, part of Adenauer's governing national coalition, are running independently here. They demand diplomatic relations with Moscow followed by negotiations with the Soviet Union to reunite Germany.

SEES RUSSIAN DEAL

An Adenauer defeat in balloting for the 200-member North Rhine-Westphalia Parliament would almost inevitably stir rumblings inside other Adenauer coalition parties for a new look in West German foreign policy—meaning an attempt to make a deal with Russia.

A Christian Democrat setback would also deprive Adenauer of his two-thirds control of the Upper House of the Bonn federal Parliament. Each state legislature sends representatives to this chamber.

In the national election nine months ago, the Christian Democrats polled 48.9 per cent of the vote in North Rhine-Westphalia. The Socialists got 31.9 per cent, the Free Democrats 8.5 and the Communists 2.9.

The Christian Democrats hold 94 seats in the present state Parliament, followed by the Socialists with 67, the Free Democrats with 26 and the Communists with 12.

Approve JPs

TORONTO (CP)—Four new justices of the peace have been approved by the Ontario government, it was announced Wednesday. The appointments, recommended by Attorney-General Porter, are: Mrs. Adrienne Laroche of Eastview, for Carleton county; William Haneley of Chatham, for Kent county; Kenneth McGregor of Cobden and John Harrington of Killaloe Station, for Renfrew county.

Pray Against It

CALLANDER (CP) — Prayer groups are being organized to pray for the rejection of cocktail bars in a township plebiscite June 30. Rev. C. E. Peacock, minister of Emmanuel United church, said groups are being formed at Callander and nearby Ferris, a few miles south of North Bay.

Landlord Charged

TORONTO (CP) — James F. Howell, 33, landlord of a Toronto rooming house where a fire last Feb. 18 caused the death of a 14½-months-old baby, Wednesday was committed for trial on a charge of criminal negligence. The baby was Donna Creswell, daughter of Mrs. Joyce Creswell.

Inspector Douglas E. Walker of the Ontario Hydro said the fire was caused by an excessive overload of a circuit.

Three Major Welfare Issues Studied

TORONTO (CP) — Unemployment, immigration and the needs of old people were three of the most important social problems which faced Canada last year, according to the annual report of the Canadian Welfare Association.

R. E. G. Davis, executive director, who presented the report to the council's annual meeting Wednesday, said: "Our concern with unemployment must be not only to prepare for crisis but to prevent or at least mitigate human suffering in 'normal' times."

Ill-considered decisions on immigration policy can affect the quantity and intensity of welfare problems among immigrants, he said. Constructive and energetic action should be taken to solve such problems as confused reception services for care of the immigrant on arrival and inadequate provision for medical care or financial assistance during illness.

A meeting of the delinquency and crime division registered practically unanimous opposition to the establishment of legal national lotteries.

The division also recorded a vote in favor of further restrictions in the present Criminal Code on gambling.

Lawrence Freiman, Ottawa business man, was re-elected for his second term as president of the council.

Parole Committee Study British Plan

OTTAWA (CP)—A special committee studying Canada's system of parole and remissions of sentences will include a study of similar schemes in Britain and Belgium in its work.

Justice Minister Garson said in the Commons Wednesday night that he does not expect a report before 1955 from the committee, established last Oct. 16 under chairmanship of Mr. Justice J. H. G. Fauteux of the Supreme Court of Canada. The members include many penal experts.

22nd Parliament Drew Agrees Dullest On Record

OTTAWA (CP)—State Secretary Pickersgill and Opposition Leader Drew agree that the first session of the 22nd Parliament has been the dullest on record.

Mr. Drew also told the Commons Wednesday that the session has either been the second or third longest in history and the least productive.

The Commons has been sitting 136 days, which equals the modern record established by the 1944-45 session. The 1908 session which extended through 236 days without any lengthy adjournments is believed to be the longest on record.

The general nature of the session was criticized by Mr. Drew after he suggested a number of methods to expedite the business of Parliament.

It is understood the government has agreed to postpone action on rule changes until next session.

Victoria Becoming Dirtier As Garbage Strike Continues

VICTORIA (CP)—Victoria, the "Garden City" of British Columbia, started to get that rundown look of an uncleaned house today as civic outside workers continued to strike for higher wages.

Housewives, worried about full or filling garbage cans, were thinking of new ways of disposing of refuse.

The workers, members of the Civic Employees' Protective Association, struck last Friday after rejecting a final wage offer from city council that was two cents an hour less than their final demand of a seven-cent wage increase.

The average wage now is $1.43 an hour.

Meanwhile, the first burial at the city's Ross Bay cemetery since the start of the strike was held Wednesday.

Discussions with civic officials resulted in the workers agreeing to provide burial services and emergency water and sewer maintenance.

Victoria streets were beginning to show clearly the effect of the strike. "Keep city clean" containers were filled to overflowing and litter was being thrown and blown about the streets.

Some housewives were packaging garbage, bringing it into town and leaving it in the containers.

City health officials suggested housewives burn what garbage they can, all vegetable matter in their gardens and flatten out sterilized empty cans to make more room in garbage cans.

They say there is no immediate health menace.

Sir Winston Churchill Talks Puzzling Observers

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (CP) — Sir Winston Churchill comes to Washington Friday for what may prove one of the most momentous of the numerous vital meetings he has held with American presidents since 1941.

American sources say the British leader's conference with President Eisenhower may be held in an atmosphere of sharp disagreement. But veteran observers here feel that the 79-year-old statesman would not attempt this — perhaps his las — mission to the United States government unless he believed he had a major job that must be done.

While the main purpose of his mission is ostensibly to seek a formula by which the Indo-China deadlock may be broken, it is believed he will also try to influence his U.S. colleagues toward a more realistic approach to the facts of international life.

He and Foreign Secretary Eden are due to arrive here by BOAC Stratocruiser at 9 a.m. Friday.

No major social events are planned.

With the situation as it is in Latin America, in Indo-China, in Korea and along the Iron Curtain boundary, observers here are wondering what the aged statesman has in his mind for the ...-end talks with Eisenhower.

LEAVE FOR OTTAWA

Shortly after lunch Tuesday, the prime minister and his party are to leave by RCAF plane for Ottawa, where he will remain until late Wednesday. Then he will fly to New York to take passage home by ocean liner.

The ostensible purpose of his visit here is to seek a closing of the gap in British - American relations.

Here are some of the steadily developing differences:

1. Indo-China—Eden told the Commons in London Wednesday that he hopes it will be possible to agree to a Southeast Asian defence system against aggression in which there would be a general non-aggression pact in which Communist and free countries would join, plus a straight-out free-country defensive alliance. Eden put Britain on the side of moving slowly toward an Asian alliance as a long-range means of protection.

HOPE FOR QUICK ACTION

U.S. officials have hoped that Churchill and Eden would agree to move quickly toward formation of a Southeast Asian pact. Furthermore, there appears to be little enthusiasm for making non-aggression treaties with the Communists on the ground that such treaties generally have no meaning.

2. European Defence Community —The U.S. has been talking about a revision of its policies, based for years on creation of an international army including French and German forces. Because of French inaction, American officials have thought the talks this week-end should ... alternative ways of arming West Germany outside the proposed EDC.

Underground Echoes Detect New Oil Areas In Canada

CALGARY (CP)—Spearheading the ever-widening search for oil in Alberta is a highly-trained force of about 3,000 men who make up the seismic crews—the advance guard whose technical skill may mean the difference between millions of dollars profit or figures written in red ink.

A seismic crew is made up of about 15 men—surveyor, geologists, engineers, geophysicists, dynamite men and drillers.

Their job is to map underground formations, and they do it in a manner similar to the way sea captains of old found their way through dense fog — with sound.

As the sea captain would listen for the echo of a fog horn or bell to give him an idea where cliffs might be found, the seismic crews explode dynamite underground and chart the underground formations from the echoes picked up by highly-sensitive equipment.

Seismic work opened in Alberta in 1932 with a crew from Geophysical Service International Corporation setting off the first dynamite explosion near Twin Rivers in southern Alberta.

COST VARIES

Work continued at various points over the years until the Leduc oil discovery in 1947 set off the "big boom." It was work done by a seismic crew which led to the Leduc discovery. Oil was found only a few feet from where seismologists said it would be discovered.

Many of the large oil companies maintain their own crews, and also let out contract work to smaller outfits.

Cost of outfitting one crew ranges between $50,000 and $75,000. Cost of operations varies according to the type of country being explored. On "plains" work in southern Alberta, where there is open country and good roads, cost ranges from $20,000 to $25,000 a month.

For "bush" operations, particularly in the north where bulldozers have to cut roads and trailer camps are established, the cost may soar from $50,000 to $80,000 a month. Average payroll for a seismic crew of skilled men is approximately $5,000 a month.

Mary Martin Proves Stars' Versatility

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Mary Martin is living proof of the theory that stars shouldn't be afraid of playing roles that have been done before.

A few years ago her manager and husband, Richard Halliday, saw Ethel Merman in "Annie Get Your Gun" and told Mary: "You'd better not see it; you're liable to cut your throat. It's the kind of a role you've wanted all your life."

The singing star didn't heed his advice. She went to see the show. On the way out, he asked, "would you like a razor now?"

SURPRISES PRODUCERS

"No," she replied. "I'm going to play 'Annie' on the road."

And she did. Much to the surprise of producers Rodgers and Hammerstein, she agreed to a tour throughout the United States. This startled Broadwayites, since Mary was a top star in her own right and didn't need to do road companies of Herman hits.

The Martin version of "Annie Get Your Gun" was an eye-opener. I can still recall the pleasant surprise of watching Mary, who had specialized in gentler things, throw herself into the raucous role of Annie Oakley. The show was a revelation for the producers, too. They had her in mind when they wrote a show called "South Pacific."

After playing in "South Pacific" for five years, Mary did a straight play, "Mind Sir." It was a dismal thing, although it did good business on the strength of its stars, Miss Martin and Charles Boyer.

Now she is literally taking a flier on "Peter Pan." A new musical version of the Barrie play is being put together by the Civic Light Opera for Los Angeles and San Francisco. Broadway? Maybe—it depends on how well it turns out.

"Jean and I are good friends," said Mary. "We often talked about how we would like to play Peter Pan some day. Jean got her opportunity, and she was wonderful. Now I'm getting my chance."

Says Roberts Dictatorial, Won't Approve Report

By WALTER GRAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TERRACE BAY, Ont. (CP)—Opposition Leader Farquhar Oliver and Kelso Roberts (PC—Toronto St. Patrick), chairman of the Ontario legislature's highways investigation committee sparred along the rugged north shore of Lake Superior Wednesday over future committee work.

Mr. Oliver accused Mr. Roberts of adopting a "dictatorial" attitude with the committee and said he would not give his approval to an interim report planned for the government next week.

The argument—the second in two days of travelling—developed during a bus conference while the committee drove from Port Arthur to Marathon and Terrace Bay 137 miles east.

Mr. Roberts said the committee would be holding a public meeting at the Lakehead on Friday, the last day of their 10-day, 5,000-mile tour of the northwestern United States and Ontario.

FREE TO CALL

The chairman said the committee at that time would be free to call any witnesses it desired.

Albert Wren (Lib.-Lab.—Kenora) said the committee would not be free to question witnesses who might offer information that would prejudice current court cases arising from the investigation into irregularities in the highways department.

"There is no use carrying on in this half-hearted, piece,meal manner. There is no point in carrying on questioning until the committee is free to question witnesses. All in all, we're just wasting our time, the public's money and we're not doing anything."

W. H. Collings (PC — Toronto Beaches) said the committee should take some action on the report of J. D. Woods and Gordon Limited, Toronto management consultants appointed by Premier Frost to make a study of the highways department. The report was submitted to the committee last month.

"We should put our views on it before the government," he said.

NOTES ABSENCE

Mr. Oliver noted the absence of Attorney-General Porter, "the key member of this committee" during the tour of the Fort William division, scene of the original investigation last fall.

Mr. Roberts said Mr. Porter had been requested to be in Fort William for Friday's meeting.

Clare Mapledorum (PC — Fort William) said it "might be good political strategy for the Opposition to take the position it did today But the No. 1 job we have to do is to make the highways department a better place and a more efficient organization. We must no take the attitude of sitting back and waiting for these court cases to be cleared up."

Mr. Oliver replied that "it is our obligation under our terms of reference to report our recommendations to the legislature. And under those terms of reference an interim report could be submitted only to the legislature. An interim report is quite out of order now."

Ask Money Doubled For Municipal Grants

OTTAWA (CP) — The government plans to ask Parliament for twice as much money next year for grants to municipalities and expects to double the number of municipalities eligible for grants.

Finance Minister Abbott told the Commons Wednesday the government plans to increase its appropriation for the grants to roughly $6,000,000 compared to $3,100,000 for the 1954-55 fiscal year.

He said he could not give additional details.

FEATURE AWARD — Bella Cousineau Kerr of Montreal has won a Canadian Women's Press Club memorial award for her feature story "Conversation Litteraire," in L'Autorite, Montreal. The award, worth $100, was presented at the club's golden jubilee meeting in Toronto.—(CP Photo).

Urges Park

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Mayor Allan Rush said Wednesday he will press for the future formation of a provincial park at Port Stanley, a Lake Erie resort about 22 miles south of London.

Says Government Too Complacent

OTTAWA (CP) — J. M. Macdonnell, Progressive Conservative financial critic, said Wednesday the government is becoming too complacent about spending $5,000,000,000 a year.

"Sometimes we are not as rich as we think we are," he said as the Commons began study of revenue department estimates.

Mr. Macdonnell, urging economy in government spending, said he protests the idea that so much money can be spent "without thinking much about it."

"Economy only comes when we get to the stage where we ask: 'Can we do without it?'" he said The present attitude was to consider whether the expenditure would be pleasant.

Gus Yeotes Opens Lunch Counter, Has Curb Service

Curb service will be a feature of Gus Yeotes' new lunch counter in his father's billiard room on George St. near the Royal Bank.

Gus will have full control of the restaurant part of the business. The curb service window opens out to the street, caters to passing citizens who may have neither the time to inclination to come inside.

But there's nothing to be afraid of inside, says Mr. Yeotes. 'We're trying to get away from the smoke-filled-room notion. A lot of people, especially women, picture a billiard room as a dusky, grim place, inhabitated by hard types. We want to show the public that billiards is a recreation just like bowling.

Mr. Yeotes also hopes to attract more women to the lunch counter, and possibly even to the six, year-old billiard tables at the back. Just this week, says Mr. Yeotes, two ladies stopped him while he was painting outside and asked if ladies were allowed inside. They came in, had their lunch, and promised to return.

The painting, incidentally, was around the main entrance. Bulbs and walls outside are yellow to discourage flies.

12 STOOLS

Inside 12 stools surround the open kitchen counter. The billiard tables are lighted by new closed lamps, replacing the usual pool-room type of shades. Walls at the rear are knotty pine.

Louis Yeotes, Gus' father has been in the billiard-room business in Peterborough for almost 5 years. His mother is a veteran of the Children's Aid Society having served more than 25 years and Gus has worked with the society himself for five years.

Gus Yeotes, 29, was born and educated in the city, severed in Europe during the Second World War with the Sherbrooke Fusilie0rs and joined the business with his father in 1946.

Next month Mr. Yeotes marks his first wedding anniversary. He was married to the former Katherine Pappas of Clifton Springs, N.Y. last July 19. Gus and Katherine Yeotes will operate the lunch counter with a staff of four.

Living Standards Responsible Child Neglect

TORONTO (CP)—Phyllis Burns, secretary of the family and child division of the Canadian Welfare Council said Wednesday there is still too much child neglect in Canada arising from poverty, destitution, low standards of living, poor housing and malputrition.

In her yearly report to the council's annual meeting, Miss Burns said these conditions produce Canadian children unable to develop their full potentialities.

"These children in turn grow up and establish families in which they perpetuate the vicious circle of poor living," she said.

"It is especially alarming that across Canada we are doing so little to break into the circle.

PAYMENTS INADEQUATE

"The rates of payments in some of our public assistance programs in Canada are entirely inadequate to fulfil the purpose of maintaining a family and providing our children with a home.

"Increased attention must be focused upon our unmet need for preventive service to keep families whole and secure physically and emotionally," she said.

W. Harold Clark of Toronto, vice-chairman of the Community Chests and councils division, said there has been a substantial increase in local and national agency participation in united community campaigns during the last two years.

Funds raised during this period increased to $14,010,614 from $11,-49,750.

Vancouver Votes To End Wednesday Store Closing

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shopping may soon be back on a six-day basis here.

Wednesday citizens voted 36,284 to 30,666 in a plebiscite to end Wednesday closing of city stores, in force since 1947.

Immediately the final count was known early today, a spokesman for advocates of maintaining the mid-week closing said city council will be asked for a recount.

OTHER CLOSING

"If we win this fight," said Bill Whitehead, advertising executive of a large Vancouver department store, "then we will consider closing Mondays and maybe opening Friday evenings."

Ratepayers also voted Wednesday on three money by-laws, all requiring at least 60 per cent approval.

Sale of the city's airport to the federal government for $1,000,000 was blocked by a bare one per cent. Some 30,227 wanted to sell compared with 20,659 who didn't. The majority was only 58.8 per cent.

GOOD TURNOUT

Expenditure of $2,000,000 for a sewage extension and improvement program was approved.

Nearly 40 per cent of those eligible voted. Average turn-out for other plebiscites when civic positions were not at stake has been 22 per cent.

A bare majority was all that was needed for the shopping plebiscite.

The "save the Wednesday" group's determination to challenge the declared 5,618 majority capped a vigorous and lengthy campaign.

Full-week shopping proponents denied statements that the five-day work week was threatened. The "save the Wednesday" group also said 40 per cent of retail workers are on a part-time basis in cities where stores are open all week.

Demand Gov't Protect Small Business Men

OTTAWA (CP)—The opposition Wednesday demanded immediate government action to protect small business men against large retailers and chain stores selling goods below cost to attract customers.

Davie Fulton (PC—Kamloops) and Donald Fleming (PC—Toronto Eglinton) made the demand after blaming the government for permitting the loss leader practice to assume serious proportions.

Mr. Sleming said in the Commons debate that it is impossible to draft legislation outlawing loss leader selling. He regretted the law was passed banning resale price maintenance because it was the only effective antidote to loss leaders.

VICIOUS PRACTICE

Loss leader selling was a vicious practice bound to grow in present competitive conditions. The consumer suffered in the long run because its effect was to concentrate business in larger outlets at the expense of small retailers.

Justice Minister Garson said that loss leader practices now are being investigated by the restrictive trade practices commission. Any action by the government would be based on the acceptance of recommendations made by the commission.

The entire problem was being examined objectively by a competent body to determine whether action was warranted.

Bus Men Strike

PORTLAND, Me. (AP) — Bus drivers and mechanics went on strike against the Portland Coach Co., Wednesday, halting the only public transportation service available to some 115,000 residents of the greater Portland area.

Paper, Radio Cited For Contempt

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — A newspaper and a radio station Wednesday were served motions citing them for contempt of court in connection with the Dr. Alfred Valdmanis case.

The motions served on the St. John's Daily News and station CJON ordered them to appear in court July 2 to show cause why they should not be convicted.

The motions came after investigation by R. S. Furlong, a lawyer named by the Supreme Court to investigate published and broadcast reports for possible contempt.

Mr. Furlong was named May 18 after Chief Justice Sir Albert Walsh issued a warning "to counsel, newspapers, radio stations, public men, indeed everyone" against prejudicing the trial of Dr. Valdmanis, former Newfoundland director of economic development.

At that time the chief justice mentioned that the Daily News had published a statement of claim in the civil case against Dr. Valdmanis and also published abstracts of affidavits filed in the case.

Urge Safety Belts

San Francisco (AP)—Equipping autos with safety belts and shoulder straps was urged today by the house of delegates of the American Medical Association. In a resolution, the house recommended that auto manufacturers "consider" putting safety belts in all cars, and stress safety in design of all automobiles.

Crash Kills 19

MEXICO CITY (AP)—A parachute rescue squad Wednesday night reached the wreckage of a Mexican air force transport and reported all 19 aboard dead. The plane crashed Saturday night north of Mexico City while carrying air force men and their families.

Pair Cross Atlantic In Small Plane

PRESTWICK, Scotland (AP) — Two airmen from Burbank, Calif., landed today after a four-day transatlantic flight from Toronto in a single-engined Otter.

Pilot Jack Ford and radio operator Walter Henderson made stops at Labrador, Greenland and Iceland. They flew on instruments most of the way because of icy conditions.

The two have since taken off for Oslo to deliver the Canadian Otter for a delivery company.

Festival Service

STRATFORD (CP)—A service of thanksgiving and rededication of the Stratford Shakespearian Festival Company of 1954 will be held in the theatre tent Sunday, the day before the opening of the eight-week festival season. Clergymen from Stratford churches will officiate at the service.

850-Lb. Cake For Centenary

KITCHENER (CP)—They knew it was coming so they baked a cake.

Kitchener's centenary cake was completed Wednesday. It weighs 850 pounds, reaches a mouth-watering height of five feet in four tiers and will be cut into 7,000 pieces next week at Kitchener's centenary celebrations.

Green ribbon icing on white icing tells the story of Kitchener's progress in agriculture, industry, commerce; its contributions to art and culture and the wars of the past century.

It took an hour to mix the batter, which contains nearly 2,000 eggs, 80 pounds of butter and sugar, two pounds of salt, 140 pounds of flour, 10 quarts of milk, eight quarts of brandy and 10 ounces of vanilla.

Fruit is 55 per cent of the cake: 45 pounds of pineapple, 18 pounds of peel, 75 pounds of cherries, 150 pounds of raisins and 30 pounds of pecans.

Then it was baked for three hours. Decoration took three days.

Use Ontario System As Model Plan

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's probation officer system which has grown in one year from 15 to 65 members, is to be used as a model by at least two other Canadian provinces, Nova Scotia and Saskatchewan, Ontario government officials said today.

Ontario's probation staff now is the largest in Canada. It will cost the province $200,000 for probation services this year as compared to $80,000 last year.

Only two other provinces, British Columbia and Alberta have a probation officer staff.

Religious Force Aids Germany–Graham

FRANKFURT (Reuters)—Evangelist Billy Graham declared here Wednesday that religion is the force behind West Germany's resurgent strength and prosperity.

In a sermon delivered at a U. S. Army chapel here and recorded for broadcast in the United States next Sunday, he described West Germany as "almost like a boom state" which "stands head and shoulders above other lands."

A crowd of 2,000, including about 500 Germans, listened to the sermon.

Piggy-Back Landing

SHAWNEE, Okla. (AP) — Two light planes landed simultaneously —one on top of the other—at the Shawnee municipal airport Wednesday night. The pilots escaped with cuts and bruises. "If you ever had the world to drop in on you, you know how I felt," said H. E. Redding, pilot of the plane on bottom.

Robs Streetcar

WASHINGTON (AP)—A gunman Wednesday night commandeered a streetcar for a 10-mile ride and escape in front of the White House. Lone passenger in the streetcar, the masked gunman lay in the aisle with a rifle trained on the operator's back. Operator Herman H. Allsbrook told police the gunman robbed him of $32 and 210 tokens before jumping out.

PORT CHESTER, N. Y. (AP)—David Wolff, 48-year-old town attorney of Harrison, N. Y., was killed Wednesday night by lightning as he sought to head his boat toward shore during a violent storm in Long Island sound. Standing next to him at the time, but uninjured, was his 13-year-old son, William. Another passenger in Wolff's 16-foot motor boat, Michael Julian, also escaped unhurt.

Rapist To Die

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters)—Leonard Keith Lawson, 26-year-old commercial artist, was sentenced to death after a jury found him guilty today of raping two young Sydney models and assaulting a third with intent to rape. Police said Lawson took five models to Terry Hills, an outer Sydney suburb, May 7, bound and gagged them and violated three of them after brandishing a sawn-off rifle.

Chess Masters From Russia Play U.S. Team

By JACK BEST
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK (CP)—What happens when a group of Soviet intellectuals are turned loose in a capitalist town like New York?

For nearly two weeks now, eight chess masters from the Soviet union have been looking this city over in between games of an American-Russian tournament. In large measure, they have behaved like any other visitors to the great metropolis.

They have jostled with the crowds on New York's busy streets, visited the more famous buildings and sat in on meetings of the United Nations. Some of the Russian players were present for a Soviet veto in the UN security council.

The city itself seems to have taken only passing note of the visiting chess masters. Their arrival June 11 was one of the big local stories of the day, but since then only chess enthusiasts have done much thinking about the Russians in their midst. Relations between the Russians and their American hosts have been decidedly cordial.

SEES CLOSER TIES

Asked in an interview whether he thought the visit had served to improve American - Soviet relations, Dmitri Posnikov, non-playing spokesman for the Russian side, said through an interpretor he felt it could be the beginning of closer cultural and sports ties between the two countries.

Harold M. Phillips, president of the United States Chess Federation, which invited the Russians to this country, said he found them "a lot of nice kids—modest, pleasant, agreeable and well-mannered."

Being well trained, Mr. Phillips said, the Russians have shown a willingness to channel any complaints quietly through their captain. There have been disputes, as when Samuel Reshevsky, No. 1 United States player, claimed he had been the victim on a long time count in a game with Russian ace Vassily Smyslov. This one resolved when the two players fought it out to a draw.

On one of their days away from the chess boards U.S. chess officials took the Russians on a tour of the city. They visited among other places the Empire State building, capitalist institutions on Wall street, Central Park and the UN.

CANADIAN VISIT PLANNED

The visiting masters said they were greatly impressed by the Empire State building, 1,200 feet high, but not so much with the other tall buildings "because we have the same in Moscow."

In large and small groups, the Russians have also visited Radio City music hall and the Soviet UN delegates' residence at Glen Cove, Long Island; taken in movie shows and watched baseball games on television in their hotel suite. They thought Radio City was "wonderful."

The Russian party, which numbers about a dozen altogether, will split up next Monday when captain Igor Bondarevsky and Alexander Kotov leave for a short tour of Canada and the others sail for England to meet British players before returning to the Soviet Union.

The Russians say they consider the United States team one of the strongest in the world, though they themselves were ahead throughout the tournament.

They predict a "great future" in chess for such young American stars as brothers Donald and Robert Byrne, Larry Evans and Arthur Bisquier. They hope to meet the Americans again in Moscow next year.

ON NINTH ANNUAL TOUR the Princeton Seminary choir of Princeton, New Jersey, will be heard in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Norwood, on July 9. The 17 members of this male chorus are all college graduates who are now preparing for full time Christian service.

Princeton Choir To Sing In Norwood Church June 9

The Princeton seminary choir of Princeton, New Jersey, is on its ninth annual summer tour. During June and July it will travel through 11 northeastern states and five provinces of Canada, singing an average of two services a day for the entire 56 days. It will be heard in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Norwood, on July 9 at 8.30.

The 17 members of this male chorus are all college graduates who are now preparing for full time Christian service. The entire service is conducted by members of the choir. The musical portion, which constiutes an integral part of the worship service, is sung entirely from memory and for the most part without accompaniment. The repertoire represents the finest choral music, including the works of Palestrina, Lotti, Bach, Handel, Haydn, and Mendelssohn, as well as contemporary European and American composers, and several negro spirituals.

Dr. David Hugh Jones, FAGO, ASCAP, has been director of music at Princeton Seminary since 1934. He is a charter member of the Faculty of the Westminster Choir college and a composer of sacred music which is sung by leading choral organizations.

Seeking Amendment To Traffic Regulation

WINDSOR (CP) — The Ontario attorney-general will be asked by board of control to sponsor an amendment to the Highway Traffic Act permitting fire trucks to pass red lights on an emergency run.

The only alternative, the board was told, is to have a master switch at the fire station by which all lights en route to the fire can be changed to green.

A Windsor fireman was recently fined $15 and costs for crossing against a light after his truck was in collision with another auto. An appeal to county court was not allowed. Since then, Windsor trucks have been stopping at all lights on emergency runs.

HISTORIC CRAFT

The first steamboat on the St. Lawrence, the Accomodation made her first trip from Montreal to Quebec in 1809.

Is that all? Two-fisted little fire engines like this are one of the little reasons why more families ran out of Kellogg's Corn Flakes this morning than any other cereal. The big reason it happens every day is this: Kellogg's Corn Flakes just naturally taste best to more people. Always have. Still do. So naturally, many women pick up a spare package of Kellogg's Corn Flakes every time they buy any cereal of any kind. You too?

Rose Tea Held By Federation Group

A profusion of summer flowers was background for a lovely afternoon tea on Wednesday in the George Street church Sunday school hall,—but, roses were the key flower of the day as it was the annual Rose Tea of the Women's Federation.

The Federation is a dual-purpose group, combining church work and missionary work. Its membership of 45 includes mothers of young children and business girls who are unable to work in WA or WMS because of the afternoon meetings. There is only one sister organization in the city —that of Trinity church which was formed a year earlier.

Roses on the tea table were full-blown talismans, chosen to match the peach satin cloth. The flowers were in an unusual design of epergne which had little crystal flower holders suspended from the arms of the main vase. Soft green tapers complemented flower and cloth colors and the table was set with crystal pieces.

More of the talisman roses were in a bouquet on the stage behind, and standards and baskets placed around the room were filled with colorful peonies. All the sale booths were covered with lace cloths and centred with bowls of pink roses.

Each member of the Federation was wearing a single rose corsage and guests too donned corsages, which they selected from the flower-seller's basket of mixed posies.

Mrs. Arthur Black, general convener of this event, was assisted in the arrangements by Mrs. George Gatfield and Mrs. Howard Allison, and the decorating was by Mrs. Kenneth McKee, assisted by Mrs. R. Sager and Mrs. W. Lishman.

President is Mrs. Robert Hutton who was receiving, assisted by Mrs. W. H. Frise, president of the WMS, and Mrs. Arnold Mathews, the minister's wife. The rose tickets were received by Mrs. Ivan Drain.

Tea was poured by Mrs. W. R. Philp, president of the Trinity Federation, Mrs. Charles Allen, Mrs. E. W. Rowland and Mrs. J. Beatty.

The assistants in the tea room were Mrs. E. Vance, Mrs. D. Brown, Mrs. A. Long, Mrs. Harold Mesley, Mrs. Ray Parnell, Mrs. McKee, Mrs. Sager and Mrs. Lishman, with Mrs. Allison as hostess. The replenishing was done by Mrs. A. McDougall, Mrs. F. Sargent, Mrs. Turnbull, Mrs. R. Foster and Mrs. Gatfield.

Background music in the tea room was provided by Miss Dorothy White, Mrs. Art Bacon and Mrs. I. Elliott.

BAZAAR FEATURE

Feature of the bazaar section was the garden umbrella hung with gifts for the children. This was in charge of Mrs. E. Hucks and Mrs. H. Fredericks. A nursery where the children were entertained was in charge of Mrs. O. Gardiner, assisted by Misses

"Women Drivers More Careful" Says Officer

MONTREAL (CP) Deputy director Tom Leggett, head of the Montreal police department's traffic division, said Wednesday women automobile drivers are more careful than men behind the wheel.

Addressing Westmount Rotary Club, he said women drivers have few accidents and are generally more courteous.

"The learning and application of good manners of all sorts is needed badly at all times," he said, "especially today on our modern roads."

Charter Member Describes Early Reporting

TORONTO (CP)—The 1900s were the golden days for newspaper women's editors. You could choose your own assignments and put whatever you wanted in the women's page.

The only drawback was that you probably didn't get paid much.

Mrs. A. B. Watt, veteran of more than a half century of newspaper writing, recalled this Wednesday while attending the Canadian Women's Press Club golden jubilee convention.

The only living charter member of the CWPC, Mrs. Watt started her newspaper career in 1902 with the Woodstock Southern Review (now the Sentinel-Review) where her husband was editor.

"Those were the days to be a newspaper reporter," she recalled. "We chose our own assignment and I used to fill the women's page with whatever I pleased."

Her husband received $10 a week as editor and "goodness knows what the reporters got; I know I was just paid with a song."

THE FIRST GARDEN TEA AND FASHION SHOW of the Edith Carleton Chapter, IODE, on Wednesday evening delighted more than 200 guests who attended. Four of the fashion models, pictured on the runway, are (left to right) Miss Mary Addyman, ready for sun-bathing, Miss Audrey Oliver in an emereld-studded afternoon dress with wool stole, Miss Marcel Caulas in a specially selected travel dress, and Mrs. J. A. McNeill in separates—a tangerine skirt and black halter. The four chapter members mainly responsible for this successful event are also pictured. In a white organdy garden party dress with black picture hat is the regent, Mrs. Graham Donaldson. Fashion Showing At IODE Tea Pleases Crowd Of 200

One of the most pleasing events of the season was the Garden Tea and Fashion Show at the home of Miss Beverley Martyn, 582 Waterford Street, on Wednesday evening.

Members of the Edith Carleton Chapter, IODE, were responsible for this occasion, which more than 200 ladies enjoyed, and the guests were so complimentary in their remarks about it that they expect it will be made an annual project.

The fashion show was, of course, the main drawing card and it was very charmingly presented by 14 young women of Peterborough. The clothes were exactly right for almost anyone's wardrobe in the two summer vacation months coming up.

Bathing suits, two black with interesting detail and one diagonally striped in aqua and white, a yellow terry cloth beach coat, a snappy play suit in poppy red twill, pedal pushers and blouse in two shades of pink, cuffed black shorts with a lime green cotton shirt, a soft green duster or brunch coat, sleek white slacks with a jewel-printed red cotton blouse, tailored gray slacks, a plaid flannel housecoat and two sets of separates, a bright tangerine skirt and black halter, and a white skirt with big pockets with a black blouse were the selections for a good time at summer resort or cottage.

Travelling or staying in town for the summer could be pleasant in any of the dresses shown. The iced poplin vitamin print tunic dress was suggested for bus, train or plane. A stream-lined sheath with all-over design in emerald jewels, worn with an emerald green wool stole, a flaring princess dress of navy linen frosted with white lace, a black and white pique halter dress and small jacket, and a white linen dress with stiffened skirt, unusually trimmed with realistic pansies on bodice and pocket, were suggested for milady's most important social engagements.

The clothes were displayed three times during the evening. Mrs. Louis Zacks made comment on each of the styles as they appeared. She also called attention to the make-up selected for each model with regard to the outfit she was wearing, and emphasized that, for the summer especially, make-up must be natural looking.

Guests were seated about the large lawn for the show and could see each model perfectly on the elevated runway put up for their convenience.

They were served tea and light refreshments from a garden tea table on which the centrepiece was a beautiful arrangements of summer flowers. Draw tickets were sold on the flowers and the winner was Mrs. Murray Aker of Carlisle Avenue.

Miss Mary McRae, a charter member of the chapter who now lives in Toronto, assisted by pouring tea. Guest pourers were Miss Florence Hutchinson and Mrs. George Stevens.

Servers were Miss Helen Watson, who also looked after the recorded music played throughout the tea hours and for the fashion show, Mrs. Charles Stevenson, Mrs. William Bunker, Miss Edith Miller, Mrs. O. Crawford, Miss Josie McMeekin, Miss Wanda Deyell, Mrs. David Addyman and Miss Margaret Martyn.

After having their tea, most of the guests went to the tea cup reader's stand under a large garden umbrella.

There was also a sale of home baking which was in charge of Mrs. Peter Brockenshire with Mrs Art Dixon, Mrs. T. Shaw, Miss Dianne Jordon and Mrs. John Bowes assisting.

Co-conveners of the evening's arrangements were Mrs. Donald Barrett and Mrs. Ray Mounce.

Regent Mrs. Graham Donaldson and Miss Martyn, who is vice regent of the chapter, greeted the guests. Tickets were taken by Mrs. Keith Alton who was convener of the ticket sales.

The models taking part, all non-members of the chapter, were Misses Mary Addyman, Joyce Campbell, Jackie Rose, Rosemary Parker, Beverley Goodman, Margaret Ingram, Dorothy Langley, Marcel Coulas, Audrey Oliver, Mrs. J. A. McNeill, Mrs. Max Comstock, Mrs. James Campbell, Mrs. Hugh Sullivan and Mrs. Russel Cole.

Once Residence Of Governor-General Now Exclusive College For Girls

MONTREAL (CP) — A number of 19th century ghosts did some wistful reminiscing when Pensionnat Villa Maria celebrated its 100th year as an exclusive college for Roman Catholic girls.

A sedate old mansion, once the suburban home of Canada's governors-general and later a fashionable night spot for well-to-do Montrealers, today is the administrative heart of the convent, run by the Congregation de Notre Dame for students from North, Central and South America.

Bought in June 1954 by the nuns the 60-room residence in Notre Dame de Grace was given a face-lifting for centenary celebrations June 19-21. Contractors repainted the stately exterior in silver and white and the interior was spring-cleaned.

BUILT IN 1780

The house was built in 1780 as the home of William Dummer, wealthy Montreal lawyer and was later bought by Sir James Monk who named it Monklands.

In 1844 Monklands was taken over by Governor - General Sir Charles Metcalf and expensively renovated. A magnificent ballroom and reception hall were added by the vice-regal owner and both are still maintained today.

The mansion was subsequently occupied by Sir Charles' successors, Earl Cathcart and Lord Elgin. In a room now used as the convent infirmary Lord Elgin's son, the future viceroy of India, was born.

The early days are recalled by elegant portraits of Lord and Lady Elgin and their son, hung on an upstairs wall. Multi-colored friezes and insets adorn the walls and ceilings of the lofty rooms, lit by lustered chandeliers to preserve the Victorian atmosphere.

NOTED RENDEVOUS

Hotelier Joseph Compain acquired the mansion in 1850 and turned it into a gay country show place with 200 acres of wooded pleasure grounds. Extravagant tea parties and dinners made it a favorite rendezvous for Montreal society. A fleet of horse-drawn omnibuses made five trips daily from central Montreal to the hotel.

The nuns moved in four years later. Sisters preparing the mansion for the first students—their successors today pay $750 annually to attend the school—are recorded in convent diaries as making strong protests against "dreadful odors" emanating from the basement. Closer examination revealed a cellar stocked to capacity with empty bottles.

The original building, now surrounded by modern annexes, is the executive centre of the convent which attracts daughters of wealthy parents from all parts of Canada, the United States, Colombia, Venezuela and San Salvador.

Villa Maria's three superiors during its first 64 years were all of Irish descent.

Three-quarters cup butter or ten egg yolks, 3 cups sifted

e flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1¼
spoons baking soda, ¾ cup of milk, 3½ tablespoons canned lemon juice, 3 stiffly beaten egg whites. Cream the butter until pale and light, and gradually beat in sugar until both are smooth and airy. Beat yolks until light and beat them in well. Sift together the sifted flour, salt and soda and add them to the creamed mixture alternately with the milk mixed with the lemon juice (never mind if it curdles). Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Prepare layer cake tins by lining with waxed paper, and buttering them, and turn batter into them. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 25 or 30 minutes. Turn out onto cake racks to cool. Put together when cool with Lemon Filling (Rich): ¾ cup each lemon juice and water (1½ cups altogether), ½ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons each cornstarch, flour, butter, 2 egg yolks. In a saucepan mix together the sugar, cornstarch, flour and when blended, stir in the lemon juice and water, and cook over medium direct heat, stirring, until mixture comes to boil, then gently boil, stirring 1 minute. Beat a little of this mixture into the slightly beaten egg yolks, and beat into remaining hot mixture and cook 1 minute longer stirring. Remove from heat and add the butter. Cool. Spread between layers when they are cold. Just before serving, frost top and sides with ¼-inch layer of unsweetened whipped cream. Surprise eh?

COFFEE ALMOND ICEBOX CAKE

Anybody on your summer-visiting list that you particularly want to impress? This is the dish that will do it.

One cup butter or margarine (don't try shortening), 1½ cups icing sugar, 2 egg yolks, ½ cup cold extra-strong coffee, pinch of salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla, ½ cup chopped almonds and ½ cup slivered toasted almonds, 1½ dozen ladyfingers (from bake shop). Cream the butter until soft and light then cream the sugar into it gradually. Beat in beaten yolks. Beat mixture until light and fluffy. Add the coffee a little at a time, beating just enough to blend. Add salt and vanilla, and lastly the ½ cup chopped nuts. Line a loaf or round pan (like a round glass casserole) with parchment paper or foil (to facilitate lifting finished cake out if you intend serving it top side up) and line bottom and sides with split ladyfingers, flat side down, using halves cut crosswise for the sides, and standing them up. Spread a layer of the coffee mixture over the lady fingers on bottom, pushing some between the crevices between the lady fingers on sides. Sover with more split lady fingers, then more coffee mixture, repeating until dish is full. Decorate top with slivered almonds around edge, and pat on a few lady fingers to form spokes. Chill overnight (or at least 4 hours). Lift out by the paper liner onto fancy cake plate, then deftly strip paper away and discard it. Slice this very thinly, and icy cold it slices well.

DEAR MISS DIX: I have been friendly with a girl, 20 years old, more than a year. I am 23. When I first met her, I had some bad habits, such as drinking and gambling, but I gave them up for her. She has some bad habits I don't like, like going off into a corner and whispering to a girl friend, leaving me stranded with strangers, failing to be home when she made a date, keeping me waiting etc. I think she's being inconsiderate.

BARRY

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Your young lady certainly isn't a polite lass, or a considerate one. If she doesn't think enough of you to improve her conduct—which she should be anxious to do, just for her own sake—perhaps she's not the girl for you. Of course, she did you a favor by making you break your bad habits; don't go back to them.

DOROTHY DIX:

Prosperous Unwed Woman Resents Pity Of Wed Friends

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm an unmarried woman of 40 plus, attractive, have a good education, very good job, maintain a home and have many hobbies, interests and friends. I hardly consider myself an object of pity, and am getting tired of my married friends' commiseration. They never miss an opportunity to point out that there may be hope for me yet, or to remind me of other friends who married later in life. They also express the wish that happiness may yet come to me.

Does the acquisition of a husband automatically set one up as superior? To me, all it proves is that the married gal got one proposal and grabbed it. I've had my share of beaux and proposals, but it just happened that the kind of romance I wanted never came along, and I was honest enough with myself to refuse the offers. This is more than many married women can say. They take the first available man, then often rerget it later; yet they feel free to critize us women who have been more discriminating. Why?

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: You've drawn up a very good case for bachelor girls, and I'm sure it will be echoed and re-echoed from coast to coast. The smugness that many a "Mrs." acquires with her wedding band becomes increasingly irksome to her single sisters, as the latter become more and more aware of the advantages they enjoy.

PROS AND CONS

While there is no worldly lot as happy as a good marriage, it is equally true that no misery transcends that of really unsuccessful marriage. The single girl, with her good job, pleasant, peaceful home and cheerful associates can well be envied by the wife of an habitual drukard, a chronic philanderer, or an exasperating miser.

Of course, not all single women are happy, any more than are all married women. But those who have madea good adjustment of their lives have accomplished as much as any person can hope for. It is often argued that they are facing a lonely old age, having produced no children to keep them company, or give them support, in later years. 6—In Memoriam

DOWNER — In loving memory of George T. Downer, who passed away June 24, 1951.

Oh, what would I give to clasp your hand;
Your dear, kind face to see,
Your loving smile, your welcome voice
That meant so much to me.
No one knows the silent heartache,
Only those who have such can tell
Of the grief that is borne in silence,
For the one we loved so well.

—Sadly missed and ever remembered by his wife, daughter Julia, son-in-law Tom and family.

DOWNER — In loving memory of George Downer Sr., who passed away June 24, 1951.

Three years have passed
And gone, dear Dad
Since last your loving voice we heard
But come what may, some sweet day
We will meet again.

—Ever remembered by son Newt and family.

STABLER—In loving memory of our dearest mother, Sarah, who passed away June 24, 1949.

Two dear bright eyes, a tender smile,
A loving heart that knew no guile,
Deep trust in God that all was right,
Her joy to make some other bright.
If sick or suffering one she knew
Some gentle act of love she'd do,
No thought of self but of the other,
I know he said, well done, dear mother.

—Ever remembered by daughter Ethel and son-in-law Jim Hopcroft.

STABLER—In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Mrs. Sadie Stabler, who passed away five years ago, June 24, 1949.

What would we give her hand to clasp
Her patient face to see,
To hear her voice, to see her smile,
As in the days that used to be.
But some sweet day we'll meet again
Beyond the toil and strife,
And clasp each other's hand once more
In heaven that happy life.

—Ever remembered by husband and daughters Gertie and Emma.

of the annual assessment, $388,165 was added to the realty assessment as of January 1 last year.

OTHER ASSESSMENTS

Supplementing the regular budget revenue, $409,360 in realty assessment and $147,365 business assessment, producing $18,036.20 in additional taxes, was added to the 1953 tax roll under section 51 by the court of revision last year.

On the 1953 assessment roll, the court of revision heard 530 appeals. These included 437 on land and buildings, of which 391 were allowed, 45 confirmed and one withdrawn; 17 on business, all of which were reduced; and 76 changes asked, of which 67 were allowed and nine dismissed.

Total reductions on 1953 assessments allowed by the court of revision came to $1,285,020. The court also remitted $6,053.13 in business tax, $1,779.87 due to removal of buildings, $1,783.45 due to fire and $128.19 due to vacancy.

While assessment commissioner J. E. Davis confined his report pretty well to a recital of figures, many of the items were of more than mere statistical significance.

For example, he reported 1,122 transfers of property from October 1, 1952, until September 30, 1953, compared with only 1,055 in the preceding 12 months.

Of immediate interest to the assessment department was the fact that the total sales value of property transferred between October 1, 1952, and September 30, 1953, was, was $5,388,542, while the assessed value was only $1,746,190, or 32.41 per cent of the sales value.

ACTUAL VALUE?

This was in spite of the fact that the assessment department attempted to assess property at its actual value, using the provincial manual of assessment values as a guide and taking into account, among other things, the normal sales value of the property.

"It simply shows that the sales value of property was still rising, at least as late as the time of those figures," Mr. Davis told The Examiner. "We just can't keep up with them."

(The schedules in the provincial manual are acknowledged to be based, at least insofar as replacement costs are concerned, on the 1940-41 period.)

Most Rev. B. I. Webster

"Our divine Lord describes His own office: 'I am the Good Shepherd. The Good Shepherd giveth his life for his sheep. But the hireling and he that is not a good shepherd, whose own the sheep are not; seeth the wolf coming and leaveth the sheep and flieth. I am the Good Shepherd. I know mine and mine know me.' The main idea in all this is the relation of authority, supervision, direction and guidance, defence and responsibility for the souls over which he is placed. No metaphor can express more precisely the ideas of authority and dependence than that of a shepherd and his sheep."

TEACHER

The Bishop's first duty was to teach his people. In these days when the faithful are assailed with new ideas, new codes of religion and moral life, it was essential that the Bishop personally direct the teaching office of the church so that the deposit of faith may be vigorously and clearly upheld and the faithful kept immune from error.

"He comes also," His Eminence said, "as the source of sacramental life, and above all must govern his diocese, applying the laws of the church with prudence and judgment that even the weak members of the fold will be strengthened and brought nearer to God. When Christ was about to leave the world He commissioned a body of men to carry on His own work. The terms of the commission are large and ample and involve a great responsibility: 'As the the Father has sent Me, I also send you.' These terms are also specific: 'Go ye into the whole world and teach the Gospel to every creature'."

BISHOP'S MOTTO

With the installation of Bishop Webster, Cardinal McGuigan bade him farewell while greeting him as a brother bishop "whose loyalty, fidelity and untarnished example have been a blessing to me and to the diocese from which he comes. His motto, taken from St. Paul, resembles the closing words attributed to St. Theresa of Avila. I believe they reflect the Bishop's own serene temperament, his reliance on God, his abiding trust in divine help. "Let nothing disturb thee, nothing affright thee. All things are passing. God never changes. Patient endurance attaineth to all things. Who God possesseth nothing is wanting. Alone God sufficeth."

Bishop Webster's motto is from the second epistle to the Corinthians: "Our sufficiency is from God."

"These words," Cardinal McGuigan said, "will be his inspiration in moments of difficulty which may come even in the most peaceful and loyal diocese. I know that the priests and people of Peterborough will give him the same loyalty and reverence, and fullness of the love of your hearts which you have always given to his predecessors in this See. May his reign among you be fraught with blessing for you all, and may this be the first hour of a long and prosperous episcopate for your new and gracious bishop."

WELCOME MESSAGES

Addresses of welcome and congratulation, of affection and fidelity, were presented to Bishop Webster by the clergy, read by Rev. J. J. McCarthy of Douro, and from the laity, read by John G. McCarney. They were beautiful works of pencraft and embellishment, one by Sister St. Ignatius of the Sisters of the Precious Blood, the other combining the art of Sister St. Kevin and Sister Dominica of the Sisterhood of St. Joseph.

Bishop Webster's reply was a comprehensive expression of gratitude. "In the words of the preface of the Mass, 'it is truly meet and just, right and profitable for us at all times and in all places to give thanks to God.' I give thanks to God that He brought me into existence, adopted me as His child, made me a soldier of Christ, a priest of God and called me to rule the church of Peterborough. Conscious of my unworthiness, I make bold to use the words of the Magnificat: "He that is mighty hath done great things to me, and holy is His name.' May my every thought, word and deed be a sincere effort to express the gratitude that fills my heart tonight.

"Thanks be to God, and thanks to His Holiness Pope Pius XII for naming me to the episcopacy some eight years ago, for having given me to His Eminence as his auxiliary, and for having bestowed this further mark of trust by naming me to the See of Peterborough."

THANKS CARDINAL

Bishop Webster recalled in that same spirit his consecration by Cardinal McGuigan "and who privileged me to share his home and during these years has sustained and inspired me, shown unfailing kindness and consideration. To my words of gratitude I join a promise of constant remembrance in prayer that he may be long spared to rule the church of Toronto and adorn the hierarchy of Canada and the Sacred College of Cardinals."

Bishop Webster thanked the bishops and priests attending his installation, also Rev. V. J. Corkery, administrator of the diocese since the departure of Bishop Berry, and to the people for the kind words of their address, their warm welcome, pledge of loyalty and promise of prayers.

"Our Holy Father in the letter of appointment which was read to you this evening points out that a bishop's power depends on the respect, obedience and love of his subjects, and that when he receives these he can more easily and fittingly accomplish his work to the greater benefit of all.

"I have assumed a most serious responsibility. If our dependence were upon human means alone, then one would have good reason to fear and draw back. But, our dependence is upon God. 'Not that we are sufficient to think anything of ourselves, but our sufficiency is from God.' These are the words of my motto chosen eight years ago. They are the source of my confidence today. You, by your assistance at mass, your frequent reception of the sacraments, can gain this sufficiency for yourselves, for your priests, for your bishop."

Bishop Webster affirmed his appreciation of the presence of the members of government and of the municipal administration and of other citizens who had shown their interest in his installation by taking the time from their own affairs. The concluding devotional act was the benediction by the new Bishop.

Company Fires Union Organizer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Aluminum Company of Canada has fired a United Steelworkers' of America (CIO - CCL) organizer who infiltrated the new Kitimat project as a member of another union, it was learned here Wednesday.

Until his expulsion Saturday by union members, Wally Ross, formerly of Toronto, was leader of the AFL Aluminum Workers.

"Irregularities in employment application papers" was the company's reason for dismissing Ross from his laborer's job.

Appoint Coroners

TORONTO (CP)—Approval of the appointment of three new coroners by the Ontario government was announced Wednesday. They are: Dr. John Robinson of Flesherton, for Grey county; Dr. Herbert Washbrun of Melbourne, for Middlesex county; and Dr. Thomas Dodd of Pembroke, for Renfrew county.

Found Not Guilty Of Charge Of Car Thefts

Kenneth Bell, of 211 London St., represented by W. J. Arthur Fair, won dismissal of three charges of auto theft, attempted auto theft and vagrancy in magistrate's court this morning.

The charges were laid as a result of the theft of Wilf Langan's car from in front of his home, 550 Aylmer St., early in the morning of Sunday, June 6. The attempted theft charge followed Bell's arrest near a car owned by Hiram Briggs, 758 Fairbairn St., the same night.

Early stages of the trial featured several heated exchanges between Mr. Fair and Mr. Bradshaw on admissibility of evidence. Police witnesses and Mr. Briggs took the stand in turn, as Mr. Fair insisted on a trial within a trial (voir dire) to determine if statements made by Bell after his arrest should be admitted.

GAVE NO WARNING

Sgt. Claire McGillen testified he had given no warning to Bell that any statements he made might be used against him. Mr. Fair contended that the onus was on the crown to prove the statements were given voluntarily and hence were admissible.

Hiram Briggs testified he found Bell sleeping in his car. Mr. Fair objected to Mr. Bradshaw's question of whether or not he had heard police offer any promises, threats or inducements.

Bell told police he had stopped in the car to rest. Sgt. McGillen described Bell as under the influence of liquor at the time.

In connection with the Langan theft, Wilf Langan said he missed his car at 9.00 Sunday morning from in front of his house. It was found later that morning at the corner of Fairbairn Ave. and Highland Road, next to a culvert, mud-spattered and with the ignition wires crossed.

FLASHLIGHT

A flashlight in Bell's possession at the time of his arrest was identified by Mr. Langan as from his glove compartment. Mr. Fair, cross-examining, established that the glove compartment was not kept locked and the flashlight might have been lost or stolen at another time.

Carol Coldwell, of 554 Aylmer St., said she saw Langan's car pull away from in front of his house at 12.15 a.m. Sunday. It tried to start and stalled several times, she said.

When Mr. Bradshaw asked his usual summation question: "Is there anything you can add that I may have overlooked," Mr. Fair said, "This is his stock question. She probably knows plenty you've overlooked."

Laughter swept the crowded courtroom until magistrate Philp warned: "The question is perfectly admissible. We have a busy day, so get on with it." He said he might clear the court if the disturbances caused by the periodic Fair-Bradshaw comments continued.

Det. Dennis Traynor testified to finding the Langan automobile. He said everything "was shoved recklessly back into the glove compartment." The magistrate commented that many people have messy glove compartments.

The magistrate, in dismissing the charge, noted that no evidence had been introduced to connect Bell with the Langan car, apart from the flashlight. "You have to have better evidence than that, Mr. Bradshaw," he said.

Mayor Nominated

Blind River Still Fighting After Hard Luck Years

By WALTER GRAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

BLIND RIVER, Ont. (CP)—Old-timers call Blind River the "hard-luck town."

This comunity of 2,480 on the north shore of Lake Huron has prospered and suffered with a temperamental lumbering industry. It has had its hopes raised, then crushed by pie-in-the-sky mining ventures. It has watched a colony of American operators skim off the cream of a $300,000-a-year tourist industry.

It splurged on a public works program back in the 1920s, was unable to pay its debt and for the last 20 years has had its financial affairs run by the Ontario municipal board.

URANIUM HUNT ON

And now the town is being stirred up again. The hunt for uranium has arrived on its doorstep.

The townspeople hear the blast of dynamite and the chatter of diamond drills from the nearby hills. They read in outside publications of the prosperous future of their town.

Two companies, Algom Uranium and Pronto Uranium, have already spent $500,000 on work in the area.

A $15,000,000 development program for the field—referred to as a "mining man's dream"—has been outlined by J. S. Hirshorn, Toronto and New York financier whose resources are behind both companies.

But Blind River is standing pat.

As Dr. Jean Pigeon, president of the Blind River Chamber of Commerce, put it: "We are content to wait and see."

Dr. Pigeon said the town had become "over-cautious" as a result of the depression when it was unable to meet its obligations. Any thoughts of expansion or development would be thoroughly mulled over before another splurge took place.

COSTLY PROJECT

Louis Berthelot, the town's 57-year-old mayor, who, for 54 years has watched Blind River's fortunes come and go, said the town was "skinned" by its $360,000 water and sewer project in 1928 and has been smarting over it ever since.

Mr. Berthelot, who operates a combined grocery store, confectionary and dance hall, as well as town council affairs, from a wheel chair (gangrene forced the amputation of his left leg and is now affecting his right), said the town appreciated the uranium development but until it was known definitely that the new industry was here to stay Blind River would make no commitments.

"The town has had lots of ups and downs—mostly downs," said Maurice Dyke, the town clerk.

Blind River had its beginning in 1850 when the Hudson's Bay Company established a trading post in the area. Shortly after, one M. Salvaille began cutting saw logs on the present town site, 86 miles east of Sault Ste. Marie.

The Canadian Pacific Railway arrived from Sudbury in 1885 and with it came the people. In 1900, Eddy Brothers erected the first sawmill.

Three years later, James J. McFaden came from Renfrew, Ont., and in partnership with John Malloy brought out the Eddy mill in Blind River. Mr. Malloy dissolved the partnership in 1922. He died the same year. But Mr. McFadden went on to make his fortune in the town.

DISASTROUS FIRE

Fire swept through Blind River on Aug. 1, 1916. Twenty-three business places and the Methodist church were burned to the ground. But the town came back. Mr. Berthelot said that in the early 20s 13 lumber companies were operating in the area. The town had six hotels and liquor flowed as freely as the nearby Mississagi river, still the main waterway for the spring log drives.

In 1927, Mr. McFadden sold his Blind River mill to the Carpenter-Hixon Lumber Co. Carpenter-Hixon spent $3,000,000 on a mill that still is among the largest on the Great Lakes.

The following year, the town splurged on the sewer and water works program. Then the depression hit. The mill shut down in 1931 and remained closed for four years. There was no work in Blind River.

When the town became bankrupt, the Ontario municipal board moved in during 1935 and issued new 40-year debentures on a $300,000 debt at an added two-per-cent interest.

"Now we can't even spend a cent without first getting it approved by the municipal board," said Mr. Dyke.

Mr. McFadden bought the Blind River mill back in 1935 and reopened it. He retired in 1946 and the mill was sold to American and Canadian interests but it is still known as the J. J. McFadden Lumber Co. Mr. McFadden died last year at the age of 90.

The mill employs an average of 300 men during its period of operation from May to September and maintains a staff of 90 throughout the year.

The tourist industry is the town's other main source of income. Dr. Pigeon will argue that it is not an industry but a business, but the townspeople won't argue the fact that last year it brought $300,000.

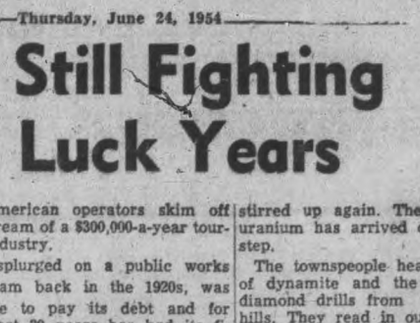
Some residents are bitter over the fact that a large share of this money is taken back to the United States by American tourist camp operators. Blind River folk blame the federal and provincial governments for not lending Canadian operators enough money to start tourist camps of their own.

Dr. Pigeon said the town should have one or two more industries that would provide year-round employment for its residents. The population, predominantly French-speaking, shifts during the year from Blind River to Sudbury and Sault Ste. Marie. However, recent layoffs in the Sault Ste. Marie steel mills created an unemployment problem in Blind River itself.

Paul Young, mine manager of Pronto Uranium, located at Algoma Mills seven miles east of Blind River, said he has had "dozens" of men asking for work in recent weeks. Some of them have been hired for camp construction and road work.

Both Mr. Young and R. C. (Bob) Hart, manager of Algom Uranium, located in the Quirke lake area 30 miles to the north, said the mines plan to use as much local labor as possible once full-scale mining operations get under way next year.

HAS LIVELY HISTORY—This is an aerial view of Blind River, Ont., which has prospered and suffered with a temperamental lumbering industry, pie-in-the-sky mining ventures and now has had its hopes raised again by a hunt for uranium. The community of 2,448 on the north shore of Lake Huron for the last 20 years has had its financial affairs run by the Ontario Municipal Board. In the foreground of the photo is the lumber mill of J. J. McFadden Company. —(CP Photo)



MAYOR OF BLIND RIVER—Louis Berthelot, 57, is mayor of Blind River, a community of 2,448 on the north shore of Lake Huron. For 54 years he has watched the town's fortunes come and go. He operates a combined grocery store, confectionary and dance hall as well as town council affairs from a wheel chair (gangerene forced the amputation of his left leg and is affecting his right.) In this photo he operates a steam shovel which was starting work on a new fire hall. —(CP Photo)

"I'm dreaming of my White Wedding"

"Isn't it going to be a beautiful dress? I've been daydreaming about my white wedding for years, but I hardly dared hope for this. You see, my father died when I was very small, and . . . well, there just wasn't any money to spare.

"But Mother managed to put me through school, and three years ago I got my first job. At first I just didn't know how I'd ever spend all that money. Yet at the end of three months I hadn't saved a penny.

"And then, Ted proposed. You can imagine how thrilled and happy I was. And I decided then and there to start saving for our wedding.

"So, on my uncle's advice, I opened a savings account at The Dominion Bank. Every pay day without fail, I deposited a few dollars. I was really surprised at just how quickly my savings mounted up. And now, thanks to that savings account, I know that I'll be a bride that Ted will be proud of in the wedding dress of my dreams.

"The wedding's in two weeks. Uncle Alec says he's giving away the happiest bride in the world . . . and Ted says the loveliest, bless his heart. We're planning to open a joint account at The Dominion Bank . . . and start saving for a home of our own. Isn't life wonderful!!"

Probably you, too, have a special goal in life. You'll find that opening a savings account at The Dominion Bank will help you to fulfill it. Come in and talk to the Manager. He'll be happy to tell you about the Bank's many special services. Remember, at The Dominion Bank, every account is an important account.

Feel India Parley May Change History In Asia

NEW DELHI (AP)—The Communist premier of 500,000,000 Chinese and the prime minister of democratic India's 350,000,000 people today opened a weekend of talks which could change the history of Asia.

The meeting of Asia's two powerful government chiefs came as a climax to months of East-West tension in which India, trying to play a neutral role, has appeared drawn closer and closer to her powerful Communist neighbor.

Chou's flight from the Geneva conference to meet Nehru is regarded by some Western sources as a direct challenge to draw world attention from the Washington conference, also this week-end, of Prime Minister Churchill and President Eisenhower.

Advance announcements said Korea and Indo-China will be the main topics discussed by the two premiers at their conference sessions.

Observers here predict that Chou will wage a strong campaign to pull Nehru further from neutrality into the "Asia for Asians" circle he called for at Geneva.

ASKS FRIENDSHIP, UNITY

"May the friendship between China and India develop with each passing day," said Chou in a statement he read in Chinese on arrival. "May the unity of the peoples of all Asian countries become daily closer."

Chou, who speaks fairly good English, used Chinese when conversing with Nehru at the airport. Even the Indian prime minister's "I welcome you to India" was translated for Chou.

There is speculation that the talks would get around to the question of a non-aggression pact between the two countries, though Indian foreign office sources have discounted the possibility of direct action on this.

Indian officials said Nehru, as host, is in a position to direct the trend of the conversations. But the advance handling of the visit at all levels indicates it will be the Chinese leader who will carry the ball in the talks.

40 YEARS IN POLITICS — Rt. Hon. James G. Gardiner, Minister of Agriculture, today celebrates his 40th year in federal-provincial politics, a record for a Canadian.

Gardiner Serves 40 Years In Politics

OTTAWA (CP)—A spunky Scot who might have been a lawyer except for a war today celebrates his 40th year in federal-provincial politics, a record, he believes, exceeded by no living Canadian.

He is Rt. Hon. James G. Gardiner, minister of agriculture, who at the age of 70 holds no thoughts of leaving the tough political arena but is "ready to carry on as long as the people want me."

Jimmy Gardiner started his political career at the tail-end of an age of homesteaders, pioneers and covered wagons. At that time, he recalled in an interview, men were resolute, clear-sighted and determined to carry out their decided actions.

And that, he feels, is the best advice he can give to young politicians—"make up your mind at the outset what the problems are that have to be solved and go to work to make them disappear."

CANADA NEEDS PEOPLE

Today, Canada's greatest need, he believes, are people, but there does not seem to be that same resolution of olden days to stock the country with newcomers.

"The greatest good we can do the world is to get more people to come here," he said.

The big problems that most troubled countries face stem from the fact they have too many people. But the idea, he said, of feeding people in other parts of the world from Canada's bountiful harvests is no tso effective as that of bringing those people to Canada.

Will Talk Over 'Family Matters' U.K. Leader Says

By CLYDE BLACKBURN

WASHINGTON (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill arrived from London this morning to talk over "a few family matters" with President Eisenhower.

The British leader, accompanied by Foreign Secretary Eden, arrived for a round of talks with the American president at a time when United States sources are talking of what they call the worst rift in British - American relations since the cold war began.

Wearing a grey homburg and grey suit, the 79-year-old Churchill said he had travelled from his "fatherland" to his "mother's land"—his mother was born in the U.S.—and that his talks with Eisenhower would be like a family discussion.

FIVE MINUTES EARLY

Five minutes ahead of its scheduled 9 a. m. EDT arrival, Churchill's plane taxied slowly between ranks of ceremonial troops and stopped in front of the official welcoming party headed by Vice-President Richard Nixon and State Secretary Dulles. It had stopped earlier this morning at Gander, Nfld., for refuelling.

The prime minister stepped out of the plane, doffed his homburg to acknowledge applause, then came slowly down the ramp to shake hands with Nixon, Dulles and the dozens of U. S. officials and members of the diplomatic corps. All the Commonwealth ambassadors to Washington were on hand.

Stepping to a battery of microphones, he said he had come to make certain that "there is no misunderstanding."

IN TOP FORM

The morning sunlight brightened his pink-faced smile and flashed on his gold-headed cane. He appeared in excellent spirits.

He told the crowd:

"I've come with Anthony Eden to talk over a few family matters and try to make sure that there are no misunderstandings.

"The English-speaking family or brotherhood is rather a large one and not entirely without a few things here and there.

"And if we work together we may get along all right ourselves and do a lot to help our neighbors in the world, some of whom on either side of the Iron Curtain seem to have even greater problems than ourselves."

ASKS DULLES' APPROVAL

When he finished speaking Churchill turned to Dulles, whom he has known for a long time, and asked in his famous Churchillian growl: "Was that all right?" Dulles grinned and warmly shook his hand.

Eden made no statement. Expected public welcoming comments by Nixon and Dulles also went undelivered. Nine minutes after he set foot on American soil, Churchill climbed into an open convertible with Nixon and they drove to the White House.

Bring Invasion To End Soon Arbenz Promises

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (CP) The exile forces invading the Central American republic of Guatemala from Honduras said early today that their troops are massed for a full-scale attack and that "bloody" fighting already has taken place in the insurrection that began a week ago. However, government leaders in the Guatemalan capital, boasting advances on "all fronts," said the invasion will soon be brought to an end.

A communique from the invasion headquarters of exile leader Col. Carlos Castillo Armas said a major battle was shaping up at Chiquimula, less than 70 miles northeast of the Guatemalan capital.

The announcement said that as the rebels pressed in to attack, the government hastily reinforced the Chiquimula garrison with artillery, mortars and machine-guns. The communique also claimed the garrison commander had deserted to the rebels.

HOLD 16 TOWNS

Castillo Armas said his rebel forces now hold 16 Guatemalan towns, seized since the invaders moved in from the Honduran border Friday in a bid to unseat President Jacobo Arbenz Guzman's regime. The exiles claim the Arbenz government is Communist-dominated.

On the diplomatic front, the strained relations between Guatemala and this adjoining republic appeared near the breaking point today.

Informed sources said the Honduran government is about to demand the expulsion of Guatemalan ambassador Amadeo Chinchilla on the grounds that he sparked Wednesday's leftist student demonstration in Tegucigalpa. Seven persons were wounded when police opened fire.

Chiang Navy Seizes Russ Tanker

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP)—Nationalist China announced today that its navy seized the tanker Tuapse off Formosa Wednesday and is holding it at the port of Kaohsiung.

The Nationalists indicated the 8,840-ton vessel and its cargo might be confiscated.

The announcement did not mention the nationality of the ship, but it is owned by Russia, and the Soviet Union earlier had accused the United States navy of seizing it.

The Nationalists charged that the tanker was carrying oil to a "Communist bandit" port on the Communist mainland in violation of a United Nations embargo against such shipments.

VIOLATING POLICY

The announcement said the Tuapse was seized while violating Nationalist China's port-closure policy—a term used to describe the long-standing Nationalist decree banning foreign ships from Red China ports.

Prior to the official announcement, the Nationalists had made no mention of the ship and had banned publication in Formosan newspapers of reports that Russia had accused the U. S. Navy of seizing the tanker.

RUSSIAN CHARGES

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has accused the United States Navy of seizing a Russian tanker in waters between Formosa and the Philippines. The Danish-built ship was one the Americans tried last year to prevent being delivered to the Russians.

A stiff Russian note, made public here today, said the 8,840-ton Tuapse was seized Wednesday "by a warship of the destroyer type" which threatened to open fire. The note threatened "appropriate measures for safeguarding the security of Soviet merchant ships sailing in that area."

DENIES CHARGE

(In Pearl Harbor, Admiral Felix B. Stump denied that any American warship was involved. Stump commander of the U.S. Pacific fleet, said "no U.S. warship has seized any Russian ship."

The Soviet note, handed to U.S. ambassador Charles E. Bohlen late Thursday, demanded the immediate return of the Tuapse, its crew and its cargo of petroleum products, as well as the "severe punishment of the American officials concerned in the organization of this unlawful act."

The Russian threat of measures to safeguard its shipping could mean establishment of Soviet naval patrols in the ocean approaches to Communist China.

Chinese To Free RCAF Flier

OTTAWA (CP)—Sqdn. Ldr. A. R. MacKenzie on Montreal, an RCAF pilot shot down in Korea in December, 1952, is alive and well and will be released by the Chinese Communists, the external affairs department announced today. The pilot was shot down Dec. 5, 1952, and taken prisoner by the Communists while serving with the United States Air Force in Korea. The action took place northeast of Sinuiju in North Korea, not far from the Yalu river boundary with Manchuria.

The department said no one saw his plane or parachute land. However, subsequent reports from repatriated prisoners-of-war indicated that he had been taken prisoner and had been seen in a prisoner-of-war camp.

GENEVA TALKS SUCCEED

He was not repatriated in the main exchange of prisoners-of-war which took place in September, 1953, and efforts were later made without success to determine whether he was being held by the Communists.

During the Geneva conference the Canadian delegation approached the Chinese Communist delegation informally. As a result of these discussions, the Canadian delegation was informed June 17 that he is "alive and well" and that he will be released. The exact release date is not yet known.

Traffic Begins On Thruway

ROCHESTER, N. Y. (AP)—The first stretch of the New York state thruway to be opened to toll traffic was in use today, officially cleared for business by a jubilant Governor Thomas Dewey.

Dewey pushed a button at 10 p. m. Thursday night and said: "It is with great pride and deep happiness that I now officially open the first 115 miles of the New York state thruway."

CAN PROVE HE'S FIRST

With that, the toll gates along the stretch between Lowell, near Utica, and West Henrietta, south of Rochester, were officially opened. A few minutes before Dewey touched the button, Omero C. Catan of Teaneck, N. J., became the thruway's first customer.

Catan, who makes a hobby of becoming a "first" — and who claims 470 of them in 27 years—handed two dimes fastened to a document bearing his signature to a toll station supervisor at West Henrietta. Then he drove about 11 miles east on the thruway in his flag-bedecked automobile before returning to Rochester.

Seek 2 Women In Heir's Death

CHICAGO (AP)—Two unidentified women were sought today for questioning by police investigating the death of Montgomery Ward Thorne, 20-year-old heir to a $2,000,000 mail order house fortune.

Police Sgt. Thomas Mulvey said the women were seen using a public telephone a few feet from Thorne's room in an apartment building about the time Thorne is believed to have died.

Thorne is believed to have died about 5 a. m. after returning to his room about 4:15 a. m. The coroner's office said nine puncture wounds, such as are made by hypodermic needles, were found in his arms and two such improvised needles were found in his room.

Police have said they do not believe his death a case of foul play.

Brandon Ready To Evacuate

WINNIPEG (CP) — Residents of the low-lying areas around Brandon are preparing to evacuate if the expected rise of five feet in the Assiniboine river occurs.

Mayor James Creighton of Brandon warned all residents of the flats to prepare for possible evacuation following a report from the Manitoba flood forecasting committee indicating a five-foot rise in the river by July 1.

The river level Thursday night stood at 17 feet, six inches above normal, right on the flood mark. City - erected dikes have prevented any serious flooding so far, but they are not expected to be able to cope with a five - foot rise. The main section of Brandon City, however, is high enough to be safe.

The Red river, which caused the main damage in Manitoba's big flood of 1950, is not causing any concern this year.

$500 Bail Granted On Assault Charge

OSHAWA (CP)—Stanley Burnett, 47, today was remanded to July 6 on bail of $500 on an assault charge arising from a youth's claim that a man pushed him over a 30-foot cliff and onto rocks on the Lake Ontario shoreline.

Burnett appeared before William C. Murkar, justice of the peace.

Mati Poldvee, 18, told police a man accused him of trespassing on his property at nearby Fairport Beach, then shoved him so that he fell to the beach. Poldvee said that, as far as he knew, he was not trespassing on Burnett's property.

Men Dive In Ditches In Highway Scare

TORONTO (CP) — Pedestrians fell flat on the road or dove down embankments while motorists tangled bumpers and sideswiped each other early today as bursting tires of a blazing tractor-trailer led to a false warning that it had a load of "glycerine" aboard.

Traffic on the Queen Elizabeth way was tied up more than two hours when pedestrians and motorists panicked at the fear of nitroglycerine exploding. There was none aboard the truck.

Warn City Doomed

BELIZE, British Honduras (Reuters) — Rebel Radio Liberation claimed today that "the fall of Guatemala is very near" and warned citizens to stay away from military objectives in the city, which, it said, were about to be bombed.

Bronze Statue For George VI

LONDON (Reuters) — A bronze memorial statue of the late George VI will be erected in London by the King George VI National Memorial Fund, it was announced Thursday.

The fund, which raised £1,665,000 in subscriptions from many parts of the world, was opened on Oct. 4, 1952, by Prime Minister Churchill in a broadcast appeal.

At London's Mansion House, where a model of the statue was exhibited Thursday, Sir Leslie Boyce, chairman of the fund's executive committee, said the Queen and the Queen Mother have approved plans for it.

IN GARDENS

The statue will be put up in Carlton Gardens above a flight of steps leading to the Mall.

Boyce, who was lord mayor of London in 1951-52, said the estimated cost of the statue is £56,000 including an endowment to maintain it. It is expected to be erected by October, 1955.

The statue, nine feet six inches high, will show the King bareheaded, wearing his robes of the Order of the Garter and decorations over the uniform of an admiral of the fleet.

France Refuses Attend Talks

PARIS (Reuters) — Premier Pierre Mendes-France today rejected an invitation to six-nation talks to be held in Brussels within two weeks on the European Defence Community treaty.

Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg asked Thursday for the conference to determine France's attitude toward the six-nation army and what to do if France fails to approve it. Other conference participants would be west Germany and Italy.

Mendes-France told Belgian ambassador Baron Guillaume this morning that such a conference would be premature and inopportune since he now is trying to resolve the EDC dispute within France.

The premier, whose government was formed only a week ago, said France must first be largely reunited on its EDC attitude.

Expect Commissioner To Accept Invitation

OTTAWA (CP) — The external affairs department said Thursday it presumes Escott Reid, Canadian high commissioner to India, will accept an invitation from India's president to a reception for Chinese Premier Chou En-lai.

"It would be ungracious to decline an invitation from the head of state," a department spokesman said.

He was commenting on a New Delhi dispatch which said several diplomats were sending cables to their governments for instructions whether to accept the invitation.

Toronto Mayor May Quit Job

TORONTO (CP) — Mayor Allan Lamport said Thursday he would step down as Toronto mayor to accept a commissionership in the Toronto Transit Commission if the metropolitan council decides he is the man for the job.

He declined to comment on a report that his choice was settled and that he planned to resign as mayor Monday to take the TTC commissionership left vacant by the recent death of TTC chairman W. C. McBrien.

Such a move would leave controller Leslie Saunders as mayor of Toronto for the remainder of 1954.

The commission vacancy will be filled at a special meeting of the metropolitan council next Tuesday. Rural members of the committee were reported as opposing appointment of the mayor but most city members were reported supporting him.

10 Canadian Soldiers Arrested In Japan

TOKYO (AP)—Japanese police tonight arrested 10 Canadian and four other Commonwealth soldiers accused of stealing about $13,600 worth of clothing and other property from a Japanese ordnance depot during the past year, Kyodo news agency reported.

The arrest, with the co-operation of a special British Commonwealth investigation team, was made at Kure. Kyodo said the 14 men were held by the Commonwealth team there for further investigation.

Names of the soldiers were not released.

Kyodo said the soldiers sold the property to Japanese dealers.

Stevens Came Out On Top By Narrow Margin—Poll

NEW YORK (AP)—The Gallup Poll says the American public believes by a small margin that Army Secretary Robert Stevens came out "on top" over Senator Joseph McCarthy (Rep. Wis.) in the recent Washington hearings.

The poll, known formally as the American Institute of Public Opinion, says it asked this question of persons across the U. S.:

"Now, regardless of whose side you, yourself, agree with, who do you feel has come out on top in this case?"

The replies: Stevens 28 per cent; McCarthy 24; neither 18; undecided 30.

Asked which side they were more inclined to agree with, 40 per cent said Stevens, 25 per cent McCarthy, eight per cent were neutral and 27 per cent undecided.

To a question whether McCarthy and Roy Cohn "used improper means in trying to get preferred treatment" for Pte. David Schine, the replies were: Yes, 52 per cent, no, 24; undecided, 24.

To another question, whether Stevens and Army Counsel John Adams "used improper means in trying to stop McCarthy from investigating the army," the replies were: Yes, 38 per cent; no, 32; undecided, 30.

British Team Beats Uruguay

HILTERFINGEN, Switzerland (AP)—England's soccer team today beat Uruguay—in a race for hotel accommodation.

The Uruguayans, matched with England in a World Cup quarter-final Saturday, wanted to take lunch and pre-match rest at the Hotel des Salines in Rheinfelden, just a few minutes drive from the Basel stadium where the game will be played. But England's players had got in first; no more room was available.

Said Celestino Mivelli, Uruguay's technical adviser: "I'm confident this is the only time we shall get beaten by England."

Seaway Residents To Learn Fate

TORONTO (CP)—Residents of St. Lawrence areas affected by the seaway and power project will learn today what plans the Ontario government has for their future.

A delegation headed by Premier Frost will meet in Morrisburg with mayors and reeves of the affected communities. It is likely the government will suggest that a parks management setup, similar to the Niagara parks commission, be established in the area.

Plans for the area were discussed Thursday at a lengthy meeting of the cabinet at which consideration of the effect of the project on the province's road system in that area played an important part.

New OHA Turmoil

Rule Stewart Owns Chatham Players

TORONTO (CP) — Status of Chatham and Sarnia in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A group next winter became complicated Thursday when an OHA sub-committee, meeting with the senior council here, ruled that last season's Chatham players and franchise are the property of Jack Stewart who resigned as Chatham playing-manager.

Stewart proposes entering a team from Sarnia. Chatham must apply for a franchise if it intends to ice a team under the management of Wren Blair, of Oshawa.

Five clubs filing entries and posting $2,000 bond were Owen Sound Mercurys, Kitchener Dutchmen, Niagara Falls Cataracts, Windsor Bulldogs and Stratford Indians.

Tentative plans call for the season to open Oct. 22.

Stewart was granted until July 4 to decide about a Sarnia entry.

TIGER ROSTER FROZEN

The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association executive meets July 17 to name Canada's representatives in 1955 world hockey championship in Europe. During the interval members of the Hamilton Tigers, suspending operations for the season, have been frozen, awaiting a CAHA decision, and will be disposed of at a July 20 meeting.

George Redding, Hamilton coach, announced George McGinn and two other players had been released and Jack Taylor sold to Owen Sound.

The annual all-star game was set for Owen Sound, with tentative date Oct. 16.

Weekly salary limit per team was fixed at $1,250 for each club, with penalty of $1,000 set if auditor finds violation in club books. Such club must deposit $1,000 to raise bond to the required $2,000 before entering the following season's competition.

Start Fund For Victims Of Accident

A fund to help meet expenses incurred after the accident north of Buckhorn Tuesday night that killed one boy and injured 14 others, mostly young people, has been started by citizens of the community of Burleigh Falls.

The Rev. Willard Day of the Church on the Rack, who is heading a committee to run the fund, said families of all the youngsters involved have no resources of their own.

Because of the tragic nature of the accident, it was not believed fitting to hold any entertainment to raise the money. The committee is depending on the generosity of the people of the district.

TWO CRITICAL

Two of the children are still critically ill in hospital. The chances are they will be there a long time. The type of treatment and nursing care they must have, to stand any chance of pulling through, is costly.

The others, who were more fortunate in escaping with less serious injuries, will still be faced with bills that will be extremely difficult for them to meet. That is why Mr. Day and others at Burleigh Falls, where their families live, are asking for help.

Contributions can be sent to Mr. Day at Burleigh Falls or the other members of the committee, Robert Brown, Victor Brown and Robert Beal.

Will Continue Seek Solution

OTTAWA (CP)—Labor Minister Gregg Thursday night said nothing will be left undone to find a mutually-acceptable solution to the contract dispute between the railways and their non-operating employees.

He said in the Commons that talks between representatives of 14 non-operating unions and the railways have been adjourned in call of either party.

He told Stanley Knowles (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre) that both parties agreed that they would make no public pronouncements concerning the negotiations. For that reason he could not comment on progress of the talks.

The 135,000 employees who do not actually operate the trains seek no wage increases. They seek increases in paid statutory holidays, certain sick benefits and overtime rates for Sundays.

Plan Women's Bureau In Labor Department

OTTAWA (CP) — A women's bureau will be set up shortly in the labor department.

The bureau will deal generally with the problem of women in employment and will be headed by a woman.

Formation was announced more than a year ago, but Labor Minister Gregg said in the Commons Thursday there has been difficulty getting a woman chief. Now, the civil service commission expected to declare a choice shortly.

Mrs. Ellen Fairclough (PC—Hamilton West), Opposition party labor specialist, said she cannot understand the difficulty in getting a director.

"It is becoming more and more important that the department get a move on and get this bureau going," she said. "Women in employment are not going to decrease in numbers but are going to increase."

The Hondurans also say they suspect the envoy of hiring saboteurs to tamper with Honduran air force fighter planes found damaged in a workshop.

REACH CRITICAL STAGE

Tension reached the crucial stage when Guatemala accused Honduras of aiding the rebellion being waged by Guatemalans who had been in exile in Honduras. The Hondurans denied the charge, and counter-claimed that Guatemalan planes had bombed their soil.

Guatemala's demand that Honduras and neighboring Nicaragua obey a United Nations Security Council resolution against helping either side in the war was before the council today.

The Inter - American Peace Committee announced in Washington that if Guatemala is willing it will send down a fact - finding committee to check on her charges against Honduras and Nicaragua. Early today Guatemala had not replied, but members of the committee expressed confidence she would agree.

Both sides in the war continue to issue conflicting military claims at frequent intervals.

The rebel "liberation army" claimed communications have been cut between Guatemala City and the rail town of Zacapa, and also between Zacapa and the chief Carribean port, Puerto Barrios.

"Radjo liberation" said the rebels control the main highways and communications, and will soon strangle the government forces into immobility through a shortage of fuel.

The Guatemalan government radio, on the other hand, Thursday night declared that army troops were advancing on all fronts, leaving "many dead and wounded" in their wake.

U.S. Dollar At Discount

MONTREAL (CP) — The U. S. dollar was at a discount of two per cent in terms of Canadian funds at noon today. Thursday's noon rate was 98 cents. Pound sterling $2.76 5-16, against $2.76¼.

1955 Congress Tossed Problem

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman Eugene Millikin (Rep. Colo.) finance committee and Senator Walter George of Georgia, its senior Democrat, agreed today that Senate rejection of a liberalized reciprocal trade agreements plan throws the whole controversial question of a broadened United States foreign trade policy over to the 1955 Congress.

The Senate Thursday rejected by 45 to 32 a Democratic move for a three-year extension of the Reciprocal Trade Act with new powers to cut tariffs 15 per cent. Then it passed a straight one - year extension of the old law by 71 to three.

On the key vote, six Democrats including George joined with the 39 Republicans present to defeat the Democratic - sponsored substitute. The "aye" votes were all from Democrats.

However, Millikin and George agreed in separate interviews that the vote did not represent a true test on the recommendations of the Randal commission on foreign economic policy for some further reduction of tariff barriers.

ASKED LIBERALIZATION

President Eisenhower based his original foreign trade recommendations to Congress in March on the findings of the special commission headed by Clarence B. Randall, president of Inland Steel Co. Eisenhower called for the liberalized extension of reciprocal trade which the Democrats sponsored Thursday.

But later, in a letter made public in May, the president said he would go along with the one-year plan for the time being. This came after key Republicans in Congress had balked on the broader proposal. Eisenhower said, however, that he was not abandoning his program but was giving Congress an opportunity to study it further.

Parliament Sets Record For Lengthy Sessions

OTTAWA (CP)—Parliament has set a modern record for lengthy sessions.

The Commons Thursday night completed its 137th sitting of the present session, one more than the 136 days it took to finish the 1944-45 Parliament.

A post-war record was established June 2, the 120th day of the session. That was one day more than the 119 days Parliament met between Dec. 5, 1947, and June 30, 1948.

However, there's little chance that an all-time record will be set because prorogation of the present session is expected to take place today or Saturday. The 1903 session extended through 236 days without any lengthy adjournments, although records do not show how many sitting days it lasted.

Will Talk Over

Eisenhower, with a broad grin on his face, welcomed Churchill at the White House steps with a vigorous handshake, and a "Good morning."

The president helped the British leader up the stairs where he introduced him to Mrs. Eisenhower. Nearly 100 photographers, newsreel and television camera men recorded the greeting.

Eisenhower greeted Eden with "It's good to see you." The president also shook hands warmly with half a dozen of Churchill's aides.

About 200 government employees watched the welcoming ceremonies and applauded as Eisenhower escorted Churchill through the front door.

CIGAR SYMBOL DISPLAYED

During the five-mile automobile trip from the airport, Churchill lit a long black cigar and held it in his right hand while he waves his hat with his left.

"Good Old Winnie," was the greeting from many of the spectators clustered in groups of 20 to 300 or 400 along the route. "Atta boy," shouted one youngster who waved a British flag.

Churchill and Eden will be guests of the president through Sunday, after which they move to the British embassy. Then Churchill will make a short visit to Ottawa.

Eisenhower, Churchill, Dulles and Eden planned to lunch together today, and officials thought they would then go over the program for their talks. Tonight the president arranged a dinner party bringing together British and U.S. officials. Congressional leaders have been invited to lunch Saturday.

COMMUNIQUE EXPECTED

A communique on the talks probably will be issued Sunday night.

The 79-year-old Churchill left London apparently in chipper spirits amid cries of "good old Winnie" from the watching crowd. He was wearing a characteristic black homburg and swinging a cane.

He displayed, on the whole, more cheer than seemed to be felt by any of those with whom he confers in Washington.

This is a result of an accumulation of sharp disagreements and in British-American relations, culminating in a speech by Eden to the House of Commons Wednesday which was badly received here.

The great specific issue before Eisenhower and Churchill is what, if anything, their governments are going to do about blocking Communist conquest in Southeast Asia. Eden's speech was read by U.S. leaders as almost sounding the death knell of any real agreement.

Eisenhower and Dulles want quick British co-operation in steps to form an anti-Communist alliance in Southeast Asia. Eden spoke of the possibility of such a pact, but discounted the chance that it would do any good in the immediate future. And he coupled it with a suggestion for non-aggression pacts presumably including both China and the U.S. The U.S. cold-shouldered this suggestion.

SERIOUS PROPOSAL

British diplomats said the Eden proposal was put forward in all seriousness as a practical way of obtaining support for an Asian security system of Commonwealth countries like India, Burma, and Ceylon which tend to be "neutralists" in their foreign policies.

Not only did the Eden idea fall on hostile ears in the executive branch of the government, but it stirred resentment in Congress. Some Republican leaders say the House of Representatives foreign affairs committee will consider asking Congress to deny use of any foreign aid funds for underwriting a Far Eastern non-aggression pact with the Communists.

U.S. diplomats say the deeper significance of the split over Southeast Asian policy is that it not only weakens the Western powers in their efforts to deal with China but also builds bitterness and recrimination which extend to consideration of Western European problems.

On the Western European front, where British - American solidarity has been the heart of the North Atlantic Alliance, the critical problem is what to do about the rearmament of West Germany in the face of persistent French reluctance to approve a European army. Britain has long talked hopefully of bringing West Germany directly into NATO. U.S. officials want to go over possible alternatives but not to foreclose the possibility of ratification by France of the European Army Treaty.

City Hall To Get Water Heater

The proptery committee of city council Thursday recommended acceptance of the tender of $1,812 by Kelly's Peterborough Fuel and Transfer Co., Ltd., to install a water heater and auxiliary unit in city hall.

Heretofore, water for the provincial health laboratory in city hall, for cleaning and for the caretaker's living quarters has been heated by the main heating system in the building. Use of Bunker C-grade fuel oil has also made it necessary to keep the furnace going for short periods during the summer to keep the fuel in the tanks in a fluid state.

An investigation was made by a heating expert of the company who installed the furnace and it was recommended that the water and auxiliary unfil be installed. The electrical auxiliary unit will keep the fuel oil at the proper temperature to retain its liquidity.

City clerk E. A. Outram told the property committee he was confident the city would save enough in fuel bills in one year to pay the cost of the installation. By using the furnace during the summer, the city had been losing what it saved during the winter by use of the cheaper Bunker-C fuel oil.

Duffus Motors Given $1,040.85 Judgment

Judgment for $1,040.85 was given in favor of Duffus Motors Ltd., by Judge De N. Kennedy in the county court Thursday. The defendant in the action was Irving Moldaver, 568 Homewood Ave.

Duffus Motors, represented by John Currelly, brought the action against defendant after the purchase of a truck that carried a chattel mortgage. Duffus Motors had sold the truck and then it had been seized as payment for the mortgage.

Moldaver maintained that he did not know of the chattel mortgage when he had sold the truck to Duffus Motors.

TAR POT ON FIRE

A tar pot behind the Queen's Hotel on Simcoe St. caught fire Thursday afternoon and firemen used a new type of chemical extinguisher and a handpump to snuff it out. They had two other alarms earlier in the day: a false alarm when a telephone repairman touched off an automatic signal to the station from behind Neill's shoe store, and there was a chimney fire at George Woodcock's home, 210 Lansdowne St.

sworn to the standards of Liberalism during his college days, before he became a school teacher.

He wanted to be a lawyer, but the First World War interfered and he returned to farming and took up school teaching, making his first successful bid for the Saskatchewan legislature at a by-election June 25, 1914.

NEVER BEEN DEFEATED

Though he's had some close shaves, he's never been defeated at the polls. For 40 years he has waged political war, swamping his opponents with powerful rhetoric, statistics and knowledge of history.

One time in 1945, he held his Saskatchewan seat by a 28 votes, but at the next election in 1949 he received a majority of 4,750.

He became a Saskatchewan provincial minister in 1922, a premier in 1926. But one day in 1935, he recalled, the late prime minister Mackenzie King told him to "take the next train to Ottawa." The next thing he knew he was minister of agriculture, a post he's held since.

He might now be the senior member of Prime Minister St. Laurent's cabinet except for a technicality. He had to get back to Regina to resign as provincial premier, and so Trade Minister Howe was sworn in first, beating him in seniority by 30 days.

Fundamentals Atomic Age Outlined By L. McKeever

"A is for Atom," a colored film produced by General Electric was shown at the Kiwanis Club luncheon Thursday at the Empress Hotel.

This was followed by a talk on atomic energy given by Larry McKeever, manager of engineering in the apparatus division, at Canadian General Electric.

He was introduced by Jack Sinclair and thanked by Jim Lillico.

The film explained in simple language understandable to the layman and by means of gay drawings, the structure of the atom, isotypes of an element, radio-activity and the basic principles of the A-bomb.

It illustrated in cartoon style how the nucleas of an atom is smashed and the resulting loss of mass is changed into energy. This proved Einstein's theory which he worked out mathematically 50 years ago that mass equals energy.

In his speech, Mr. McKeever pointed out the tremendous effect atomic energy will have on mankind's future now that it appears that this enemy can be harnessed as a fuel.

But, he said, the great prospect of controlled nuclear and thermonuclear power awaits man's learning how to control himself.

Mr. Keever touched on three things — istoopes, bombs and the useful power of atomic energy.

ISOTOPES

With a practical chart, he explained the techincal structure of istopes, and how radio-active isotopes are playing a prominnet part today in medicine, industry, agriculture and metallurgy.

To find heart defects, doctors use radio-active injections to trace heart movements, he said. In agriculture radio-active fertilizer is used to see its effect on plants' growth, and now it is possible to measure the wear and tear on machine pistons with radio-active detection.

The use of fissionable material such as uranium as another fuel is feasible, he said. However, many difficulties must be overcome before such a plan becomes a reality and atomic power will not for a long time compete with hydro power.

England will be the first country to have an atomic energy commercial power station, where tow are under construction and one is expected to be in operation in two years.

He laid out certain basic facts about science of thermonuclear energy release as it is in the hydrogen bomb.

TRANSFORMATION

In this process, he said, atoms of hydrogen, the lightest elementary substance in nature are transformed under extreme heat into atoms of helium, next on the scale of elements. But the weight of this manufactured helium atom is less than the sum of hydrogen atoms that made it up. Some mass is "missing." It has been converted into energy —the sunlight upon which all life depends.

He said temperature to bring about a thermonuclear reaction on earth was unthinkable until the atomic bomb was built. In an A-bomb explosion temperatures are attained which surpass those in the interior of the sun. Thus the A-bomb acts as a trigger to touch off thermonuclear reaction.

Miss Michigan Loses Crown After Day

MUSKEGON, Mich. (AP) — The crown of Miss Michigan for 1954 was gently lifted Thursday from the blonde head of dimpled 22-year-old Delores Susin of Bloomfield Hills, a Detroit suburb.

The committee declared the competition temporarily "no contest."

He said he was glad of his new assignment to the radar division, as he felt he was well qualified for his new post and wished him the best of luck.

Crown Attorney Harry Deyman said the use of science in crime detection was playing an effective part in police work, but there was no substitute for the hard work and thoroughness of the successful police officer.

Cpl. Wilson said his stay in this district had been a very pleasant one and he would miss the many friendships he had made.

Present from Cobourg were Crown Attorney Harry Deyman, Chief Constable H. Pearse and PC Gene Butler of the local municipal police, Earl Hamilton, Cecil Wilson, Cpl. Two Circuit Clouts Start Millbrook Rally

MILLBROOK (ENS)—Baseball fans in Bethany and Millbrook usually don't look for more than a one or two-run margin when their teams lock horns. So Thursday night's 9-2 win for Millbrook came as a surprise to Millbrook supporters and a shock to Bethany's faithful followers. The score ran true to form until the bottom of the fifth inning when Edmunds and Handley came up with successive circuit clouts. Edmunds had an out-of-the-park version of a homer over the short left field fence, while Handley's, although it had some 85 feet greater flight distance, called for some fast base running to cash it in. Bethany got to George Smith for five hits, while he sent a similar number back to the bench via the strike-out route. Cam Rowan whiffed one more than his rival twirler, but was nicked for ten safeties. It was Millbrook's ability (or good fortune) to "hit 'em where they ain't" that accounted for most of the margin. Several infield pops and rollers caught the defenders out of position. For Bethany Reg. Edmunds and W. Rowan tenanted the bases most often, and for Millbrook it was Dawson and Don Edmunds. Incidentally, this quartette wouldn't short-weight you much at half a ton. It is unusual for an outfielder to look good on a fly that gets away from him, but Alex Ruth's gallant tussle with a high lofted ball that moved him back into jungle territory deserves a mention.

Northey and Challice umpired this one and kept the moaning to a new low for the season.

Bethany—B. Ryley, H. Ryley, C. Rowan, R. Edmunds, W. Rowan, B. Reynolds, O. Challice, W. Reynolds, H. McGill, M. McGill.

Millbrook — Ginn, Dawson, Guthrie, Lowery, Carr, Ruth, Edmunds, Handley, Wright, Argue, Smith.

Hatfield Hall Available To Counties

COBOURG (ENS)—Decision of the department of national defence to let its option on the Hatfield Hall building lapse makes this building available once more to Northumberland and Durham counties, should council decide to purchase it for use as counties offices.

The counties rent space in the town hall, but the counties council feels there is not enough room for its needs. The special committee appointed to line up other accommodation was strongly in favor of Hatfield Hall, but to convert it for use as a counties building would run to more than $100,000, it was estimated.

At its last special session, counties council was undecided what to do and instructed the committee to enquire into the cost of constructing a counties wing to the town hall.

While the committee was looking into the matter of new accommodations, the department of national defence took an option on Hatfield Hall, but the latest word is that instead of acquiring that building for an officers' mess, it will build on ordnance depot property.

An Important News Item

We emphasize for our readers and their posterity yesterday's report from London that the five-power disarmament talks have ended in failure. For five weeks the three major powers (Britain, the United States and the U.S.S.R.) and France and Canada argued about plans but no agreement could be reached. It seems that everybody wants atomic weapons banned but nobody knows how to do it. The conclusion therefore is that nobody is sufficiently wise, despite the great skill and ingenuity shown in developing atomic energy for warlike purposes, to find a way how not to use them. This is a devastating criticism of human ability. On the other hand, another conclusion may be this: not that leaders of men are incapable of writing a disarmament plan but they do not want one sufficiently badly. There is a terrific pride in the strength of one's own arms and the power to use them. Pride, it is said, goeth before a fall.

* * *

Perhaps we should not be dismayed or surprised that the disarmament talks have failed. There was, however, a distinct hope that the end might have been better, for this conference was unlike many of its predecessors. It arose from general fear of the new Hydrogen bomb. The fear and determination to banish the fear had the outspoken declarations of both the President of the United States and the leader of Russia (Malenkov). Further, the conference was held behind closed doors, without the deliberations being subject to the wear and tear of daily public comment. Yet, the conference has failed . . . Let us spare a tear for humanity.

Tired Members?

Despite their recently increased indemnities and shorter daily sessions than their predecessors of a generation ago had, the Members of Parliament are more often out of the House than in it. Several times in recent weeks there has been a bare quorum in attendance at debates. A quorum is 20 members; the total membership is 265. At one time last Monday during the debate on the two billion dollar estimates of the Department of National Defence, only 21 members were in their seats.

We presume that the M.P.'s are somewhat interested in the disposal of two billion dollars of taxpayers' money, and also in the subject of national defence in these times. So we must guess that the 240-odd members not attending the debate were at work elsewhere—in Committee (committee work has mounted rapidly since the war), in their own offices, or attending to visiting constituents. On the other hand, we cannot withhold a suspicion that a sizable number of Members had not returned from their weekend holiday—the occasion to which we referred was, after all, only Monday, which is early in the week. And perhaps some of the members were at their hotels or Ottawa residences packing, in expectation of prorogation. Away with the thought that some of them had jumped the closing gun and had already gone home!

The session has in fact been unusually long. The Members are probably tired of Ottawa and have constituency and private business awaiting their attention at home. The affairs of Parliament have multiplied; the long session calls attention to this and also to the need for procedural changes so that more work is done in less time, and so that the flow of words in the Commons is dammed.

"Windshieldisme"

The French have a more dramatic sense than North Americans, it seems. Americans begin a furore about pitted windshields, Canadians take up the craze, cracked theories are bandied across the border, the tales mount and are decorated by curious instances, but still the basic evidence of mystery is merely pitted glass.

The French approach the same kind of phenomenon with a greater flair for dramatic quality. Their fundamental tale is this: A driver, while on the road with his car, sees a sudden blue flash. His windscreen goes completely opaque, and then invariably falls to pieces in his lap. No one has yet been killed in these fiery reports, but motorists are becoming anxious. They name the epidemic phenomenon—if such it is—windshieldisme. The term is of course derived from the argot French word windshield (the w being pronounced as a v) which in turn comes from the Detroit word windshield.

As on this side of the Atlantic, experts, including scientists, venture to assert that there is a natural physical reason for the windshield-shattering. The French Army believes that windshieldisme—or windshieldism—is due to an accumulation of static electricity between the different layers of glass in modern windscreens. These are insulated from the surrounding metal by rubber and do not permit the static to be drawn off by conduction. Therefore a slight shock can set off a violent discharge between the front and back of the windshield, which takes the form of an explosion. This explanation, the French logically point out, does not explain the case of Madame Remud. Madame R. last week in Cannes stepped into her stationary car and was immediately injured when her side window blew itself to bits before she could even press the starter.

When a craze hits a nation, why not make it a good gaudy one? North Americans have quietly pitted windshields; the French produce a shocker, something that is a tribute to the inventive imagination of the race, or worthy of its excitability. The French story could go on for a year; the mild North American version is already as dead as a dodo. We have not heard of pitted windshields in Canada since April.

It Takes One Good Idea

On Tuesday last the inventor of the zip-fastener, Dr. Gideon Sundback, died at the age of seventy-four at his home in Meadowville, Pennsylvania. He perfected his creation, which he called 'the hookless fastener', in 1913; the firm which manufactured it began with twenty employees, and it has now grown to very large proportions. Although it is not mentioned in his obituary notices, we assume that Dr. Sundback made a good deal of money from his invention. Certainly he struck a shrewd blow at the button-moulders.

If you want to be rich, the careers of Dr. Sundback and a score of other successful men of our day provide the golden secret: you need only have one good idea. You must first of all discover something which everybody wants (although, as it is not yet created, they are not conscious of their need), and then you must find a way of making it. It is as simple, and as difficult, as that.

What do we want? Well, at this present moment we should like a device which will keep flies from entering a window or a door which is standing open; with such a device, we could get rid of the ugly wire screens which are now necessary.

We want a device which will enable us to sharpen our scissors, which constant use on newsprint have made dull; scissors grinders sometimes sharpen scissors and sometimes they ruin them; we want a gadget that we can use every day, with sure results.

We want an eraser which will work on carbon copies of documents as well as it does on the originals—something like an instantaneous ink bleach.

Anybody who can supply us, and the rest of the world, with these things, has a good chance of dying as rich and famous as Dr. Sundback.

Coming Out Of The Gas

When the American evangelist, Billy Graham, was at work in England recently, his crusade appeared to be an untarnished success. Thousands flocked to hear him and declared themselves edified. Tough, leathery old newspaper columnists announced through the press that they had gone to hear him expecting to sneer, and had been moved to prayer. (There is a widespread belief that it is hard to rouse the emotions of a newspaper man; they cultivate this notion assiduously themselves; actually they are the most mercurial and sentimental of creatures, for if they were not so they would not be in their peculiar business.) The Archbishop of Canterbury hopped nimbly on the bandwagon of the Graham Crusade, and 2,000 clergymen of the Church of England were said to be actively co-operating with him.

Now that the redoubtable Doctor Graham has left England, the nation is behaving rather like a dentist's patient who is coming out of the gas. The rosy dream is fading, and difficult decisions must be made. It is being pointed out that Graham's theology is out-and-out Fundamentalism, as he sets it down in his book Peace With God. Billy rejects evolution and all archaeological science which suggests that Man was not created, whole and perfect, in the Garden of Eden. He believes that all the conflict and evil in the world are the work of the Devil, who is as real to him as his God. People of contentious spirit are asking if these are really the beliefs of the Church of England.

This is not a Canadian problem, and we do not intend to stress it. But it follows a well-known pattern: after the spree, the headache. After coming out of the gas, the pain in the jaw. The transfigured columnists, we presume, will quickly return to their pretence of toughness.

Japanese barbers have cut the price of haircut, shave and shampoo to a dime. But it must be pointed out that the Japanese grow approximately four hairs to the square inch, so it may be robbery at that.

LONDON LETTER

Models Become Peeresses

By KENNETH HARRIS

NEVER since the war ended, I think, have the times been so propitious for an Anglo-American visit as they are now for the visit to Washington of Sir Winston Churchill and Mr. Anthony Eden, Britain's Premier and Foreign Secretary.

In spite of recent Anglo-American diplomatic differences, public opinion here about United States policy, especially in the Far East, is far quieter and less apprehensive than I can ever remember it. The fact that Mr. Eden appears to have been calling the shots at Geneva has, if only for the time being, relieved many people of their misgivings that London does only what Washington tells it to do. The fact that the Americans have not had the slump that was feared by so many here, and that Britain's latest trade figures look quite good—on paper—have made people less defensive about dollar aid of one kind or another.

* * *

MOST IMPORTANT, everyone here who takes any interest at all in American affairs has been impressed by what has been happening to Senator McCarthy recently, not to mention the interest which was manifested a few weeks ago when the Supreme Court took its great stand against racial segregation.

Last of all, of course, there is the question of the weather. This so far is about the ghastliest June we have ever had in this country, and at least we know the Americans are not responsible for that.

* * *

THE ANNOUNCEMENT of his Washington visit has put the Prime Minister back into the political news in a big way after he had been out of it for several months.

The last time I can recall writing his name in an article was on the day he sailed up the Thames with the Queen after he had welcomed her back from her Commonwealth tour. Before that, apart from a few brushes with individual Members of Parliament, I cannot remember him cutting much of a dash since late last autumn, when he made a couple of splendid speeches in the House of Commons, putting the question of Anglo-American relations with the Soviet Union in an illuminating historical context.

* * *

THE ONLY recent piece of news, about him, I suppose, has been the fact that he is still in office. For a long time it was widely believed that when the Queen came back from her long tour, Sir Winston would retire. He is still with us, however, and clearly within hailing distance of transatlantic aeroplanes.

With Mr. Eden it has been rather different. Since the Foreign Secretary got back into harness last autumn, well recovered from his illness, he has been in the front of the news, partly of course because it soon became clear that the chances of Mr. R. A. Butler, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, replacing him as heir-apparent to Sir Winston were declining rapidly.

* * *

IN the last two months Mr. Eden has been in the very centre of the limelight because of the role he has played at Geneva. With all due respect to the influence he has exerted there in favour of common sense and reasonableness, in my opinion never has so much in the way of kudos been earned for doing so little. However, there is no doubt that Eden has never stood higher in public opinion than he stands at present.

AS MORE and more British cars go on the road, the British parking problem is beginning to resemble the American one. Although there are far fewer cars here than in America, our much smaller roads and much more congested town centres make the problem as bad, if not worse.

All kinds of suggestions are being made, with more and more pressure being exerted, especially in London, for the construction of underground parking areas. I was interested to read today how the Vice-Chancellor of Oxford University proposes to solve the city's problem—an urgent one, since Oxford is now almost impassable on a busy morning because of cars parked in the ancient city's narrow and tortuous streets. Sir Maurice Bowra suggests that multi-storey garages be built, and that motorists be compelled by law to use them.

"We shall never again see Oxford as it really is, in all its charm and beauty, until we chase the cars up to the fourth or fifth storey of such a garage," says the Vice-Chancellor.

I myself have seen these multi-storey garages being built in Washington, D.C.

FROM WHICH feminine profession does the highest proportion of the wives of our British aristocracy come? A generation ago, the answer would be the Stage. Now it would almost certainly be . . . Modelling.

Gertie Millar, the ex-Gaiety Theatre girl, who born into a Bradford working-class family, became the Countess of Dudley. Vesta Tilley left the chorus to become Lady de Frece. Rosie Boote crowned her stage career with a coronet and is now Rose, Marchioness of Headfort. Annie Gilchrist and Sylvia Strong both danced their way into the peerage.

* * *

BUT THIS was a good long healthy generation ago. Now what do we find? The Countess of Dalkeith, Jane McNeill, wife of the heir to the Duke of Buccleuch, is the niece of Gertie Millar. But Gertie Millar's niece was not an actress but a mannequin.

Catherine Boyle, now a television star, left modelling to become Viscountess Boyle; Anne Bell, the Model with the Perfect Figure, became the Duchess of Rutland.

Beautiful Fiona Campbell-Walter, said to be Britain's loveliest model, is escorted a great deal by Mr. Billy Wallace, friend of Princess Margaret. Hotly pursued by blue-blooded socialities are Susan Abraham and Sally Anne Vivian.

* * *

WHY are models so sought after by the rich and well connected? Recently Jean Bell, a leading model agent, gave this explanation: "Because they are elegant, wear clothes and jewellery well, know how to carry off any situation with dignity—and come from the same background."

Very interesting, that last remark. Whereas the actresses who married into the aristocracy often came from the humblest of homes, models almost always come from the middle or upper classes.

Miss Bell added another reason for young aristocrats' performances: "Most of the young bloods today are so insignificant they need a glamour girl around to make them feel important," she said. And perhaps to make them feel intelligent, too.

An American Opinion: STUMPED

Snow On Their Slippers

By SEBASTIAN HAFFNER

IT is a pity, but one does not quite escape politics in this matter of the Soviet ballet visit to East Berlin. It is a major artistic event, but it's not only that. When their planned Paris performance was cancelled, the Russian dancers came to Berlin instead. There are three unmistakable diplomatic gestures implied in all this. One is addressed to inhospitable France: "If Paris spurns us, there is always Berlin." Another is for the East German State and Government, which is assured— not for the first time in recent months— that it has ceased to be an expendable asset in Soviet eyes and has made the grade as a valuable and honoured friend. A third is for West Berlin and West Germany— only the barest hint of a gesture, no more than a wink: "Interested?"

Officially, there is no response to this third gesture. The West German and West Berlin Press takes no notice or attempts to be superior. But the Berliners, West and East alike, are not the kind of people who are easily persuaded to miss something inside their gates which has the reputation of being the best of its kind in the world. On the first night I met West Berlin acquaintances in droves. At present, the "Russian ballet" is the talk of the town, and I have heard of good, stout, anti-Communist West Berliners queueing for five hours at the East Berlin Friedrichstadt Palace to get a ticket.

Political puritans frown at this, and they can make a case for frowning: undeniably there is some conscious nibbling at a bait. On the other hand, there is old Goethe who said:—

Who does not listen when the muses speak
Is a barbarian, be he who he be.

The Berliners, in their majority, choose to be less than puritan rather than to be barbarian. On the whole, I sympathise with them. Anyhow, who am I to judge? I went to the Soviet ballet twice, and I waved and clapped like the next man.

* * *

IT is pretty impossible not to wave and clap once you are there. For let us get this quite clear: for sheer star quality and virtuosity the ensemble which is now in Berlin leaves every ballet of the Western world standing at the start. Admittedly this is the creme de la creme of present Soviet dancers a group composed ad hoc from the soloists of the Moscow and Leningrad ballets, with both prima ballerinas, the legendary Ulanova and the fabulous Dudinskaja, at its head, and with stars of the first order in the smallest supporting parts. It is still true that all the ballets of London, New York and Paris combined could not produce a remotely comparable group. Nor, at the risk of being finally written off as a Communist propagandist, can I suppress the fact that the acme of virtuosity is, in this group, combined with an infectious spirit of enjoyment. They don't in the least perform like a team of perfectly drilled superhuman robots. The women all radiate vitality and sweetness. And the men, thank goodness, entirely lack that air of homosexuality.

So far, so good. It is well known, one might say, that the Russians are the world's born dancing champions. They virtually invented the ballet, well back in Tsarist days, they engendered the contemporary Western ballet, and the little Russian emigre community provides an inordinate share of its stars to this day. Small wonder then that the 100 million Russians in Russia should from their midst produce a superlatively good ballet group of fifty or so.

This is true, but just a trifle less than the whole truth. The national talent was, of course, always there, and so were the great individual geniuses. The Soviet have, however, added one thing: development in breadth. Russia up to 1918 had two ballets, that of St. Petersburg and that of Moscow, and two ballet schools, that in St. Petersburg and that in Moscow. The present U.S.S.R. boasts thirty ballets and sixteen or seventeen ballet schools. Obviously in this way it can make ten great dancers grow where one used to grow before. It is the same mass development of talent which Soviet Russia has practised with technologists and engineers, with generals in the late war, and with athletes more recently. One might well argue that this new mass culture — which might be regarded as the genuine democratic side of Soviet society— has been bought at a too heavy price. But there it is, it should be given its due.

THE Soviets have added one more thing to the traditional ballet culture which they found, and this - more problematical one: a unified style, which is conservative, national and popular. Western ballet, poorer in talent, is far richer in novelty and experiment— admittedly, and inevitably, also in experiments that fail. Soviet ballet, to judge from its Berlin ballet, runs in three broad, well-regulated streams: (1) The pure and unadultered classical ballet as it was danced a century ago; (2) a glorified and urbanised folk dance to which the non-Russian nationalities have apparently made considerable contributions in the last three decades; (3) a kind of dance-drama, which moves on the border of ballet and mime, and is "realist" to a degree which in the West would today only be possible in the field of period-parody: in watching it, one feels frankly back in Victorian days.

This last is, so it seems, the most authentic and original Soviet contribution to choreography, and it is not one which makes me feel entirely happy. Its naive popularity strikes me as voulu, its mixture of ballet and acting as somewhat impure in style, and its velvety Victorianism as rather insincere (although there is, blessedly, no attempt at direct political propaganda). At the same time, I don't feel like sneering. I find something both touching and heroic in this attempt to restore, forcibly maybe, the lost contact between great art and popular taste by working back to the last known age when this contact was demonstrably there: which was the Victorian age, or its Russian equivalent. In any case, who are we to sneer who are ourselves wearing the last set of Russia's cast-off clothes? For, undoubtedly, the cultural Bolshevism of the twenties, with its half-sincerity, its storming against convention, its experiments and artistic creed of the West; against which the Soviets set their determined neo-Victorianism . . . History moves in odd curves.— Copyright.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

An there was war in heaven . . . And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil and Satin, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him. And I heard a great voice saying in heaven, Now is come salvation and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night.

And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man child. And to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness, into her place, where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time, from the face of the serpent. And the serpent cast out of his mouth water as a flood after the woman, that he might cause her to be carried away of the flood.

And the earth helped the woman, and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed up the flood which the dragon cast out of his mouth. And the dragon was wroth with the woman and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ. (Rev. 12:7, 9, 10, 13-17).

Sees No Lack Of Electricity In Future

MURRAY Bay, Que. (CP) — J. A. Fuller of Montreal, president of Shawinigan Water and Power Company, said Thursday Canada's competitive position in supplying electric power to industries will remain strong although power cost will increase appreciably.

He told the 64th annual meeting of the Canadian Electrical Association this country is not likely to suffer in the foreseeable future from lack of electricity, whether produced by hydro or thermal plants.

Mr. Fuller said cost of electricity is a basic element in the cost of industrial production.

Where the cost is vital, such as in the aluminum industry, Canada's position will continue to be excellent because of the wealth of still-undeveloped hydro-electric potential located in many cases close to ore deposits, he said.

NOT AS STRONG

Canada's competitive position is not as strong, however, in industries which "must consider numerous factors in addition to power cost when deciding where to locate," and "we are less likely than in the past to see new plants in this type of industry locate in Canada—at least where they look to the United States and countries other than Canada for markets for their products."

In industries where power is a relatively minor element of production costs—automotive, agricultural implement, cotton goods, electrical apparatus, petroleum products and clothing enterprises—Canada's competitive position will continue to be good "because our prices for power are still and will be for many years to come, lower on the average than those, for instance, in the United States."

Inspector Crowned King Of Marksmen

GUELPH (CP)—Inspector Doug Darby of Toronto detachment, Ontario provincial police, was crowned "king of marksmen" Wednesday in the 25th annual Guelph Police Association revolver competitions.

Ed Barkley, Toronto, had high aggregate for the day. Guelph constable Price Leslie won the Forbes Trophy, open to Wellington and Waterloo counties policemen.

A. K. McGetrick, Kitchener, was best in the sharpshooter class; Mike Dibbley, Essex, took the master class.

The 134 competitors came from as far as Kingston and Peterborough.

MODELS AT THE CNE will be these girls chosen by John Robert Powers, a veteran at choosing beautiful women, to model at the CNE. The girls are Mae Genno, Lois Whitehead, Nancy Lunney, Dorothy Wright, Beverley Hamm, Louise Olson, Bev. Doty, Vivian Corley, Peggy McKeon and Betty Milne. (Fednews).

Sentence Doctor To Five Years

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Raymond D. Rush, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment here Wednesday for the manslaughter of his wife Margaret last Nov. 30.

Dr. Rush was accused of failing to take proper steps to try to save his wife's life when she was severely ill.

An inquest determined that Mrs. Rush, 38, died from acute ulcerated colitis, aggravated by large doses of barbituates.

Leslie Parsons, Dr. Rush's counsel, said an appeal will probably be made.

Asked if he had anything to say before sentence was passed, Rush replied: "I think this (verdict) is the greatest miscarriage of justice which has ever taken place."

Previously he told the jury his wife may have taken an overdose of sleeping pills.

Scissors Been Helping Man Since Iron Age 500 BC

WASHINGTON—In more than 20 centuries of cutting out a career, scissors makers have developed models for just about everybody — from barbers to cable clippers, babies to bankers.

One modern company lists 72 different types of shears and scissors, including pinking shears for dressmakers, kitchen shears that remove bottle caps, and "ladies' scissors," but not gentlemen's.

Among a multitude of designs are special cutters for sail makers, electricians, school teachers, surgeons, gardeners, tailors, tinners, bookbinders, chiropodists and jewelers. For babies there are miniature nail scissors. The banker has a right-angled instrument made to clip coupons.

In the United States peak production of shears and scissors was reached in 1948, with a value of $18,555,000. This figure dropped during the early 1950's, but picked up again in 1953, when the industry's January-to-April business equalled that for all 1939. Imports of scissors and shears also have risen sharply in post-war years.

ANCIENT EGYPTIAN ART

Man's use of scissors goes back at least to Europe's late Iron Age (500 B.C. to 100 A.D.), as proved by crude examples found in ancient burial grounds of France and Switzerland, says the National Geographic Society.

A handsome piece of early craftsmanship is a pair of Egyptian bronze shears from the third century B.C. Inlaid with typical Nile figures, the blades are joined by a simple spring loop that is pressed to bring the cutting edges past one another.

This curved spring handle was popular for centuries. The Romans made such scissors, called "forfex," and with them cut hair, beards, hedges, and sheep's wool. As late as the 16th century, the curved spring-back principle was in evidence. Even now some shepherds prefer to clip their flocks by the old method.

Scissors with a centre pivot to hold the crossed blades together also developed early. One attributed to the first century, A.D., looks curiously like children's paper-doll scissors of today. Another from the same period has short, powerful jaws and long handles for leverage—like the metal snips used in airplane manufacture and other modern industrial processes.

Collectors' items of three and four centuries ago have many of the same basic features of design, if not the tough construction of present-day welded, high-carbon steels.

An old-fashioned type of scissors seldom encountered now is the beveled edge, with which barbers once trimmed square beards. The experts said straight scissors were apt to make unwanted curves in the beard.

Current cutting tools lack the decorative furbelows of many of the older varieties, with their carved butterflies, castles, scrolls and flowers, animal and human figures. One pair of gold-trimmed steel scissors of Persian design was made in the form of a fabled four-legged creature with a long birdlike bill for the blades.

In the trade, shears and scissors are differentiated by size and form. Shears are usually six or more inches long, having one finger grip circular or a small oval, and the other a larger oval. Scissors are smaller, and are generally made up with two equal-sized finger grips.

Bought Car Cheques Bounce

LINDSAY (ENS) — William Cornish, 24, was remanded for 60 days for observation Wednesday in magistrate's court here after he pleaded guilty to a charge of obtaining by means of worthless cheques a car valued at $2,653 from Manley Motors, Lindsay.

According to evidence presented by Hilton Manley, the car dealer, Cornish purchased the new car offering as payment two cheques, one for $500 and the other for $1,649 with a used truck. It was found later the cheques were drawn on a non-existen bank at Millbrook and that Cornish still owed money on the truck.

The court was told that Cornish was "very nervous" but crown attorney Lorne Jordan commented that his actions showed an attitude more than criminality and asked he be placed under observation.

South Africa, India Nearing Crisis

By JOHN WORRALL

CAPE TOWN (OFNS).—An unprecedented situation will arise in the Commonwealth if India withdraws its representative from South Africa and closes its High Commission offices in Johannesburg and Cape Town.

Although the report from New Delhi that a severance of relations would take place in the near future was neither confirmed nor denied here, I understand that it is almost certain that a diplomatic break is on the way.

India withdrew its High Commissioner from the Union in 1946 as a protest against the alleged ill-treatment of the large Indian minority in South Africa, mostly living in Natal. It left the office in the care of the secretary to the High Commissioner. There is no South African representative in India.

Relations between the two Commonwealth countries have steadily grown worse in the intervening period, with a continuous running fire of criticism and protest from the Indian delegation at the United Nations. Cold war between the two countries has now developed into a battle of speeches between India's Premier, Mr. Pandit Nehru, and South Africa's Premier, Dr. Daniel F. Malan. Only last month, in a speech in the South African Parliament, Dr. Malan accused Mr. Nehru of having imperialistic designs on Africa. "I say deliberately that Nehru is the enemy of the white man," he said. "Nehru wants the white man out of Africa."

Dr. Malan on this occasion also accused Mr. Nehru of starting the non-White defiance campaign against the South African Government.

TRADE AT STANDSTILL

The withdrawal of India's representative from the Union would not materially affect the relations between the two countries, which in any case could not be worse. Trade is practically at a standstill. There is little human traffic across the Indian Ocean. But it would lead to considerable difficulty in arranging Commonwealth conferences normally attended by both India and South Africa. And it would mark a serious worsening of the Commonwealth's racial tensions.

There arre 300,000 Indians in South Africa. Most of them are descendants of indentured laborers brought over by the old colony of Natal to work in the sugar plantations. They have no voting rights and are subject to South Africa's strict apartheid (segregation) laws. Thousands will soon be uprooted from areas in which they are living and moved compulsorily to areas designated for them, under the Group Areas Act. In view of the rapidly rising Indian birth-rate, South Africa has been concerned at illegal immigration from India; although this is now believed to be well under control.

Islands Off China Coast Scene Of Fighting

WASHINGTON — The island-studded waters off the east China coast have become the scene of a little known but prolonged conflict between Chinese Red and the Nationalist partisans.

A recent Red foray in the series of hit-and-run raids and small naval engagements centred on a key Nationalist station in the Ttchen archipelago, 220 miles north of Formosa.

The main prizes are bases in a 500-mile chain of islands along the shores of Fukien and Chekiang Provinces, says the National Geographic Society.

These points offer stepping stones that could be used either for an invasion of the Chinese mainland or for an assault on the Formosa stronghold of the Nationalists. So far the Nationalist islands have been used to harry Red positions, collect intelligence, and maintain a partial naval blockade.

A SEAGOING PEOPLE

High and rugged mountains reparate coastal villages and their offshore islands from the China interior. Occasionally, narrow, stepped paths lead into the highlands. But there are few through roads, and in many places traffic is all but impossible.

Except for a short line from the port of Swatow, no railways reach inland between Britain's Hong Kong on the far south and Hangchow and Shanghai to the north. Cultivated plains are rare along this rocky shore, and the small, infrequent farms often climb in terraces to the hill tops.

Thus most people of the heavily populated coast look to the sea for their food and livelihood. Many live on houseboats tied up in deep inlets. They are sailors skilled in coping with windstorms and torrential rains that frequently batter the region.

The late summer typhoon season annually threatens life and property—a factor to be heeded by military strategists.

ENEMIES SIDE BY SIDE

It is estimated the Nationalists now hold between 25 and 30 islands. Some of the most important are surprisingly near mainland Red ports.

Nationalist Quemoy and Little Quemoy, for instance, lie just outside the harbor of Amoy. Matsu Tao, farther north, is on the approaches to mainland Minhow, and the Tachen Island group spreads across the bay leading to Linhai.

Near the Tachens another Nationalist island has a curious status. Called "Trader's Island," it is a privileged spot to which merchants from the Red mainland—with permission from both sides—bring pots, pans and watermelon seeds to be exchanged for fish.

Harris Ready To Blow Top

CHICAGO (AP)—Bucky Harris, who is among baseball's more mild-mannered citizens, is about ready to blow his top. His Washington Senators have let him down.

Before the season began, Harris was saying publicly that the Senators had a long-shot chance to win the American League pennant. Under any circumstances, he figured the Senators would be in the thick of the race all season long.

As of today, Washington is floundering in fifth place, 17½ games out of first and 13½ behind the third place club. And the rumors that Harris is on the way out are getting louder every day.

Clark Griffith, the club's 84-year-old president and a longtime friend of Harris, says there's nothing to the rumors. But, of course, that is to be expected. It will be a big surprise if Harris' contract is renewed at the end of the year.

Washington's pitching staff, which Harris was extolling several months ago, has collapsed.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

A quick scrutiny of the Trailermen's scoring list to date—published tonight—shows Rusty Slater still atop the pack with 36 points, no less than 28 of 'em being goals. Denny Peterson is hot, too, to total 31 points in the dozen games the club has played so far in the schedule. Curly Mason has compiled 25, one more than Harry Wipper and Jerry Fitzgerald. The latter is a canny defenceman and fine playmaker to have 18 assists in his total, the same number as Curly. Lou Nickle is doing well, also, as are the ex-juniors, Bobby Allan and Bob Curtis. Some of the others have been slow starting but should be clicking from here in.

All of the Petes have a chance to fatten their scoring averages this weekend, but they'll have to hustle to do it. On account of they're tackling St. Catharines Athletics, now tied for first place with the Petes in the OLA senior standing. The A's show here tonight, weather being okay, and the same squads clash in the Garden City (down in Rex Stimers' so-called "banana belt") on the morrow. Two toughies for both teams, and no quarter will be asked or given—except, of course, as partial gate admission. Powless and Smith, the transplanted Petes, have been going well for St. Kitts and will bear watching this time. A goalies' duel, no doubt, too. Yes, this one tonight sounds like a natural.

A Dandy Offer, Mom

Mothers, do you want a peaceful summer? Do you want to see your boys entertained and trained outdoors by a competent supervisor for free? Do you, in other words, want to get Junior out of your hair in the summer holidays? All you must do then is send him over to Riverside Park for the summer baseball school, commencing July 5, under Bill Sisler. It's as simple as that, and the kids should love it. They need buy no equipment but a glove—at 20 per cent off—as all else will be supplied. School goes in afternoon classes at 1:30 Monday through Friday in age groups, nine and 10 Mondays, 11 and 12 Tuesday, and so on, with a class for working boys each Tuesday eve. A fine chance for the boys to learn ball properly.

On the senior ball front, all is quiet and serene locally this weekend, but the Petes are prepping for a VOBL fixture here Monday night against the Oaks of Oakville. With the schedule but five more weeks to go, Joe Lowrey's crew have to get digging and pull out more close one. Meantime, club officials are planning on staging the preliminary round of the "Miss Baseball Queen" contest, to send a Peterborough winner in September into the big Leafs' competition at Toronto. Another diamond attraction in the offing at Riverside is the exhibition tilt July 1 after supper when Satchel Paige's Globe Trotters play the original House of David team.

Two Tilts In The Van

Seabrooke's lengthened their City Softball League lead to two games at the Bowl by the river last e'en with an 8-4 decision o'er the TPT Petes. Jim Driscoll was the winning pitcher, aided by hefty homers hoisted by Speed Currie, Bus Jensen and Tony Kotowski, latter having three for four at the plate. Junior West clouted one for the circuit on the other side. In the nightcap, the second-place UEW team jerked out a 5-4 win in a thriller against Marines, Ray Allan hurling neat ball for the victors. Two home runs belted in this one, Jim McGrath and Gord Mongraw swinging for the far pasture. Games there on the morrow: UEW vs. TPT-ers, and Marines vs. Lakefield.

Harry Yudin in recent weeks had a number of oltime sports' prints of local interest in the window of the Centre Theatre. He's taking 'em out this weekend, so folks should take a look now, if interested. In line with this, Stan McBride (that's Ald. Stan) would like to collect as many pictures — group pictures, especially — of Peterborough athletics as possible in order to have them put up in a room or hallway when the new Community Memorial Centre is erected. Folks wishing to co-operate can call Stan at 26121 during the day, and he'll gladly pick up the pix. It could be something of a visual history of local athletics. Meantime, the Centre executive committee is making headway lining up a general chairman to keep things rolling.

Slater Leading The Petes With 36 Points

Russ Slater continues to set the scoring pace for the Peterborough Trailerman in OLA senior "A" competition, the hard-shooting winger having 28 goals and eight assists in 12 league games so far for 36 points. Next high to date in both goals scored and total points is Denny Peterson, the blond bomber having amassed 20 markers and aided on 11 more for 31 in the dozen games he has played for the Thorpe team.

Tops in assists are two of the local veterans with 18 each, Curly Mason and Jerry Fitzgerald, the former with a total of 25 points, while Fitz and lanky Harry Wipper (who has 19 tallies) are tied in total points with 24 apiece. Lou Nickle is also another defenceman well up with 18 points. Two rookies are also doing well, Bobby Allan with 17 points so far, and Bob Curtis with 13. The list to date:

2 Golf Stars Tangle In Ladies' Open

TORONTO (CP) — Two young stars tangle today when defending champion Anne Sharp of Fonthill meets 1952 titlist Mary Gay of Kitchener in the 36-hole final for the Ontario ladies' Open golf championship.

Both girls turned in sound performances winning their semi-final matches Thursday. Miss Sharp defeated Mrs. M. H. Currer of Toronto 4 and 2, while Miss Gay stopped city and district titlist Shirley Woodley by an identical score.

Mrs. Currer, a finalist three times and a semi-finalist twice, won the first hole with a par four but Miss Sharp squared the match with a par five on the second.

Both players stayed at par for the next two holes and then Miss Sharp moved into the lead with a her margin to two up at the nine-hole turn.

TOOK FIVE

Mrs. Currer took a five on the 10th while Miss Sharp shot a par four to go three up. They halved the 11th with birdie fours and Mrs. Currer sank a 40-foot putt on the 12th to cut the lead.

The defending champion came back to sink a 12-foot putt on the 13th to halve the hole and then won the 14th and 16th to take the match.

In the other semi-final Mary Gay, a stenographer, jumped into an early lead with birdies on the second and third holes. She also won the fifth and sixth but Miss Woodley came back to par the seventh and birdie the ninth and narrow the margin to two strokes at the turn.

Miss Gay played par golf on all but one of the next seven holes, winning four of them. Miss Woodley won the 12th and 15th, the latter with a birdie four. However she soared to seven on the 16th while Miss Gay shot a par five and the match was over.

SECOND MEETING

Today marks the second meeting of the two young rivals. In the 1952 semi-finals Miss Gay eliminated Miss Sharp two up and went on to win the title.

Miss Sharp goes into the finals for the third time. She won the championship last year and in the 1950 wind-up was eliminated by Ada Mackenzie, 4 and 2.

In the semi-finals of the championship consolation flight Mrs. T. M. Lockwood of Toronto defeated Rose Kampman of Kitchener 2 and 1 and Roma Neundorf of oTronto defeated Mrs. J. C. McCarter of Toronto 3 and 2.

Sacred Heart Wins

Sacred Heart defeated St. Peter's Parish softballers 7-1 in a Catholic League fixture last evening on the southend diamond. They crashed through for three runs in the first inning, adding one in the fourth and three more in the sixth, while holding the Saints to one in the fourth. Teams:

Sacred Heart: O'Brien, Kane Doherty, Hayes, Caravaggio, Killen, Doris, Mahoney, Landrigan.

St. Peter's: Killen, Board, Quinlan, Shaw, O'Rourke, T. Ferren, Shaughnessy, O'Connell, P. Ferren.

Juvenile Petes Win In OLA Over Brampton

Peterborough juvenile lacrossers opened their OLA schedule in Brampton last night with a 9-5 victory. The local club begins its home stand for the season this Saturday night at 8:45 in Miller Bowl against Long Branch. The young Petes are handled by Angus Bradley and John Parry, with Ira Dundas aiding in the coaching.

Play in the opener Thursday was rough enough with the home team drawing 10 of the 17 penalties handed out, Blodgett and Ferguson of Peterborough, and Carter and Gott of Brampton drawing majors for two fights. Other penalties were for slashing, roughing and cross-checking, with Brampton once having too many boys on the floor.

Brampton led 3-1 in the first quarter, were in front 3-2 at the half but faded before a six-goal rally by Petes in the third to trail 8-3 going into the keen fourth stanza. The winners' goalie was good and his mates hustled plenty, clicking well in the last half.

SCORED FIRST

Hunt scored in the first from McGinnis for Petes, with Floyd getting one next heat from Perry. In the third, L. Ferguson, B. Ferguson, Hunt, Pace, Quinlan and Blodgett all tallied for the victors, with Hunt, Baker and Perry earning an assist each. Blodgett got one from B. Ferguson in the final canto.

For the losers, Naylor and Buchanan got unassisted goals in the first, with Gott tallying from Naylor. In the third, Carter and Richardson did the sniping, with Gott and Foster each earning one assist.

Seabrooke And UE Get Victories In Men's Circuit

Seabrooke Motors outscored TP Transports 8-4, Thursday night at the East City Bowl, in the opener of the regular twin softball bill, to stretch their league lead to two full games over the second-place UEW nine who won the nightcap by edging Outboard Marines 5-4 in a scorching duel.

Saturday night the City League continues its regular schedule with another twin set involving UEW and TPT in the curtain-raiser; and Outboard Marines vs. Kingdon (Lakefield) Lumber in the second game.

Jim Driscoll toed the slap for Seabrooke's while Transports countered with Reg. Gordon. The Motor lads from the east side tallied one in the first and three in the third, as Speed Curry and Tony Kotowski hit their first and second homers of the year, respectively, the latter's with Sullivan aboard to take a fair lead. Jensen also homered in the fourth, while Driscoll held TPT's scoreless. The Bennett men broke loose for a pair in the sixth, on a walk, error and three successive hits by Donlevy, Buck Legrow and Mackness; but inability to cope with Driscoll in a consistent basis, rendered Transport's cause futile. Junior West homered for his team in the ninth to score a teammate but rallies in the home sixth and seventh insured Seabrooke's winning margin.

Tony Kotowski led the winners' offensive with three hits for four and three runs batted in; Curry, Donlevy and Scriver each had one RBI, the latter having two for three; while Bus Jensen smote likewise. Kotowski, Teeder Collins and Buck Legrow fielded well.

A FINE DUEL

UEW and Marines hooked up in a rare duel in the nightcap, as Ray Allan and Jerry Driscoll, (young brother of Jim's) engaged in a thrilling battle for almost seven innings with Reg. Leether's Outboard lads seemingly headed for victory and Jerry Driscoll twirling steady ball. UE broke loose in the seventh, however, and before the smoke had cleared, the Union lads had scored four runs to overcome Marines margin and lead 5-4; a margin they held.

Bill Wood singled sharply to start it; Robson rapped a hot one to left and Cupoli banged a single to right to score his two predecessors; Ed Fuller singled and both scored on infield outs by McGrath and Thick. Akers came in to pitch to McGrath in the seventh but too late to save the game, as it turned out.

Ray Allan twirled effective ball after a shaky start and a nip-and-tuck game resulted with the issue in doubt to the finish. Allan allowed but five hits in all, struck out eight men and walked six, two in the first inning. Jim McGrath starred afield and with the mace as he homered in the fifth and drove in another run as well while Dave Hayes had two RBI's for Marines and also fielded well. Cupoli had two RBI's with one for Gord Mongraw, Dalton Downer and Jimmie Thick. Gord Mongraw homered in the sixth, his first of the year. Both teams played well defensively in a fine display and the fair-sized crowd sat to the finish to watch the dramatic ending of a keen struggle.

Nearly Starved On Broadway Dempsey Recalls

NEW YORK (AP)—It was Jack Dempsey's 59th birthday, and the boxing writers and old friends of the Manassa Mauler came over Thursday night to Jack's restaurant on Broadway to say happy birthday to the "Champ."

Still black-haired and trim at 225 pounds, some 40 over his best fighting weight, the Mauler moved restlessly about, signing autographs and posing for pictures. The crowds gawked outside as the champ sat by the window facing the main stem.

But it was different some 37 years ago when Jack visited the big town looking for work. It was a cold town to Jack then, and the biting winds chilled his lightly-clad frame.

MIGHT HAVE STARVED

"If it wasn't for the free lunches in some of the bars then I might of starved," said Jack as he puffed on a fat cigar. "If you had a nickel you could buy a beer and eat a good lunch. They had salami, ham, pigs knuckles and other stuff on tables and you could eat all you wanted—if you had the nickel. Sometimes I didn't have it.

"They had piles of hard-boiled eggs too, and if you had a chance you could put four or five in your pocket and on those you could eat for a week."

Remember When—

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Maxie Rosenbloom became lightweight boxing champion of the world by winning a 15-round decision over Jimmy Slattery at Buffalo 24 years ago today. The previous champion, Tommy Loughran had retired undefeated in 1929 and Slattery was recognized as champ by the New York state athletic commission. Maxie lost his crown four years later to Bob Olin.

Canada's Entries Lose In Third Tennis Round

WIMBLEDON, England (CP)—Canada's entries in the men's tennis singles at Wimbledon lost Thursday in third round matches.

Lorne Main of Vancouver and Toronto fought it out with Gil Shea of Los Angeles for five sets, but lost 6-1, 7-5, 5-7, 1-6, 6-1. Bob Bedard of Sherbrooke, Que., lost to Australian star Lewis Hoad in four sets, 6-3, 6-0, 1-6, 6-1.

Hoad, seeded second in the tournament, had too much power for Bedard. His service was booming and his backhand drives kept Bedard on the defensive from the start. Bedard won the third set when Hoad relaxed.

Another Canadian, Mrs. Hannah Sladek of Toronto, had a mixed day. She won in the first round of the women's doubles with Mrs. E. G. Attwood of New Zealand 6-2, 6-2, over Mrs. H. Strecker of Austria and Mrs. J. P. Vogler of Germany.

In the mixed doubles, however, Mrs. Sladek and Gene Garrett of Los Angeles were defeated 6-3, 4-6, 6-3 by Philippe Chatrier and Miss S. Schmitt of France.

The big surprise of the day came in the men's singles, when unseeded Philippe Washer of Belgium defeated sixth-seeded Art Larsen of San Leandro, Calif., 10-12, 7-5, 6-2, 9-7.

Braves Find Trade Bad Mistake, Bow To Giants 2-1

By BEN PHLEGAR, Associated Press Sports Writer

The "dream" deal of the winter is proving nothing but a summer nightmare to the Milwaukee Braves.

Johnny Antonelli, Don Liddle, Ebba St. Claire, Billy Klaus and cash were parcelled off to the New York Giants for Bobby Thompson and Sam Calderone.

This was supposed to be the trade that could take the pennant away from Brooklyn. It may succeed—but for the Giants instead of Milwaukee.

GOOD FOR GIANTS

For the Giants Antonelli has won nine games, Liddle has won two. St. Claire is catching at Minneapolis where Klaus is playing second base and hitting over .300.

For Milwaukee, Thomson has been out since he broke his ankle March 13. He will be out another month at least. Calderone lost the second-string catcher's job to rookie Charley White and has played just one full game and parts of nine others.

The Braves have been helpless in man-to-man competition. Antonelli has beaten them three times in three tries. Liddle pushed them into fourth place Thursday with a sparkling four-hit 2-1 victory.

His masterful performance kept the Giants one game ahead of the Dodgers who beat Cincinnati 9-6. St. Louis trimmed Pittsburgh 5-1 and Philadelphia shaded Chicago 3-2 in 11 innings.

LEAD SHRINKS

Cleveland saw its American League lead shrink to two games over the Chicago White Sox. The Indians lost to Philadelphia 5-1. Chicago defeated Washington 5-2. Third-place New York moved within four games of the leaders with an 11-2 waltz at Detroit. Boston and Baltimore weren't scheduled.

Liddle got the runs he needed to beat his former mates when Willie Mays parked a Warren Spahn pitch deep into the upper left field seats with Don Mueller on base in the second inning. It was Willie's 23rd homer, tops in both leagues. The Milwaukee run came on a homer by Andy Pafko.

They aimed for the fences in Ebbets Field Thursday and the Dodgers came out on top. Duke Snider, Roy Campanella and Junior Gilliam drove in five Brooklyn runs with homers. Ted Kluszewski and Ed Bailey hit a pair, good for three Cincinnati runs.

GIVEN TREAT

The Cardinals, who open a three-game set in Brooklyn tonight, were treated to a four-hit performance by rookie Brooks Lawrence in his first major league appearance. The 29-year-old righthander, just called up from Columbus, struck out four Pirates and walked two.

Philadelphia also received a pleasant pitching surprise when veteran Herman Wehmeier stayed 11 innings for the victory over Chicago. He gave up five hits, two of them homers by Hank Sauer and Steve Bilko for the Cubs' only runs.

The Phillies tied the game in the seventh with a two-run homer by Bobby Morgan and won in the 11th on a bases-loaded single by Earl Torgeson.

Rookie Arnold Portocarrero turned on the Indians, who had beaten him three times, and tamed them on five hits for his third straight victory. Lou Limmer and Joe de Maestri hit home runs for Philadelphia.

The Yankees limbered up for their three-game Cleveland series by battering Ned Garver and two other Detroit pitchers for 16 hits. Mickey Mantle drove in four runs with a single and two doubles. Tom Morgan hit a home run as he won his fifth game against a single loss.

Montreal Councillors To Rule On Course

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal city fathers will meet soon to decide whether golfers can enjoy their game if it means playing across a busy railway track.

City hall officials said Thursday a council meeting will be called to decide whether to abandon a plan for a second municipal golf course in the north-end parishes of St. Laurent and Ste. Genevieve.

City council voted last March to take an option on a $486,678 plot of land for the course. Since then, however, it has learned that part of the land runs across a proposed railway commuter line Canadian National Railways plan to build from suburban Dorval into Montreal.

Old Familiar Haunts

Rochester Posts 5-1 Win Over Richmond

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

One of the International League's closest first-place battles is being staged with the red-hot Rochester Red Wings only one game behind the leading Toronto Maple Leafs.

Since May 31 they have been battling each other for the lead. On that date the Red Wings and Leafs were virtually deadlocked for first place. And during the last three weeks they have frequently traded places with not more than two games separating the two clubs.

Rochester chalked up its eighth consecutive win and fourth in a row over Richmond Thursday night as rookie righthander Larry Jackson posted a 5-1 triumph over the Virginians. Meanwhile, Buffalo Bisons nipped the Leafs 4-3 in a game that was protested by manager Luke Sewell.

BEAT OTTAWA

Havana Cuban Sugar Kings went 13 innings to defeat Ottawa Athletics 3-2 and Montreal Royals edged Syracuse Chiefs, also 3-2.

Jackson, who scored his sixth victory of the season while losing only one, needed help from reliefer Tony Jacobs for the final out. The rookie hurler gave up 11 hits, walked three and struck out six, and came within one out of his third shutout and sixth complete game.

The Toronto game was played under protest by Sewell. The arguments started before the game and lasted 16 minutes.

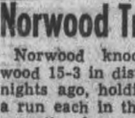
OWN ERROR

Sewell's own error in presenting his official line-up to the umpires instigated the long debate. The name of pitcher Frank Barnes appeared twice on the official scorecard handed to plate umpire Max Felerski.

Barnes' name was in the regulation ninth spot and again where the name of Loren Babe was intended as lead-off man. As a result, Babe was ruled out of the game, with Billy Demars replacing him at third base.

Joe Black gave up five singles as the Royals posted their third straight win over the Chiefs. Black drove in the winning run on a sacrifice fly in the seventh inning.

Julio Becquer's long fly scored Paul Smith in the 13th inning as Julio Moreno gained his third victory of the season for Havana against five losses.



Norwood Triumphs

Norwood knocked off Westwood 15-3 in district softball two nights ago, holding the losers to a run each in the first, fifth and seventh frames. The winners broke out for four in the first getting two in the third, one next inning, six in a big seventh, and two more to wind it up in the eighth. Rusaw hit a homer. Teams:

Westwood: Lynch 1b; Cardwell 3b; B. McMillan c; K. Humphries rf; B. Warr 2b; R. McMillan lf; Pacey 1f; R. Warr p; K. Humphries cf; Morrow ss.

Norwood: Kelly 2b; R. Garden ss; Rusaw rf; Pidgen 3b; Payne p; W. Garden 1b; Wilford cf; Telford lf Lockhead c.

ENGLAND READY

BERN, Switzerland (AP)—The eight teams left in the world soccer championships took their final full-scale workout Thursday before the week-end's "sudden death" quarter-finals.

England, due to meet defending champion Uruguay Saturday, put star winger Stanley Matthews through a fitness test and announced his sore toe is ready for action. He comes back to the probable team outside right, with Tom Finney moving back to the left wing and displacing Jim Mullen. Back too comes centre forward Nat Lofthouse, recovered from a sore throat.

An England side played a 60-minute practice match Thursday night with the Swiss Schaffausen eleven and coasted to a 4-0 win. The goals came from Lofthouse (2) Broadis, and Mullen.

PASSES OPEN

NEW YORK (AP)—Sam Snead has decided to pass up the British Open golf tournament scheduled at Royal Birkdale July 5-9. Winner of the British crown in 1946, Snead announced Thursday that the neck ailment which handicapped him in the U.S. Open last week would not permit him to play. A group of American professionals leave by air Friday for England. They include Gene Sarazen, Jimmy Demaret, Tony Penna and Jim Turnesa.

Canada Eases Czech Duties

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian government is preparing to remove special jacked-up dumping duties imposed against Czechoslovakian goods.

Qualified sources said Thursday the decision is part of a two-way deal in which the Communist-dominated country will:

1. Resume payments on a $10,000,000 defaulted Canadian loan.

2. Allow a Canadian expert to make on-the-spot appraisals in Czechoslovakia of the market values of goods produced and sold in that Soviet satellite.

Informants said the deal will ease the Czech-Canadian trade Cold War that developed following complaints by Canadian manufacturers in 1952 that the Red country was dumping goods into the Canadian market, injuring Canadian industry.

Casey, Lopez Both Anxious To Take Weekend Games

CLEVELAND (AP) — To Casey Stengel it's "that big series in Cleveland." Al Lopez calls it "a crucial week-end, but certainly not one of those do-or-die times."

No matter how they described it in separate interviews, there was little doubt that managers Stengel of New York Yankees and Lopez of the Indians view with respect the three-game series their teams open here tonight.

"Sure the Indians are tough," conceded Stengel, whose men have a 4-4 record against Cleveland this year. "But we're playing well enough."

Stengel referred to New York's current won-lost percentage of .627, right now four games behind Cleveland's .692 but good enough to win the pennant for the last five years.

READY ANSWER

Lopez, however, had a ready answer for that sort of speculation: "I don't care what percentage New York had the last five years. It doesn't matter, so long as ours is bigger."

Stengel had a question: "Can the Indians keep up their pace?" Lopez on that: "You bet we can."

The first-place Indians and the third-place Yankees plan to send their best pitchers to the mound in the series. For New York it will be Allie Reynolds, Ed Lopat and Whitey Ford; for Cleveland, Mike Garcia, Early Wynn and Bob Lemon.

Alcan Haunting Markets To Sell Out $20,000,000 Surplus Equipment

By BRUCE LEVETT

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $20,000,000 fleet of heavy construction equipment, rolling to a halt in the wilderness 400 miles upcoast from here, is posing a disposal problem to the Aluminum Company of Canada.

The equipment is to be declared surplus following completion in September of the first phase of Alcan's $550,000,000 power-smelter development at Kitimat, B.C.

J. G. (Jerry) Dunkelberger, equipment disposal supervisor for Alcan, said Thursday his company is developing a two-point program to "get out of the equipment business."

"First, we are trying to protect the Canadian economy by selling through recognized distributors in this area and not going into direct competition with equipment firms" he said. "Second, we are trying to develop export markets—we'd rather sell at a lower price on the export market to dispose of the surplus outside Canada."

"Alcan got into the equipment business when we found there was no contractor on the North American continent who had the machines to do the job in the time allotted," Mr. Dunkelberger said.

AUSTRALIA INTERESTED

Among the export markets being explored is Australia, which is interested in the mining equipment for its Snowy Mountain development which Mr. Dunkelberger described as "similar to our operation at Kitimat."

"But we're having dollars-pounds difficulties which we hope may be ironed out."

Spain, where the United States is building a chain of air bases for General Franco under NATO, is also interested, along with Greece which is sending a three-man delegation here next week.

Mexico is interested in road and dam-building equipment and "our Montreal office is working with the St. Lawrence seaway and Ontario hydro" to sell compressors, generators and other specialty equipment.

George Dawson, internationally-known London "mystery man" who made a fortune in war surplus has made two offers, Mr. Dunkelberger said. His first, for the entire stock on an "as is, where is" basis, was rejected as too low.

MADE ANOTHER OFFER

"He telephoned me from London today with another offer for specialized equipment which he said he wanted to dispose of in Formosa and Indo-China where it would be used for defence construction, rehabilitation and roads" he said.

Alcan hopes to realize "between 40 and 50 per cent" on its investment.

"Several million dollars worth has already been sold domestically," Mr. Dunkelberger said. "Some of it went to the contractor building the railway into Kitimat from Terrace, B.C. The rest was spread around to contractors and logging firms in Alberta, B.C., and Saskatchewan."

The total amount disposed of in these markets would just surpass $2,000,000, he said.

Top Canadian Engineers Outline Vigorous Programs

MURRAY BAY, Que. (CP)—Top Canadian electrical engineers and executives Thursday outlined vigorous programs being carried out to meet this country's power demands for the next 10 years.

In a symposium at the annual meeting of the Canadian Electrical Association, representatives of leading electric utilities gave reports on projects in their respective provinces.

T. Ingledow, chief engineer and vice-president of British Columbia Electric Company, said B.C. is fortunate in her power future as there are still a number of good hydro electric sites close to populated centres capable of economic development.

He mentioned the Cheakamus river capable of producing 200,000 horsepower within 50 miles of Vancouver, and the Fraser river with about 3,000,000 horsepower of potential hydro power within 100 to 250 miles of Vancouver.

Dr. Huet Massue of Shawinigan Water and Power Company said Quebec will require an estimated 8,750,000 horsepower of electric energy by 1960 and completion of the Bersimis river project will bring just about enough to meet the demand.

He said the high rate of consumption depends largely on requirements of the pulp and paper industry and the aluminum industry.

F. L. Feeney, chief engineer of the New Brunswick electric power commission, said there is a deep-seated impression in the minds of business, financial and industrial leaders, and even in engineering minds, that New Brunswick lacks power resources.

CAN PROVIDE POWER

"Certainly we have no Niagaras nor Shipshaws but we have a substantial amount of potential hydro electric energy and coal fields which by joint development can provide reliable power at a reasonable price," he said.

Dr. R. L. Hearn, chief engineer and general manager (engineering) of the Ontario hydro, said the St. Lawrence power development is the last remaining major hydro electric site in southern Ontario and the long-term forecast of the Ontario system indicates power from the St. Lawrence will be required by December, 1958.

With completion of the St. Lawrence development studies indicate additional power will be necessary by 1961 if a reasonable reserve is to be kept by the hydro commission, he said.

W. D. Fallis, general manager of the Manitoba power commission, reporting on the Prairie provinces, said Saskatchewan has the most acute problem in supplying its power demand because of its large settled area with relatively small population and because of lack of economical water-power resources.

However, he said Saskatchewan's power development may change as a result of the current search for oil and gas. Present forecasts are that the power demand in the province will increase about 2.8 times in the next 10 years to approach a total of 440,000 kilowatts in 1964, he said.

Mr. Fallis said demand in Manitoba has brought about a situation where hydro-electric resources of the Winnipeg river are all in use or under development and the province is now making plans for more steam-generated electricity.

Power requirements for Alberta to 1964 indicates a steady and rapid increase to an anticipated total of 840,000 kilowatts, he said.

W. G. MacDonald of the Nova Scotia Light and Power Company said his province will depend for some years on steam gas turbine or diesel for new electric resources.

Reports 2 Notable Gaps In Social Security Plans

TORONTO (CP)—R. E. G. Davis, executive director of the Canadian Welfare Council, said today there are two notable gaps in Canada's social and economic security programs.

"We have no public program to deal with wage loss from illness and, except in a few provinces, no public provision to assist families with the cost of hospital and medical care," he said.

He was speaking to more than 1,000 social welfare organization delegates from all parts of Canada attending a three-day conference.

They are the representatives of Canada's 2,500 welfare organizations who budget an annual $50,000 to protect the ordinary family against major hazards of life.

Mr. Davis said that in 1953, the government's expenditures on health and welfare totalled something like $1,600,000,000 or 100 times what they were 40 years ago.

Some 75 per cent of the total cost was carried by the federal government, 18 per cent by the provinces and seven per cent by the municipalities.

EFFORTS CONTINUE

Canada's progress in social welfare would have been impossible without the transfer of financial responsibility from lower to higher levels of government, he said, but there has been no dwindling of voluntary effort.

Mr. Davis said seriousness of the wage loss problem is shown by the fact that between 40,000,000 and 50,000,000 man-days are lost annually through sickness and disability.

One way of combatting this problem would be to add sickness benefits to unemployment benefits under the present unemployment insurance system, the practice followed in the United Kingdom and several U. S. states.

Inability to pay should not deprive anyone of health care, Mr. Davis said.

FEEL DOUBT

"We must feel considerable doubt about the ability of private plans for health insurance to solve the problem of health care costs for a great many Canadian families well above the lowest income group.

"But it does not follow that the only alternative is a comprehensive government-sponsored scheme."

There seemed little doubt, however, that the major reliance would be on government action. In a matter so vital as the health of the Canadian people governments cannot leave ultimate decisions on public policy to private groups, professional or otherwise.

2,077 Male Dogs 231 Females On City Rolls

Talk about a dog's life! There were 2,077 male dogs and only 231 females licenced in Peterborough last year.

The skeptical may attribute this to a two-dollar difference in the price of licences, but if there were a number of female dogs disguised as males throughout the city during 1953, there is no proof of it in the annual report of the assessment department to city council.

INTERESTING FACTS

The figures concerning dogs comprise only one interesting item in the report. Apart from assessment values, probably the most significant fact was that Peterborough last year had a total human population of 39,714, compared with 37,192 in 1952, an increase of 2,522 in one year, many of whom became citizens by reason of annexation by the city of 1,256 acres of property from Smith township.

Most of these were registered as members of the United Church, although assessment commissioner J. E. Davis was careful to point out that his figures for religious denominations were not to be taken as the result of a religious census. In compiling the report, all occupants of a dwelling were classified according to the religion of the householder.

Here are the numbers of adherents to each religious denomination, according to the report: United Church, 13,640; Roman Catholic, 9,157; Church of England, 8,693; Presbyterian, 2,730 Baptist, 1,879 Salvation Army, 685; Pentecostal, 1,028; Jewish, 234; Church of the Open Bible, 187; Gospel Hall, 257; Apostolic, 150; Christian Missionary Alliance, 97; Free Methodist, 103; Christian Science, 34; Assembly Hall, 20; Miscellaneous, 1,000.

The report also revealed the area of the city to be 5,229.65 acres. There were 2,826.7 acres originally incorporated into the city, 21 acres annexed from North Monaghan township in 1929, 18 acres from Smith in 1941, 20 from Smith in 1943, 683.35 from North Monaghan in 1945, 85 from North Monaghan in 1946, 29 from Smith in 1947, 290.6 from North Monaghan in 1948 and 1,256 from Smith in 1953.

A final chilling note for bachelordom. In spite of the fact that the city's population increased by more than 2,500 last year, the number of names on the poll tax rolls fell from 1,321 in 1952 to 1,235 in 1953.

And that may be the most significant figure of all.

Restore Old Water System Of Temple City In Jungle

WASHINGTON — Angkor, Cambodia's mysterious and magnicent temple-city, abandoned to the jungle 500 years ago, today is regaining a portion of its ancient water system.

Repairs to ridgelike dikes and dried-up canals will send water flooding once again into a 4,000-acre reservoir near the ruins and out again in dry seasons to irrigate ricelands carefully regulated in a forgotten past, the National Geographicl Society reports.

Unless Indo-China's present strife interrupts the resoration work, Ankgor's great man-made western baray, or reservoir —five miles long by more than a mile wide— will eventually water some 50 square miles of surrounding lands and refill part of the moat of the royal city itself.

WALLS STILL STAND

W. Robert Moore, chief of the National Georgraphic Magazine's foreign editorial staff, recently visited the restoration project. He found the big rectangular storage basin to be virtually intact despite centuries of neglect.

Occasional breaches in the 80 to 115-foot high dikes are being repaired. A diversion dam has been built across the Siem Reap river where it flows through Angkor, and an inlet canal, utilizing one side of the ancient city's square moat, is being cut and cleared for use.

Deep in the interior of Cambodia, a warrior race known as the Khmer civilization flourished in medieval times. Angkor was its imperial seat, an Asiatic metropolis fantastic in size and splendor.

Angkor Thom, the Great City was begun in the 9th century AD. It eventually covered an area two miles square. More than a million people were centred there. Five great gates pierced the city's walls. Carvings and statues of infinite variety adorned its stone temples and palaces.

Bas-relief murals show something of the daily life of the Khmer peoples. Their emperor wore jeweled robes and adorned his hair with jasmine blossoms. Dancing girls by the hundreds entertained him with graceful steps that survive in Cambodia's traditional dances today.

ANGKOR WAT

Angkor Wat, the city's greatest temple, stands a short distance outside the walls. Ranking among the world's foremost architectural achievements, its cloistered face rises to five gigantic towers pyramided in carved stone high above the tallest palms of the surrounding jungle.

Angkor Wat was built in the 12th century when Westminster Abbey and Notre Dame de Paris were also under construction. The Khmerian temple, dedicated to the Hindu god Vishnu, is far larger than either European church. It measures three quarters of a mile long by half a mile wide.

About 1430, Siamese invaders from the northwest conquered the Khmers, who had turned to the more peaceful gods of Buddhism. The people of Angkor left their city and temple and fled south. They never returned.

In 1861 a French naturalist named Henri Mouhot, exploring the hinterland, stumbled into a clearing and saw before him the majestic and silent towers of Angkor rising from the steaming wilderness. His discovery was one of the most startling in the history of archeology.

Since then French scholars and Indo-Chinese workmen have cleared the wild fig trees from Angkor's ruins and restored many of the temples and towers. The painstaking work, begun half a century ago, probably will require 50 to 100 years more to complete.

Bigamy Charge Adjourned Again

Defence counsel James B. Lillico said Thursday in magistrate's court he would call no witnesses in a bigamy charge against his client, Albert Harvey Young.

The crown contends that Young went through a marriage ceremony with Violet Lillian Willshaw in October 1953 while already married to Alene Rita Convey since June 1944.

Mr. Bradshaw asked for an adjournment on the grounds that he had not yet received a copy of Young's birth certificate. Mr. Lillico introduced a certificate to show that Young, also known as Burton Harvey Young and Burton Harvey Emerson was born in July, 1926.

The case has been adjourned again until June 28. The Crown will examine the Marriage Act of 1944, since amended, to see what the law was at that time. Final arguments will be heard then. All evidence was heard as the trial opened June 17.

Young is also charged with failure to support his first wife. This charge also will be heard June 28.

Believe Prescott May Be New Niagara Area

PRESCOTT, Ont. (CP) — Prescott and the entire St. Lawrence seaway area were envisioned Wednesday night by R. D. Rothwell, liaison engineer of the Ontario hydro-electric power commission, as an area "which may well surpass the Niagara peninsula in industrial development.

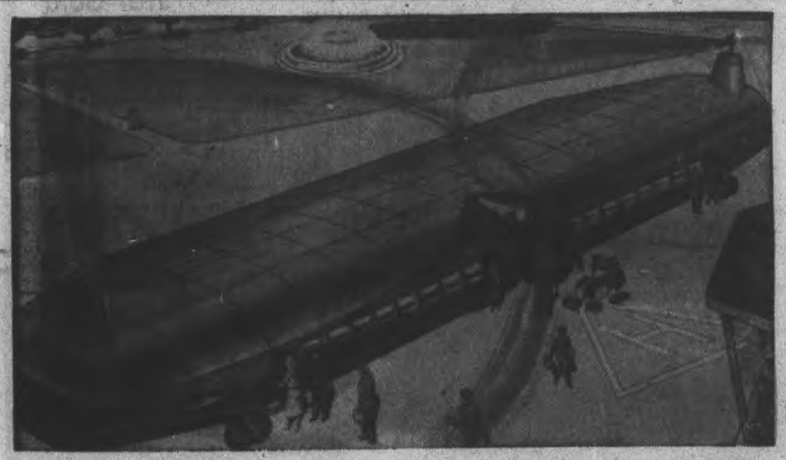
Mr. Rothwell told a meeting of the Prescott Chamber of Commerce, attended by members of chambers from Brockville, Iroquois and Morisburg, Ont., and Ogdensburg, N. Y., that "municipalities in the area to be affected must prepare themselves by planning and stability. Industries must know what is available in services, land, taxes and labor."

"A carefully planned program, well advertised, may bring surprising individual results to these centres."

WARNS AGAINST NEGLECT

Mr. Rothwell warned against neglect of the rural areas. It must always be recognized that a strong agricultural area is essential to balance any strong industrial development.

In the same manner as power development has transformed agricultural tracts in the Niagara peninsula into a great industrial concentration, Mr. Rothwell predicted, so the St. Lawrence power project will change eastern Ontario. There would be a similar or greater concentration of industry from Belleville eastward, with Montreal, Toronto and Ottawa as potential markets.



In answer to a question, Mr. Rothwell said that the rate of flow of the St. Lawrence at Prescott would not be altered by the control and power dams scheduled to be built. (Prescott has been concerned over the possibility that the river flow might be slowed to a point where it would freeze over in the winter, interrupting the present ferry sevice).

"FLYING HARMONICA"—This designer's sketch, looking like a giant harmonica, shows Bell Aircraft Corporation's projected "flying wing" helicopter, now in preliminary design stages at the firm's Forth Worth, Tex., plant. The craft, a straight, flat wing, with just a bit of a nose, represents an entirely new concept of rotor-wing craft. The wing has a rotor mounted on each tip. It has two piston engines, convertible to gas turbines, either one of which can fly the wing adequately. Thickness of the wing permits completely retractable landing gear and interior placement of engines without external nacelles. All passengers will have front-facing seats with forward view. The Bellwing's speed has not been announced, except that it will exceed that of the latest model helicopters. Early models are expected to carry 20 to 50 passengers.

North American Premiere Of A Lady Mislaid

"A Lady Mislaid," a comedy-thriller set in the peaceful countryside of Sussex, opens Monday at the Queen Mary auditorium. This will be the North American premiere of the play which enjoyed a very successful run in London.

The play is not at all unlike its American counterpart, "Arsenic and Old Lace," and the central character is a timid and nervous little gentleman called Mr. Smith, whose lady friends have a most unfortunate habit of disappearing. Ronald Bailey returns as the "not - soon - to - be - forgotten" Mr. Smith.

It is a most unusual comic idea. Playwright Kenneth Horne is an ingenious and very witty man and his play goes rippling along without ever producing a wrinkle of distaste under even the most sensitive nose.

The comedy-melodrama opens in a rather out of the way English cottage pleasantly set with oak beams and chintz, and full of sunshine. Two attractive sisters, Jennifer and Esther, played by Margaret Griffin and Margaret Braidwood, have rented the cottage for a year, but they are no sooner settled in than the police arrive and commence to dig up the garden. Before long it develops that the police are digging for the wife of the former tenant, Mr. Smith, and that she had suddenly vanished. And when the amorous and terrified Mr. Smith suddenly turns up on the scene the comedy leaps into life.

The London press was unanimous in stamping its approval, and The Observer described it as "fresh, with wit as light as champagne — the best vintage at that." Others in the cast include Julia Hand in the role of the Cockney cleaning woman with always a morbid thought to express; Robert Shirriff as the young police inspector, and John Douglas and Peggy Spenser.

Old Churches Link Past To Modern Boom

WASHINGTON — America, its destiny always linked closely to the faith of its people, stands today more than ever a nation of churches, old and new.

Religious shrines mark off the broad course of its history—from Old Virginia's rustic parish churches and New England's venerable meetinghouses to San Miguel in Santa Fe, N.M., still lifting its scarred walls despite more than three centuries of fire, strife, earthquake and the slow wear of time.

The United States also looks to the future through its churches and synagogues, says the National Geographic Society. Last year religious edifices valued at $472,000,000 were started. This year churches are going up at a record $500,000,000 rate.

MOST IN VIRGINIA

Most churches antedating 1709 and still standing, at least in part, are found in Virginia. Some also survive in Pennsylvania, Maryland, a few other eastern states and at least two in New Mexico.

The oldest is probably San Miguel. Its history reaches back to the early 17th century, possibly further. Time has altered its countenance. Five - foot - thick walls remain, but its roof has been replaced and its storm-wrecked tower remodeled.

Truer to original design is the mission church at Acoma, N.M., one of the best examples of two-towered adobe architecture. Its beginning also is lost in the past but some historians think it second only to San Miguel in antiquity.

In Virginia, St. Luke's near Smithfield (1632) appears the oldest building of English style in the country. Hardly less ancient is the ivy-mantled tower at Jamestown, a monument to the first permanent British settlement.

Only one New England church now stands as a 17th century relic — Ship Meeting House at Hingham, Mass. (1681), a wooden building surmounted by a truncated pyramid roof. It lays claim to being the "oldest building in the United States used continuously for public worship."

OLD FRIENDS' MEETING HOUSE

Friends' Meeting House near Easton (1684) goes back further than any other Maryland church. Some edifices that have also seen 250 years pass are St. George's, Accomac County, Va.; Merchant's Hope, Prince George County, Va.; Gloria Dei, Philadelphia; Norriton Presbyterian, Montgomery County, Pa.; and Sleepy Hollow Dutch Reformed, Tarrytown, N.Y.

History has bestowed fame on several early buildings, not, however, among the very oldest. The signal lanterns for Paul Revere were displayed on Old North Church, Boston, (erected in 1723). Touro Synagogue, Newport, R.I., (1759), the oldest Jewish house of worship in the United States, cherishes an intimate letter from George Washington ("happily the government of the United States . . . gives to bigotry no sanction"),

St. John's in Richmond, Va., (1741) provides a living link with the Nation's Founding Fathers. There Patrick Henry proclaimed "Give me liberty or give me death" and there Washinngton, George Mason, Thomas Jefferson, and Richard Henry Lee joined in public meetings.

The founding of the Franciscan missions, partly restored today, paralleled much of the early development of California. The last — San Francisco de Solano —was established just north of San Francisco Bay in 1823. But even when Father Junipero Serra built the first — San Diego de Alcala — in 1769, San Miguel in the Southwest's "City of the Holy Faith" had already entered its second century.

Maquis Invites Canadian Join Reunion

TIMMINS (CP)—William Shields has been invited to leave his work with the boys in the Porcupine district air cadets and fly back to France in August for a reunion of French underground fighters.

Some 22 other former Canadian airmen shot down in Second World War and fought on with the underground also have been invited to attend.

Winner of a Distinguished Flying Cross and bar, Shields escaped from a prisoner-of-war camp and joined up with the Maquis near Paris.

With other members of the Soixante Neufers, an organization of Canadian and American airmen with similar experiences, he has been invited to a reunion in Paris by l'Amicole du Ruseau d'Evasion Comete, a former Maquis organization whose escape route was used by many prisoners.

FREE FLYING

Free air transportation is being provided to the reunion, supported by the French government. The party leaves New York Aug. 16, and will be greeted in Paris by the families which harbored them during the war.

Activities include a "ceremony of the flame" at the Arc de Triomphe and services at the Church of St. Louis des Invalides.

Soixante Neufers was to have only 69 members, but its rolls now include 72 names, 23 of them Canadian.

Need More Than Shakeup To Revitalize Militia

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—The problem of the militia is similar to that of civil defence: if public interest lags, it drags its feet.

Defence officials said Thursday they don't expect the reorganization of the Reserve Army, announced Monday by Defence Minister Claxton, to meet the militia's real problem.

The militia may get bonuses for summer camp training, new uniforms, more bands and armories but it won't become a well-knit, cohesive organization unless it receives sustained public support.

The state of the reserve forces, officials say, is, like civil defence, a reflection of the public's point of view on defence.

HIGHER PERCENTAGES

They add, however, that a much higher percentage of the population is interested in defence and the armed forces than, say, in 1939. Canada has never been a military-minded nation partly because its big wars have been fought far from home.

The defence department doesn't expect increased voluntary defence activity with reorganization of the Reserve Army. In fact, it expects the strength, now 57,000 to decrease, at least at the start.

In announcing the militia shakeup, Mr. Claxton appealed for public support for the changes, which include disbandment of many units and merger of others. He said success in carrying out the new policies and changes will rest primarily on the popular support they receive throughout the country.

Offers Advice For Watching Sun Eclipse

KAPUSKASING, Ont. (CP)—The busy leader of a scientific party here to study the June 30 eclipse took time out Thursday to offer advice for the layman in watching or photographing the phenomenon.

Dr. J. F. Heard of David Dunlap observatory near Toronto warned that staring directly at the sky could cause serious eye injury. He recommended use of four to five thicknesses of heavily exposed film as a viewing device.

Photographers experienced in taking pictures through a telescope may obtain good large scale photos of the corona, Dr. Heard said. If pictures are taken with a camera alone, he warned that the image of the moon will be small—1-10th of an inch on the film of a miniature camera, 1-20th with a folding camera.

"I would suggest an exposure time of 100th of a second at wide aperture with fast film, or 1-25th at full aperture with color film, perhaps longer if using a tripod."

For those just looking, Dr. Heard suggested sitting in a darkened room, or wearing a blindfold for half an hour before the eclipse.

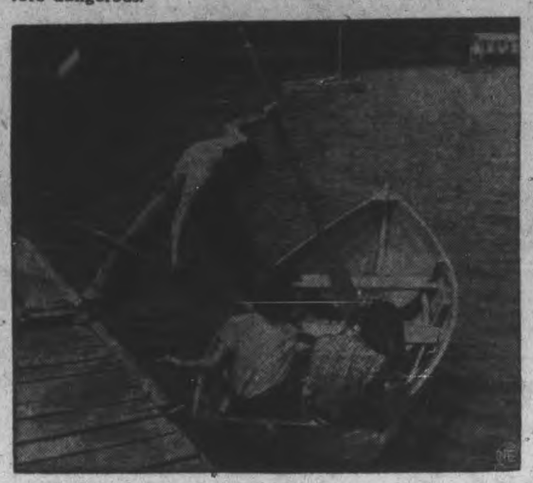
Boating Can Be Lots Of Fun But Don't Try These Stunts



It all depends on you. If you learn a few basic things about handling a small boat, your vacation or weekends afloat will be pleasant —and SAFE. Last year hundreds of people were drowned in boating accidents, many of them due to ignorance of boat handling or carelessness. No one knows how many uncomfortable, but non-fatal accidental dunkings were suffered. The Canadian Red Cross conducts regular classes to teach its members water safety. Illustrated here are three common traps for the unwary amateur sailor. One thing the Red Coss stresses—if your boat or canoe capsizes or fills with water —stay with it. It will not sink, even with an outboard motor attached. Many good swimmers die in boat accidents every year because they leave the boat and try to swim to shore.

MATCH YOUR MOTOR TO YOUR BOAT. This boat, with much too large a motor, is extremely unstable and therefore dangerous.

IF YOU WANT TO LOSE YOUR MOTOR OVERBOARD, this is a good way to do it. Have boat moored securely while putting motor aboard.

HE'S NOT ASKING FOR TROUBLE—he's begging for it. Don't board boat encumbered with oars. Step into bottom, not onto seat.

Uganda Boycott Stops Trade Governor Declares Emergency

By HUGH LATIMER

KAMPALA (OFNS). — The green and pleasant British East African protectorate of Uganda is in a state of emergency, the queerest in recent African history. Whoever heard before of an emergency being declared to restore trade?

The trouble stems from the action of the British Governor, Sir Andrew Cohen, in deporting the young Kabaka (King) of Buganda, Mutesa II, last November. The Baganda people, previously split into conservative and radical groups (with the conservatives in power), at once united in mourning. The men grew their beards, the women bought no new clothing. The normally profitable African trade sunk to a tenth of its normal value. Then on May 1, just when European and Indian traders were beginning to hope that trade would pick up, the Uganda National Congress announced a boycott, to continue until the government's powers of deportation were amended.

Led by a veteran European member of the Legislative Council, Mr. Handley Bird, the European, Indian and African representatives forced Sir Andrew to declare an emergency, arrest the chiefs who supported the boycott and suspend several newspapers in the Luganda language (though this latter was not part of Mr. Bird's proposal). Sir Andrew was so far from considering the situation serious that he left the next day for a 10 days' tour of the remote Northern Province. Logically either this action, or the declaration of the emergency, must be considered irresponsible, depending on whether the emergency was strictly necessary.

POLICE TAKE ADVANTAGE

Meanwhile the only government department to take advantage of the emergency is the police, — police have been raiding African villages without the warrants normally required under British law, with the object of finding, not terrorists but stolen property. In the course of their searches they arrested a venerable African sub-dean of the Anglican cathedral at his devotions at five o'clock in the morning. They have been apologizing ever since. The authorities have also been unable to explain why one of the newspapers, Uganda Eyocera, was included in the list of those suspended, since it was impossible to find in its pages anything resembling sedition. And they have introduced a law requiring editors to pay a bond for good behaviour which surpasses in potential injustic even the law similarly enacted by Dr. Malan's government in South Africa.

One might have expected at least protests in the Protectorate's Legislative Council, where 14 Africans, seven Europeans and seven Asians face a government of officials and nominees of Sir Andrew Cohen. But there was not a word. Mr. Handley Bird, the white settler leader, had achieved the incredible — 100 per cent. support from the African members in his own council. This was because the Africans had borne the brunt of the attacks of the vernacular press, and had lately found themselves shadowed by Congress "intimidators" (actually members of the proscribed Bataka Party) as they shopped in Kampala. "Members on this side have got a measure of coherence which it should be well for government to recognize," Mr. Bird warned the Governor in the following week's budget debate.

FAILURE OF GOVERNOR

The council representatives followed up their victory. "There is a deeply formed suspicion that the government is not prepared to accept advice unless there is a first-class row," said the council spokesman, Mr. A. M. Maini, Kenya-born Hindu mayor of Kampala. He charged that the Governor had not consulted the unofficial representatives early enough on matters of high policy. From conversation with the rebel councillors, I had the clear impression that Sir Andrew Cohen did not even consult his own executive council (cabinet) when he deported the Kabaka last November, and that he did not consult it either about the terms of reference of the mission of Professor Sir Keith Hancock, who is visiting Uganda to advise on a possible change in the Buganda Treaty of 1900 regulating Britain's relations with the Kabaka and the native parliament. Cabinet etiquette prevents the members of the council from bringing these charges openly.

Meanwhile both the emergency and the boycott drag on in an atmosphere of heat-laden apathy. There is no reason for either of them. But the situation holds its dangers. As in Kenya, settler opinion (in this case mainly Indian) finds it can force a change in government policy without holding the responsibility of carrying it out; as in Kenya, the majority of Africans prefer extra-constitutional means (boycott in this case) to the constitutional means provided to achieve their ends. But, unlike Kenya, all races here show a conciliatory temper which is pleasant to witness; there is no cause yet to expect a clash if the British government plays its part tactfully.

Study $878,258 Being Used To Bring Workers To Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition members of Parliament Thursday night turned a critical eye on the way the labor department plans to spend $878,258 this year to bring workers to jobs in Canada.

Among the items they asked Labor Minister Gregg to give detailed explanations of were $15,000 for professional and special services, $30,000 for professional and hospital expenses, $125,000 for hospital and medical contributions and $325,000 for transportation costs.

Mr. Gregg said the labor department pays the inland transportation costs for farm workers and domestics whose passage from a foreign country is contracted by an employer through the National Employment Service.

He said that 9,952 were brought to Canada in the 1953-54 fiscal year, adding later under questioning that about 8,000 are expected to be brought out in the 1954-55 fiscal year.

Gage W. Montgomery (PC—Victoria-Carleton) remarked that he thought the travelling expenses were recoverable in pay deductions from the workers but Mr. Gregg said they aren't.

The items for medical, professional and hospital expenses, Mr. Gregg said, were incurred in operation of hostels where the workers lived pending the start of their jobs.

Mr. Gregg said the medical treatment was purely emergency treatment. There also was some help given towards moving Canadian unemployed to places where they might find work.

ASKS LIST

Joseph Noseworthy (CCF—York South) said he thought immigrants were given strict medical examinations before being allowed to enter Canada. Apparently this wasn't true judging from the medical expenses incurred. He asked who were the bigger employers making use of this scheme.

Mr. Gregg said he hadn't the names available. The list was long. Most were individual farmers employing farm workers. None were brought in where there were Canadian workers available to do that work.

Nominate Banker As Administrator

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower Thursday nominated Lewis G. Castle, Duluth, Minn., banker, to be U.S. administrator of the St. Lawrence Seaway Corporation.

The nomination is subject to confirmation by the Senate.

The corporation, created by legislation which authorized building of the seaway, has supervision over construction of that part of the project located within the United States. This country is planning to undertake construction of the seaway in conjunction with Canada.

Castle, 64, a Republican, is president of the Northern Minnesota National Bank of Duluth. He is a native of Portage, Wis.

As administrator of the development corporation he will receive a salary of $17,500 a year. His nomination is the first for the corporation. Still to be selected are a deputy administrator and five members of an advisory board.

Medical Corps Observes 50th Birthday

OTTAWA (CP)—Army sawbones and pill-pushers in Canada, Europe and the Far East will celebrate the 50th birthday of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps July 2.

Army headquarters said today the principal birthday ceremony will be held at the RCAMC school at Camp Borden, Ont., where there will be a ceremonial parade, historical pageant and parties in the various messes.

A special feeture will be the official opening of the new Banting barrack block by Lady Henrietta Banting. The building is named after Lady Banting's husband, the late Sir Frederick Banting, co-discoverer of insulin and former RCAMC officer.

Medical services in the Canadian Army did not become a corps until a general order of July 2, 1904, announced that the Canadian militia army medical services would become known as the army medical corps. But origin of the Canadian army medical service goes back to the time of the Northwest Rebellion in 1885.

GRANTED "ROYAL" TITLE

The permanent component of the corps was granted the title "royal" in 1919 and this distinction was granted the reserve component in 1936.

During the Boer War two Canadian military hospitals were sent to South Africa. Their staffs included 16 militia nursing sisters.

During the First World War corps personnel served on all fronts where Canadian troops were in action. Two Victoria Crosses were won by members of the corps. A total of 21,453 served and 1,198 were battle casualties, including 504 killed.

In the Second World War, 34,786 personnel served in the RCAMC and 430 were battle casualties. In addition to Canadian nursing sisters who served on all fronts with Canadian troops, 300 Canadian nurses were loaned to the South African forces and 75 Canadian medical officers served with the British army.

The RCAMC has provided units for service in Korea and Germany. The Queen recently approved appointment of the Queen Mother as colonel-in-chief of the corps.

The republic of Burma covers 261,000 square miles with a population of nearly 19,000,000.

NEW BELGIAN GUN — Sgt. Hubert Haines, of Montreal, receives instructions from Sgt. Instructor George Elliott on the use of the new FN Belgian rifle. The weapon, leading contender for becoming the new standard rifle of NATO, is undergoing a six-month test with the 1st Canadian Infantry Brigade.

Will Investigate Racial Charge

TORONTO (CP)—Labor Minister Daley of Ontario Thursday ordered a department inspector to investigate a charge of racial discrimination in Dresden, about 12 miles north of Chatham.

A. R. Burnett, a Dresden carpenter and secretary of the National Unity Association, has filed a written complaint with the department that he and two married couples were refused service in a restaurant there last Friday because they were Negroes.

Mr. Burnett said that after he made his charge public he received several anonymous threatening letters and phone calls which ordered him to get out of town. He armed himself with a revolver for self-protection.

The complaint is the first charge made under the Anti-Discrimination Fair Accommodations Act passed at the recent session of the Ontario legislature.

Given Up For Dead Twice Man Sees 101st Birthday

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Edward Burns, now in his 102nd year, says "There is no pleasure and no profit in being old," but nevertheless had a wonderful time at his 101st birthday party.

A huge man with a booming voice, he could not attribute his long life to any one thing. "I lived a pretty clean life, but was no saint," he said with a twinkle in his eye.

Born June 11, 1853, on a farm near London, Ont., he married and raised a family of five boys and five girls. He has lost track of the countless grandchildren.

He recalled that he had been given up for dead twice. The first time he suddenly sat up and asked two attendants: "What do you think you're doing?" He still chuckles at the look on their faces.

Another time his wife thought he had died and called the undertaker, but once more the report was premature. As he told of this, he turned to the matron of the rest home where he lives, and said: "Just make sure I'm dead this time."

Co-Op Business

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — Nova Scotia co-operatives did more than $20,000,000 worth of business in 1953 for the first time in history, R. J. MacSween, inspector of co-operatives, said Thursday. Mr. MacSween told the 10th annual convention of the Nova Scotia Co-op Union that the 1953 volume was three times that of 1943.

Collier Rechristened

TORONTO (CP)—A self-loading, 9,000 ton, Canada Steamship Lines coal carrier was rechristened the R. O. Petman Thursday. The 525-foot carrier was built in 1907 and sailed the Great Lakes for years as the Osler. Mrs. R. O. Petman rechristened the ship after the president of Canada Coal Limited.

County Farm Notes

Junior Farmers Plan Soil Tests of Peterborough Farms . . . Otonabee Ready For Calfhood Vaccination . . . Manitoba Plowing Champion a School Boy . . . Dr. Ford Stinson Home From South Rhodesia.

A test of soil from every farm in the county is the tentative objective, albeit exceptionally ambitious, of Peterborough Junior Farmers.

They appointed Wednesday night a committee to enquire into the possibilities of scope and action: Harold Stinson and Langdon Gardner of Norwood area; Miss Gaye Hancock, Norman Blodgett and John Waterman, who are meeting next Wednesday night at the office of the Department here Doug Logsdail, field man of the soils department of OAC, wil assist in the discusion.

A modified aim for this year would be test from every field of wheat that is put in this fall.

SPORTS DAY WORKOUT

Achie Davidson was appointed chairman of a small committee to plan at least one practice session in preparation for the annual Quinte district Junior Farmers field day of sports at the Ontario School for the Deaf, Belleville, July 14. It may be that a bus trip can be arranged for this event.

The Juniors have various other irons in the fire, and are seriously hoping for full support for their proposed program of soil testing.

The Long View In Farming

In less than 20 years at present rates of expansion and production, Canada will no longer be able to produce all the food she needs, Dr. J. D. MacLachlan, president of OAC, recently said at Guelph.

As a recognized authority in Canadian agriculture, this statement renews emphasis on the long view in farming that has been otherwise presented since the war.

About 20% of our food production is exported, Dr. MacLachlan said, but Canada's population increased 35% from 1931 to 1951. "At this rate we shall have 20 million people by 1971, and at the present rate of production we will not have any surplus food or even be self-sufficient."

Sprayed Nassau "Beard"

Asphodel township sprayer went over the goat's beard on the C.G.E. property at Nassau Monday.

Francis Walsh of Otonabee has a spraying outfit but hasn't had much more than enquiries for custom jobs. The wheat has outgrown that method now, but there is still time to get weeds in corn.

The corn seeding has made good headway during the last week. A lot of grass has been blown into silos of late.

Plowing Match Sept. 29

County plowmen have set Sept. 29 for their match at the farm of Henry Sharpe in Smith. Reg. Ferguson, Arnold Stevenson and Gordon Bradfield were appointed the other night to consider some extra action among the junior plowmen. A committee will also look after planting oats for sod, and it may be that OAC will contribute a tractor safety demonstration.

A Jersey's Record

A Jersey cow, seven years old, in the herd of W. R. Aylesworth, Kingston, has completed a 365-day test with production of 12,102 pounds of milk and 677 lbs. fat (5.6). Keppoch Jester's Beatrice' was grand champion at the Ottawa Winter Fair several years ago, combining milk and show qualities.

Ready For Vaccination

Evidently the Otonabee Brucellosis committee has been active. A committe was appointed Tuesday to consider the engaging of inspectors. Five or six were proposed. The members of the committee are: Harry Reid, chairman, William Torpey and Stewart Whittington.

Frank Paterson said Thursday that Jim McCarthy, township clerk, reported that the detail of securing inspectors had been completed, and the township is just about ready for the calves.

JOHN HOWDEN, of Columbus, over the Durham boundary in Ontario county, was one of the Shorthorn cattle exhibitors at Millbrook Spring Fair. This four-year-old bull from his herd weighs about 75 pounds less than a ton. The champion ribbon for bulls of this breed was awarded to the entry of M. H. Pimmett & Sons, Indian River.

They are meeting Friday night (this week) for final steps. It was hoped that Dr. Harold Worton, provincial veterinarian, could be present, but if he has other engagement, considered probable, the control committee will go ahead any way.

Helped Organize Club

F. C. Paterson was one of the speakers at the second annual twilight meeting of the Durham and Ontario Shorthorn breeders association at the farm of John Baker, Solina, last week. The club was organized during the time Mr. Paterson was agricultural representative in Durham. The main speaker, W. P. Watson, director of livestock extension for the Ontario Department of Agriculture, recommended advanced registry of beef cattle sires. Lance Beath of Beath Farms is president of the Durham-Ontario Shorthorn breeders.

Retain Marketing Board

Prince Edward Island potato growers decided to retain their marketing board as their selling agent by a vote of 2,282 to 1,845. The issue generated a great deal of contention at producer meetings, some of which drew crowds of close to 2,000. It was recalled during the discussions that potatoes advanced from 60c a bus. in Oct. 1951 to $4.80 the following May, and declined from $2 in the fall of 1952 to 30c the following April.

Sell Milk By Gallons

Two-thirds of the milk sold in Chicago in April was in half-gallon or gallon lots and at 17 cents a quart, for quantity. The price of delivered quarts is 24 cents to the housewife. A farm economist in Illinois says the practice began in Cleveland in 1952 where milk sales jumped seven per cent in one year, putting $550,000 into producers' pockets.

Increased use of quantity discounts is proposed as a good way to increase milk sales from the farmers' standpoint, and as everybody knows the flow of milk is mounting in volume. The comments of the Illinois man indicate that there are ways of enlarging milk consumption when producer enterprise is applied.

DR. FORD A. STINSON
(South Rhodesia to South Dummer)

Home From Rhodesia

Dr. Ford Stinson, a tobacco culture specialist, arrived home in South Dummer last week from Southern Rhodesia, east Africa, where he completed a four-year managerial contract on a big plantation. He was given four month's vacation, and accepted a one-year renewal of a contract that was offered for another four years. He was visiting at the home of his brother, Gordon Stinson, and left Sunday night for two or three weeks at Lake Erie.

Dr. Stinson was engaged in the Delhi section of western Ontario when he accepted the post with the tobacco interests in Rhodesia.

It is understood that his work in east Africa has been highly successful, reflected in a substantial salary increase.

14 Year Old Champion

Gerald Lyttle, of High Bluff, Man., a 14-year-old school boy, captured the provincial and western Canada plowing championships near Portage La Prairie last Friday. He will represent the west at the International match near Kitchener in October. This junior 'teenager won the Manitoba plowing title in 1952.

Young Lyttle, a tractor operator, gathered four silver trophies in his day of turning furrows. One was the Manitoba Wholesale Implement Association Cup to the winner of Class 3, three-furow tractor gang plow, open to boys under 18 "who have not previously won this class for two successive years."

Then there were the championships: Imperial Oil cup to the Manitoba champion; and provincial and western trophies that are the gift of the Manitoba Free Press and its weekly farm edition.

The two Ontario plowmen who went west for this event fare well. Jos. G. Tran of Claremont finished first in the two-furrow tractor event, open, and won the John Brown silver cup for the best plowed land.

Harold Nixon, 19, of Hagersville, the Ontario horseplow champion, was second to the oldest plowmen in the match, Witt Billingham of the Portage district, 57. He was using a strange team, and worked in soil conditions that were unfamiliar to him. Attendance was around 8,000.

Lorne Pimmett of Indian River attended last week the field day of the Ottawa Valley Shorthorn breeders at the farm of Angus Wilson, Cumberland. Also present were: Grant Campbell, Guelph, president of the Ontario association and Ab Stoltz, Auroroa, fieldman for the Ontario Shorthorn organizaion. Mr. Wilson has a herd of 110 head.

Advanced Hog Bidding?

Hog producers may get advance information on market prices some time next month, according to a statement by J. R. Kohler of the Central sales board of United Livestock Sales, Ltd., at Stratford Monday night.

He said buyers would bid on hogs the day before sales, and thereby producers would know what prices they would be getting before sending their animals to the stockyards. Mr. Kohler says this system might go into effect around July 12. During the early stages of the previous day bidding would probably be carried out by telephone contact, but eventually a sales board may be established where buyers would bid for hogs. He was attending a meeting of swine producers near Stratford.

Sees 32% Hog Increase

W. P. Watson, Ontario livestock commissioner, warned beef cattle producers from Kent, Essex and Elgin that they can look in the future for stiffer marketing competition from other classes of meat. They were attending the third annual pasture farm field session at the Buchan farm near Rodney in Elgin.

The commissioner said beef had been the most popular meat because it offered more for the consumer's money.

"About 32% more hogs than last year may be marketed during the latter part of this year," Mr. Watson estimated. "That will mean about 32,000 hogs per week more than the 100,000 produced weekly last year. We have never consumed more than 100,000 hogs per week on our domestic market. We will probably have 25,000 weekly excess for export.

The beef producer must meet that kind of competition by reducing cost of production. Mr. Watson said, suggesting increasing use of grass.

Ed Starr of the livestock branch reported that the reseeded pasture experiments, begun 3 years ago, showed more cattle fed on the re-seeded plots than on the check plots of natural pasture. The check plot sometimes showed as great a gain per acre per cow as the fertilized plot, but it hadn't been capable of carrying as many cattle.

Crossbred Market Lambs

Crossbred Shropshire lambs outweighed purebred Shropshire lambs by five pounds at weaning, and went to market twenty days earlier over a seven year period at Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, says Grant M. Carman, Genetics Research Officer.

In another project, crossbred ewes were bred to Suffolk, Shropshire and Southdown rams. The lambs from Suffolk sires proved to be best, being 10 pounds heavier at weaning, earliest to market lambs had the highest average grading percentage, but tended to mature at a low weight and took longer to reach market weight. The Shropshire-sired lambs were intermediate in most comparisons.

The Cheviot x Leicester and Leicester x Cheviot crossbred ewes were the best as dams of market lambs. Their lambs weighed more at weaning, and went to market six days earlier, on the average, than other crosses tested. In addition their lambing percentage was the highest of all, and the mortality of their lambs the lowest. The Leicester x Shropshire ewes, while excellent mothers, had a high mortality rate in their newborn lambs, and over a seven-year period had 15 per cent cotted fleeces.

The Cheviot x Leicester crosses had the added advantage of clean faces and legs, while Oxford x Shropshire ewes had to have their faces and eyes clipped at regular intervals.

All crosses were superior to the purebred Shropshires on the basis of maket lamb production.

Advanced Registry Test Of Beef Bulls Shows Income Difference

Progress results of an advanced registry policy for beef cattle which was adopted for testing in 1950 by the Ontario Department of Agriculture are translated into dollars and cents by the animal husbandry department of OAC.

This is the introductory paragraph: "For a long time there has been a need for some method of evaluating the productive ability of beef herd sires in Ontario. The method used by producers has been to select their herd sires on a basis of their conformation, using show ring standards as a guide. In many instances, the choice has been disappointing when the sire's calves are being raised for market."

The literature of beef cattle indicates that the most important economic factors concerned with production are dependent to a large degree on inheritance from the parents. These reports estimate the degree to which of these factors is inherited to be as follows: (a) rate of gain—65 per cent to 99 per cent; (b) feed efficiency — 54 per cent to 75 per cent; (c) carcass quality— 65 per cent to 84 per cent.

"Experimental work has led to the conclusion that heredity plays a most important part in determining the gain of calves in the feed lot."

TEST CALVES OF 20 SIRES

In the operation of this policy known as "a progeny test of beef her desires," four male calves of each sire are tested for a 196-day period.

Twenty sires were tested: four Aberdeen-Angus, six Herefords and ten Shorthorns. Four calves of each sire (at least two of which must be steers) are delivered to the testing station at six and one-half months of age. All four must be delivered within an eighteen-month period. They are allowed two weeks to adjust themselves to the rations and management, and go on test at seven months.

The calves are weighed on three successive days and the average of these three weighings is taken as the weight at the start of the test. They remain on test 196 days, are weighed every 29 days, and the final weight is the average of three successive weighings.

FEED GRAIN AND HAY

On test, the calves are fed a ration of a grain mixture and good quality mixed hay. The grain mixture is made up of oats, barley corn, wheat, alfalfa meal, bran, linseed oil meal and a general mix. It has a protein content of between 13 and 14 per cent.

No succulent food is included, since it would be impossible to maintain a standard quality throughout the year, and its inclusion would introduce an additional source of variation.

Calves are housed in individual pens and allowed exercise daily. The hay is self fed from racks in each pen. Grain is fed twice a day and weighed at each feeding. The calves are brought up to a full feed of grain as soon as possible and held there until the end of the test. Then the steer calves are slaughtered and their carcasses are scored by one person. The average daily gain, the pounds of hay and of grain required for each pound of gain, and the carcass score are calculated.

SUMMARY OF RESULTS

The four calves of No. 1 sire made a total gain of 2142 pounds while sire group 20 made 1237 pounds.

"In other words, the four calves by No. 1 sire produced 905 pounds more beef in 196 days than did the four calves by No. 20 sire, and made that extra gain for an additional 1733 pounds of grain and 693 pounds of hay, or total cost of $57.18 for the extra 905 pounds would be worth $162.90. Where would your sire stand in this test? Near the top or near the bottom?"

(The report by Leonard McNeil at Brandon indicated effects of advanced registry of swine.)

The complete report may be obtained at the office of F. C. Paterson, agricultural representative.

Broiler Risks Stressed By Dr. Graham

"The broiler business has developed so quickly since it came into prominence that [illegible] can easily be completely out of date in six months' time."

So said Dr. W. R. Graham, Jr., director of research for the Quaker Oats Co., Chicago, at a meeting of broiler producers at Port Dover last week. He is a son of Prof. W. R. Graham, who was for years head of the poultry department at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

If broiler growers are to succeed, Dr. Graham said, they must make every effort to keep abreast of changes. By contrast, a man in the dairy business can run into adverse conditions, but the effect financially may not be immediately disastrous. But, a broiler grower who encounters setbacks can be facing bankruptcy in a matter of twelve weeks from the time he starts in the broiler raising business.

The type of chicken the grower uses is a most important determining factor in relation to broiler profits. Broiler strains or cross breeds should be the only types considered. Having selected his type of broiler chick, the poultryman should pay strict attention to the feeding of the hen that lays the egg from which his chick is hatched. Chicks hatched from eggs laid by poorly fed layers will give a weight return of about five per cent compounded daily on their first day on feed. Breeders fed a good breeder mash will produce chicks that will give a weight return of eight per cent compounded daily on their first day on feed.

CONVERSION OF FEED

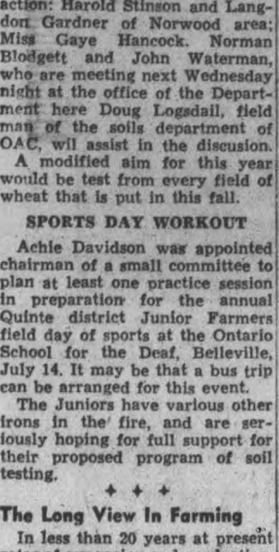
Dr. Graham said breeders who fed a ration deficient in vitamin E or B12 will produce chicks deficient in these items and that no amount of the vitamins fed to the deficient chick will correct the deficiency before the bird died. The more a chicken eats in a given time, the better the feed conversion is going to be, and therefore the broiler grower should pay particular attention to the consumption of the birds. Crumbled feeds are consumed more quickly than mash, giving considerably better conversion figures.

Buildings should be arranged so that the birds will not be forced to burn feed in energy moving about in search of their needs, Dr. Graham advised. Broilers should never be more than ten feet from a feed hopper or more than fifteen feet from a water fountain.

Feed hoppers should be kept at birds' back level so they have to reach for the feed. This prevents them from billing feed out of the trough and wasting it, spoiling conversion figures. While chicks are young, the room outside the brooding hover area should be kept at 60 degrees. If the temperature drops below this level, the chick burns feed to provide heat, again interfering with good feed conversion. Dr. Graham warned that maintaining temperature should not interfere with the proper ventilation of the house. He said losses from overheating could be as great as from chilling and often more disastrous.

RECORDS IMPORTANT

Daily feed intake and mortality records were necessary to the successful broiler raiser, Dr. Graham said.



As long as consumption of feed is increasing daily and mortality is low, the grower can be reasonably sure there is nothing drastically wrong in his flock. Should consumption hold steady for a few days or even drop back, the feeder can consider it a warning that all is not well.

Asked whether the practice of putting new chicks on old litter was sound, Dr. Graham advised that the risk outweighed the value. His recommendation was that the pen be thoroughly cleaned after each lot of chicks, and that the house be given a two weeks rest before new chickens are put in. As to feather pulling, he cited an instance where this problem had been minimized by restricting the amount of light allowed to enter the pen.

The meeting at Port Dover was held on the premises of W. F. Kolbe & Co., where visiting growers were offered an opportunity to tour one of the most up-to-date poultry processing plants in Canada.

China Reduces Defence Expenditures

By O. M. GREEN

LONDON (OFNS).—There are several interesting features in the Chinese budget for 1954-55 which was adopted by the Central People's Government Council at the end of last week.

Chief of these, reflecting the end of the war in Korea, is that 60 per cent. of the expenditure is to be on capital construction and only 21 per cent. on defence. The gap between the two was at least 10 per cent. narrower last year. There is still a large Chinese army in North Korea, but as long as the troops do not have to do any fighting they can be kept there as cheaply as anywhere. There are indeed strong reports that many of the Chinese soldiers are being permanently settled in Korea as colonists.

Estimated revenue is $10,000,000 and estimated expenditure $9,900,000.

Last year Po I-Po, then finance minister, produced in February a budget with an estimated expenditure of $9,000,000. His estimate of revenue certainly seemed optimistic; and when he was dismissed last July, although no reason was disclosed there is little doubt that it was because of serious miscalculation, partly due, no doubt, to the grievous failure of the spring harvests in several provinces.

POSTPONE BUDGET

This year the Communists appear to have waited until now to produce their budget in order to see how the spring harvest would turn out. The result, plus the fact that there is no fighting in Korea, would explain the large increase expenditure on that for which the unfortunate Po I-Po budgeted.

This year's plans include the addition of 375 miles of railway—probably extension of the east-west Lung-Hai ,which is intended to reach right across Sinkiang, the extreme northwest province; and extension of the Chungking-Chentu line in West China, which is to join the Lung-Hai at Tienshui. Both these railways are being pushed ahead with much vigor. Fifty-four new State mechanized farms are to be opened this year, nearly doubling the existing number.

Reports of the budget from Peking then fall back, in the usual Communist style, on percentages.

Investment in heavy industry—coal, power, metallurgy, chemicals and machine building—will absorb 78.3 per cent. of the expenditure on capital construction, or 26 per cent. more than last year.

CONSUMER GOODS

But "light industry is also to receive a huge sum for development" — more than once last year, Chinese papers spoke of dissatisfaction among the peasants at the scarcity of consumer goods. It may be recalled that, in announcing the new "general line" for the absorption by the State of the control of all industry, commerce and agriculture, Peking laid special emphasis on the basic principle that, while the farmer must feed industry, industry must supply all the farmer needed.

It is also stressed that the taxation of peasants this year will drop to 13.5 per cent of the total revenue, compared with 29.6 per cent., in 1950.

Last July, when there was conspicuous unrest among the farmers, a decree went out from Peking for an all-round revision of peasant taxation, with careful attention to the fertility of different districts as a guide to what each could pay; and the total amount of taxation, it was decided, must not, for the next three years, exceed that collected in 1952.

State enterprises are expected to yield 63 per cent of the revenue; three per cent. will be obtained from the £90 million of National Bonds issued early this year. The rest will have to be found by privately-owned industry and commerce.

Economic Inequalities In Middle East

By SUSAN STRANGE

LONDON (OFNS).—Partly as a result of past United States aid, Turkey is now forging far ahead of other Middle Eastern countries in economic development according to a United Nations economic report published today.

Although Turkey does not share with some Middle Eastern countries the asset of great oil reserves capable of providing a steady flow of government revenue which can be used to finance economcical development, past investment in Turkey, including U.S. aid dating from the Truman program of 1947, is bearing dramatic fruit.

Turkey is now the only country in the Middle East which is able to produce a rapidly growing exportable surplus of grain. Mainly by extending the area of cultivation, it has increased wheat production by 85 per cent since 1950. And it is the only Middle Eastern country which can show more than a small increase in industrial activity. Turkey's manufacturing production has grown by 15 per cent. in the last three years — an increase which compares favorably with that of many countries of southern Europe.

TRADE INCREASED

The result is that Turkey's trade with the outside world jumped by almost a third in 1953; it is becoming an increasingly important market for the capital and consumer goods of the industrialized countries of the West. It is in fact one of several Middle Eastern countries where salesmen from Western Germany are making great progress, mainly at the expense of Britain and the United States, whose share in trade with the Middle East has recently been declining. Besides Germany, Russia is also trading more in the Middle East, particularly in Persia and Egypt.

The relatively rapid economic progress of Turkey is one of many facts contained in the United Nations report — facts which appear to show that luck, more than anything else, is likely to govern the economic prospects of men and women living in the Middle East today. In a hundred years' time, if present trends continue, it is likely to be one of the most unevenly and haphazardly developed parts of the world.

Apart from its stronger social and political structure, Turkey's good fortune in recent years has been in its strategic position between East and West. In future years, it looks as though the fortuitous distribution of oil reserves will bring comparable benefits to Iraq.

Nothing that Syria or the Lebanon, for example, can expect from the United Nations or from any other international body can compare with the enormous and growing tide of royalties supplied by the patroleum companies.

MORE THAN HALF OIL RESERVES

The Middle East, according to the UN report, now claims more than half—53 per cent., to be exact — of the world's known oil reserves. At the moment, however, production of oil in the Middle East is not yet one-fifth of total world production. Yet output has grown so fast, and is likely to grow so fast in the future, that the economic consequences can only be guessed at. In spite of the drastic decline in Persian oil production since the Abadan crisis of 1951, total output from the Middle East increased by 10 per cent in 1951, by another eight per cent. in 1952 and by as much as 15 per cent. in 1953. Iraq, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia are now accounting for more than 90 per cent. of Middle East oil output, against 53 per cent. before Persian oil was cut off. Total exports, which amounted to 62 million metric tons (50 millions for Europe) in 1951 amounted last year to almost 80 million metric tons, of which Europe took 65 million tons and the United States more than seven and a half million. As one result of this expanding market for petroleum, revenue going to the governments of major producing countries in the Middle East have practically doubled in three years, and now stand at some 500 million dollars a year.

Yet, while Iraq, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia benefited from the oil boom, only two other countries besides Turkey — Israel and Jordan — were lucky enough to receive considerable foreign aid for their economic development. Other Middle Eastern countries, says the U.N. report, received little or no financial assistance, and had to finance development from their own resources. In several cases, including that of Egypt, the situation was aggravated by the deterioration in the terms of trade, due to the sharp decline in the price of cotton and some other raw materials produced for export.

By implication, the report makes it abundantly clear that the total lack of any international planning of economic development is adding yet another source of jealousy and tension to the many which already divide the countries of the Middle East. To the political and dynastic rivalries and divisions it seems likely that there is being added the bitterness of economic jealousy between the haves and have-nots, between those countries which can see better standards of living ahead and those which cannot.

Hold Private Contract Talks

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Contract talks between United States Steel Corp. and the United Steelworkers of America (CIO) were in the behind-the-scenes stage Thursday as the wage agreement covering 600,000 American employees of the basic steel industry went into its last seven days.

No time has been set for resumption of negotiations.

The present contract between the union and the major steel producers expires at midnight next Wednesday. U. S. Steel, employing nearly 200,000 of the industry's workers, generally sets the contract pace.

David J. McDonald, union president, has termed "completely unsatisfactory" a company contract proposal.

Traditionally the steel workers operate on a "no contract, no work" basis. The union could call a strike as soon as the present agreement expires.

American steel workers now average between $2.14 and $2.24 an hour. The company's offer is believed to provide only a small wage boost.

THE PAS, Man. (CP) — A man whose left hand had been severed by blows from an ax was found Thursday by a policeman when he answered a call to a home at this northern Manitoba town.

The constable and the man's doctor said he had carried out the mutilation himself and that the Bible he had been reading was open at Chapter 9 of the Gospel according to St. Mark.

Verse 43 of the chapter, on one of the open pages, says:

"And if thy hand offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than having two hands to go into hell, into the fire that ever shall be quenched."

Constable Burton Murray, who answered the call, identified the man as Joseph Chartrand, 26, who lives here with his widowed mother.

Chartrand was taken to St. Anthony's Hospital. He was put under sedatives and police were not able to question him.

Fishes Boy Out Of Well

HAMILTON (CP) — John Close lowered himself neck-deep in a 16-foot cistern Wednesday night and rescued a three-year-old boy from drowning by fishing him out with a garden rake.

Gary Arnold was revived after being in the water nearly 10 minutes but is being treated in hospital for shock and possible head injuries.

Robert Codd, Gary's grandfather, said the boy tumbled into the cistern on his property at nearby Garnet after the top was removed to obtain a pail of water.

Mr. Codd lowered a ladder into the water and Mr. Close, a neighbor went down with the rake.

Pleads Guilty

OTTAWA (CP)—Kenneth Beatty, 50-year-old Ottawa bookkeeper, had his confession read in court Thursday. Then he pleaded guilty to a charge of theft by conversion of $4,000 from an Ottawa flooring company that had employed him and was remanded a week for sentence.

AGREE ON MERGER—James J. Nance, left, president of the Packard Motor Car Company; Paul G. Hoffman, centre, board chairman of the Studebaker Corporation, and Harold S. Vance, president of Studebaker, triple handshake in New York as they announce an agreement between their companies to merge to form a fourth full-line producer of passenger cars and trucks. The agreement is subject to approval by the stockholders.

Squelch Fire In Town Dump

CAMPBELLFORD (ENS) — A stubborn fire at the town dump kept firemen here busy for more than an hour early Wednesday afternoon. Someone had apparently lit the fire to burn garbage, and the flames spread over a wide area sending up dense clouds of smoke.

Considerable work has been done at the dump by the town council, and numerous loads of fill have been used ot cover the refuse. The town hopes that in years to come the area will be valuable as an industrial site, and the ground is kept levelled wth that in mind.

It was the second time within a month that the firemen have been called to the dump to extinguish a blaze that had eaten its way deep into the garbage, making it very difficult to extinquish.

Protest Failure To Name Engineers As Principals

NEW YORK (AP)—The Engineers Joint Council, representing major national engineering societies, Thursday made public a protest against what it termed President Eisenhower's failure to name engineers as principals on the St. Lawrence river joint board of engineers.

The protest was disclosed at a press conference by Carlton S. Proctor, chairman of the national engineers committee of the council.

Proctor said that the council, which represents eight societies with a total membership of 170,000 "now earnestly urges that the interests of the nation require the inclusion of at least one engineer in the forthcoming appointments to the five-member advisory board of the St. Lawrence seaway development corp."

He said the advisory board's duties will include review of policies in connection with the design and construction of the St. Lawrence river development.

Proctor disclosed correspondence with the White House, dated Dec. 24, 1953, in which the council protested "against the appointment of two non-engineers to positions on the joint board for which engineers are clearly specified and required."

The American members of the joint board are Robert Stevens, secretary of the army, and Jerome J. Kuykendall, federal power commission chairman.

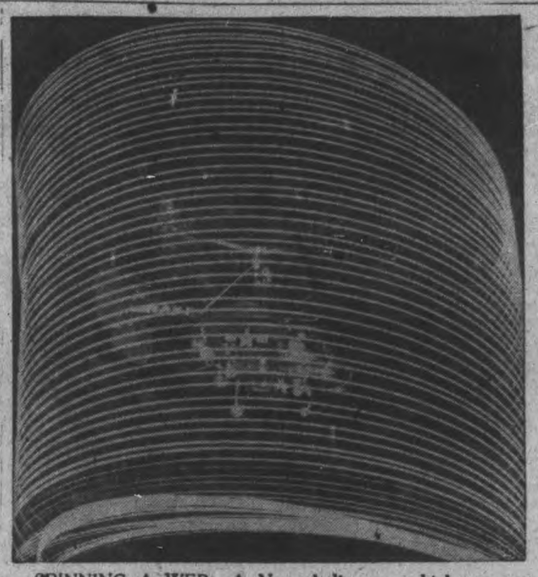
Higher Prices Received For Cattle

TORONTO (CP) — Higher cattle prices prevailed on all slaughter classes except cows and bulls this week at the Ontario stockyards.

The supply of steers opened 50 cents a hundredweight higher and was inadequate for buyers' demands. Heifers and fed yearlings were steady and supply was insufficient for demand.

On Monday's opening trading cows lost 50 cents a hundredweight and at the week's close there were still cows and bulls unsold with cows $1.50 lower and bulls $1 lower for the week; veal calves held steady; hogs, sows and stags lost $2 a hundredweight; sheep and lambs were unchanged.

The bulk of the cattle run, 6,977 cattle, was made up of cows, bulls and plain killers; choice steers, all weights, $19.50-20.50; a few small lots at $20.75; good steers $18.50-19.50; mediums down to $17; good heifers $17-18; a few sales $18.50; mediums sold down to $16; common light steers and heifers down to $12; cows opened at $14-14.50 with a few sales at $15 and closed at $13-13.50; canners and cutters sold down to $5; a few good heavy bologna bulls opened at $16 but closed at $14-15; common light bulls opened at $16 but closed at $14-15; common light bulls downward to $10; choice fed yearlings $20.50; good fed yearlings $18-19; mediums down to $17; good replacement cattle were $18-19; common to medium down to $15.



A total of 1,570 calves remained steady; good to choice vealers held to last week's close at $20-22; common to medium $10-19; a few grass calves mostly $11-13.

Hogs totalled 3,712 head; grade A hogs were generally $35 with a few small sales at $35-25; B-1s sold for $34; cows $21; stags $14; the latter two classes were on a dressed weight basis.

The sheep and lamb run totalled 714 head; choice spring lambs held steady to last week's close at $26; common lambs $22-24; some medium good sheep ranged from $8-12 with common sheep selling at $4-7.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Colorado Springs, Colo., has been chosen as the site for the United States Air Academy, Air Force Secretary Harold Talbott announced Thursday. The academy will be to the U.S. Air Force what West Point, N.Y., is to the army and Annapolis, Md., to the navy.

Attempt Being Made To Ease Hardships Of Unemployed

OTTAWA (CP)—An attempt is being made to ease the hardships of the unemployed in the event of another employment slump.

Labor Minister Gregg told the Commons Thursday that his department is examining the Unemployment Insurance Act and steps are being taken to guard against hardship in the future.

Debate on unemployment followed by one day an announcement that employment again has risen past the 5,000,000 - mark. From a post-war low of 4,805,000 in March those working full or part time rose to 5,070,000 in the week ended May 22.

The May figure compared with 4,880,000 at April 17 and 5,108,000 a year previously. A bureau of statistics estimate of the number of jobless seeking work was 217,000 compared with 114,000 a year earlier and 303,000 at April 17.

URGE HIGHER BENEFITS

Mr. Gregg made his statement after opposition members urged that higher benefits be paid from the $900,000,000 unemployment insurance fund. Maximum payments now are $24 a week for a married person.

Mrs. Ellen Fairclough (PC—Hamilton West), labor spokesman for the Opposition, said Canada may well expect less employment. The government's excuse for the situation was the "wholly false" attitude that unemployment was largely seasonal.

The real trouble was that the government was taxing Canadian products out of competitive markets.

Clarie Gillis (CCF—Cape Breton South) said the next four years will be among the toughest in employment that Canada has ever gone through. Cut-throat international competition was to blame and it was up to the United Nations to solve the problem through organizations to ease the restrictions hampering trade.

BLAMES SYSTEM

Joseph Noseworthy (CCF—York South) said the Second World War and the Korean War held off uncomfortable periods of unemployment. It would take another war to solve the present problem under the free enterprise system.

Michael Starr (PC — Ontario) said he is amazed that no government action was taken earlier in the year to cope with the unemployment then and prevent further unemployment next fall. He agreed with the major labor organizations that unemployment was a federal responsibility, not local or provincial.

He urged a substantial increase in payments of unemployment benefits and elimination of the five-day period an applicant must wait before benefits can be paid.

SUGGESTS ADDED BENEFITS

Wallace Nesbitt (PC—Oxford) suggested that benefits be increased when employment dropped to a particular figure, for example 250,000 or 300,000.

Several speakers suggested greater efforts towards training unemployed persons for other jobs. Mrs. Fairclough said she doesn't see how the federal government can escape responsibility for helping those whose employment had run out or who were not covered by unemployment insurance.

She said if it was felt the provinces should pay a share of this help they should be called into a conference.

PROPOSES SOLUTION

Later, during a debate on the difficulties of the coal mining industry, Mr. Gillis proposed as the only solution federal direction and co-ordination of all Canada's fuel resources.

He suggested a body be established with consent of the provinces with power to integrate the use of coal, oil, gas, hydro energy and atomic power.

Before Mr. Gillis made his proposal, Mines Minister Prudham forecast that the coal industry soon will enjoy better times. He said that in a few years coal will play an increasingly-important role in the supply of energy.

If Canada's population reaches 22,000,000 by 1975, he said, Canada will need at least 2½ times as much fuel as now.

Announce Resignation Of Home Matron

STRATFORD (CP)—The resignation and retirement of the superintendent and matron of the Stratford and Perth county Home for the Aged was announced Thursday.

Edward Scantlebury, 76, superintendent of home since 1927, announced to board of directors that he is retiring this year. Mrs. Gertrude Jacques, Mr. Scantlebury's daughter, and matron, at the same time announced her resignation.

BUBBLES MARK the underwater passage of Fireman Pete Nicholson. —(Examiner Staff Photos)

CANAL-SIDE DEMONSTRATION of underwater work by the fire department, Thursday.

FIREMEN-FROGMEN team come ashore while dry crew prepare to go under.

MARS MEN Firemen Ray Harrison and Bill Bloom confer with Chief William Sorrie.

Firemen Adopt Diving Gear, First In Province

Chief Bill Sorrie and his eager-beaver crew of young firemen are enthused over a new experiment they are trying: deep-water swimming with the aid of a self-contained breathing unit.

This gimmick, first tried out Thursday in the Trent canal, has two purposes: one, rescuing a person who has sunk in the water and is slowly drowning; and two, recovering the body of a drowned person with a minimum of delay.

Not content with fighting the city's fires, reviving near-asphyxiated or near-drowned people, climbing into second storey windows to let in unhappy housewives who have locked themselves out of their homes, rescuing dogs on ice-floes and similar stunts, the department are now becoming "frogmen."

As he watched a crew of five firemen put on the apparatus and submerge themselves in the canal for a cruise along the bottom, Chief Sorrie explained to The Examiner what it was all about.

FIRST DEPARTMENT

"To the best of my knowlege we're the first fire department in Ontario that has tried this sort of thing. I guess you could call it an innovation. Though I've looked, I can't find any record of training on this.

"Of course in Toronto and most of the large cities they have lifesavers, specially trained, with underwater equipment, but I don't know of any other fire departments in this field.

"Just take three minutes down there," the chief called to his charges. "Watch the pressure gauge."

He continued:

"I've been mulling over the idea since last summer and now we're trying it out with these latest three Scott Air-Paks. They're not specially designed for underwater; we can use them for general firefighting work (going into a smoke or gas-filled building) and they work well underwater, too. Dual purpose.

"Ordinarily, there is enough atmosphere in one . . those bottles to last a man half an hour, but underwater there is a constant pressure on the diaphragm causing a heavy loss of air," said the chief. "I understand that submerged the supply of air only lasts a swimmer 10 to 15 minutes.

"Today we're just experimenting and the boys are only staying down three minutes. This is the first time we're tried it. . .

GO EASY FIRST

"Swimmers using the Air-Pak have gone to depths of more than 20 feet, but the book of instructions says that a diver should make several practice dives to become accustomed to conditions before making a dive of more than 10 feet."

A crowd of a dozen people or so crowded the McFarlane St. bridge Thursday afternoon to see the strange antics of the firemen. It was a good humoured, informal affair with Chief Sorrie and Captain Frank Shearer in charge.

The five firemen picked for the experiment were Fréd Ray, Ray Harrison, Bill Bloom, Pete Nicholson and Moe Fraser. The volunteers were all eager to try out the apparatus — Nicholson even reported on his day off.

Each man was fitted with the 30-pound Air-Pak and a shoulder harness to carry it, and a tight-fitting rubber mask with a flexible hoseline attached to the cylinder. A gauge on the harness told of the pressure still in the cylinder.

To make swimming easier each man wore a pair of rubber swim fins on his feet. Fully equipped they gave the appearance of "frogmen." Armed with a spear or underwater gun they would have been ready for sport.

A line of heavy cord was tied around the waist of each swimmer and held by a second man on shore as the swimmer cruised around the bottom of the Trent canal.

"One pull of the cord means 'going down'," explained Chief Sorrie. "Two pulls means' reached destination'; three pulls means 'coming out,' and continuous pulls mean 'emergency — get me out'."

PATROLLED BOTTOM

Each fireman in turn climbed down the rip-rap into the shallow water of the canal, adjusted his breathing apparatus, plunged head-down into the water, and with quick flutter-kicks of his rubber fins reached the eight-foot bottom.

The shoreman watched the progress of the swimmer from a continuous mass of bubbles that rose to the sufrace. As the swimmer crossed and recrossed the canal during his three minutes submerged the shoreman alternately looped in the slack cord or played it out.

"I could stay down there all day — nothing to it," said Nicholson after he surfaced and removed his mask.

Governors, Employees Of Civic To Meet Again

Another meeting of the board of governors and the non-medical hospital workers at Civic Hospital has been called for next Tuesday afternoon.

The invitation to the union, Local 19 of the National Union of Public Service Employees (CCL), was announced today by Max Swanston, chairman of the board. There have been informal meetings since the board last Friday turned down the union's compromise proposals, but this will be the first formal one.

Local 19 are bargaining agents for 106 kitchen help, maintenance employees, orderlies, ward aids, nurses aides and laundry staff. They turned down the conciliation board's majority report that recommended no wage increase, no modified Rand formula for union security, but did recommend a five-cents-an-hour off-shift differential, largely because of the difficulties of transportation to and from the hospital at odd hours.

The board of governors are willing to accept the majority report with a few minor qualifications.

COMPROMISE

Last week the union made a compromise proposal. They reduced their demands from an 18-cents-an-hour wage increase to a seven-cents-an-hour increase, retroactive to March 1, 1954, providing the governors sign a two-year contract granting them another general increase of five cents an hour next Jan. 1.

The board of governors turned down this compromise proposal. They said they would accept the conciliation board's recommendations regarding union security, the five-cent-an-hour off-shift differential, and they would set up a special committee to study the transportation problem.

Today George Linsdell, Local 19's president, is in Toronto "on union business", and another attempt to negotiate a settlement in the dispute is expected Tuesday.

The special preacher at this service will be Archdeacon W. P. Robertson. The ordinands will be presented by the Rev. Professor M. T. Newby of Trinity College, Toronto, who is one of the diocesan examining chaplains. The rector of St. John's church, the Rev. F. G. Ongley, M.A., and the Rev. H. Hesketh, rector of St. Paul's Church, Lindsay, will assist in the service.

FIFTEENTH MEMBER

Walter Dyer, son of Mrs. W. T. Dyer, 312 Elias Ave., is the fifteenth member of St. John's Church to enter the ministry. He was educated in Peterborough schools, and prior to entering Wycliffe College, Toronto, he was layreader and vestry clerk at St. John's.

During his college course he and Mrs. Dyer lived in Cavan, where they ran a grocery business. For sixteen years previously he had been employed by the Brinton Carpet Company. There are two children, Alan, 6 and Patricia, 4. Mr. Dyer will be in charge of the parish of Creemore, Banda and Lisle, some 20 miles west of Barrie.

W. Schofield Battersby is principal of Central Public School, Lindsay. He will continue with his teaching and as deacon will be able more fully to assist the rector of St. Paul's Church, Lindsay, and the churches of the area. He is married, with four children, John, 24 years, a teacher in Port Credit, Jeffrey, 18, David, 16, and Anne, 9, still at school.

FATHER WAS FIRST

This ordination is of particular interest in that, so far as is known, only one previous ordination has taken place in St. John's, that of Mr. Battersby's father, who was ordained priest some fifty years ago. He became very well known in the area as Canon Battersby. His daughter, Miss Margaret Battersby, is president and principal of the Peterborough Business College.

Charles Olive has recently retired as Professor of Engineering at the University of Toronto in Ajax. Engineering and teaching carried him from his native England to India, where he directed railway work, back to England, where he lectured on steam engineering, then in the 1920's to Canada. He directed construction and manufacturing projects in Ontario and Quebec until the war, when he joined the Navy in secret ship-fitting work. At present he is layreader-in-charge at the Church of St. George's-on-the-Lake at Scarborough. He will assist the rector, and develop the newly-formed parish in that district. Professor Olive is also a married man.

"Guaranteed" Stockings Just Too Much Temptation

A foot inside the door, followed by a persuasive salesman and an alluring array of nylon stockings, has proved too much for several unsuspecting housewives in Ontario towns. They paid good money for the stockings and a "watertight" guarantee, but somehow something went wrong and now they figure they've been gypped.

The Peterborough chamber of commerce has received several complaints from purchasers of stockings from Peterborough salesmen who say they represent a firm known as "Franscine Hosiery." The complaints have followed the usual pattern of the guarantee ending up as an apparent fraud.

The salesmen, who gave a Charlotte St. address as being offices for Franscine Hosiery, told purchasers in Oshawa, Kitchener and Sarnia that the stockings would be replaced if they developed runs. However, when the women sent for replacements, there was nothing doing, not even so much as a reply to their letters.

BOUGHT IN BULK

The Better Business Bureau made a few inquiries and found that the stockings were being purchased in bulk from Grey-Mist Hosiery Ltd., a company which purported to know nothing of a firm known as Franscine Hosiery. The Grey-Mist company bought back $935.80 worth of their stockings from the Peterborough salesman in an attempt to keep their own name clear.

The chamber of commerce again issues a warning to housewives to make a point of checking the authenticity of door-to-door salesmen, who should be able to produce a licence issued by the city hall.

No Policy Set On Morrow Park As Market Site

Peterborough Exhibition directors have not come to any policy decision on the proposal that the farm produce market be transferred to Morrow Park from the present location at George and Rink streets.

John Kitney, president of The Exhibition, said today that some misunderstanding by Ald. Gordon Farquharson must have prompted his comment that the suggestion had been turned down by a majority of the Exhibition board.

Mr. Kitney said he was personally in favor of the transfer to Morrow Park's readily available accommodation, but he could not possibly speak for the board for the reason that they had not determined anything of policy on the project which Ald. Alene Holt has revived.

"I don't want to alienate the interest of any member of the city council on this question," Mr. Kitney said, "but in reading the Examiner's report Wednesday of a council committee discussion, I felt that I should be permitted to say that Ald. Farquharson must have misunderstood me. I would not want any directors to think I was committing them to something they have not decided."

Some expressions that have been heard from time to time, apart from the city council and the Exhibition board, have regarded the use of one of the buildings, particularly the former drill hall for market purposes, as an advantage which should appeal primarily to those farmers who sell produce at the market. The development of Lansdowne St., that is still in progress, has been mentioned as strong recommendation for vendors to try to arrange for their transfer of business onto the same street. They would have ample parking space for the public, protection against the weather, two adjacent bus lines, and essentially a purpose clearly falling within the conception of the late Harold A. Morrow in his desire to assist the farming community and the agricultural industry.

Once Great Lumbering Town Now Centre Uranium Mining

By WALTER GRAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

BLIND RIVER, Ont. (CP)—Mining men say uranium is going to make Blind River rich. Townsfolk say "Show me."

The town started off as a lumbering community and its whole life has revolved around the magnificent stands of white pine that stretched for miles to the north of the Lake Huron shore.

Mining prospectors have come and gone. So went the town's fortunes. Depressions, fires, speculations and debts conditioned the town to hard knocks. Now Blind River is in the centre of a new uranium field. The town is trying not to be impressed.

But the mining men chuckle. Their optimism over the development of both the field and the town is backed by the financial and physical resources they are using to bring the field into production some time next year.

"The people of Blind River just don't realize what's coming," said Bob Hart, manager of Algom Uranium.

HUGE DEVELOPMENT

Already Algom and Pronto Uranium have spent $500,000 in the field. Of this $50,000 was spent in Blind River itself, said Mr. Hart.

J. S. Hirshorn, Toronto and New York financier whose resources are behind both companies, said a $15,000,000 development program has been outlined.

He termed the 96-mile long field a "mining man's dream."

The site of the Pronto shaft, now being prepared on an outcropping overlooking Lake Hourn, is only one mile from the CPR line and the north shore highway.

Pronto has already outlined an ore body of 2,500,000 tons. A daily production of 1,000 tons is planned. The ore grade runs from .11 in Pronto to .13 in Algom, small in comparison to the fields in northern Saskatchewan where the uranium content runs to .25.

HANDY FOR TRANSPORT

But Mr. Young says the location of the mine will keep production costs down considerably.

The ore will be leeched at the mine site and shipped by truck to the rail line or highway.

To the north lies the Quirke and Elliott lake properties of Algom Uranium. Mr. Hart says diamond drillers have outlined a 6,000,000-ton ore body at Quirke and 3,000,000 tons on the eastern end of the Elliott lake field.

Bulldozers are pushing a 32-mile road over swamp and rock to the Quirke lake site. As at Pronto, the ore will be leeched at the Quirke lake mine and shipped south by truck. Production is planned at 5,000 tons daily.

Algom's headquarters now are located at the Lauzon lake air base of Carl Mattaini, manager of Lau-Goma Air Ways. The uranium rush proved a bonanza for Mr. Mattaini, whose fleet of seaplanes is on the go every flying hour, transporting mining equipment and men to the drilling sites, as well as supplying tourist camps with supplies and customers.

Pronto has already cleared a site at the east end of the lake. The camp now consists of a modern office, cookery and bunk house fitted with central oil heating, showers, game room and bedrooms for the staff.

Ten staff residences are to be constructed this summer.

ACCOMMODATION PROBLEM

However, present accommodation for the mine personnel is creating a problem. Because the Blind River district is a popular tourist area, prices are geared to the tourist's pocketbook, says Mr. Young.

Most tourist camp operators refuse to reduce their rates during the summer.

"But they don't realize that in the long run it would pay them to do it," the mine manager claimed.

Mr. Young said the Blind River businessmen are "hurting themselves" by not selling goods to the mines at prices equal to those of Sudbury and Sault Ste. Marie. As a result, the mines were buying more outside.

The rush to Blind River took place after Mr. Hirshorn's companies moved in secretly to stake their huge blocks of claims on the word of Franc Joubin, head of Technical Mine Consultants who discovered the reverse S-shaped field to the north and east of the town.

WELL-KEPT SECRET

Even Louis Berthelot, the town's mayor, didn't know what was going on.

"When we asked them what they had found, they said it was just a little copper."

But Mr. Joubin, who noted the structural similarity between the fields in Blind River and Orange Free State, South Africa, talked Mr. Hirshorn into investing $30,000 to study the field.

The investment paid off. Preston East Dome Mines, owners of one of Canada's producing gold mines of which Mr. Hishorn and Mr. Joubin are directors, staked huge properties, now held by Algom Uranium. Pronto holds the southern end of the field, site of the original discovery.

Once the news leaked out, hundreds of hardened and amateur prospectors moved in and the town enjoyed a mild boom. Hotel accommodation was, and still is, scarce. Rented rooms in private homes are not available at any price.

One resident who used to collect $13 a month rent for a dilapidated shack, now gets $65.

Mr. Hart said the mines intend to create friendly relations with the town.

"They will soon realize that we are definitely here to stay."

But George McArthur, 76-year-old solicitor and a Blind River resident for 52 years, remembers when many residents lost thousands of dollars in copper mining ventures in the area during the last 50 years. He is watching the new uranium development with a skeptical eye.

"I always say, if you have to spend $10,000 to get $5,000 out of the ground, don't waste your time. I hope they make a liar out of me."

Duplessis Opens Power Plant

CLARK CITY, Que. (CP)—Premier Duplessis Thursday opened a new power plant on the Ste. Marguerite river in this northeastern Quebec town and hailed this province as the richest in the world.

The premier spoke at the site of a hydro-electric development that will provide power at nearby Sept Iles, shipping point for thousands of tons of iron ore mined in the wilds of Ungava.

Mr. Duplessis in his address invited more American investment in the province which he called "the land of opportunity par excellence" and promised foreign investors will always be well-treated.

The Ste. Marguerite hydro project will provide 25,000 horsepower to the Iron Ore Company of Canada in Sept Iles and to Gulf Pulp and Paper Company in Clark City 400 miles northeast of Montreal. Both companies shared cost of the $12,000,000 development.

Ungava ore will move from Sept Iles to processing plants in Canada and the United States. The ore carried along a 267-mile railway line from northern Knob lake to Sept Iles will start moving into the St. Lawrence river port Aug. 1.

May Boost Fine

TORONTO (CP)—The present $5 fine for parking on rush hour routes in the city may soon be increased to $15, Mayor Allan Lamport said Thursday. Increased congestion on main arteries has led to consideration of the measure, he said. The present $2 fine for ordinary parking infractions would be left unchanged.

KEEP 'EM HIGH AND GET GOING—Anyone can play cowboy and Indians, but the Spahn boys, of Elkhart, Ind., even have their own private jail where they can keep bad men. Paul, 5, is shown steering his brother Tom, 3½, into the hoosegow in their back yard. Their dad built it, and it gives the boys a chance to act out their wild west dramas.

Senator Urges Dismissal Of Moses As Chairman

BOLTON LANDING, N.Y. (AP) Republican state Senator John H. Cooke called Thursday night for the dismissal of Robert H. Moses as chairman of the New York state power authority.

He also attacked Governor Thomas Dewey's administration for what he described as its "socialistic" support of public power.

Cooke, a lawyer who lives in Alden near Buffalo, spoke at the convention of the State Association of Real Estate Boards.

"The brutal hand of government intervention in Niagara power is being wielded by a man, Robert Moses, who derides the people of his state," said Cooke, who favors private development of the $400,000,000 New York-Ontario Niagara power project.

He said Moses is a "man who cares not for the opinion of New York state congressmen, of supervisors, of hundreds of organizations; a man who in effect states that they, together with newspaper editors throughout the state, are corrupt and will sell their beliefs and ideals for money or support."

Moses was appointed chairman of the power authority last March by Dewey. He is also construction co-ordinator and park commissioner for New York City.

Cooke said the project, if built with public funds, would "yield no taxes" and that with interest and amortization charges, what was to be "cheaper power" will no longer be cheap.

Grove School Annual Picnic

The annual picnic of the Grove public school was held on the school grounds on Wednesday with a good representation of parents in attendance.

Box lunches or picnic baskets were the order of the day, and children sat with their classmates and teachers, or in family groups.

A fish-pond kept Mrs. H. Harris and her assistants, Mrs. R. White, Mrs. C. Bevan and Miss Marjorie Sherry busy, and was soon sold out of the 400 bags of prizes.

The refreshment booth also proved a popular place, and was under the supervision of Mrs. R. Page, who had as her helpers Mrs. J. Patterson, Mrs. G. Carson, Mrs. F. Garside, Mrs. G. Beauchamp, Mrs. N. Smith, Mrs. J. Hanson, Mrs. G. Rutherford and Mrs. E. Druery.

One free ticket was given each child for ice-cream.

Mrs. A. Moore, social convener, was on hand to serve a cup of tea to those who desired it.

Senate Passes Death Benefits Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate Thursday gave final approval to an amended version of the government's death benefits plan for civil servants and members of the armed forces, sending a change making the plan optional to the Commons for action.

The Commons originally passed the plan, providing a maximum of $5,000 in death benefits, containing a clause requiring that all 120,000 civil servants and 105,000 servicemen participate.

Following expressions of opposition from civil service groups, the government agreed to accept an amendment of the Senate banking committee which would make the plan optional.

Solicitor - General Macdonald, government leader in the Upper Chamber, explained that if more than 25 per cent of those eligible reject the scheme the government will not bring it into operation.

WON'T AFFECT PLAN

He said that if only two per cent refuse to participate it will not affect the plan for which participants would pay 40 cents a month for each $1,000 of annual salary. However, the government reserves its position in the event that some percentage between two and 25 drop out.

Those eligible in the government employ or in the armed forces on July 1 will have until Nov. 1 to decide whether they will participate. Their decision will be unchangeable.

Oshawa Commission Refuse Pay Increase

OSHAWA—The three-man police commission Wednesday night refused to grant the 50-man Oshawa Police Association an increase in pay. The policemen asked $325.

The commission also decided against a reduction of the work week from 44 hours to 40 hours. Also turned down was a request for three weeks holiday after 10 years, instead of the present 15.

Five promotions were announced at the meeting. Det. Sgt. Ted Ferguson was promoted inspector. He succeeds Wilbur Dawn, who retired after 14 years as second in command of the department.

Det. Sgt. William Jordan was elevated to sergeant of detectives. Patrol Sgt. John Powell was raised to detective sergeant. Constable Kenneth Young was promoted detective, and Constable Norman Smythe patrol sergeant.

MAN WITT FAITH—Tess Walters handles a three-foot rattlesnake during First Strait Creek Holiness church services near Fort Payne, Ala. Walters has a Bible in his other hand while he holds the serpent aloft for others to see. A member of the congregation died recently when bitten by one of the snakes during services.

Police Seize $12,042 In Bills

TORONTO (CP) — Police of suburban North York township Thursday seized $12,042 in bills and additional thousands of dollars worth of electrical appliances in a raid on a township home.

They said they are holding Louis Allen, who gave his occupation as a garage operator, on a charge of receiving stolen property.

The money, found in a cedar chest, included 84 $100 bills and many of $50, $20 and $10 denominations. Officers also found 33 pay envelopes.

A truck was needed to carry appliances—television sets, refrigerators, and sewing machines—to the police station.

Police said they are checking to determine if they are loot from any of a number of Toronto and district armed robberies and burglaries. They believe the pay envelopes were stolen in a payroll robbery.

TO MEASURE THE EARTH—This group of astronomers from Brown University in Rhode Island are at Mattice, in northern Ontario, getting ready to make tests during the total eclipse of the sun June 30. They will take movies during the eclipse from this pier they are building. They hope to improve on present methods of measuring the distance between continents by finding out exactly how long it takes the eclipse to move across the Atlantic to Sweden. Other university teams are in northern Europe.—(CP Photo).

TO PHOTOGRAPH ECLIPSE—Dr. John F. Heard (left) and Dr. J. B. Oke from the Dunlap Observatory near Toronto, have been busy since last September getting their equipment and cameras ready to record the total eclipse of the sun on the morning of June 30. They are at Mattice, in northern Ontario, 120 miles northwest of Timmins. The path of complete darkness passes through northern Ontario and Quebec in a northeasterly direction.—(CP Photo).

Member Of Ancient Board

EDINBURGH (CP) — Roy H. Thomson, Canadian newspaper publisher and chairman of Scotsman Publications Ltd., has become the first Canadian received into the Company of Merchants of the City of Edinburgh.

Thomson was admitted at a June 17 meeting to the organization better known as the Edinburgh Merchants' Company, which was granted a royal charter by Charles II in 1681 as a commercial association. First patron is the Queen.

The company, now more active in education and charity than in business, was left some money by a widow in 1694 and founded the Mary Erskine School.

It added three other famous Scottish schools—George Watson's Ladies College and George Watson's and Daniel Stewart's schools for boys. More than 5,000 pupils attend the four, with some 50,000 former pupils spread around the globe.

Charity work is particularly concerned with old folk and widows. The company is represented on numerous boards and trusts in an honorary capacity.

Italian Notables Mark Birthday For La Duse

By GILBERTO FORTI

MILAN (AP)—Notables of the Italian stage will gather Sunday at a northern Italian town to commemorate a death 30 years ago in Pittsburgh.

It will be a sad occasion for those old enough to remember. For their meeting will honor the memory of Eleonora Duse, the Italian actress.

She was 64 years old, but still at the height of her career. She died of pneumonia April 21, 1924, in the Schenley hotel.

WILL RECALL LIFE

She is buried in Asolo, north of Venice, which "La Duse" chose as her home and called her "Isle of Silence." Here the theatrical people of Italy will gather.

Duke Tommaso Gallarati Scotti, former Italian ambassador to London and the only living author of a play performed by "La Duse," will give a speech. For him, it will recall the life she brought to his play, "Cosi Sia" (So Be It), and another day 29 years ago. In Asolo, on the first anniversary of her death, he also was the speaker.

The actress was born in Lombardy in 1859, the daughter of travelling actors. Eleonora made her first stage appearance at 13. By the time she was in her mid-20s she was famous. Her acting, for the time, was almost revolutionary; she scorned the arm-flinging melodramatics often seen then on the stage, and acted with restraint but great emotional power.

CAMILLE GREATEST ROLE

She embarked on her first foreign tour in 1894. Some say her greatest role was Camille. She became known near the end of the century, as Sarah Bernhardt's only rival. In Paris, when Bernhardt saw "La Duse" as the lady of the camelias she led the applause for the Italian actress.

Thirty years after her death, Eleonora's only living relative is her daughter, Enrichetta Angelica Cecchi Bullough, who lives in Cambridge, England, widow of a university professor.

In Italy the fame of "La Duse" has not dimmed. Some admirers still suggest that she be buried in Florence's Santa Croce church, near the bodies of some of Italy's greatest. Her will stipulates, however, that she remain in the cemetery of Sant'Anna amidst the green hills of her "Isle of Silence."

The couple will live at Drumhead, N.S.

"ROLLER-COASTER JOE" McKEE: Keep the couples in the car.

His Business Brings Shrieks Called "Roller Coaster Joe"

By WARD CANNEL

FORT LEE, N.J. (NEA) — Joe McKee is 67 years old, white-thatched and vaguely paunchy. And he looks more like a retired carpenter or statesman than like Cupid.

But the fact is that he is far from retired. And when somebody says that the course of true love never did run smooth, they mean him.

For Joe McKee is the world's foremost—and practically only—thrill-ride designer and builder.

As "Roller-Coaster Joe" he has been bringing young couples together more or less forcefully for the past 50 years wherever there's an amusement park in America, Canada, Mexico and Europe.

It's a delicate science, this shrieking, whizzing, dipping, looping ride. It's a science based on three axioms:

1. Keep the couples together
2. Keep them in the car.
3. Keep the car on the track.

To qualify as a thrill scientist, McKee can point to:

1. His two years of high schooling.
2. The 300 rides he has built.
3. His apprenticeship to the master builder.

In the whole nation, there are only four other men in the same business, and they all look on him as the real professional.

But my little brother is coming right along in the business," Joe said. "He's really learning fast."

The little brother, it turns out, is 57 years old.

It's a better than even chance that you—and your grandfather—have seen Joe McKee. He can usually be found leaning against the ticket window of his roller-coaster, listening to the roar and the shrieks and thinking:

"It's not going fast enough. Not enough dips and curves. It's not high enough."

STAGGER AWAY

And as the passengers stagger from the cars after the ride and careen out into the midway, Joe is usually thinking:

"I'll fix the suckers on the next one I build."

The result has been a trail of thrill rides across the world that have spun young lovers into the arms of the nearest justice of the peace.

The roller-coaster is purely American in origin. It grew from the old-time scenic railway which faded before the motion picture. And it was first built by John A. Miller in 1904 with a crew of 18 men, including McKee.

The ride that used to cost less than $10,000 has sky-rocketed to a cost of $150,000. But it's a real money-maker. The ride at the Canadian National Exhibition open only 14 days each year, grosses over $64,000.

Nevertheless, the price of building is prohibitive. Consequently, Joe has had to design extra thrills that will make up for shorter rides. At Poughkeepsie, N.Y., the ride has the deepest dips — 122 feet from crest to valley. At Palisades Park, N.J., the ride is the fastest — 60 miles per hour. At Cincinnati, O., the ticket window is the smallest. Joe knows, because they had to hire a very small girl to sell tickets and Joe married her.

NEVER SPANNED CITY

Although several McKee rides go through buildings or over rooftops, he has never spanned an entire city.

"Sure would beat the traffic problem for all those suckers who have to drive or walk," he said.

On the job, his day begins at 8 a.m. when he comes into the park to check the rides. Every inch of track is walked, every loose screw is tightened, worn parts replaced immediately.

By noon, Joe himself is in one of the cars, taking a test ride. He stays near his ride until the park closes after midnight. And so at five in the afternoon he takes a short nap and then walks back to the roller-coaster.

Walks. Because automobiles are far to dangerous.

Fishermen May Share Jobless Insurance

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor department officials are investigating the possibility of bringing commercial fishermen and farmers within the scope of the unemployment insurance commission.

However, Labor Minister Gregg said Thursday night he could not say whether they will become eligible until the report is received and studied by the government.

Thomas Barnett (CF—Comox-Alberni) said the difficulties against bringing fishermen and farmers under unemployment insurance are not insurmountable. Many workers in other fields have come under the plan, including piece workers, longshoremen and shareworkers in other fields.

Bus Operators And Employers In Agreement

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Bus operators and their employers have agreed to accept the same terms non-operating unions may obtain as a result of their current negotiations with the Canadian National Railways.

The 200 bus employees of the Niagara, St. Catharnes and Toronto Railway Company are members of Division 846, Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America (AFL-TLC).

The bus operators agreed to accept in full settlement the same changes in fringe benefits as arise from settlement in the main non-operating groups of the parent railway.

The Niagara-St. Catharines is a subsidiary of the CNR.

Repairing The Winter Damage

ROBINS ARE INDIVIDUALISTS when it comes to choosing a place to bed down their family. Mother Robin, left, doesn't have to depend on her youngsters' appetites to tell her when mealtime is approaching. Living atop a time clock in Augsburg, Germany, she always knows the right time. The Robin family, above, happened to choose the sign of a Hugoton, Kan., furniture store for their happy family.

To Stand Trial

CORNWALL (CP) — Melvin Cohen, 34-year-old store proprietor, Thursday was ordered to stand trial on an arson charge arising out of a fire at his store May 30. Seven witnesses testified during a four-hour preliminary hearing. Damage in the fire was estimated at $5,500.

Large Share Of Furs Used Come From Breeding Farms

WASHINGTON—Summer's hot, humid days used to be happy, carefree times for mink and muskrat. But not any more.

The dog days of July and August have become a favorite season for milady to shop for new fur coats and stoles.

This summer is particularly ominous for fur-bearing animals—the U.S. federal excise tax on furs has been cut from 20 to 10 per cent.

MINK LEADS IN POPULARITY

With mink fur leading in popularity, imports of mink skins have more than doubled in the past seven years. Domestic production also has doubled. Two and a half million mink pelts were marketed from 5,000 mink ranches last year, compared to 1,200,000 in 1946. An additional million skins were sold by American trappers in 1953, the National Geographic Society says.

Mink raising requires skill and patience. The high-strung little animals, cousins of the weasel, must be handled with extreme care.

Litters average three to five tiny kits and are so delicate they are left strictly alone for the first days following birth. Ranchers wait one or two weeks before even counting the offspring, lest handling harm the fragile creatures. A new-born kit weighs less than half an ounce.

Fur processors prefer domestic mink to imported, although the smaller, thick furred Labrador mink are usually of fine quality.

IMPROVE STOCK

American mink ranchers improve their product through scientific feeding and care. Cross-breeding produces strange color mutations. Pure white and "pastels" are now favored over the still-popular silver-blue.

Muskrat fur wears well and can be made to resemble closely mink and Hudson seal. A let-out "mink-dyed" muskrat coat, carefully tailored, sells for approximately a sixth the cost of a full-length mink coat.

Sealskin has long been a popular item in coats, capes and trimming. Alaskan seal, almost wiped out a few years ago by indiscriminate slaughter, are now rigidly controlled by the Government. Only 3-year-old "bachelor" males are pelted, leaving the breeding stock to rebuild the supply.

Other sealskins are imported, chiefly from Norway.

"LONG-HAIRS" COMING BACK

The demand for silver fox fur has diminished, although "long-hair" furs are gradually coming back. Surprisingly, the raccoon coat is enjoying a revival, but with one important change — it has lost its long-hair character through shearing.

Chinchilla breeding has grown throughout the United States. More than 12,000 chinchilla "farms," some breeding one or two pairs, some hundreds of animals, have sprung up in the last few years.

The first big public auction of chinchilla pelts is being held in New York City early this summer. The few chinchilla pelts on the market so far sold for about $40 a skin. With 125 pelts required for a coat, chinchilla has been confined largely to trimming on other furs and to small accessories.

The lowly rabbit has practically disappeared from the fashion scene. Fur dealers blame the federal fur labelling act passed by Congress some time ago. It prohibits the disguising of fur products under any other name.

"Neither dealers nor customers like to call a rabbit a rabbit," one furrier said. "So rabbit has passed out of the picture except as material for men's hats, and an occasional strip used as trim on cloth coats."

Decide To Fight Lamprey Eels In Great Lakes

OTTAWA (CP)—The petromyzon marinus, or sea lamprey, is one of the more ghastly creatures of the planet.

The lamprey attaches itself to other fish by means of its sucker-like mouth and with its sharp teeth rasps the victim's body, sucking out the blood and body juices.

It is feared that the lamprey is responsible for the collapse of the commercially important lake trout stocks in Lake Huron and Lake Michigan and that a similar fate awaits trout in Lake Superior.

The parasitic lampreys have become plentiful in the extreme eastern end of Lake Superior although first reported in those waters only a few years ago.

FULL-SCALE ATTACK

The fisheries department said today it has launched a full-scale attack against the lamprey menace. The campaign is tied in with an expanded federal-provincial research program to develop further the fisheries of the Canadian side of the Great Lakes.

Advance parties now are in the field in northwestern Ontario, erecting lamprey barriers—some of them electrical—and surveying streams running into Lake Superior north of Sault Ste. Marie.

The department plans to fly 3,000,000 lake trout eggs from Great Slave lake in the Northwest Territories to Port Arthur to help restock the upper Great Lakes.

The campaign is urgent because complete collapse of a fishery through lamprey attacks can occur in a few years.

CONTROL MEANS

Parties in the field are expected to complete 20 major lamprey control installations this year on streams flowing into Lake Superior between Sault Ste. Marie and Montreal river and 10 more in the vicinity of Port Arthur. More installations will be erected next year if they are found necessary.

A search is being carried out to find a suitable poison and a method for its application. Poisoning operations are expected to start July 15. The poison will be placed in the water near the mouths of the rivers. Fish important to commercial fishermen and anglers will not be seriously affected because the poison will disperse rapidly.

A survey is also being made of all Canadian streams flowing into Lake Superior to determine the size of the lamprey runs and the use made of streams for spawning.

Adventists Meet

OSHAWA (CP)—More than 1,200 delegates from about 40 Seventh Day Adventist churches in Ontario and Quebec are attending the denomination's biennial conference at Oshawa Missionary College. J. E. Jones of Oshawa, president of the conference, said he will report a 10-per-cent gain in membership during the last two years when about 330 adults were accepted into the church.

Institute Holds Cooking Course

FENELLA (ENS) — The Fenella Women's Institute sponsored an extension service course on oven meals in the community hall Tuesday, Wednesday afternoons with Miss Helen Downie, instructor from the department of home economics, Toronto.

The Roseneath branch were invited to the course. Miss Downie mentioned if we would all follow "Canada's Food Rules," there would be fewer vitamin pills bought.

Miss Downie prepared a full course oven meal. She also gave the names of seevral bulletins that could be obtained by writing to the department.

Mrs. A. J. Fanning thanked Miss Downie on behalf of the members.

Lunch was served with ice cream, and cake with candles, in honor of Mrs. Eldridge Sherwin's birthday.

Driving Foolish But Not Enough To Support Charge

Lorne Cromie, acquitted three weeks ago on a charge of breaking, entering and theft at the J. W. Steinkrauss warehouse, Thursday won dismissal of a careless driving charge in magistrate's court.

Const. John Hayes testified that Cromie, 26, of 492 Hopkins Ave., travelling south on George St., passed a car on the right after stopping for a red light at Sherbrooke St. This was at 11:10 p.m. Cromie had no left headlight on his car, and was told to stop but "apparently he didn't hear me."

A few minutes later, Const. Hayes testified, Cromie was travelling north on George St. The constable said that "Cromie was driving with one hand and a blonde girl was lying with her head on his lap."

Const. Robert Muldoon testified he saw Cromie pass the second time, and pass another car on the right, this time heading north.

FLAGGED DOWN

Both constables said they again saw Cromie a few minutes later, again turned around and this time heading south on George St. Opposite the Metropolitan store, Const. Hayes stepped out in the middle of the road to flag Cromie. Const. Muldoon said he was worried that "Cromie was going to run him down. He seemed reluctant to stop." Cromie, however, did stop.

Defence counsel Gordon H. T. Farquharson established that there had been "no collision and no near miss" in his cross-examination of Const. Hayes. He did not question Const. Muldoon and called no witnesses in Cromie's defence.

Magistrate W. R. Philp held that crown attorney John A. Bradshaw's case did not prove careless driving on Cromie's part. He did, however, think his driving was "very foolish" and warned Cromie that "you may have to wait until you have an accident to know what good driving means."

Cromie was fined $15 and costs for illegal possession of liquor after Const. Hayes testified to finding two bottles of beer in the car and 11 more in the trunk. Cromie, however, "was not drunk or even impaired."

Take Evangelist To Hospital In Germany

DUESSELDORF, Germany (AP) American evangelist Billy Graham was admitted to a hospital here today after waking up "feeling awful," but was returned to his hotel room after an examination.

A German doctor said results of the examination would not be known until an x-ray of Graham's chest and abdomen is developed.

The preacher's condition is not considered serious. There was an unconfirmed report that he is suffering from a gall-bladder condition.

Jerry Beavan, Graham's secretary, said earlier that "Billy woke up awfully sick. We called a doctor. The doctor looked him over and recommended that he be sent to a hospital immediately for a complete check-up."

The 35-year-old evangelist came to Germany Wednesday after a tour of Britain and Scandinavia. He was scheduled to leave here today on a three-day visit to Berlin.

Graham had appeared in excellent health Thursday despite the rigors of his strenuous revival schedule. He spoke to a meeting of some 25,000 persons at night.

Young girls sobbing on their boy friends' shoulders testified to the emotional impact of Graham's message.

A 100-piece brass band and a massed girls' choir of the German Evangelical Church backed up the North Carolina preacher and led the crowd in hymn singing.

The combined effect of the hymns and Graham's magnetic delivery apparently was undimmed by the necessity of translating his message to the enthusiastic crowd.

Graham denied that he had urged German rearmament in a sermon at Frankfurt Wednesday, saying he had been misquoted and had only mentioned the views of West German and American leaders.

WA Entertains Havelock Choir

HAVELOCK (ENS)—The Evening Auxiliary of Havelock United church met in the Sunday school auditorium and following their meeting entertained the members of the choir.

Mrs. John Beatty had charge of the devotional service and the president, Mrs. L. Parnall, was in the chair. A bale was packed to be forwarded to Miss Evelyn Iles, a Havelock girl who is serving as a missionary at Natal, South Africa. Mrs. R. G. Newman closed the meeting with prayer.

Mrs. Parnell welcomed the choir and Miss E. Clark led a sing - song with Mrs. Beatty at the piano. Contests were conducted by Mrs. D. Dafoe and Mrs. Beatty, the winners being Mrs. A. Holland and H. Agnew.

During the evening, Miss E. Clark of the public school staff, who is leaving for Brockville was presented with a jewel case and powder-box by Mrs. C. Steenburgh. The address was read by Mrs. D. Dafoe.

Mr. Agnew thanked the auxiliary on behalf of the choir for the social evening. The Rev. R. G. Newman closed with prayer.

Bandits Force Plane To Land On Beach

RANGOON, BURMA (AP)—Four bandits held up the pilot of an air liner at pistal point over Burma today and forced him to land on a deserted beach, Union of Burma Airways announced.

The bandits removed 20 boxes of currency containing the equivalent of $500,000 which the plane was carrying to Akyab for the local treasury. Then they allowed the plane to take off.

The plane carried three crew members and 14 passengers. It was the second time one of the air line's aircraft had been held up in this way.

Men Who Supply Beer Strike In Sarnia

SARNIA (CP) — The men who supply the beer to Sarnia's public houses and hand it out for home deliveries went on strike this morning in protest against home delivery of beer from the warehouse by non-union trucks. Employees of the warehouse are members of an iter-plant CIO union, as are the truckers carrying the beer to points outside of Sarnia.

Operators of several hotels report that they will probably make out over the week-end all right, but fear there won't be much beer left in beverage rooms at the first of the week.

District Strawberries Match Niagara Crop

Only a weekend recently separated the ripening of strawberries here and in the usually earlier Niagara-Hamilton district.

"Once in a while that happens," John Kitney told the Examiner today. "Circumstances of weather there and here have most to do with it. Their first berries came to market here on a Friday and ours followed them on the Monday. Sometimes there is an entire week's difference, occasionally maybe a few days more."

Peterborough gardens have taken on their June-end appearance of a cornucopia, the horn overflowing with strawberries, cabbage, head and leaf lettuce, spinach, beets. Sounds like a run-down of a vegetarian's menu. Asparagus has gone with the white blossoms of the spirea, leaving out the conserving of the canning factory.

Franchise Gives "No Security"

CHATHAM (CP)—S. L. Clunis, chairman, Chatham Memorial Community Centre Commission, said today an OHA ruling that last year's Maroon players and franchise belong to Jack Stewart seems to indicate that a Senior A franchise gives no security to the holder.

He said the ruling "indicates to use that the OHA doesn't want Chatham to participate in Senior A hockey."

Stewart, released recently from a contract by Chatham city council, operated the Maroons two seasons. He sought a new contract from the arena commission.

A contract to operate a team under the city-owned franchise has been awarded to Wren Blair who, Mr. Clunis said, told the sub-committee he could not operate a team if the present players were taken away.

Carnival Worker Sentenced To Hang

QUESNEL, B. C. (CP)—Lawrence Brian Vincent, of Barrie, Ont., 28-year-old itinerant carnival worker, was convicted by an all-male assize court jury here Thursday of the murder of a 13-year-old girl and was sentenced to be hanged Sept. 12.

The battered body of Donna Lee Corbett was found in bushes north of here last Sept. 18, six days after she was reported missing from the carnival where Vincent worked. She had been strangled with one of her own shoe laces.

24 New Fighters Arrive In Europe

FONTAINEBLEAU, France (Reuters) — Twenty-four new-model Canadian Sabre jet fighters, powered with Orenda engines, arrived in Europe Thursday, it was officially announced.

All will go to the RCAF wing at Zweibruecken, Germany, under the Canadian plan to re-equip her four fighter wings serving overseas.

The Orenda engines, which like the Sabres are Canadian-made, give the planes more thrust and speed, shorter take-off, a faster rate of climb and a higher ceiling.

Their arrival will make more American-made F-86 Sabres, formerly used by the RCAF, availab' to other NATO countries.

Poison Ivy Flourishing, Watch Out

Poison ivy is waiting for school children and their elders who will be taking to the field and woods during the two months of vacation.

Recognition of this weed carries assurance of protection. The young folks have to know this enemy, and the Ontario department of agriculture sends out this rhymed aid in its weed of the week series:

"Berries red, have no dread;
Berries white, poisonous sight;
Leaves three, quickly flee."

White berries and three leaves are identifying features of this plant.

Crops branch of the department says poison ivy can cause untold misery to all who come in contact with it. Many a farmer and city resident can ruefully testify to its toxic effect.

IN WRONG PLACES

It is usually found where one wishes to play and relax— in playgrounds, park fringes, wild berry patch, along roadsides. A low growing plant or a climber it has three shiny leaves with a cluster of pale flowers under the leaves, producing pale grey seeds. It also spreads from ground runners.

Contact even by walking through a patch will cause a skin rash or itch, which can be very painful. Consult a doctor at once for remedy. Summer campers and children who do not know the plant are the most common victims.

As for control: grubbing out all plants is practical if proper precautions are taken to avoid broken or crushed plants. Chemicals such as amate, so lium chlorate, altiacide and 2-4D are recommended, but more than one application is necessary to destroy this ivy.

GRADUATING today from the RCAF staff college in Toronto, Sqdn. Ldr. George Broadley of Peterborough, finished an intensive 10-month advanced staff training course. He will now take up new duties with the RCAF's 412 transport squadron in Ottawa. He was one of 50 graduating.

Cecil Secord, Niagara parks commissioner, later helped in the planting of an oak tree in the gardens of the John DeCou stone house, the heroine's destination and now a historic site maintained by Ontario Hydro.

A Trip In The Animal World

Mousetown, World's Largest City

By MILLER STEWART

What would you say is the commonest animal. It's not the fox, nor the squirrel, nor even the rabbit. It's a mouse—the meadow mouse. Not the pretty little white-footed mouse you find in the woods, that's the wood, or deer mouse. It is the meadow mouse, or vole we're talking about. If you live on a farm, that's the little dark mouse that runs down the furrow when the plow turns up the sod. It's the mouse that the dog kills so many of when the grain stooks are moved. And it's usually the mouse that the cat brings home from his expeditions in the fields.

Because there are so many of them, that little meadow mouse is a mighty important animal. How many of them are there? That's a tough question, but there are more meadow mice, probably, than all the other warm blooded animals put together. That is true in England, and Canada, and the United States, and France, and many other countries.

Have Many Babies

Mousetown is the biggest city in the whole world of animals, and far bigger in population than New York, London, and Paris combined. And the reason there are so many meadow mice is, that they have so many babies, so often. A mother mouse spends 90 per cent of her time feeding and looking after her babies. She can have them when she is only four weeks old, and she can have as many as seventeen litters of from six to ten young each, in a year—if she lives that long. Meadow mice have millions of enemies, and even if they escape them all, they only live about a year. Mind you, all female meadow mice don't have that many babies, but they can have them, if there's plenty of food and protection, and that happens pretty often.

There weren't always so many meadow mice. When the country was a wilderness, and most of our farms were covered with forest, there were plenty of mice, but there were many animals that lived on mice, too. But when we killed off the enemies, and cut down the trees, and planted fields of grain, and made pastures and meadows, we made it very easy for the field mice. We finished off the enemies, and then we gave him just the kind of a home he wanted to live in, and on top of that, we made it easy for him to steal from us all the food he needed. That's why, all over the world, where there are farms, there are millions of field mice.

Very Tidy Folk

If you go out into a meadow, and rake away the grass from a small part of the field, you'll see a network of little streets or runways. If you look carefully, you will see that there are sort of half subways around the grass roots, and that they criss-cross and run in every direction, like a badly planned city. And every so often, there will be little bays full of dried grass, cut into flat soft hanks. These are the homes of the field mice. Some of the bays you will find covered with little black pellets. These are the mouse's toilets—for they are very tidy folk, the field mice. You have found the top floor of Mousetown, the biggest city in the whole world of mammals, or warm blooded creatures.

If you look closer, you will find that there is another level of subways and dugouts that runs below the surface. These are underground houses and storehouses, too. Long ago the Indians in Canada used to look for these mouse storage rooms in famine times. They would often find a pailful of edible roots in one spot.

You remember the story about the city mouse and the country mouse—well, now you see for yourself that the country mouse really lives in the biggest city there is, and you will find this mouse city from coast to coast, wherever there is the right kind of cover. Mousetown gives shelter, food, easy pathways, and, most important, protection from the prying eyes of their enemies. In the Northern Hemisphere, you will find voles, or meadow mice, of one kind or another in deserts, in swamps, in prairies, forests, or mountains.

Winter or summer, night and day, (for mice don't take much time out for sleep), the mice millions scurry along the runways, looking for food for themselves and their babies. And food is not hard to find. Scientists who have studied mice say that the average mouse population runs from 120 per acre in rich meadow, to a couple of dozen per acre in bog forest. This means many thousand per square miles, so that you can see that you won't have to look very far to find a piece of meadow with a mousetown in it.

The amount of damage that meadow mice do, is astounding. Every mouse consumes, wastes, or spoils, his own weight in green stuff every day, or about thirty pounds a year—that's about a ton to every 66 mice—or about two tons per acre. Mice eat all cereal and forage crops, seed in the ground struggling blade, ripe standing crop and harvest in shock or barn, hay meadow and pasture, garden produce, flower bulbs and seeds, fruit bushes, shrubs, and trees. The average loss per farm per year in Canada and the United States, is probably about five tons of hay and fifty bushels of grain.

The farmer gets maddest when he finds his fruit trees girdled and ruined by mice, but he doesn't realize how much he loses to mice every year in grass and grain that he never finds out about. Of course, millions of mice are killed by plowing and cultivation every year, but our crops give them plenty of food, and our meadows and pastures plenty of places to live safely in.

Population Goes Haywire

Every once in a while, something happens, and the mouse population just goes haywire. In Kern County, California, in 1926, the mouse population suddenly soared to 80,000 per acre—that's almost two for every square foot. They ate up all the crops off more than thirty thousand acres, and over fifty miles of trench had to be dug, and trainloads of poisoned grain set out, before the plague was stopped. In Nevada, they had a similar outburst in 1907, and more than three quarters of the alfalfa crop over a large part of the state was eaten up. There are records of this kind of mouse plague from almost every country in Europe, Asia, and North America, and they still occur.

In Canada, in 1927, and again in 1942, winter came early in Western Canada, and the wheat farmers had to leave over half of their crop in stook all winter. When they came to thrash in the spring, they found as many as 30 mice in every stook. The threshing machines ran red with blood, and the separators were clogged with masses of mouse corpses. The yield of grain was almost 15 bushels to the acre less than the same crops that were threshed in the fall.

In the First Book of Kings, you should remember, God sent a plague of mice to punish the Philistines for carrying off the Ark of the Covenant. And you should remember, too. Sennacherab's hosts—you know, the ones, "Whose cohorts were gleaming in purple and gold"—anyway, they were overrun by a plague of mice at night when they were encamped, and the mice ate their bow strings, and the hilts and handles of their spears, so that they had to retreat. One of the first settlements of Scotsmen in Canada lost so much of their first crop to mice that they had to get help from their French Canadian neighbors in Nova Scotia, to keep from starving.

Aid The Fur Trade

But if mice are a troublesome pest to the farmer, they are the mainstay of the fur trade. Most furbearing animals, except beaver and muskrat, live on either mice or rabbits, and so most of the fine furs you see are really converted mousemeat. The Hudson Bay records in Canada show a four year cycle in fox, lynx, mink and weasel pelts, with the peak a year after an abundance of voles in the north. During the years of great abundance, foxes won't bother with baited traps, and the wolves lay off the caribou when there are lots of mice. The next year, the mice decline in numbers, the furbearers are hungry, and the trappers thrive.

Nobody is really sure why mice, rabbits, and grouse have these regular cycles of abundance, although there has been lots of study of the subject. It is known that the size and frequency of litters increase with the good food prospects. The great abundance always seems to end in epidemics of disease, probably spread because the country gets overcrowded. Only the mice that are strongly disease-resistant survive, and the decline in the population is just as fast as the rise.

The citizens of Mousetown may belong to any of more than fifty different kinds of field mice, and they are different in size and color. They may live from the Arctic to South America, all around the North Temperate Zone, in Asia, Europe, and North America. They live below sea level in Death Valley, in the United States, and up to 20,000 feet in the air in the Himalayas. In general, they are short, chunky creatures, with a short, hair-covered tail, bright little eyes, and tiny ears hidden in their fuzzy fur. The fur is loose, rather long, blackish, grayish, or yellowish brown, heavily sprinkled with black, so that they have a grizzled look. The field mouse really doesn't look very much like the house mouse, or the beautiful, sleek, woods mouse. He looks for all the world like a tiny bear, but there are billions of him. You won't see him very often, except when the cat brings one home, or you see one scurry across the path.

Never Goes Back Home

There is no reason to believe that there is any organization or division of labor in Mousetown. It seems to be a city where everybody looks out for himself, once he's grown up, and lives out his life in a narrow range. There is no family unit, except when the babies are helpless, and then the mother looks after them alone. If you move a field mouse a half mile, he never goes back home—just settles down in his new surroundings.

Mice can do so much damage that man has to fight to control them, but as usual, he has turned his ever-ready shotgun against the birds and animals who could help him most. Wolves, lynxes, foxes, badgers, raccoons, possums, skunks, weasels, mink and shrews, hawks and owls, buzzards, shrikes, cuckoos, crows, herons, bitterns, storks and ibises, gulls and snakes—all eat mice. But weasels, foxes, owls, and hawks kill more than the rest. Every weasel probably kills several hundred mice a year, and so does an owl. The cost of this kind of mouse control is to keep your chicken coops and colony houses locked up at night.

A friend of mine was called in to help out a farmer who had a regular plague of mice in his orchard. When he drove into the farmer's yard, there were two dead long-eared owls hanging on the fence. The farmer was very surprised when my friend told him that, as far as we can find out, long eared owls don't eat anything but mice, and that they had probably been attracted to the orchard by the abundance of mice.

As far as mouse damage is concerned, a shortage of owls and foxes is far worse than too many owls or foxes. When there get to be too many of them—by all means hunt them, but remember they can do a lot of useful mouse hunting you can't do for yourself. So just be sure there are too many before you shoot.

Freedom Given Soviet Writers Snagged

By EDWARD CRANKSHAW

LONDON—Sooner or later it had to happen. The happy new marriage between the writers of the Soviet Union and the State has had its first nasty jar. Once more it has been demonstrated that freedom is a difficult art to acquire.

Even those countries which have practised freedom the longest find themselves in trouble at times. How much more so in Russia, where the first faltering start, after twenty-five years of no-freedom, was made only last year. The writers were urged to reflect reality, to satirize, to criticize, to show life as it is; and they have been doing their best. It appears, however, that there is criticism and criticism, and it is difficult for an individual writer to know where to draw the line.

WHERE TO DRAW LINE?

Not even the 1953 Congress of the Writers' Union has known where to draw the line and so poor Leonid Zorin, with his play about a Communist careerist—the lawyer, Peter Kirkichev—has got into terrible hot water.

It is not, says Literary Gazette, that there are no such people in the Soviet Union as soulless bureaucrats and careerists like the villain of this play, which is called "The Visitors." "Unfortunately," it says, "there are still all too many." What Zorin has done is to imply that his villain is a product of Soviet society, instead of a survival of an alien ideology. The real trouble seems to be that Zorin has touched the Communist bosses on the raw. Kirpichev is presented not as a regrettable survival, but as a modern Soviet citizen, ruthless, unscrupulous and in love with power. It is as though the leaders, invested in our most democratic of countries with the confidence of the working people, the very real servants of the people, must become corrupted just because they are leaders. This idea is politically harmful and profoundly vicious."

It is also an idea which the real leaders in the Kremlin do not like at all. It is altogether too close to the knuckle. So their response is immediate and, in their own words, vicious. "To listen to Zorin one would think there are many Kirpichevs, and that they are powerful, while there are few fighters against Kirpichevism, and that they are weak. This is the greatest and most vicious lie in the play." Another lie is contained in "the false tendency to represent careerists and bureaucrats as a definite social stratum in our society."

OPPONENTS TOO WEAK

Finally, Zorin has offended by making Kirpichev's opponents too weak and too individual. The only strong opponent is his own father with whom, in the play, he quarrels irretrievably. His father was one of the "glorious revolutionary fighters" of the early days. And what seems to worry Literary Gazette as much as anything is the too-revealing opposition between the stern and idealistic old revolutionary and the corrupt and streamlined careerist of today.

In the end there is some attempt to give guidance. Literary Gazette wrestles with its conscience. "Of late not a few plays have been written and produced in which figure various kinds of shirkers and crooks, wives who degenerate into bourgeoisie and husbands who degenerate into bureaucrats. These types undoubtedly deserve to be shown on the stage, since they exist in actual life.

"What is bad is that along with honest and useful plays . . . there have also appeared some frankly speculative productions whose authors, while they pretend to give a satirical portrayal of the shortcomings of our way of life, actually display Soviet reality in a distorted form. These plays present neither an ardent affirmation of what is new and advance, or a genuine exposure of shortcomings such as would strengthen Soviet ideology and help our society to advance."

EASY FORMULA

So the new formula is: By all means show bad types on the stage, but blame it on the survival of bourgeoise instincts.

It is quite an easy formula to adopt. It gives novelists and playwrights more freedom in characterization than when Stalin was alive. But it does not make for a living drama. For just as there are good things produced by the Soviet way of life, so there are bad. And until the Government admits the real causes of the badness, and lets its artists speculate about them, there will be no cure.

From the point of view of the Soviet writer, a really vital problem is how to be good though a Commissar; but the Government will not have this. Power in the Soviet Union does not corrupt. So there is no problem. A leading citizen shown on the stage must either be utterly good (like Malenkov) or utterly corrupt (like Beria). There is no half-way house. There is only black and white.

White comes from the system; black from the heart of individual depravity. Truth, complicated and illusive, comes nowhere at all.

Economic Dependency Of Europe On United States Has Eased; Inflation Spree Been Checked

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—Eisenhower and Churchill are talking things over again this week — in an economic atmosphere that has changed markedly since their last meeting.

John Bull's needs aren't as urgent. Uncle Sam's purse isn't as bulging.

Political turmoil between the east and west may be greater today. But Europe's dollar gap isn't showing much now. And its industrial and currency problems are a lot less pressing.

There's even talk that in a few months sterling may again be strong enough to talk alone, freely convertible with the dollar—if a reserve fund to bolster it is set up, just in case.

GAINS IN TRADE

Europe's comparatively happy situation is due partly to the gains in trade and industry it has made during the time American production was slipping.

It also is due partly to the continued high contributions by the United States, measured in dollars. In spite of the policy of economy in the United States, dollars have flowed abroad in much greater volume than either Europeans or Americans anticipated a year ago.

The notion, widely held abroad, that when the American boom stubbed its toe, Europe would have another sinking spell like 1949's, hasn't come true. This time there's been scarcely a bobble on the other side of the Atlantic.

The United States is still the industrial and financial kingpin. But the economic dependency of its European allies isn't as great now as a few years back. And this may color some of the decisions to be made this week in Washington.

CHECKED INFLATION

The reasons Europe didn't go into a 1949-type tailspin this time, when United States business activity took a somewhat similar breather, are these:

Europe has succeeded in checking its inflation spree to a large extent. It has built up stronger gold and dollar reserves, and hence its currency is tougher.

In 1949 Europe's exports to the United States took a sharp tumble. Part of this was due to the inventory recession here. Much of it, however, was due to American buyers waiting for the expected currency devaluations abroad to come about—as they inevitably did. This time American imports fell off scarcely at all.

Now, too, the European nations are trading more freely with each other and are less dependent upon American importation of their goods.

UN Economists Warn Dangers Ahead

By SUSAN STRANGE

LONDON (ENS) — "Warning — Dangers Ahead" might well be the sub-title of the United Nations annual world economic report published recently.

United Nations economists evidently believe that the world — and particularly the Western world — is taking big risks with its present prosperity, and that it has not properly prepared itself, either internationally or within each country, to meet the great dangers which, along with great benefits, are inherent in such a highly interdependent economic system.

For the time being, they say, all is well. The year 1952-53 was in several respects one of the most satisfactory post-war years for world economy. Total production and consumption were at record levels, and in most countries unemployment was relatively low. Inflationary pressures were subsiding, and in some cases had been overcome. The post Korean war boom and slump had spent its force, and the easing of the world shortage of dollars and of other currency problems led to a general relaxation of trade restrictions.

A PRECARIOUS BALANCE

But this rosy picture of world prosperity "may well have been of only temporary significance." The balance between prosperity and depression is a precarious one, and governments have failed to provide themselves with the necessary balancing poles which would be needed if trouble suddenly blew up — as United Nations economic advisers think it well might.

In particular the report implies that western governments have failed to make the International Monetary Fund an effective system for overcoming temporary shortages of currency.

"In general," say the experts, "there is not sufficient flexibility in the world economy for it to withstand disturbances resulting from a substatial slackening in economic activity in any major trading country. In particular, international arrangements for dealing with the currency shortages that would arise in such a situation must be considered inadequate."

Action to smooth out fluctuations in the price of raw materials and other primary products has also been wanting. General progress towards solving the problem of unstable prices of primary commodities would necessitate further international consultation and agreement."

LOWEST STANDARDS

For in case of trouble it is the underdeveloped countries, whose standards of living are lowest, which would suffer most. The prices of their main exports have been shown by post-war experience to be exceptionally sensitive to the general economic climate. Even in the United States where large stocks of farm products have been piled up, there appears to be limits to stabilisation programs, if only the limits set by storage facilities. And in the underdeveloped countries similar action in 1952-53 failed "either because the proportion of total world supplies controlled by such countries was small, or because resources did not permit inventories to be accumulated for more than a relatively brief period, or finally because the balance of payments was adversely affected."

Hence the need for international action. At the moment there is no sign of such action either from the United States—where even the Randall Commission frowned on international commodity agreements — or from Britain, which since it left the International Wheat Agreement last year has shown no interest either in that or in any other commodity stabilisation scheme.

MIGHT FAIL TO ACT

But the main risk, says the report, is that important trading countries might fail to act with enough vigor to maintain full employment and to promote continued economic expansion. This, in the experts' opinion, is a crucial year, in which military expenditure is liable to level off and to cause a fall in the general level of industrial investment. At the same time the recent rather widespread decline in industrial investment in several countries also suggests that the heavy post-war demand for new plant and equipment may have reached a saturation point, where big inducements and government encouragement will be needed to stop the economic machine from a disastrous slow-down.

The greater part of the UN report deals, inevitably with the economic picture in the non-Communist world. But the economists do attempt a summary of changing economic conditions and policies in Russia and the Soviet satellites and in Communist China.

In theory this annual report is compiled to guide delegates to the United Nations Economic and Social Council. In practice, since every country's politicians and Press tend from time to time to become obsessed with the special problems and the particular point of view of their own economy, it has become in recent years a salutary annual antidote to narrow national assessments of economic trends — assessments which must in the world's present state be inadequate and even misleading.

Dies After Fall

CHATHAM (CP)—Henry LaBute eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis LaBute of Tilbury, died of a brain haemorrhage in hospital here Thursday, after he rode his bicycle into a parked car outside his home and fell head first to the pavement.

THE CONTROVERSIAL CULVERT, being built on the property of and by hotelman Donald McGillis, is taking shape. The 20-foot wide project will become the new Jackson Creek bed (left). Worried property owners south of King St. think it might be inadequate to carry off spring floods and have warned both the city and McGillis that they will hold them responsible for any flooding to their holdings. The culvert will underlay a new hotel parking lot and incorporate footings to support a four-storey building if required for that purpose.—(Examiner Staff Photo).

Denies Holding Back Data

By WALTER GRAY

FORT WILLIAM (CP) — E. A. Cash, head of the Fort William division of the Ontario highways department, said Thursday he was not attempting to hold back any information from the legislature's highways investigation committee.

And he denied he had received an order from head office in Queen's Park telling him to keep mum before the committee.

His denials came during a conference in his Fort William office while the committee was touring divisional facilities. The conference preceded today's scheduled session at the Fort William city hall.

FAIL TO SHOW UP

Some confusion arose at the committee's hotel headquarters over the scheduled arrival of departmental officials from Toronto. None had arrived yet. Committee chairman Kelso Roberts (PC—Toronto St. Patrick) said he hoped to be in touch with Toronto this morning for some explanation.

The committee on Thursday requested that officials with some information on the Fort William division prior to and after the investigation appear here today.

Up to late Thursday night the only Toronto arrivals were Duncan Gordon of J. D. Woods and Gordon Ltd., Toronto management consultants who made a study of the highways department; Peter Wright, counsel for the federal government who has been following the committee's proceedings, and Hollis Beckett (PC — York East), committee member.

Mr. Roberts said, however, the committee received considerable information Thursday during its tour of the divisional headquarters and there may not be a need for any Toronto witnesses.

CASH QUIZZED

Mr. Cash and William Lobraico, the new division clerk, offered information on divisional operations in the field and in the office.

Clare Mapledoram (PC — Fort William) asked Mr. Cash if he had received any written instructions "telling you not to tell anything at all."

"No, I'm not holding back any information," he replied.

The committee threw questions at Mr. Cash for two days while it travelled by bus to Atikokan, Terrace Bay and Marathon. On many occasions the divisional engineer, who last November replaced A. M. Mills who was suspended and charged with conspiracy, said he could not answer their questions.

Mr. Roberts assured Mr. Cash the committee did not come to Fort William to "hang anything on anybody," but was here to study divisional operations and where possible to recommend to the government changes which would improve those operations.

RAP CENTRALIZATION

Mr. Mapledoram said it was obvious the highways department should be decentralized. Opposition leader Farquhar Oliver agreed.

W. H. Collings (PC — Toronto Beaches) criticized the bid submitted by Wolfe Construction Ltd. for a contract involving six miles of highway east of Terrace Bay. The original estimate in 1949 was $291,000. During the life of the contract the Trans-Canada highway agreement was made and construction had to be altered to meet higher standards.

The original earth excavation estimates were 125,000 cubic yards. By August, 1953, they had been revised up to 355,000 cubic yards and the contract, not yet finalized, had been increased to $684,000.

Mr. Collings wondered why the original estimate of $291,000 was so comparatively low.

"Who's trying to fool who when they say they can build a road for $50,000 a mile?"

Rhee Determined To Map Policy

SEOUL (AP)—President Syngman Rhee, on the fourth anniversary of the outbreak of the Korean War, today urged the West "to resolve to use the courage and force necessary to win over an enemy determined on world conquest."

"Even if our friends hesitate, shutting their eyes to realities, we Koreans will not sheepishly wait until we have become Communist slaves," the South Korean leader said in a speech prepared for delivery at a mass rally in the capitaly.

He said South Korea will map a definite policy when its delegation returns from the Geneva conference. That meeting failed to achieve a peaceful settlement of Korean issues, and 16 Allied United Nations members broke off the talks.

The United States 8th Army and the Commonwealth Division ignored the anniversary except for keeping watch along the demilitarized zone.

Search For Twins

NEW YORK (AP)—The National Multiple Sclerosis Society has launched a search for identical twins, either or both of whom suffer from the disease, so it can study their identical backgrounds to find out if heredity and environment cause the disease of the central nervous system. Any such afflicted twins were asked to write its offices at 270 Park avenue here.

MIDLAND, Ont. (CP)—Kenneth J. Ellis, former principal of Victoria school, Owen Sound, has been appointed public school inspector for Simcoe northwest area by the department of education. Mr. Ellis, whose inspectorate covers Midland, Port McNicoll, Penetang separate school, Victoria Harbour and Coldwater, will make his headquarters here. He will take up his duties Sept. 1.

Miss Beverley Lonsbury gave two piano instrumentals. Mrs. Thom. Cooper and Mrs. Payne each conducted a contest.

Strawberries and cake was served by the hostesses, Mrs. H. Payne and Miss Clara McCracken.

Dog Winners

STRATFORD (CP)—Best working dog at a dog show here Thursday was a shetland sheepdog, Croft Saucy Sue, owned by W. J. Simpson of Kitchener. Best non-sporting dog was Grants Duchess, a boston terrier, owned by R. B. Davey of Guelph.

Discover 60% Of Alcoholics Skilled Workers

TORONTO (CP) — A social worker said Thursday "the picture of the alcoholic as a chronic social misfit or Skid Row bum is a distorted one."

Addressing the Canadian Conference on Social Work R. J. Gibbins, research associate with the Alcoholism Research Foundation of Ontario, reported the results of a 14-month survey of an Ontario county.

More than 60 per cent of the 698 alcoholics revealed in the survey were skilled or semi-skilled workers, white-collar workers, professional persons and business executives. Only 6.3 per cent were transient or casual workers.

There are 137,559 known alcoholics in Canada, Mr. Gibbins said. Based on an adult population of 8,700,740, the rate was 23 alcoholics to every 1,000 adult persons.

Miss Margaret Cork, chief psychiatric social worker at the Brookside Clinic, Toronto, said the wife of an alcoholic often has a great need of her own which may have led to her marrying a sick person in the first place and which may have increased through years of living with him.

More than 1,000 delegates from social welfare organizations across Canada are attending the conference, which will be followed Sunday by the International Conference on Social Work, to be attended by 1,500 additional delegates from 39 countries.

Dr. J. W. Willard, head of the research division of the federal welfare department, told a study group the federal and provincial governments should co-ordinate their methods in treating rehabilitation problems, so that "we don't have a lot of people on disability allowances who should have been rehabilitated."

Ormemee News

Congratulations from her friends in the village are extended to Miss Dorothy Jane Connell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irvine Connell, on winning the board of governors' busary. Miss Connell will work at Civic Hospital for a year and then plans to attend university.

Mr. Neil Skuse, teller at the Bank of Toronto, has been transferred to Cobourg.

Stopped To Argue

TORONTO (CP)—Martin Casone 37, ran over a garbage can with his car and stopped to argue with the owner. Police investigated the argument and found stolen plumbing material in the back of Casone's car. Thursday he was sentenced to two years' imprisonment for theft.

Likely To Spend Life In Jail For Thefts

Convicted on four charges of breaking, entering and theft in Peterborough district, and one in Uxbridge township, Kenneth Mitchell, 44, of Udney, (north of Lake Simcoe) was given a total of 15 years by Judge J. E. Pritchard in the Ontario county court this week. The judge imposed a three-year sentence in each of the five cases, and ordered that they be served concurrently. Mitchell will actually serve three years in the Kingston penitentiary, his third confinement there.

Mitchell was arrested by Peterborough police last November, following a series of thefts in the district.

Before Judge Pritchard, Mitchell was convicted of breaking, entry and theft of carpenter's tools from the home of Bert Campbell, Chemong Road, and of retaining stolen goods taken from the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. Norman, 435 Hillcrest Ave.

Some of the articles were produced in court by inspector of detectives William A. Clarke, who said that he had found them in a truck at Mitchell's home.

BOOTS IDENTIFIED

A pair of curling boots, identified as the property of Rae McWilliams, Chemong Road, were said to have been found in Mitchells' car by inspector Clarke. Also said to have been found in Mitchell's car were tools, valued at $260 and identified by William Purvis and William Brien of Peterborough. Mitchell was also convicted of breaking entry and thef from the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Hamilton, Uxbridge township.

Reviewing Mitchell's previous record, which dated back 27 years Judge Pritchard commented that the accused, a father of seven children, showed very little hope of reform.

"It seems, that in the absence of special effort on his part, Mitchell is content to spend his life in jail," he added.

NEW YORK (AP)—The 61-foot British lifeboat Aries arrived here Thursday after a rough 33-day crossing of the Atlantic, the 45-ton motor craft, with its four-man crew, sailed from Kingston-on-Thames May 22, and carries greetings to Kingston-on-Hudson, N.Y., which it will visit next Tuesday via the Hudson river.

PRECIOUS PEBBLE

BACK IN 1825 the Danish scientist Oersted produced the first pebble of metallic aluminum. Half a century passed before a technique was discovered for turning out the metal in quantity.

Modern processing of bauxite ore to make low-cost aluminum uses fantastic quantities of power. That is why Canada is one of the world's major aluminum suppliers. In Quebec province, smelters at Arvida, Shawinigan Falls, Isle Maligne and Beauharnois last year used nearly one-fifth of the country's total electrical output. And in British Columbia new sources of water power are feeding the pot lines of the new smelter at Kitimat. Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd. (Alcan).

RCAF Flight Cadets Graduate At RMC

KINGSTON (CP)—Flight cadets of the Reserve Officers' school, RCAF, situated at the Royal Military College here, graduated Thursday after a seven-weeks indoctrination course. Air Vice Marshal F. R. Miller of Ottawa, vice-chief of the air staff, was the reviewing officer of the 306 cadets.

About 200 of the cadets will leave RMC today and Saturday to begin flying training and take technical instruction at actual RCAF stations across Canada.

The cadets are all university students taking summer training with the RCAF. The ceremonies marked completion of their first basic course of instruction.

Says Patronage Not Practised By Government

OTTAWA (CP)Stanley Knowles (CCF — Winnipeg North Centre) said Thursday in the Commons that patronage such as is practised by the government in selecting operators of sub post offices disappeared long ago in any democracy worthy of the name.

Earlier, Alistair Stewart (CF—Winnipeg North) had criticized the practice of canvassing defeated Liberal candidates for recommendations on sub post office operators.

Mr. Knowles said he had obtained documents concerning appointments and recommendations in his constituency which are similar to those mentioned by Mr. Stewart.

He said it is clear the matter of post office patronage is foisted on defeated Liberals by the post office department.

COTE, WEIR DEFEND

Postmaster General Cote said in reply that the practice of asking recommendations from defeated candidates is followed because of a committee recommendation in 1932. It avoids the expense of a postal inspector making investigations and recommendations.

He said the Legion and others are also approached.

W. G. Weir, government whip, said he doesn't think there is anything wrong with the system.

MP's Widow

TORONTO (CP)—Mary Dorothy Bristol, 92, widow of Hon. Edmund Bristol, for many years Conservative member of Parliament for the old constituency of Toronto Centre, died Thursday. Born at Cobourg, she was the daughter of the late Hon. John Douglas Armor, former chief justice of Ontario and later puisne judge of the Supreme Court of Canada.

Norwood Club Presents Annual Social

NORWOOD (ENS)— The 50-50 Club of Norwood United Church held their annual social in the new exhibition building on the Norwood Fair grounds. Supper was served.

A regular ball game was held in the fair grounds between Norwood and Westwood, after which a program was presented in the exhibition building by the 50-50 Club.

Norwood gained a smashing victory over Westwood by a score of 15-3. The runs by Norwood were obtained by Boyd Kelly, Bob Garden (2,) Stuart Rusaw (2,) Ted Pidgen (2,) Bergen Payne (2,) Bill Garden (2,) Harry Wilford (2,) Neil Telford and Doug Lochhead.

The three runs by Westwood were obtained by Ray Lynch, Jimmie Morow and Paul Humphries.

PROGRAM

Bob Garden was master of ceremonies for the program. He thanked the East Peterbrough Agricultural Society for the use of the building.

Two selections were played by the Norwood Citizen's Band, conducted by Mr. R. M. Freeman. This is the band's third public appearance.

Mary Richardson from the Elgin district played a few selections on her piano accordian.

Richard Taylor sang two songs. Richard will be given an audition by radio station WWVA in West Virginia.

Bob Garden read a poem.

The Olde Tyme Orchestra played a few square dance tunes. The orchestra was made up of Bill Garden on the piano, John Knox with his violin and Sandy McNab, Arnold Perry and John Auckland on guitars. The band played two more selections.

Bob Hill of Havelock went through a juggling routine with Mrs. Harry Kavangh accompanying him on the piano.

NEW PROOF THAT MILLIONS CAN END THE NEED FOR LAXATIVES

—find relief from constipation this safe, natural way—without the injurious effects of repeated laxative use.

With all the progress of medical science over the past 30 years, authorities say there is no longer any reason why irregularity should be our most widespread human malady.

Nor is there any reason for developing the habitual use of harsh laxatives—of dosing with one preparation after another in the vain hope of finding, in some potion or pill, the "secret" of lasting relief.

Long-continued study of the problem has shown that one of the most common causes of irregularity is lack of bulk in the diet. And when this is the case, the common-sense correction is to be found not in the drug store but in your food store!

IT HAS LONG BEEN A MEDICALLY RECOGNIZED FACT THAT NATURE HAS PROVIDED, IN THE NATURAL FOODS MEN WERE INTENDED TO EAT, ALL THE ELEMENTS NECESSARY FOR THE LIFE-LONG AVOIDANCE OF COMMON CONSTIPATION.

One of these elements is natural fibrous bulk, or vegetable cellulose, which normally and naturally aids the rhythmic process of elimination.

In no natural food is this natural bulk so ideally found as in the outer layers, or bran, of the whole wheat kernel which, as you know, is lost in modern milling.

Because of the known value of bran in promoting regularity the Kellogg Company has produced a complete, whole bran—with nothing taken away to lessen its effectiveness—sold under the name of Kellogg's All-Bran, the natural laxative cereal. How effective is All-Bran? This has been demonstrated in a series of systematic clinical studies reported in leading medical journals.

In one study, 135 people with known delayed bowel function were given one ounce of All-Bran daily for one week. They were studied clinically and with X-ray with tests made before, during and after they ate the All-Bran.

OF THE 135 PEOPLE, 107 SHOWED DEFINITE CLINICAL IMPROVEMENT IN JUST 7 DAYS.

IN A FOLLOW-UP STUDY, BETTER THAN 6 OUT OF EVERY 7 PATIENTS WHO WERE GIVEN ALL-BRAN IMPROVED.

The greatest advantage of All-Bran is that it corrects the cause of irregularity due to insufficient bulk. Chemical or drug-type laxatives, on the other hand, are intended only for overnight relief of a temporary stoppage.

When people use these products habitually—in a way that laxative makers never intended—they punish their digestive system in a way that nature never intended. Instead of correcting the cause, they often actually make their condition worse.

If you think you must take a laxative preparation occasionally, do so. But do it wisely. Read the instructions completely. AVOID EXCESSIVE USAGE. But for natural and lasting relief put your trust in nature. Just eat daily a one-ounce serving of All-Bran for breakfast and drink plenty of water.

This All-Bran plan has helped millions to re-establish and to maintain healthful regularity. Why not you?

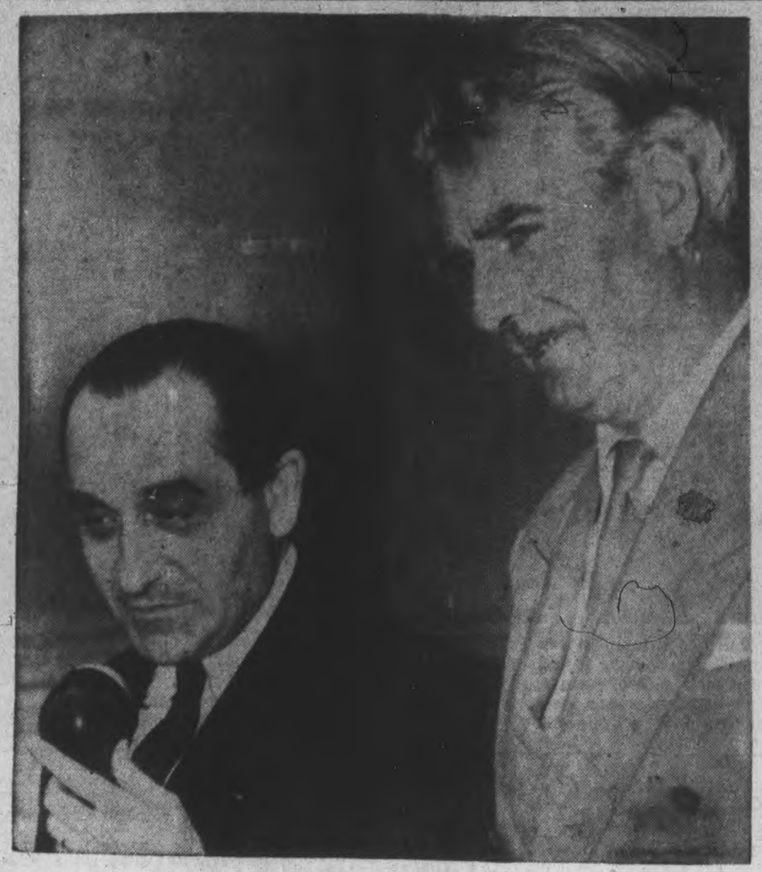
Must Learn To Take No For An Answer

Cecil Crumb, 561 Patterson St., won dismissal of a privately-laid charge of creating a disturbance in the F. W. Woolworth store June 12, but was told by magistrate to "stop pestering" his former girl friend, or he might be in "serious trouble."

The charge grew out of a fracas in the store at 5:35 June 12 when Crumb entered, ordered a coffee, was told the lunch counter had closed five minutes before, addressed his former girl friend and was ignored.

Doreen May Rogers, a waitress at the lunchcounter and plaintiff in the action, said Crumb told her: "I'll come around and make you talk to me."

Then, Miss Rogers testified, Crumb came around the counter, raised his arm threateningly, was told to leave by the supervisor and departed with the threat: "I'll see you outside."



ABUSIVE LANGUAGE

Norma Clarke, a friend of Miss Rogers and a co-worker at the lunchcounter, confirmed that Crumb had used abusive and threatening language.

Miss Rogers phoned police, but Crumb did not make good his threat to talk to Miss Rogers further outside.

The magistrate told Crumb that he "would have to learn to take 'No' for an answer" in his relations with women. He said Crumb had "no business annoying this or any other girl" and said that he might "endanger Miss Rogers' employment."

After the charge was dismissed Miss Rogers told the magistrate she wanted some sort of protection against Crumb, alleging he was "always bothering" me. Crumb was told to desist lest he get into more serious difficulties.

City Spending In 5 Months Exceeds Million

It cost $1,193,359.62, exclusive of debt charges, to operate the various departments of civic administration during the first five months of this year.

This represented not quite 43 per cent of total appropriations for the year amounting to $2,811,707.84, so that spending at the end of May was running about one and a half per cent over appropriations.

DEMANDS REDUCED

It was not a question of departmental overspending, however, as the board of education makes no payments towards teachers' salaries during July and August and hence its demands are reduced during those months. At present rate expenditures should be well within the budget by September.

Total paid the board of education during the period up to the end of May was $470,000 out of a total approriation of $829,020.88, according to the monthly report of city treasurer A. S. Couper.

Spending under the general rates was well within the budget at $538,971.68, about 36 per cent of a total appropriation of $1,495,961.02.

Other spending from special rates was $35,505.31 for garbage disposal from an appropriation for the year of $96,592.64; $21,782.53 for welfare from an appropriation of $46,000; $72,626.55 for Civic Hospital of an appropriation of $214,010; $54,473.55 by the separate school board of an appropriation of $130,123.30.

REVENUES INCREASED

City revenues were given a slight fillip during the period of the report by the receipt of $1,427.20 more than was estimated from the utilities commission and Ontario Hydro in the form of payments in lieu of taxes. The city had budgeted for $14,000 from this source, but actually received $15,427.20.

Also found was $48 from sign licences. The city had estimated receipts at $500 for the year, but they had already reached $548 by the end of May.

With the year not half gone, receipts from parking meters were already more than half what was estimated. The city expected $40,000 from this source during the year, but had received $21,403.54 by the end of May.

Discuss Protection Against Radio-Activity

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal-provincial talks have been launched on methods to protect the health of Canadians handling radio-active equipment.

The discussions result from the increasing use of isotopes and other radio-active substances produced at the Chalk River, Ont., atomic energy plant in the industrial and medical fields. Protection is necessary because of the deadly rays given off by radio-active materials.

The annual report of the atomic energy control board tabled Thursday in the Commons said the talks are being held to deal with the "question of health precautions in the handling and use of radio-active substances outside the Chalk River project."

4 Bronze Medals Awarded For Heroism

HAMILTON (CP) — Award of four bronze medals for heroism was announced Thursday by the Royal Canadian Humane Association.

They go to Anthony J. Lund of Charlottetown, Nathaniel Osmond of Millertown, Nfld., Donald Edward Martin, 14, of Paris, Ont., and Marcel Dupas, another young boy living at Okanagan Landing, B.C.

The association also announced award of 32 parchment certificates for brave rescues across the country.

FOUGHT FLAMES

The bronze medal awarded Anthony Lund was for the rescue of Mrs. James D. Campbell from her burning home in Charlottetown March 1, 1952. Lund arrived with the firemen and persisted in a search of the house until he found the woman lying in an upstairs room. He dragged her through a blazing hallway and down the stairs with burning wood falling on them. Both spent some time in hospital suffering from the effects of smoke and burns.

Nathaniel Osmond won the bronze medal for rescuing Albert Slade from drowning at Exploits dam near Millertown, Nfld., Oct. 21, 1953. They were working with a crane to remove a 33-foot boat from the water when the crane tipped over. Osmond jumped in the water and Slade was carried under. Osmond, although a poor swimmer kept Slade's head above water and managed to get him to the crane where they awaited rescue.

Donald Martin receives the bronze medal for the rescue of Stanley Baker in the Nith river at Canning, Ont., June 10, 1953. The Baker boy was carried by the current into a deep hole and Martin went to his aid. He had almost reached shore with Baker when the latter broke away and sank to the bottom. Martin finally got the boy to shore.

The bronze medal went to young Marcel Dupas for the rescue of two-year-old Diane Pearl Hunt in Okanagan lake in July, 1951, and another heroic feat in August, 1951, when he rescued Barbara Feuring at Okanagan Landing.

Velma Powers Bride Of Wm. Sheppard

Marriage vows were pledged and rings exchanged in a lovely wedding setting of summer flowers at George Street United church at twelve o'clock noon last Saturday when Velma Marjorie Powers became the bride of William Reid Sheppard. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley I. Powers of Pontypool and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Sheppard of Peterborough.

The marriage was performed by the Rev. Arnold A. Mathews and traditional wedding music was played by Mr. Charles Allen, organist. Mr. Robert H. Aspinall sang "O Perfect Love" before the bride entered the church and "A Wedding Prayer" during the signing of the register. Immediately after the vows were pledged he sang "The Lord's Prayer".

The bride was given in marraige by her father and looked lovely in an orignal gown of white brocaded satin and nylon tulle. The brocaded satin bodice of the gown was strapless and the long torso waistline was caught with tiny covered buttons to a very full skirt of nylon tulle. It was topped with a brocaded satin filled jacket featuring a stand up collar. Her chapel length veil was caught with a tiny brocaded headdress and she carried a cascade of white carnations, stephanotis and sweetheart roses.

Miss Donelda Powers was maid of honour for her sister and Miss Jean Sheppard, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid. Their taffeta gowns were of matching design in shades of coral and agua marine. They wore matching taffeta mittens and pleated headdress and carried crescent-shaped bouquets of white chrysanthemums and carnations.

MR. AND MRS. WM. SHEPPARD

Master Jerry Porter, from Bowmanville, was ring bearer and carried the rings on a white satin cashion. Mr. Robert Sheppard was groomsman for his brother and the ushers were Mr. Philip Giannini from Toronto and Mr. Ian Smith of Peterborough.

The reception was held in the Sunday School auditorium where the bride's mother received, wearing a gown of midnight blue crepe with lace panels, and pink and black accessories. The groom's mother also received wearing a gown of blue lace with pink and white accessories. Their corsages were of pink carnations.

When leaving later for a honeymoon in Muskoka the bride wore an American beauty rose dress with navy and white accessories and a corsage of white carnations and stephanotis. Mr. and Mrs. Sheppard will live at 91 Parkhill Road.

IT WAS A HIPLINE TEA, but Rosalie Todd found a way to beat the tapeline by sitting down. She may have fooled herself, for some little girls, unlike their elders, have a waistline greater than their hipline. Tea convener Mrs. George Close, at whose home on Arndon Avenue the event was held, is seen at left. President of the Grace church choir, Mrs. Nels Foster, is measuring Rosalie, and Mrs. I. G. Pollock, wife of the minister is at right. The choir held this tea to raise money for their new gowns.

Hipline Tea Adds To Funds Of Grace Choir

The tapeline determined just how much it cost to attend the Hipline Tea held by the choir of Grace United church on Thursday afternoon. The average take was from 35 to 40 cents, as the ladies attending seemed to be regrettably slim of hip.

Proceeds of the event will go toward the new gowns for the choir, who want to be looking their best in the new church when it opens in several months.

Mrs. George Close gave the use of her home and expensive lawn for the occasion and also acted as tea convener.

Above the tables and chairs set on the lawn for guests' convenience, Mrs. Close had strung some gay colored balloons, but by tea time most of them had disappeared. The hot sun and the birds were found responsible for the "popping."

Pleasing recorded music made conversation at the tables easy as fruits cups and bread and fancy cakes were enjoyed with tea.

The tea table, placed under a spreading tree, was attractive with a deep green cloth and pale green tapers and summer flowers in the centre, Mrs. Wilbert Harrison and Mrs. Wm. Turner filling the cups.

Mrs. Alice McWilliams, Miss Lois Corner, Miss Joan Guthrie, Mrs. Delbert Keen, Miss Sylvia Waldie, Mrs. A. Downer, and Miss Sheila Pitchford were receiving. the plates were filled by Mrs. A. Patton, Mrs. B. Hoey, Mrs. E. McKinstry and Mrs. Ed. Cotton and Mrs. Harry Corner and Mrs. Jas. Waldie replenished the cups.

Tea cup reading by Mrs. H. McMahon was an added attraction.

The tape measure was wielded by Miss Joan Cunningham and Mrs. J. Monks collected the fees.

Choir president Mrs. Nels Foster and Mrs. I. G. Pollock welcomed the guests.

Little folk attending with their mothers were intrigued by huge balls and large size rubber animals toys scattered throughout the garden.

Campaign Of Tea Parties Elected Lady To Commons

MOOSE JAW (CP) — Margaret Aitken, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for the Ontario constituency of York-Humber, substituted the parlor for the public platform in the federal election campaign last August.

Miss Aitken, in an interview here while attending the annual convention of the Saskatchewan Progressive Conservative Association said she did not make a single speech at a public meeting throughout her campaign.

"Instead, I attended coffee or tea parties from 11 in the morning until 11 at night, day after day, until I had pretty well met all the women in my constituency."

Miss Aitken says the tea and coffee-drinking marathon worked like this:

A woman on each street in the riding was contacted and invitations were sent out by her to all other women in a block to drop in for morning coffee or afternoon tea. Miss Aitken met them informally, answered their questions, and "just plain got to know them all."

It proved most effective, Miss Aitken says.

Her unusual campaign was aided by 20 members of the Toronto Women's Press Club. Although some were not of the same politics, they stumped for Miss Aitken, also a newspaper woman. In their leisure hours they mapped out the constituency street by street and went on a door-to-door informal canvass.

Miss Aitken says she still hasn't made many speeches in the House of Commons. She admits she was "a trifle nervous" when she made the first. And she receives the same heckling from opposing members that they accord to male opponents.

"They allow you a little leeway for your maiden speech and listen more or less in respectful silence," Miss Aitken says. "But after that you're fair game for heckling from both sides, whether you are male or female."

Miss Aitken says she spent the first weeks of her parliamentary career boning up on procedure, but still has a lot to learn after her first year in the Commons. She says she doesn't believe politics have a specific women's angle.

She still keeps up her outside work. Her daily column in the Toronto Telegram, "Between You and Me," is a light resume of behind-the-scenes events. She has written a book on her political career called "Hey, Ma! I Did It."

THE ENGAGEMENT of Miss Eleanor Carleton to Mr. Charles R. Moult of Toronto has been announced. The wedding is to take place in Christ Anglican church at Norwood on Saturday,

Miss V. Johnston Is New President Of Soroptimists

Miss Verna Johnston became the 9th president of the Soroptimist Club of Peterborough when the annual installation of officers took place following the dinner meeting Thursday evening.

The installation was conducted by past president Miss Gene Clark with the Soroptimists' pledge for tolerance, sincerity, wisdom, friendship and service being renewed by all members in the impressive candle-lighting ceremony.

Elected to serve in executive capacity with Miss Johnston until June, 1955, are Miss Isabel Sutherland, as first vice-president; Miss Elva Johnston, as second vice-president; Miss Rose Williams, as recording secretary; Miss Mignon Mayneord, as corresponding secretary, and Miss Marjorie Nesbitt, as treasurer.

Four directors, who each may chair a committee for the year, are Miss Elsie Bennett, Miss Harriet McGeary, Miss Flora Metcalfe and Mrs. Susan Fraser.

Miss Johnston accepted the president's pin and the gavel, and spoke briefly in appreciation of the honor bestowed on her. She is looking forward to celebration of the 10th annviersary of the club early in 1955, which promises to be an outstanding event with all past presidents still active members of the club.

To be a Soroptimist one must be the highest executive woman in the field of endeavour in which one is classified. On retirement from business the member must retire from the club.

Dinner for 30 members attending was served at Mrs. Pearl Clayton's lodge on Lake Chemong. Afterward the Soroptimists were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Harrison at their cottage nearby with Misses Grace and Myrtle Sargent the hostesses.

A puppet show was the entertainment feature of the evening.

THE EXPERTS SAY:

Intriguing New Sandwiches Can Pep Up Receptions

By PAULINE KENNEDY

TORONTO (CP) — Summer means romance and glowing brides. It can also mean glowering wedding guests picking their way through dull, uninspiring reception food.

The Bakery Foods Foundation of Canada has come up with some exotic sandwich suggestions to brighten the inevitable showers, trousseau teas and receptions. Most outstanding recipes are those for the provocatively named "double ring," and "flower pot," sandwiches.

Double ring sandwiches: two hard-cooked eggs, chopped; 1-3 cup chopped, cooked bacon; 3 tablespoons mayonnaise or salad dressing; 12 slices of bread; 2 tablespoons soft butter or margarine; 1 dozen slices stuffed green olives.

Directions: combine chopped eggs, bacon and mayonnaise. Cut each slice of bread into two 2-inch rounds with a cookie cutter. Then cut the centre from 12 (half) of the rounds to form circles. Spread butter on bread rounds, then spread with one tablespoon of the egg-bacon filling. Place a circle of bread over egg-bacon filling and put an olive slice in the centre of each circle. The cut-out "centres" may be spread with filling and garnished for additional open face sandwiches. Yield: 1 dozen sandwiches.

SOMETHING DIFFERENT

Flower pot sandwiches: 36 one-inch cubes of white bread; 1 three ounce package cream cheese; 1 tablespoon of milk; 3 dozen whole strawberries, hulls on.

Directions: pull part of the centre out of each bread cube with a pair of tweezers to make the flower pots. Combine cream cheese and milk. Spread cream cheese over the sides and top rim of each bread cube. Make crosswise cuts in the pointed top of each strawberry and spread them open like flowers, leaving the hull on. Place a strawberry flower in the centre of each bread cube. Yield: 36 sandwiches.

ODD VARIATIONS

On the subject of weddings and food, the wedding cake tradition has some odd variations in history.

In ancient Rome the ornately decorated cake used to be broken over the bride's head. It was part of the "confarreatio" or eating-together ceremony invented to celebrate the nuptial vows.

In England bridal cake was originally made of rich and aromatic ingredients. It was covered with an icing of sugar and almonds symbolizing pleasure and pain of marriage.

The cake was served as a good luck charm for the bridesmaids. It was cut into small pieces which were passed through the ring nine times by the bridegroom. Each bridesmaid received a token piece. The idea was that if the bridesmaid placed the cake under her pillow she ended up dreaming of her future husband.

Placed 400 Seeing-Eye Dogs In Hands Of Blind People

VICTORIA (CP) — Mrs. Bessie Fowler, blind since 1934, is one of three women members of Lions Club International because of "her outstanding community service."

With her on a vacation visit to Victoria was her seeing-eye dog, Roddie, seven-year-old doberman pinscher, her guide and friend for six years.

Mrs. Fowler was honored by the Lions for teaching braille, raising funds to provide guide dogs and campaigning for the John Milton Society which supplies a religious magazine to the world's blind.

With her husband, L. L. Fowler, chief mechanic for the public works department, Detroit, Mich., and the late Glenn Staines, one of North America's doberman experts, she has been responsible for placing 400 seeing-eye dogs in the hands of the blind.

HAS SHARP MEMORY

Roddy has sharp wits, good manners and a first-class memory. After Mrs. Fowler has visited a person twice she has only to pronounce the person's name and Roddie will lead her straight to his office or house.

In a hotel the bell boy has only to take Mrs. Fowler and Roddie to a room once, and he will go back there on command. He takes Mrs. Fowler to the elevator, steers her around puddles and butts a path with his nose through masses of pedestrians on the street.

"I feel as safe with Roddie as if I had a person guiding me," she said.

All business when the harness is on, Roddie is ready for a fight or a frolic once it is removed.

"RIGHT IN YOUR OWN BACK YARD," as the old song says, there's a summer of safe fun for the children. "Water play," highly restricted most of the year, is an all-ages favorite for nearly all children, and even a good sudsing can be made into a game.

Turn Small Children Loose In Your Own Back Yard

Summer is the time and the back yard is the place to relax the rules of playtime procedure for small children.

Some of the prescribed routines that must be followed indoors can be set aside in warm weather to the mutual benefit of a busy homemaker and her offspring.

"Water play," for example, is a ready-made outdoor pastime. Nursery-school teachers have told me frequently that small children seldom get enough "water play." With some reason, I think, because few of us can permit a child to dabble and splash to his heart's content indoors.

On warm, sunny days, however, the picture changes. Even a toddler will enjoy patting and splashing his hands in a little pan of water. A small wading pool is fun for older children, but so, we discovered, is an old dishpan with a couple of inches of water in it.

It can serve as a lake for "boats" made from twigs and leaves, as a washtub for dolls' clothes and as the source for the prime ingredient for mud pies.

Naturally when small children are playing around a pool you must keep an eye on them. I prefer to add water to pool or pan as it is needed rather than fill up the container all at once.

If your kitchen can-opener slices can tops off smoothly, save the empties for mud-pie molds, dippers and "measuring" cups. I also like flexible plastic cups and old wooden mixing spoons as useful tools for the grubby-dabblers.

These utensils don't 'get hot to the touch, are almost unbreakable and their rounded edges mean fewer hurts if one child takes a crack at another.

Left-over soap slivers and a sponge can generate a sudsy scrubdown outdoors that's fun (and cleansing) even for children who protest identical treatment in the bathtub.

Instead of insisting on prompt attendance at the lunch table, try carrying lunch to the players in the cool of the porch or under a shady tree. Play will cease with fewer squawks, and the kitchen stays considerably neater.

I find that a tomato basket, lined with paper napkins, makes a convenient container for carrying and serving sandwiches, fruit, vegetables and hard-boiled eggs. These, together with milk, form the backbone of a nutritious and practically work-free meal.

Let the children help themselves from the basket, and teach them to drop the rinds, shells and crusts directly into a paper sack. All the cleanup you'll have to do is to consign the trash to the garbage can.

The children of course, won't miss a picnic table. Hungry young ones eat anywhere, anyplace and anytime, with or without a special invitation.

However, it's easy to improvise one, and you'd better do so. Otherwise, plan to make up a picnic lunch ample enough for all the dogs and cats in the neighborhood, plus several thousand ants and all their insect uncles.

Just upend a cardboard carton, and use clean paper or an old dish towel for a cloth. You'll not need to bring out the family linen and sterling for the hungry back-yard set.

DOROTHY DIX:

Girl 17 Is Most Defiant Threatens To Leave Home

DEAR MISS DIX: My husband has five brothers and sisters, all married and widely scattered across the United States. For the past few years his mother and father have been travelling back and forth from one married offspring to another. They stay six months or a year in one home, then become dissatisfied and move on. All the children are very much devoted to their parents, who are very easy to get along with, and there has never been a complaint (to my knowledge) from either side. Any one of the children, including the in-laws, would be very happy to have the parents settle with us. Why, then, can't they be satisfied in one place? My father-in-law usually manages to get work in the town he's currently visiting; he's an expert carpenter and cabinetmaker. This is an additional reason why we just can't understand the restlessness of the older folks, who are in their early sixties.

Gladys T.

A SPLENDID IDEA

ANSWER: You should be rejoicing instead of complaining. Here are two older people who have made a splendid adjustment of their later years, and you're dissatisfied! Either you're unreasonable or there's something in the situation that hasn't been disclosed. Could it be that Mom and Dad are so very useful or so generous with time and money that each family wants to keep them? Apparently it isn't the condition in each individual home that causes dissatisfaction in the older people, but a strong desire to get on and see how the next growing family is progressing.

Since the children are so widely scattered, seeing them all even once a year would involve more travel than is feasible; hence the parents have hit upon the excellent scheme of making lengthy visits. Apparently they are wary too, about spacing their stays so the welcome is never worn out in any one home. Perhaps in a few years they will tire of this wandering life and decide to settle down in one place and have their children visit them. Meanwhile, Mom and Dad are satisfying what may be a long time desire to travel. They're keeping in touch with children and grandchildren, and through it all maintaining complete independence. They must be blessed with health and some income to keep up this ideal situation, but while it losts be grateful, not resentful.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am very much in love with a man in service, who also has declared his love for me. However, he has told me he was separated from his wife, but I have now learned that there has acually been no talk of separation between them He wants to marry me, but is afraid she won't consent to a divorce. Should I continue seeing him?

Natalit.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: No. no, a thousand times. Don't continue seeing this man who has already proven himself a liar and a disloyal husband. Someone else's husband is not for you; find your own young man.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I have been attracted to a man in my office. He's never asked for a date, though he teases me a lot and is very friendly. One day we were talking about food and I said I was a good cook. He told me I could cook him a steak dinner sometime, and I agreed—all in fun, of course. However, he has continued to talk about it. Do you think this is his way of asking for a date in order to keep it a secret from his girl friend? She also works in the office. Tina.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Your assumption is undoubtedly right. I'm sure you wouldn't want to poach on another girl's property, so you'd better let all talk of the dinner drop. Of course, the young man may be thinking only of the suggested meal — delicious home-cooked steak dinners don't come one's way every day. Better save your talents for some other boy.

Readers' Friday Column Conducted By Mary Moore

QUESTION: . . . have you a recipe for old-fashioned pea soup with ham bone . . . the corn flakes pudding was good but I would like it again. They tell me I make a good baked rice pudding with eggs, but I think it can be improved on, if I had your recipe . . your old - fashioned recipe without eggs is delicious . . I noticed you had much comment in your column on milk curdling in scalloped potatoes, I heat the milk before pouring on potatoes so never have any trouble. What causes an egg omelet to fall when it gets to the table? Mine rise nicely but go flat when served. Have used so many of your recipes and have had wonderful success. I could eat that Scalloped Tomatoes every two weeks without getting tired of it. Vera A. R.

ANSWER: That scalloped tomatoes recipes came from my cooking school teacher of my youth. I think it's a honey too. You will have to tell me more about the Corn Flakes pudding. I can't locate it. Are you sure it was mine? Tell me about when it appeared and what ingredients you can remember.

OLD - FASHIONED PEA SOUP

(with ham bone)

Wash 1 lb. yellow split peas in sieve and soak overnight in 8 cups cold water in cool place. Do not drain. Add 1 bay leaf, 1 medium small onion sliced thin, 1 stalk celery chopped finely, the ham bone or if you do not have one, 2-inch cube fat salt pork chopped finely, 1½ teaspoons salt, ⅛ to ¼ teaspoon pepper (amount of pepper depends on taste). Simmer until peas are tender and cooked to a mush. Fish out the bay leaf and the bone and taste. It may require more salt to suit your taste I never strain this soup because we like the bits of onion and celery in it. On the second day it is improved, and sometimes to change it a little I add milk or cream—especially if I want to stretch it—for it is quite thick on the second day.

I think to be successful a rice pudding with eggs has to be a custard type of pudding made with cooked rice. Here's how:

BAKED RICE CUSTARD

One and one-half cups cooked rice, ½ cup brown sugar or white if you prefer), 2 tablespoons butter, 2 eggs, 3 cups milk, ¾ cup mixed raisins, currants and dates or just one of them, 1 teaspoon vanilla or grated lemon rind. Separate whites from yolks of eggs and mix all ingredients except whites. Pour into buttered baking dish, and stand dish in larger dish containing hot water. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. until custard is set. Make a meringue by beating the whites until stiff then beating in 2 tablespoons sugar. Spread over baked pudding and return to oven to bake meringue until it is tinged with gold.

All omelets will fall as they begin to cool, when taken to table. There is no way to prevent it that I know of. The following recipe produces a puffy omelet that stays as well risen as possible.

PUFFY OMELET

Beat the yolks of 4 eggs until very light and lemon colored and add ½ teaspoons salt, shake of pepper and ¼ cup milk. Beat the whites until they are stiff and will stand in soft peaks, not dry. Heat the heavy frying pan and add 2 tablespoons butter. When butter is hot and bubbling, cut and fold the whites into the yolk mixture and immediately turn into pan, spread evenly, and reduce heat at once. Cook slowly until mixture is set, then place in moderate oven or under broiler to dry top off and very delicately brown. Crease through centre, carefully fold over and slip out onto hot platter. Serve at once. Chopped parsley added to the mixture when whites are folded in makes a pretty addition, and tastes good too.

To clasp his hand in the better land,
Never to part again.

Firemen Adopt

"I could see plainly for a distance of about 12 feet in clear water," said Harrison. "Bottles and cans were visible. I could even read the label on an Orange Crush bottle that had been thrown down there."

Ray, Fraser and Bloom all agreed that with a little practice (they all wanted to try it in deeper water) it would be a handy accomplishment and more efficient than the old method of dragging for a body.

That's why Chief Sorrie started it.

SPENT WHOLE DAY

"One time, last summer, we were out all day dragging for a body, even though witnesses were able to point to the exact spot where the man disappeared," said Chief Sorrie. "We must have gone over the spot a dozen times but the drags just didn't take hold. This is a much more efficient way, providing people know where the body is."

"There's also a chance of saving a life if the fire department get there in time," said the chief. "In Inverlea Park, for instance, there's a fire alarm box. If somebody goes down and the alarm comes in quickly we will despatch the boat, an inhalator and two Scott Air-Paks. In the three man crew a couple of the men will be underwater swimmers.

"It's a matter of speed, but it's certainly worth a try."

At present the underwater technique will not be used when the water is freezing. But if the experiment is successful a real frogman's gear may be purchased.

Gradually we're trying to sort the men out so they can do the job they're suited for," said Chief Sorrie. "Sort of job evaluation.

"Our first tests have been a success so we'll continue this underwater swimming training."

Rent Survey Surprises Committee

The city didn't know when it was well off.

As owner of the market building, the city is landlord for proprietors of stores on the ground floor. A few weeks ago, one of these tenants told city council he wanted to carry out extensive alterations to his premises and would like a longer-term lease. So council authorized the property committee to negotiate five-year leases with the present tenants.

It was naturally thought by members of the committee that if the tenants were to be given longer leases, the schedule of rents should be "adjusted upwards."

But before fixing the new rentals, they ordered a survey of rents made, to see approximately what they would ask for.

SURVEY REPORT

The report of the survey was presented to the committee Thursday afternoon. It established a scale of rentals for neighboring properties on a footage basis.

When the two scales were compared it was discovered that, with one exception, the city was charging more rent on short-term leases than neighboring proprietors were paying on five-year leases with renewal options.

After a few mild expressions of astonishment, the committee authorized city cleark E. A. Outram to negotiate the new leases.

Riding Horse 17,000 Miles

LACOLLE, Que. (CP) — Ana Beker of Argentina got her horses across the Canadian border here today and started on the last lap of her 17,000-mile horseback jaunt from Buenos Aires to Ottawa.

She expects to reach Montreal Sunday and will spend a day there before heading for the capital. The 36-year-old blonde was cleared through United States and Canadian customs Thursday. But Canadian immigration authorities corralled one of her two horses as a possible disease carrier. The horse had sores, cut and bruises along its sides — incurred in a corral accident at Scroon Lake, N.Y., earlier this week, Miss Beker said.

Dr. J. J. Gagnon, department of agriculture veterinary at St. Johns, Que., took blood tests and cleared the animal this morning. Senorita Beker, who speaks Spanish and German but no English, undertook the ride to prove women can achieve any goal they set their minds to as well as men.

She has spent the past 3½ years on the ride.

First Hurricane Starts Season In Texas

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Alice, the first hurricane of the season, sprang up suddenly in the Gulf of Mexico and swept over Brownsville and the lonely Mexican coast today.

It wasn't a big blow as hurricanes go. Winds at the centre were reported 80 miles an hour, just five miles above hurricane strength.

One man was injured in Brownsville when winds, which blew in gusts up to 56 miles an hour, knocked off a crossbar on a power line. The crossbar hit him on the head.

Flood Crest Begins Dropping

DES MOINES, Ia. (AP) — The Des Moines river's record flood crest slowly receded today, and weary levee workers were cheered by the news that the end of their long battle against the stream is in sight.

Engineers who directed the three-day fight to hold the unruly river out of major residential and business areas now are confident that the dikes will hold.

The Des Moines, which reached its apparent crest of 30.19 feet at 7 a.m. Thursday, had fallen about a foot by 5 a.m. today. But the weather bureau said it should drop to "bankful" stage of 23 feet by midnight tonight.

Emphasize Trend "Buy Canadian"

FREDERICTON (CP)—A "Buy Canadian trend" will be emphasized during the 61st annual meeting of the National Council of Women beginning today at the University of New Brunswick.

The more than 100 delegates attending from across Canada will also discuss and vote on resolutions dealing with the Canadian tariff, taxes and the general unemployment situation. Housing will also be a top priority subject of discussion.

The council's concern has been aroused over unemployment and the recent decline in the textile industries which it considers might be partially relieved by the purchase of more Canadian-made goods.

Defence Contracts

OTTAWA (CP) — Contracts totalling $11,959,585 were issued by the department of defence production and Defence Construction Limited during the last half of May.

The 172 contracts included one for $439,535 to H. J. McFarland Construction Company Limited, Picton, for a mess hall.

Indigent Patients Costing City $7,537 In 5 Months

Hospital care for indigent patients cost the city $7,537.05 more during the first five months of 1954 than it did during the same period last year.

The increase was due partly to the action of the Ontario legislature in its recent session when it raised the statutory amounts payable by municipalities to hospitals for indigent patient care. In the case of Peterborough, payments were raised from $3.50 to $5.25 a day for each patient.

Actually, the drain on the city treasury will not be as great as the figures indicate, because the city has guaranteed to make up any deficit in Civic Hospital's budget. But the new legislation has resulted in increased payments to St. Joseph's Hospital of $1,294.75 this year.

Total payments to Civic Hospital to the end of May were $11,232.40, an increase of $5,120.15 over the same five months of 1953. Payments to St. Joseph's Hospital were $4,623.35, compared with $3,501.20 last year, exclusive of the amount of the $1.75 increase.

The increase in the amount of payments added another $1,294.75 to the St. Joseph's account between January 1 and April 30, to bring the total to $5,918.10, an inchease of $2,416.90, making the total increase to the two hospitals $7,537.05 over last year.

City clerk E. A. Outram told Ald. Stan McBride's welfare committee Thursday that several municipalities were preparing resolutions asking the legislature in the future not to pass legislation affecting municipal budgets after the muncipal budgets had been set.

Although the arrangement to guarantee Civic Hospital deficits means that increased payments in that case will be a matter of bookkeeping, Ald. McBride pointed out it was going to put a strain on the welfare committee's allocation from this year's budget.

Welfare administrator A. G. Metheral reported that so far this year the welfare department had spent a total of $30,788.43, of which $14,995.86 was payable by the province and the balance, $18,792.57, by the city, of an appropriation for the year of $46,000.

Thus, spending by the department was about one half of one per cent below the amount budgeted. Of the overall expenditure of $30,788.43, including the province's share, $26,903.69 had been for relief and $3,884.74 for administration.

$17 PER CAPITA

During May, Mr. Metheral reported, welfare costs had been kept down to $17 per capita, compare dwith $17.49 in May, 1953. Total cost of relief last month was $3,961.38, compared with $4,074.76 during the same month last year. There were 233 people on relief last month, exactly the same number as in May, 1953.

Of the 233 people on relief, 54 were heads of families, 128 dependents, four single men and 52 single women.

Of the $3,961.88 spent on relief last month, $2,573.17 was for food, $208.95 for fuel, $144.50 for clothing, $12 for medicine, 87 for household sundries, $716.21 for shelter and $221.55 for doctors.

Other expenses last month, totalling $6,769.75, were $2,602.40 to Civic Hospital, $2,715.35 to St. Joseph's Hospital, $215 to nursing homes, $1,006 to outside hospitals, $185 for sanatorium aftercare and $10 for ambulance.

Administration costs of the department totalled $1,071.72, bringing total expenditures by the welfare department last month to $11,802.85.

There were 11 applications for relief granted during the month, assistance discontinued in 20 cases and 36 investigations into welfare cases. There were 24 persons admitted to hospital as Peterborough residents. There were 40 hospital investigations. Nine applications for hospitalization were refused.

Father Of Four Law Graduate

TORONTO (CP) — For the first time in more than a century of graduating lawyers, Osgoode Hall Thursday had a father of four children in its graduating class.

He was William Higgins, 32, of Sarnia, who plans to join the Sarnia law firm of Taylor, Jamieson, Mallon, Fowler and Oliver, where he was formerly a student-at-law.

Mr. Higgins met his wife, originally from Amherstburg, while both were serving in the RCAF during the Second World War. They were married at Summerside, P.E.I.

After the war, Mr. Higgins spent a few years in sales work in London, Ont., then started to study for a bachelor of arts degree which he received four years ago. He then took up law.

The Higgins children are Judith, 9, Bill, 6, Laurie Jane, 3, and Peter, 1.

The graduating class of 178 was the largest in Osgoode's history.

Council Decides To Fire Chief

NEW HAMBURG, Ont. (CP) — Village council decided Thursday night to dismiss Police Chief Thomas, effective at the end of this year.

The chief said today he will fight the move.

He said he believes the council's action is a result of this intervention at a community centre reception in this Kitchener area centre last March. Several charges the chief laid under the liquor laws were dismissed or withdrawn later in court.

Chief Thomas said he plans to ask for a hearing at which charges or complaints concerning his work can be presented and witnesses called.

A petition was presented to a council meeting a few weeks ago asking for the chief's dismissal.

Cigar-Smoking Women In Burma Have Long Had Equal Rights; Don't Need Any Suffragette Movements

By DAVID CHIPP

RANGOON (Reuters)—Burma's cigar-smoking women look with sympathy at the efforts of their sisters in Japan and other parts of the world to obtain equality.

For in Burma the woman has always been regarded as equal to her husband and there has never been any need for suffragette movements or demands for equality.

The wife knows that she is equal and perhaps even "more than equal."

A paragraph in the constitution should give encouragement and hope to those militant female fighters for equal pay in Western countries. It reads: "Women shall be entitled to the same pay as that received by men in respect of similar work."

Nor is this an innovation in a constitution which was written only seven years ago. It merely restates, like a similar clause relating to religious toleration, the inherent beliefs of the Burmese.

Although most Buddhist women believe that they cannot achieve Nirvana and thus hope to be a man in their next life, yet in material things they have little doubt as to their equality and even superiority over the male.

Great numbers of them engage in business and are said to be far better at it than their somewhat indolent, happy - go - lucky menfolk.

In the bazaars, using their inevitable cheroots to emphasize a point, they do business fast and well, although they have been up since before dawn working in their homes and will have more to do once business is over.

A Burmese women has equality before the law and may vote at the age of 18, the same age as men. When she is of age, she may get married to whom she pleases and divorce her husband when she wishes, keeping both her property and her children.

There is no religious ceremony attached to a Buddhist wedding, for a phongyi (monk) could not give his blessing to anything so worldly as marriage. But there is often a big party to which relatives and friends are invited to watch the couple eat out of the same bowl to symbolize unity.

RETAIN MAIDEN NAMES

Marriage is like a business contract which may be terminated at will by either party.

Burmese girls retain their maiden names throughout life.

But independence does not mean licence to the Burmese girl and until marriage many of them lead more sheltered lives than their western sisters.

Girls do not often go out by themselves and retain a charming modesty and shyness. Among the stricter families and in many of the villages a girl would never go out alone with a man, even if they were engaged.

Not so long ago it was against the law, and it is still considered the height of bad taste in some districts, to take a girl by the hand.

Nor has their freedom and hard work—the peasant girls carry heavy loads and work in the field—made the Burmese girls any less feminine. They are among the prettiest and most beautifully dressed in the world.

TIDAL WAVE SWEEPS 20 INTO LAKE

Three Bodies Recovered In Mishap

Michigan Rescuers Still Fishing People Out of Water

CHICAGO (AP)— A huge, freak tidal wave swept Chicago's Lake Michigan shore for a distance of several miles today, washing at least 20 fishermen into the water.

Some witnesses said the wave was at least 20 feet high.

Police said at least three bodies had been recovered and that more persons were feared drowned.

Police said at least 16 fishermen had been swept off rocks and into the lake at the Montrose harbor, on Chicago's north side, and one had begn washed into the water at a pier at North Avenue, 28 blocks further south.

All available rescue equipment of the U.S. Coast Guard, police and fire departments were rushed to the scene. The coast guard sent four boats to aid in the rescue effort.

FISHING OUT PEOPLE

Police Sgt. Robert Donner of Lincoln Park police said several persons "definitely" had been drowned and that rescuers "still are fishing people" out of the water.

The U.S. weather bureau in Chicago described the tidal wave as a seiche and said it was caused by a squall line moving across the lake.

The condition is caused by a rapid change in air pressure which depresses the water in one spot and causes a mounting up of the water level in another. The water can quickly rise several feet.

The weather bureau said it is an "unpredictable situation."

Ceasefire Talks Begin In East

HONG KONG (Reuters) — The Vietminh rebel radio announced today that delegations of the Communist-led Vietminh and French Union high commands in Indo-China will hold their first cease-fire talks near Thainguyen in northern Viet Nam Monday.

The talks follow arrangements made at the Indo-China peace talks at Geneva for officers of the opposing high commands to hold cease-fire talks at Geneva and on the spot.

Senior delegates at Geneva have instructed the officers to work out details of a cease-fire and the regrouping of forces in cease-fire zones in Viet Nam, the largest of the three states of Indo-China and the main battlefield.

Boy On Plane Sparks Romance

MONTREAL (CP) — A friendly six-year-old boy who was slightly jittery on a transatlantic flight has sparked a romance between a pretty Canadian stewardess and a erman baron.

Robin Bibeau of Strathmore, Que., took a liking to stewardess Jeannie George, 23, of Pembroke, Ont., and Baron Joachim (Jock) von Karstedt, 23, of Toronto, on a flight from England to Montreal. Every time he became frightened he insisted they hold his hands.

The couple struck up an acquaintance and recently they became engaged.

They plan to be married in Pembroke and reside in Toronto.

Cloudburst Causes Heavy City Damage

NORTH BAY (CP)—A cloudburst that struck North Bay Friday night played havoc with public utilities and flooded scores of basements. Damage was estimated in the thousands of dollars.

A veteran city public works employee said it was the worst downpour to strike the city in the last 30 years. More than 200 calls were burned in to his department during the two hours the storm lasted.

The central part of the city was almost isolated by flooded railway underpasses while for blocks water ran level with the curbs as sewers failed to carry the run-off.

Scores of cars became stalled as the water short-circuited wiring. At one end of the city a rowboat was used to ferry people across a street-turned-pond.

There is real interest being taken in the election for chief of Curve Lake Indian reservation. Women who have had the franchise for the past two years are moving right into band politics. They nominated two candidates for chief and two for councillors. One man will contend the chieftainship against them. He is Dalton Jacobs. The women are Mrs. Reg. Muskrat and Mrs. Cecil Knott. Councillor candidates, women, are Mrs. Austin McCue and Mrs. Elwood Coppaway: men, Cecil Knott, Clifford Whetung, Eldred Coppaway and Merrick Taylor.

A canvas of the reservation by the Examiner on Friday showed that the aspiring head women are doing a pretty thorough job of presenting their platforms to the 270 voters.

Neither would commit herself as to plans if she were successful. They didn't want to cross their bridges before they came to them.

MORE CONFIDENT

Dalton Jacobs ran for council in the election in 1952 but was defeated. He is more confident this time. He left his job in the machine shop of Outboard Marine Company for a few minutes to tell of some of his plans if he were elected.

Renew Talks On Ceasefire

GENEVA (Reuters) — Delegates to the nine-nation Indo-China peace conference today began a long week-end of backstage talks aimed at breaking the East-West deadlock holding up a ceasefire in the 7½-year war.

Members of the delegations, which for eight weeks have been seeking to restore peace in Indo-China, will meet each other today, Sunday and Monday to try to find ways of insuring the guns will keep silent once shooting ends.

East and West have been divided over supervising the ceasefire, who will do it and how.

Britain, Russia and France will take a leading part in the week-end talks. The three nations will discuss France's proposal to create a committee of experts to consider the "who, how and what" questions and Russia's counter-proposal, put forward Friday, that delegation heads should first provide guidance.

No-War Pact Predicted Between Red China, India

NEW DELHI, India (Reuters)—Communist China's Chou En-lai and India's Jawaharlal Nehru conferred for two hours here today amid speculation that their talks may lead to an Asian "no war pact."

The two Asian leaders also met Friday after Chou's arrival here from Geneva on a three-day stopover on his way home from the Far East conference.

The independent, British-owned newspapers, The Statesman, said foremost among the topics being discussed between Chou and Nehru was the possibility of applying to the rest of Southeast Asia the "non-aggression" principles laid down in the opening paragraphs of the agreement between India and Communist China on Tibet.

These paragraphs state that basic principles for relations between the countries are: "Mutual respect for each other's territorial integrity and sovereignty, non-aggression, non - interference in each other's internal affairs and peaceful co-existence."

Chou interrupted his business here today to go sightseeing. The Communist Chinese leader was garlanded with flowers and pelted with rose petals as he toured.

Tonight Chinese ambassador Gen. Yyuan Chung-hsein will give a reception in Chou's honor, after which the Chinese Communist leader will be guest of honor at a banquet given by Nehru.

Million Dollar Fire Rages; Tanks Explode

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A million dollar oil fire that exploded storage tanks and sent flames towering over the harbor area was brought under control today.

One worker was reported missing and two firemen were injured, neither seriously.

Since much of the fuel was destined for military use, the navy and FBI aided by the Los Angeles arson squad began checking the possibility of sabotage.

As tanks exploded, a pool of burning oil formed within a 20-foot high fire wall around the storage area of Tide Water Associated Oil Co. But the wall held and kept the flaming mass from spreading to other sections. Fifteen of the 20 tanks within the 500 by 1,000-foot enclosure burned.

F. E. Coyle, marine terminal superintendent of Tide Water, said damage would be more than one million dollars.

80,000 BARRELS LOST

Firemen estimated more than 80,000 barrels of various fuels were consumed in the flames. The fire, of unknown origin, started when a 55,000-barrel storage tank suddenly blew up, sending its lid about 250 feet into the air.

The fire fighters were successful in keeping the flames away from a 50,000-barrel tank of high-test aviation gasoline which stands in one corner of the enclosure. By early morning most of the contents had been pumped out to tanks not endangered and the threat to the harbor lessened.

An engineer, L. A. Hamm, said the initial explosion Friday night felt "like an earthquake." Soon six other tanks, ranging from 5,000 to 50,000 barrels capacity were burning. Land equipment and fire boats hurried to the scene.

Philip Visiting With Two Sisters

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany (AP)—The Duke of Edinburgh today flew into this town on the shores of Lake Constance for a visit with two of his sisters.

As he stepped from his private plane, he was greeted by the Friedrichshafen mayor, and by officials of the French occupation forces.

The duke, who is touring Europe by plane, arrived from Langenburg, where he visited a third sister, Princess Margarete of Hohenlohe-Langenburg.

The duke plans to remain here for the week-end, visiting his sisters, Princess Sophie of Hannover, and Theadora Margravine of Baden.

Home Run Barrage Knocks Out Pedestrian

MONTREAL (CP)—The pitchers weren't the only casualties of Friday night's home run barrage in an International League double-header between the Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Royals.

Lucien Dallaire, 48, was walking by the baseball stadium when a ball soared over the wall and hit him on the head. He was taken to Notre Dame hospital for treatment.

Dallaire said he never did find out if the ball was foul or one of the 12 homers hit in the twin bill.

Will Visit Burma

NEW DELHI, India (Reuters) — Chinese Communist Prime Minister Chou En-lai has accepted an invitation from Burmese Prime Minister U Nu to visit Rangoon on Monday, it was announced here today.

75 Passengers Injured As 8 Cars On Flyer Tip Over In Nebraska

HALLAM, Neb. (AP)—The Rock Island Railroad's fast, eastbound Rocky Mountain Rocket "started to shimmy" and eight of its 11 pasesnger and pullman cars tipped over in a derailment near here Friday night with at least 75 persons getting hospital treatment.

State safety patrol chief Col. C. J. Sanders at Lincoln said his reports indicated that at least 16 of 18 persons were seriously injured.

An early morning check of hospitals at Lincoln, Beatrice and Crete showed 61 persons still in hospital. At least 14 others were given treatment at hospitals in the three cities and dismissed.

Unofficial reports indicated about 150 passengers were on the train.

Engineer Roy Ensign of Fairbury, Neb., said "I don't know what happened. The train started to shimmy and all of a sudden I was thrown against the controls."

CARS PILE UP

Col. Sanders said his men reported one car piled on top of another. The others "just tilted over" his men said.

Mrs. Harold Segard, St. Louis, related "It (the car she was in) didn't hit hard. It slid like a log into water. I didn't expect it to be that easy."

Mrs. Segard, who was not seriously hurt, said, "My head struck against the overhead baggage rack —there was a lot of confusion and there were children in the car. There was a fellow in the back taken out and put on a stretcher. He was bleeding at the nose and around the mouth."

SOME "HITCHED"

The Rocky Mountain Rocket was bound for Chicago. As soon as the report of the derailment was received, all this little town's available men turned out to help while ambulances and patrol cars hurried to the scene.

Capt. Sanders said his men listed at least 25 persons who needed ambulance transportation to Lincoln and Beatrice, Neb., hospitals, both about 20 miles away. Many others, he said, "hitched" rides with motorists to town to get lesser injuries treated.

Train mailman T. F. Danahan, one of those who hastened into town to report the wreck, said "The lights went out and the mail car overturned — there was a little fire in the engine but it was quickly extinguished."

The train was powered by three diesel units. The first two stayed on the track and the third overturned.

Man 86, Makes Trip By Tractor

CALGARY (CP) — A two-week 900-mile trip by farm tractor ended Friday night when Walter "Watty" Forsyth, 86-year-old former hotelman, farmer and cattle buyer rolled into Calgary for the stampede he has wanted to see since it started in 1912.

"Watty" had felt he was too busy to visit the big show until this year when he hitched up a home-made trailer to his farm tractor at Rapid City, Man., and started merrily off down the highway for Calgary.

He took his time, he said, and enjoyed the trip thoroughly. Only trouble he had was a blowout just after he started.

The grizzled octogenarian figures maybe he'll go home by a circular route through the States.

13 Hurt In Bus Crash

SCHROON LAKE, N.Y. (AP)—Thirteen persons were injured, two critically, when a Greyhound bus and a truck collided early today on Route 9, about six miles north of this Adirondack resort village.

The 3 were among the 27 passengers on the bus en route from New York to Montreal.

Ask Judge Give Press Rules

VANCOUVER (CP) — The chief justice of British Columbia has been asked to formulate a set of rules for guidance of the press in pre verdict criminal cases.

The request was forwarded by Chief Justice Gordon McG. Sloan of Victoria Thursday by the B.C. section of the Canadian Bar Association.

The request was instigated by Vancouver city prosecutor Stewart McMorran, who described pre-trial newspaper treatment of recent murder cases here as "disgraceful."

Legal circles here said that if the chief justice formulates the rules as requested, newspapers violating them will probably be liable to contempt of court action. They pointed out that the courts now make decisions as to what constitutes contempt and are empowered to enforce their rulings.

APPROVE RESOLUTION

The B.C. section also approved a resolution calling for an amendment to the Criminal Code to prevent mention of unsworn statements by accused persons at any inquest of preliminary iquiry until the trial judge has ruled on their admissability as evidence.

The recommendations were only passed after several members had registered disagreement.

Oshawa Strike Now Settled

OSHAWA (CP) — The Oshawa Railway Company announced today that the month-old strike of its bus drivers has been settled. No details were made public.

The company said service will be resumed Monday morning.

Settlement was reached at a meeting in city hall attended by representatives of the railway firm, the bus drivers' union, Mayor W. J. Naylor and members of the city's transportation and traffic commission.

Need New Approach In Canadian Housing

CHICAGO (AP)—A huge, freak tidal wave swept Chicago's Lake Michigan shore for a distance of several miles today, washing at least a score of fisherman into the water.

Some witnesses said the wave was at least 20 feet high.

Police said at least three bodies had been recovered and that more persons were feared drowned.

Ways Of Pushing European Treaty Discussed In U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill and President Eisenhower today faced the vital phase of their White House conference.

The outstanding question was believed to be, in essence, whether they can agree to drawing a line against further Communist conquest and where such a line should be drawn.

That is putting the problem in the simplest form and it is not that simple because there is no official national Communist aggression as such.

EXPECT COMMUNIQUE

On the surface their subject of discussion is Southeast Asia, where ostensibly, the Communist conquest is by civil war.

The area of disagreement between the two Western powers, which has been widely magnified by press and radio, appears to be the desire of the United Kingdom and some others to compromise with the Communists, and the determination of the U.S. administration not to even recognize the Communist government of China—nor to trust in any pacts signed by a Communist authority.

The first day's talks brought no informative announcements and it is unlikely there will be any. There was a brief statement Friday by White House press secretary James Hagerty to the effect that the two leaders and their aides talked about the possibility of bringing the European Defence Community to reality and about sharing atomic secrets. All the rest was speculation.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden this morning had his second private conference with State Secretary John Foster Dulles.

The two are reported virtually at loggerheads because of Eden's speech in London Wednesday calling for a collective security or non-aggression pact in the Far East to include the Communists.

Mr. Dulles has been advocating an anti-Communist pact in that area — a grouping of the powers and the interested states ready to fight communism in whatever form it makes armed inroads.

Canada has no part in the discussions but External Affairs Minister Pearson is reported due to arrive Monday for a Commonwealth discussion on Southeast Asian problems.

Mr. Pearson was expected in any event to escort Sir Winston and his party to Ottawa Tuesday for a visit lasting until Wednesday evening.

It is understood that advantage will be taken of the presence here this weekend of Richard G. Casey of Australia and Sir Zafrullah Khan, foreign secretaries respectively of Australia and Pakistan, to have a Commonwealth conference involving permanent representatives of other governments here, and officials of the state department.

Some sort of communique indicating the outcome of the White House talks is expected Sunday evening when Sir Winston concludes his visit with the Eisenhowers and moves to the British embassy as guest of ambassador Sir Roger Makins.

The general belief here is that the Anglo-American alliance will be either immeasurably strengthened or dangerously weakened as a result of the weekend conference at the White House.

Shooting War Under Way In Guatemala

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) Anti-Communist Guatemalan rebels set up a provisional government Friday night amid indications the struggle for that central American nation is becoming a hot shooting war.

Insurgent planes attacked Guatemala City and the rebel radio claimed its forces were "marching victoriously" on the capital. The Communist - supported government of President Jacobo Arbenz Guzman declared, however, that its troops remained in control on all fronts.

Creation of the provisional regime, headed by rebel commander Col. Carlos Castillo Armas, was announced in a communique by the "liberation army." It said the government headquarters were at Chiquimula, a town of 8,848 people 20 miles from the Honduran border.

The communique said Chiquimula had been captured early Friday. But a dispatch from Associated Press correspondent Jack Rutledge in Guatemala City said the government's latest bulletins claimed Chiquimula was still in its hands. Rutledge's dispatch passed through Guatemalan censorship and was delayed about six hours in transmission.

Rebel planes also blasted Zacapa and other government strongholds. Authoritative sources said a direct bomb hit on an ammunition dump at Zacapa knocked out the garrison there. The stepped - up air strikes led one source here to comment that "the cold war is getting hot."

CROSSED FRONTIER

Up till now, the eight-day-old struggle has been waged chiefly with propaganda weapons.

Eight Americans who crossed the Guatemalan frontier into Mexico Friday said they believed the rebel forces had the government "on the run." A Boston newspaperman in the group said he had seen 400 wounded government troops en route to the capital.

The Guatemalan embassy in Washington announced, meauwhile, that its government had refused permission for the inter-American peace committee to send an investigating team into Guatemala to study that nation's charge of foreign aggression. The Arbenz regime has accused Honduras and Nicaragua of aiding the rebels.

The Guatemalan struggle spurred the U.S. Senate to adopt a resolution warning "international communism" away from the Americas.

Attractive Girl Falls, Bangs Beautiful Nose Judge Grants £289 Damages For New One

LONDON (AP)—Attractive Erika Newell, 28, slipped on the polished floor of her office and fell bang on her beautiful nose.

"It was formerly an aquiline, handsome feature," her lawyer told a London judge Friday. "The fall broke it and now she is left with a sort of minor boxer's nose —not a world champion's."

Judge Garrard walked across the high court to Erika, shone a lamp on her nose an examined it from all angles.

Then he ordered her employers, British Overseas Airways Corporation, to pay her £289 damages.

"They have, as it were, provided her with a slightly different nose against her will," the judge said. "But still she looks a very nice-looking girl."

Hides Husband In Wardrc

Homesick German Smuggles Out Spouse

HAMBURG, Germany (CP)—A homesick German woman arrived here Friday night from Montreal, with her husband tucked away in her cabin wardrobe aboard the German motorship Alexandra Sartori.

Blonde Giesli Maria Breilmann, 28, almost succeeded in smuggling her husband home without detection, but shorily before reaching Hamburg 33-year-old Wilhelm was caught stretching his legs outside his narrow, dark hiding place.

Captain Hans Praedel handed the couple over to Hamburg harbor police who allowed them to proceed to their former residence at Essen.

Their luggage was held by the shipowners pending payment of the stowaway's fare of 175 dollars.

APPETITE SEEMED HUGE

Officials said the couple emigrated in 1951 to Canada where Wilhelm had been interred from 1941 to 1945. After his immigration he worked as an interpreter in Toronto. The two became homesick but didn't have the money for two return tickets.

Company officials said the stowaway probably slipped aboard the vessel in Montreal pretending to say good-bye to his wife. He was well cared for by his wife, who brought him sandwiches from the dining room every day.

The wife's great appetite during the voyage aroused suspicion but it wasn't until two days before the ship docked that her husband was discovered.

Committee Ends 5,000-Mile Highway Tour

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario legislature's highways investigation committee ended a 5,000-mile tour of northwestern United States and Ontario early today.

The committee, headed by chairman Kelso Roberts (PC—Toronto St. Patrick) returned to Toronto by air from Fort William weighed down with facts gathered from highway officials in North Dakota and Ontario and briefs on proposed highway projects demanded by various northwestern communities.

"We have covered a lot of ground and gathered a lot of information," said Mr. Roberts. "We will have three hard days of work here starting next Monday."

TO RECEIVE BENEFITS

The committee Monday will receive briefs from construction and engineering associations as well as information on highway construction in Britain and Germany. Further witnesses will be called to testify before the group and consideration will be given to recommendations contained in the report of J. D. Woods and Gordon Ltd., Toronto management consultants appointed by Premier Frost to make a study of the department.

During this last tour, Mr. Roberts indicated the committee would submit an interim report to the government on the committee's work. In Rainy River Albert Wren (Lib-Lab—Kenora) said the Opposition would write a minority report on the committee's work.

The 10-day tour took the committee to Bismarck, N.D., where it learned of that state's sufficiency rating of highway contractors bidding on government jobs. The committee generally approved of this method of evaluating a contractor.

Swinging through Ontario it heard protests and received briefs from Rainy River, Fort Frances, Red Lake, Nipigon and Fort William on local highway problems.

TIRING TRIP

It was an exhausting tour made mostly by bus. At one stage of the trip the committee was forced to make a 10-mile detour by open motor boat on Lake St. Joseph in the Pickle Crow district during a rainstorm. Committee members slogged through mud and slid over pot-filled roads on their way south.

The tour was the committee's third; it travelled to Albany, N.Y., last month to study that state's highways division and later made a 500-mile bus tour of the Sudbury and Sault Ste. Marie districts.

At Fort William the committee spent two days questioning E. A. Cash, divisional engineer, and his staff of office and field administrative practices.

Friday, Mr. Roberts joined with Mr. Wren in blasting the highways department for not sending departmental officials to Fort William to give the committee information on the division prior to and after the investigation. The committee had two days previously requested the officials to appear but no acknowledgement was received.

STRESSES IMPORTANCE

Mr. Roberts said he regarded the committee as "paramount at the moment."

"I will not let anybody shove me into a corner because they think they should be somewhere else," he said.

Mr. Roberts said it had been understood before the committee began its tour 10 days ago that three or four officials of the department would accompany the group. Among them was to be Harold Tregaskes, contract engineer.

"But he has not been with us and if any blame is to be attached for our not being able to get required information it cannot be placed on the committee," Mr. Roberts said.

The committee requested from Terrace Bay on Wednesday that members of the department appear at Fort William Friday to outline the operations of the Fort William division prior to and after the highways investigation. Mr. Cash, appointed last fall to replace A. M. Mills who was suspended and later charged with conspiracy, was unable to answer many of the committee's questions during its travels in the area.

Model YM-YW Like Etobicoke

The new south end combined YMCA-YWCA will be modelled along the lines of the Etobicoke YM-YW, the provisional board of directors has decided.

A committee has been appointed, under James Bell, to investigate the organization and policy of this YM-YW with a view to drafting a constitution for the Peterborough group. The Etobicoke YM-YW is only one of two in Canada (the other is in Vancouver) which has an organizational arrangement similar to Peterborough's.

Other members of Mr. Bell's committee are Roy Shouldice and Mrs. Donald Wood.

A survey of community needs and support will be made soon, to provide an outline for YM-YW programming in the fall. William Gerow will head this survey committee, assisted by Mrs. Keith Pilkington and Mrs. Gerow.

Len Thibaudeau, vice-chairman of the Ratepayers' association, will investigate possible sites for the new south end YM-YW and report back to the next meeting of the provisional board, August 26. The second floor of the Ross food store at Park and Braidwood Sts. has been suggested as the most likely possibility.

On Mr. Thibaudeau's committee are Mrs. Frank Williams, Mrs. Clarence Porter and John Quirk.

UN Decides Delay Action

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Ignoring Russian demands, the UN Security Council decided Friday night to delay action on the quickening Guatemalan war until the Organization of American States makes its own investigation.

The 11-nation council declined to adopt an agenda listing Guatemala's complaint that Honduras and Nicaragua were still condoning aggression in defiance of the council's cease-fire call of last Sunday.

The procedural motion for its adoption needed seven votes to pass. It got only four, while five votes were cast against it and two council members abstained.

This postponed debate indefinitely and gave the 21-nation OAS time to investigate the Guatemalan charges through its five - member inter-American peace committee.

Seaway Negotiations Begin Early In July

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada-United States negotiations for the construction of the St. Lawrence seaway's navigation facilities are being arranged for the week of July 4, officials said Friday.

Opening of the conferences has been set tentatively for Monday July 5, at Ottawa.

The sessions are expected to pave the way for a final agreement between the two federal governments leading to a start later this year on canals in the international section of the river.

Hydro-electric development on the International rapids is to be carried out concurrently by the Ontario government and New York State, which will split the $600,000,000 electricity cost and the 2,200,000 horsepower of energy.

The federal negotiations develop from recent congressional authorization to have the U.S. spend $105,000,000 for navigation on the U.S. side of the river. Until that move, Canada was preparing to spend alone about $300,000,000 on navigation in the International

Will Become German City For Birthday

KITCHENER (CP) — A distinctive Pennsylvania Dutch background will gleam brightly through modern wrappings next week when this predominantly-German community of 55,000 celebrates its 100th birthday.

During centennial week, June 27 to July 3, a hofbrau restaurant will feature German sausages and other fare, beer served in steins by waiters in leather jerkins and music typical of old Bavaria.

The German ambassador to Canada, Dr. Werner Dankwort, is scheduled to attend the cake-cutting ceremonies June 28 marking the official start of the festival of pageantry and entertainment.

Also on hand will be Lieutenant-Governor Breithaupt of Ontario, who was born in Kitchener, and Governor John S. Fine of Pennsylvania. Governor Fine was invited because many of Kitchener's founders came from his state by overland Conestogo wagons.

Emphasis will be on talent, in keeping with this prosperous industrial city's traditional love of music. Kitchener is one of the smallest Canadian cities to support a symphony orchestra.

Not Missing, Delayed By Fog

SEPT ILES, Que. (CP)—A Toronto bush pilot, located Friday night after a two-day search, said he wasn't lost but had landed on a tiny lake 40 miles northwest of here after fog prevented him from taking his pontoon-equipped Norseman into Sept Iles airport.

Eldon McEachern, 42, was reported missing Wednesday by his employers, Northern Wings, on a 153-mile flight here from Mount Wright.

The flyer was spotted by an RCAF aircraft from Greenwood, N.S., a few hours after his undamaged plane was located on Lake Doree. He had left a note in the Norseman saying he stayed with it for two days and then started to walk westward, hoping to hit the Quebec North Shore and Labrador Railway which he thought was about 12 miles away.

After being brought out of the dense bush, McEachern said:

"I didn't have enough gas left to return to Mount Wright, so I decided to head to the nearest lake where clear weather prevailed, and await developments.

"I'm used to bush travel and I wasn't a bit worried that I wouldn't be found."

Box Car Jumps Line At Omemee

OMEMEE (ENS) — A box car on a CNR way-freight jumped the rails while crossing a bridge north of Omemee on Friday night and damaged the railway ties for about a mile.

The line was blocked all night while a wrecking crew from Belleville repaired the damage. But it was open for the morning Belleville - to - Peterborough - to-Toronto passenger train to go through.

A eastbound passenger train went as ususal Friday night and the way-freight followed about 7.30 p.m. On a bridge north of the village two wheels of one box car went off the track and they chewed up the ties for a mile.

Some boys were swimming under the bride heard the clatter and took off from their swimming hole in a hurry.

None of the other cars was derailed.

Canadian Products Helping Development In Mexico

Written for The Canadian Press
By MARGARET ECKER

MEXICO CITY (CP)—Mexico's history of conquests and revolutions has always seemed remote from Canada's quiet development. But the end-product of Mexico's decades of revolution, today's stable economic and political life, is helping to keep Canadian industry grinding, Canadian workers employed.

Agrarian reform has wiped out the pre-revolutionary large estates and now most of the arable land is in the hands of "ejidoa," co-operative farming communities, or small proprietors. At the same time, the government, under President Adolfo Ruiz Cortines has committed itself to improving agricultural output, all of which underlines the need for mechanized farming methods.

"Canada should sell between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 worth of agricultural machinery to Mexico this year," predicts M. T. Stewart, commercial counsellor to the Canadian embassy here.

TRANSPORTATION PROBLEM

The government has also committed itself to improve rail transportation and roads to weave together the scattered communities of the country which is one-quarter the size of continental United States. Since more than half of the 28,000,000 population live in a radius of 200 miles around Mexico City, the problem of linking this centre with the hinterland is an acute one.

"This has led to the purchase in Canada of 15 diesel units from the Montreal Automotive Works, for the first time in history," states Max Stewart, the Wingham, Ont., native who has helped guide Canada's commercial destiny abroad for 24 years.

The diesels, valued at $2,750,000 will be delivered to National Railways of Mexico in 1954.

Canada in 1953, was third among the countries from which Mexico bought goods to assist her enormous economical development. To a value of $28,986,195 Canada exported newsprint, automotive parts whisky, agricultural machinery, aluminum, asbestos, shell eggs and wood pulp.

Mr. Stewart, a 1928 graduate of the University of Toronto in commerce and finance, said: "Canada fits into Mexico's expanding industrial picture with semi-raw materials, equipment and such chemicals as are needed in her new industries."

Some $6,500,000 purchased newsprint. Autos, trucks and parts accounted for more than $8,000,000 The country has large mineral reingots. Skimmed milk powder was imported to the value of $1,095,728 and sewing machines from Quebec cost $1,100,000.

TARIFF INCREASE

A slight shadow was cast across the Canadian export picture with the recent 25 per cent increase in tariffs.

"Mexico is not a market for pots and pans," said Mr. Stewart. "There is a growing tendency to manufacture more here, and to protect local industry. But the provision of semi-raw materials is where Canada still fits into the picture."

Before 1946, Canada and Mexico did little business, and in 1948, the balance of trade, in Mexico's favor, was $12,212,685. In 1951, when Canada bought cotton to the value of $20,000,000, Mexico still had a favorable trade balance of $472,281.

Since then, Canada has switched her cotton buying to the United States, and in 1953, the chief item of the $15,784,732 Canadian bill for imports was peanuts. Other Mexican exports to Canada included pineapple, fresh and canned, fresh tomatoes, oranges and such handicrafts as leather and silver goods.

Canadian Pacific Airlines, which has brought tourists to Mexico since last year, and Trans-Canada Air Lines, whose regular service started in February, have brought what Mr. Stewart calls, "an invisible export" for Mexico.

TOURIST SPENDING

No figures are available, but it is estimated that "several thousands" have come, spending their money in Mexico's excellent restaurants, on Acapulco's tropical lush resorts. Too, the visitors take home Mexican silver, leatherwork and peasant clothing to the tune of almost $100 per person.

"Yes, I am hopeful that Canada has a good market in Mexico," states the commercial counsellor who, since 1930, has served in England, Australia, Shanghai, Japan and Latin America.

"Mexico has a firm policy of expanding industrial development in which Canada can play a part. sources, vast possibilities in tropical agriculture. Already Canada buys much-needed coffee from Mexico. There will be other similar products we need, just as they need Canadian products for their development."

Already Royal Securities of Montreal, which owns the power company in Monterey, and the Aluminum Company of Canada, have established themselves in Mexico.

"Canadian business should have a look around here," advises Mr. Stewart. "Mexico offers good opportunities and the Mexican government would welcome Canadian capital."

Returning Canadian Vets Thank D-Day Beach Rescuer

When a small group of Canadian veterans revisited Courseulles in Normandy for special D-Day anniversary ceremonies three weeks ago, it brought back proud memories to Paul Dubois, Garde Municipal of the town, whose picture appaears on Page 20 of today's Examiner.

Mr. Dubois is one of the unsung heroes of the Canadian landing there. Many men who never knew his name owe their lives to him, and hundreds of Canadian homes welcomed their sons back because of his courage. Some readers may recall his story which appeared in April 1950 written by Jean Stenton, The Examiner's telegraph editor, during chat with him in the little French town.

When the barrage was laid down prior to the first landing attempt on the Courseulles beaches in 1944, the 1,400 townspeople were in the unhappy position of cowering in what ever shelters they could find while they were heavily bombarded by the Canadians in front and the Germans in their secondary positions behind the town. (The Allies believed the town had been evacuated and turned all their firepower against it).

MINED BEACHES

Before the Germans left, they had mined the beaches heavily. From his shelter, Dubois watched row after row of soldiers being killed as they inched their way forward. Ignoring the battle raging around him, Dubois, who was one of the few to know the layout of the minefield, dashed out to an officer who was unscathed and offered to lead the sappers in clearing a path. His offer was accepted and many Canadian lives saved.

"Never have I seen such courage," Mr. Dubois told The Examiner editor four years ago. "Those Canadians were magnificent. They not only looked like soldiers, but they fought like soldiers under heavy fire. I cannot begin to tell you how brave they were. None of them was afraid to die and they feared nothing in battle. I was proud to know them and be liberated by them. Whenever Canadians come to Courseulles there is a place for them in my home."

Today, in a strong German blockhouse on the Courseulles beach which formerly bristled with heavy German guns, Mr. Dubois has a small workshop. Where the Nazi guns formerly swung their muzzles over the nearby beaches, he has arranged a pleasant window to aid him while he works. And when June 6 rolls around each year, he has a private anniversary, remembering "les braves Canadiens" who gave him back his freedom.

Mendes-France Not Afraid To Hand Out Austerity

By CARL HARTMAN

PARIS (AP)—To most Frenchmen Pierre Mendes-France, their new premier, is the man who wants peace in Indo-China.

It they don't know anything more about him they know that and like it. The war has never been popular. It is much less popular now that there is talk of sending draftees, for the first time, as well as professional soldiers.

In 1952 Mendes-France said:

"Our negotiating position was better two years ago than last year, better last year than this year, it is probably less bad now than it will be next year."

Now a year after that "next year," he has put his stand in the form of a "contract." If he can't get peace by July 20, he will quit. If he can, he will go on with the rest of his program.

OUTWITS "IMMOBILISM"

This 47-year-old lawyer, economist and former bomber crewman has a lot of ideas on subjects besides Indo-China. Most of them are new, and so are his methods of putting them into effect.

For instance: He has thrown overboard the usual procedure by which a new premier gets a program and a cabinet. This is a diplomatic trading of policy points and political plums to get the support of as many deputies as possible. The result has usually been a cabinet almost indistinguisable from the one before—"immobilism," the French call it. Mendes-France just interviewed the people he wanted, told them what he meant to do, asked if they were willing to go along, and tapped the ones who said yes.

In the past Mendes-France has let loose blasts fierce enough to keep him out of political posts for nearly a decade.

Back in 1944, when he was last in the cabinet as minister of national economy, he drafted an austerity program that rivalled Britain's: stiff rationing, a crackdown on the black market, a wage-and-price freeze, confiscation of illicit wealth — what was called the "horse doctor's remedy."

LOSES TWO JOBS

The French, tired of hardship, wouldn't take it. He quit. When another premier called him back he had thought up some additional ingredients: tax increases, a ban on printing press money, a campaign against speculators. These were even less palatable. He didn't get the job.

What he did get was a lot of respect from cabinets that found his brand of policy making too strong for their stomachs. He was made French governor of the international monetary fund and served as chairman of its board. He was sent as delegate to the UN economic and social council, and to the UN economic commission for Latin America.

Mendes - France, of well-to-do Jewish parents, was simultaneously taking courses while still in his teens at the law school of the Sorbonne and the School of Political Sciences. Either one is considered an extremely heavy program for a normal student.

The story goes that he first went into politics seriously because of a student political brawl where he took a punch in the nose whose effects can still be seen in his photographs.

YOUNGEST IN PARLIAMENT

He became the youngest member of the French bar and later the youngest member of Parliament at 25. At 31 he was undersecretary of the treasury. The Second World War broke out the year after and he went into the air force.

France fell and he tried to ship for North Africa with the idea that the war could be carried on from there. The Vichy government sent him to jail with a 10-year sentence for desertion. He escaped from a hospital at Lyon, made his way to Britain, and joined Gen. Charles De Gaulle's fighting French air force. De Gaulle soon insisted on taking him into his first cabinet at Algiers as commissioner of finance.

Since then it has been politics linked with economics.

Between his law practice, lecturing and international jobs, he finds some time for skiing and the piano, and his family. Mme. Lily Cicurel Mendes - France is an Egyptian. They have been married 21 years and have two sons: Michel, 18 and Bernard, 20.

The Mendes-Frances, of Portuguese ancestry, have lived in France for some 700 years. The origin of their unusual name is lost in history, but members of the family believe their forebears left Portugal because of anti-semitic persecution and branches of the numerous tribe settled in various countries. Those who came to France seem to have added the country's name to their own, to distinguish themselves from their cousins abroad.

Flooded Towns Represented On Committee

MORRISBURG, Ont. (CP) — Representatives of the six municipalities to be flooded by the $800,000,000 St. Lawrence seaway power project will form the nucleus of a municipal - provincial committee to rehabilitate the area, Premier Frost of Ontario says.

He addressed civic leaders and planning consultants from the municipalities concerned at a meeting Friday in this community 30 miles west of Cornwall.

The recently-announced special cabinet committee will assist municipal representatives in their work, since the Ontario government "will not delegate its duties to others and wash our hands of responsibility," the premier said. Appointments would probably be completed within the next two weeks.

TREAT PROBLEMS

The problems of water supply, roads, schools and hospitals would be treated by the committee. Delegates approved the idea of the committee.

The committee could also consider creating a parks system in the area similar to that in the Niagara district, Premier Frost suggested.

The six municipalities affected by the project are the villages of Iroquois and Morrisburg and the townships of Cornwall, Osnabruck, Williamsburg and Matilda.

"I am going all out for recreation for our young people, playgrounds and organized sports for all junior age groups."

He said also that if he were elected as chief he would see that all important matters were put to a vote by the people instead of the council pushing through legislation without the consent of the voters.

Asked how he thought the two women opponents would fare on Monday's election-day race, he said diplomatically that each had a chance.

VILLAGERS COMMENT

Villagers were more forthright. A cross sample of some comments were:

—Women are electioneering a lot harder than the men.

—Need a change (from male chief).

—A woman chief would be alright. When women start something they generally finish it.

One man, whose wife had just sent him outside for a pail of water, perhaps grumbled the opinion of married male voters.

"A woman can sure lead you around home, so . . . ."

In all probability the greatest single force in adult education is Your Newspaper. When you completed your formal education some years ago, the event was celebrated as your Commencement. It was then that you really commenced to learn. From that day to this you have learned constantly from Your Newspaper. Deep within you, even though you may not have thought much about it, you realize this and appreciate it. That perhaps is why you'd rather miss a meal than your newspaper. For well you know that any and every issue may bring you a tip, an idea, a suggestion, a thought—either inspiration or information that you can put right to work and keep it working for you the rest of your life.

Churchill Visit Makes Headlines Few Editorials

LONDON (Reuters)—The Churchill - Eden visit to Washington made the biggest headlines in most British and French newspapers today, but editorial reaction was slim.

"Generally speaking, newspapers have refrained from editorial comment now that the talks have been begun, merely reporting the day's program," the London Daily Star summarized.

The London Evening Standard remarked that "on the ultimate aims both countries are agreed."

"Divided, Britain and America are vulnerable. United they are impregnable."

RED SHOUTS "MUNICH"

The Communist Daily Worker lampooned the meeting in a cartoon as another "Munich." They pictured Eden and Churchill, with the ghost of former prime minister Neville Chamberlain behind them, standing before "Benito Eisenhower" and "Adolf Dulles."

In France, the anti-Communist, left-wing Franc Tireur, which called the talks "the conference of Anglo-American misunderstandings," wrote in a front page editorial:

"Churchill and Eden must also speak in the name of our country, which since the accession of Mendes-France feels itself nearer to Britain than to the Unitedf States.

"But there is no question of a Franco - British common front against the U.S.," it added.

The Melbourne, Australia, Argus commented that understanding between the British Commonwealth and the United States was "the base of world peace."

"The alliance should never have become shaky," Argus said.

Lakefield Youth Remanded In Custody

COBOURG (ENS) — Colin Campbell, Lakefield youth, who had been remanded out of custody some months ago on a car theft charge and two counts of breaking and entering, appeared in police court Friday and was remanded in custody until Monday.

At the time Campbell was remanded out of custody, Magistrate R. B. Baxter imposed certain conditions, such as being in early at nights, keeping away from bad companions, going to church and getting a job.

The magistrate informed the youth Friday that Chief Constable Morris had informed him that Campbell had not lived up to the conditions and had been out late at night, showed signs of drinking, was only at church twice and had only worked a few days. He was also informed that Campbell boasted about getting on probation istead of going to reformatory.

Campbell told the court he had been working around some, but admitted being out five times at night. He denied boasting about being allowed on probation.

Magistrate Baxter said he felt he had given Campbell enough leeway.

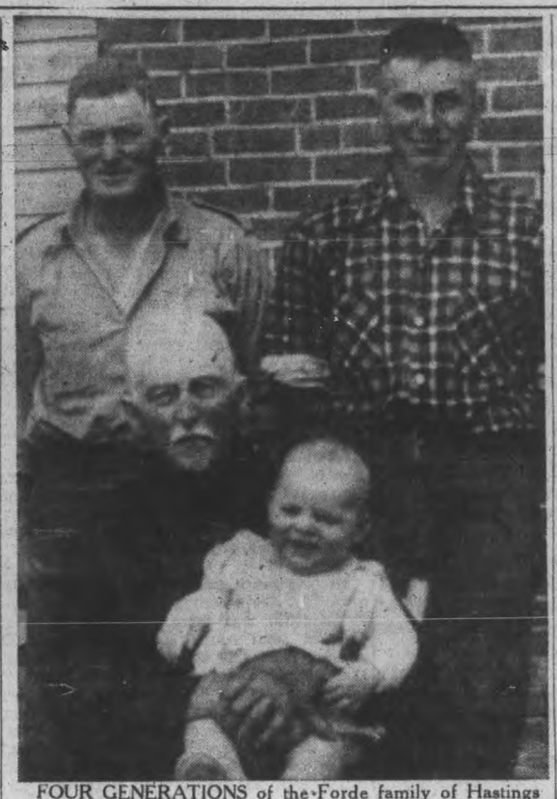
NEXT MOVE

"I think your father hates to see you sent to an institution, but perhaps he may feel it is the next thing to be done. I am remanding you in custody for sentence until Monday," said the magistrate.

Fred Cavanaugh, Jr., of Cobourg, who had been remanded out of custody on an assault charge and told to keep off the streets at night and to get a job, appeared on his remand date yesterday and was further remanded out of custody, but this time until called upon.

The court was informed that Cavanaugh had lived up to the probation conditions and was now working.

"Your Worship puts more men to work than the National Employment office," commented crown attorney Harry Deyman.



The magistrate informed Cavanaugh that he was now lifting the restrictions, but warned him not to get into trouble again.

Graham Makes Berlin Trip

BERLIN (AP)—American evangelist Billy Graham arrived here today by plane from West Germany, still looking pale from the effects of a sudden kidney ailment which delayed his scheduled arrival in West Berlin by one day.

Graham was met at the airport by German church officials, a small crowd of waving West Berliners, the press and a group of 25 girl singers. He went straight to the West Berlin city hall where he called on Lord Mayor Dr. Walther Schreiber and entered his name in the Golden Book.

Graham's departure from Duesseldorf was cancelled Friday when he complained of severe pains shortly after delivering a sermon to 25,000 West Germans at the city's Rhine Stadium. He rested in his hotel room after German doctors diagnosed his troubles as a kidney block.

Graham's activities in Berlin will be climaxed by his appearance before an expected 140,000 West Berliners at Olympic Stadium Sunday.

Raise Board Width For CMHC Houses

OTTAWA (CP) — Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation has been instructed to permit the use of white pine boards in widths in excess of eight inches as roof sheathing on homes built under the National Housing Act.

Maurice Bourget, parliamentary assistant to Works Minister Winters, said Friday in the Commons the new instructions have been issued because of the current surplus in Canada of white pine boards in wide widths.

The width of white pine boards on NHA homes was raised Thursday in the Commons by Jack Garland (L—Nipissing). At that time he said that a CMHC regulation stipulating that the boards must not be wider than eight inches was restricting the sale of this type of lumber.

Canada, Mexico Have Much In Common

By MARGARET ECKER

MEXICO CITY (CP)—Canada, lying along the northern border of the United States, and Mexico to the south of the powerful neighbor, have much in common, Jules Leger has found during the few months he has been Canadian ambassador here.

The former Ottawa newspaperman is Canada's youngest ambassador and is the brother of Cardinal Emile Leger, the Dominion's youngest cardinal.

"Sharing a common, and powerful neighbor, Canada and Mexico see eye to eye on most situations arising out of this proximity," said Ambassador Leger.

"Both countries are interested in the liberalization of American trade policies. Politically, at the United Nations, Canada and Mexico see eye to eye on most important problems." As close neighbors of the United States, they both have minor difficulties with their influential friend. The two countries realize that their policies must be close one to the other."

IMPORTANT POINTS

As ambassador Leger sees it, the two most important points of Canadian policy since the war have been the Dominion's association with NATO and participation in United Nations action in Korea.

"In both instances," he points out, "Latin-America has been necessary to the UN war machine, and our war machine, in the supplying of essential materials; so, indirectly, our two countries have co-operated. Anything we could do to intensify Latin-American participation, the better off we would all be.

"Latin-America needs technical assistance. We are in a position to give it in many fields."

The new ambassador found relations between Canada and Mexico "very friendly," with emphasis on trade having been built up over the years.

"We should be able to establish, eventually, a permanent figure of $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 a year both ways," he said. Sparked by Trade Minister C. D. Howe's visit to Mexico last year, Canadian Pacific Airlines and Trans-Canada Airlines are now bringing down dozens of Canadian businessmen, many of whom find it an advantage to come here for two weeks' work and two weeks' holiday."

Latin-American trade problems with Canada are not new to Mr. Leger. In 1943, after three years in the department of external affairs, Ottawa, he was posted to the Canadian legation in Chile for four years.

STOREKEEPER'S SON

The tall, greying, 41-year-old Canadian, likes to trace his first contact with Dominion affairs to the days when he was a small boy in St. Anicet on Lake St. Francis.

"We lived a simple life in small villages," he explained. "My father was a general merchant you know, and kept the post office. My first contact with Ottawa was when I was allowed to use the hammer to cancel stamps.

Jules went to school in Paris and there met Gaby Carmel of Montreal. They were married in Ottawa in 1938. Jules became a reporter on Le Droit, French-language Ottawa newspaper, and he still thinks a journalistic career is one of the most interesting in the world.

"Anyway," he says now, somewhat nostalgically, "it is the best trade to give one a sound approach to external affairs, because you have to have a fund of general knowledge." Travelling across Canada as a newspaperman he gained also a deep understanding

JOINED DEPARTMENT

But the war came, and in 1940, he was appointed assistant press censor. Shortly after he joined the department of external affairs. Chile was his first foreign post, where he remained until he was transferred to Canada House, London, in 1947. On his return to Canada in 1949 he was seconded to the prime minister's office and served there until 1950 when he returned to external affairs as head of the European division. From 1951 until the end of 1953 he was assistant under-secretary of state for external affairs.

Truck Plunges Into Creek Driver Escapes Uninjured

COBOURG (ENS)—A transport driver crawled uninjured from his cab early today after his vehicle had crashed through the guard rail of Benlock bridge, near Grafton, and plunged 15 feet into a creek.

The accident occurred at 5:45 a.m. and was the one to be investigated by OPP Constable Ralph Tremills of Cobourg when his cruiser was struck by a passenger train east of here.

ON DANGEROUS CURVE

Arnold Rosmussen, 25, of Calgary was driving a Superior Transport truck west along Highway 2 when he came to Benlock bridge which is on a dangerous curve, two miles west of Grafton. In the middle of the bridge he was in swideswipe collision with an eastbound transport, driven by Glen Goodfellow, 25, of Belleville.

Rosmussen's vehicle was struck a glancing blow and it went out of control, broke through the bridge's guard rail, and plunged 15 feet into the creek.

The cab was wrecked but Rosmussen was unharmed. There was only slight damage to Goodfellow's transport, owned by Wilson Transport of Belleville.

OPP Constable Kenneth Cook of Brighton investigated.

German Oil Industry Makes Big Recovery

HAMBURG (Reuters)—The West German oil industry, prostrate at the end of the Second World War now ranks among continental Europe's most important oil refineries.

Refining capacity has gone up to 10,500,000 tons a year. The entire refining capacity of Europe, including Britain, in 1953 was just short of 90,000,00 tons.

During the war Germany built up a considerable synthetic oil industry to make her panzer divisions independent of outside supplies. Large quantities were then imported from East Europe.

West Germany today gets 9-10th of her imported oil from the Middle East and the rest from South America.

TV NEWS

By Ken McCannan

A prominent place in the pages of television's history belongs to a pretty young Canadian girl named Joan Miller.

A curly-headed brunette who hailed originally from Vancouver, Miss Miller was an actress in amateur drama before she headed for London. She starved for six months, got a few stage jobs and was spotted by a BBC television producer. She became the announcer on a TV show called Picture Page.

One day she was at her announcing job in Alexandra Palace, London, when a group of U.S. engineers in New York were sitting before an ordinary British TV set testing a new type of antenna.

The face of Joan Miller, clear and disinct, flashed on their screen from 3,000 miles across the Atlantic. It was the first trans-Atlantic television reception. It happened in November 1938.

A that time almost 20,000 sets were in use in Britain, receiving regular programs from the BBC. Some of the screens, though, were no larger than the bottom of a milk bottle.

The lucky thing for us, we think, is that before television swept into Canada, the experimental stage had long since passed, TV was a proven and tested source of fun, information and relaxation. The knowledge gained in all those years of progress is combined in the new Dumont sets which we have at McCannon Electric 274 George St. Big, clear screens, powerful reception and the assurance of years of steady service are built into every set. Let us show you any time why Dumont leads the fleet of TV sets.

HYDRO SAFETY DEPARTMENT

Savings Through Safety

Ontario Hydro has always recognized that safety devices alone do not eliminate accidents. A special Safety Department carries out a continuing, comprehensive, educational safety program and in addition periodically checks equipment and reviews the safety methods employed in the Commission's widely diversified day-to-day operations. The marked reduction in major and minor injuries to Hydro personnel is a source of satisfaction and has materially assisted in maintaining the high standard of service associated with the name, "Hydro."

ONTARIO HYDRO . . . AT WORK FOR YOU AND YOURS

Information concerning Ontario Hydro can be obtained by writing to your Hydro Chairman, 620 University Avenue, Toronto.

DO YOU KNOW?
During 1953, fourteen Commission employees and three of their wives were awarded medals and certificates for merit and resuscitation work by the Canadian Electrical Association and National Safety Council.

Brighter Picture

Whatever the longer view is, the short one on employment and commerce in Canada is better than it has been. Both Mr. Howe, Minister of Trade, and Mr. Abbott as Finance Minister have spoken optimistically about it in the last week. The latter believes—despite a falling off in tax revenues during the first third of the year—that his budget prediction is still good. It was that the country's gross production would be as big in 1954 as it was last year.

* * *

The latest unemployment figures are better than they have been, generally across Canada; the "recession" seems to be receding, and not merely because employment is usually greater in summer than in winter. There is a definite improvement owing to an upward trend in the economy after some slow months in winter and spring. The figures from Ottawa show that 217,000 persons were without jobs and looking for work. This compares with 303,000 reported the month before. True, the current figure is higher than for the same period last year, when it was only 114,000. Thus the increase in unemployed people is a little more than 100,000. This is not small, but not alarming when it is considered that the total working force now employed amounts to about 5,000,000.

* * *

Employment and production figures from the United States—always a barometer for Canada—are higher than they have been since the first of the year, sufficiently high to encourage American business and industry and government to believe that the recession in the States has run its course. Corollary evidence of better times is the fact that the consumer prices there reversed a three-month trend last month by rising three-tenths of a point, instead of falling.

Bishops

There are more bishops (and archbishops) in Canada than the hierarchies of the Roman Catholic and Anglican churches include. For instance, there is the Rt. Rev. Archbishop Michael of Toronto, bishop of the Ukrainian Greek Orthodox Church of Canada, and over him is the Metropolitan, the Most Rev. Ilarion, of Winnipeg. The Greek Orthodox Church in Canada is presided over by the Archbishop of North and South America, whose name is Michael. However, neither this bishop nor any of his five assistant bishops lives in Canada; Archbishop Michael's address is 10 East 79th St., New York City. The Rumanian Orthodox Church in Canada has only two deaneries; the headquarters of the diocese and of His Grace Valerian V. Trifa, D.D., are to be found at Grey Tower Farm, Route No. 7, Jackson, Michigan. The Syrian Church in Canada is also under the jurisdiction of a Metropolitan living in the States; but it has a Vicar General, who is Dean of St. Nicholas Syrian cathedral in Montreal.

There are more than Orthodox bishops in Canada. The Free Methodist Church (148 churches, 123 ordained ministers, 3,425 members, headquarters at Port Credit) has four bishops. The Evangelical United Brethren Church—its "Canada Conference" has as President Bishop J. Balmer Showers, D.D., LL.D., who lives in Indianapolis. Its "Northwest Canada Conference" has as chairman a Bishop Praetorius, who lives in St. Paul, Minnesota.

Among the religious organizations in Canada which do not have bishops are the Presbyterian, United and Baptist churches, and the Church of Christ, Scientist, (20,795 adherents), Churches of Christ (Disciples), (9,363 adherents), the interdenominational Evangelical Union of South America, Seventh Day Adventists, Unitarian Churches ("actual" membership 1,500 but not including several Icelandic churches and missions), the Salvation Army, the Mennonites (of whom there are 126,000), the Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada (50,000 members), the Religious Society of Friends (Quakers—about 1,200 in all in Canada), and Baha'i World Faith. We note in passing that the "National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Canada" was incorporated by Act of Parliament in 1949.

Curiously enough, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints has about 38 bishops but only one temple. It, at Cardston, Alberta, is the only Mormon temple in the British Commonwealth. The bishops are not ecclesiastically important, being only the supervisors of "Wards" in the "Stakes of Zion", which have Presidents. There are four Stakes in Canada, all in Alberta. The "Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints", whose headquarters are in Independence, Missouri, has as President of the Canadian Church Bishop L. W. Kohlman, Box 382, Guelph.

One bishop our catalogue has not yet included is the Rt. Rev. George A. Veck, consecrated bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church in Canada in 1947. Bishop Veck has his headquarters in Ottawa. The church, formed under charter from Queen Victoria in 1886, has only one synod in Canada. Its clergy number 13 and it has six churches.

There seems to be no hard-and-fast rule about the style of bishops. Roman Catholic archbishops and bishops are referred to as "Most Reverend", but in the Church of England only archbishops are "Most Reverend"—bishops are "Right Reverend." This latter is a designation now also used for and by Moderators of the United Church. Bishops of the Orthodox churches are referred to as "Right Reverend", and of the Free Methodist Church as "Reverend".

At the installation of Bishop Benjamin Webster in Peterborough this week as eighth bishop of the diocese there were in attendance five Most Reverends, and His Eminence James Cardinal McGuigan.

A Parliamentary Paradox

The eightieth birthday of the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen was celebrated on June 16th last with appropriate tributes, and with one statement by Mr. Meighen himself which we consider extremely important because it illustrates a paradox of our democratic parliamentary system. Referring to his political career, and perhaps chiefly to the 'Constitutional Issue' which was the central point in it, he is reported by Time magazine to have said: "It doesn't make much difference to the public . . . today whether I was right or wrong 20 or 30 years ago, but it is very important to me—and to history". In the accompanying reference to Mr. Meighen he is praised because he refused to pander to "the lust for votes", and it is suggested that it was his unbreachable integrity which robbed him of popular support.

We think that this deserves examination. The suggestion that Mr. Meighen's integrity was of too fine a quality for the Canadian electors to appreciate does not lend itself to discussion, for nothing conclusive can be proved either way. Nor do we care much about the suggestion that a man who gets more votes than another man has 'pandered' for them; too often such accusations are simply sour grapes, and while we do not wish to introduce a contentious note into the celebration of any man's eightieth birthday, we must point out that Mr. Meighen, who is a lifelong admirer of Shakespeare, certainly knows the tragedy of Coriolanus, who was also too proud to please the people.

What we do think important is Mr. Meighen's remark that the rightness or wrongness of his cause is important to him and to history. This is true, but it puts public affairs on a very personal level; the rightness or wrongness of any cause concerns all the people of Canada, as well, and it is wrong for a politician ever to forget it. To take the high line, to refuse to 'pander', to leave the decision to history, is nobility of a kind, but it is also not practical politics.

The political leader who lives in a parliamentary democracy is obliged to use every possible means that honour and the law permit in order to get votes. Without votes he cannot gain power, and without power he can do nothing. The finest political integrity is of no avail if it never carries the responsibility of government. The role of Opposition is a great one, but it is not one which any party can assume as a life-work if it expects that life to be long, effective or deeply useful to the nation. And to call the means which lead to power 'pandering' is to show a lack of understanding of democracy. And here we must make it perfectly clear that 'pander' is not Mr. Meighen's word, but that of the widespread, tendentious and powerful Time.

That Mr. Meighen's great abilities and unquestioned integrity remained to a great extent cloistered virtues in Canadian political history was certainly a real loss to this country. That our system of government demands that a political leader should be able to please and win the support of an electorate of greatly varying intelligence may perhaps be a serious fault in that system. But the condition exists and the man who would lead Canada must take full account of that condition. To satisfy oneself and to satisfy history is noble, but it is nobler and even more difficult to satisfy the political demands of one's country, as well.

NOTES AND COMMENT

A designer may describe a gown as 'dramatic', but it is the woman who wears it who determines whether the drama is tragedy or comedy.

Every day we receive information about seminars, clinics, conferences, workshops, buzz-groups and pepper-pots being held this summer. Only the invincibly old-fashioned still hold meetings.

MOUSTACHE IN YACHTING CAP

Groucho Marx In London

A Profile of the Famous Comedian

"THERE'S a Mr. Groocho Marx on for you," said the lady operator. Was this a joke? "Hello," said the voice the other end: it sounded quiet, but a bit testy. Could we call? Well, all right, it agreed, mid-day tomorrow at the hotel. Could we have a talk till about one o'clock? There was a strong mouth-clicking noise. "Till twelve-thoity?" said the voice.

We decided to leave the flash lamp downstairs in the hotel, in case it put him off. Had we an appointment asked the large uniformed man behind the desk, unbelievingly. He started to ring up. At about this moment, a kind of quiet confusion broke out near the key desk. A voice was saying . . . "From the newspaper, anyone checked in for me?" This was it.

He was much smaller than expected, almost tiny. That stooping walk (the "buzzardly" shuffle) was there, his arms hanging forward from round shoulders, the head peering from side to side; less accentuated than in the films, but visible. Even here, he looked as though he was being tailed by a cop or was tailing that dignified heiress (there actually was one sitting in the hotel foyer behind a marble pillar). Incredulous, we followed along: Mr. Marx has slowish movements, but he seemed to cover a lot of ground.

Our small, rather awkward group found its way into a sort of waiting-room with huge flower decorations, and sat down near a window. It looked as though it might be a little difficult. Then Mr. Marx put out a few jabbing questions, feeling his way like a boxer.

"Have you ever been to America?"

Well, no, we hadn't . . .

"Don't you have any curiosity?" The words came out in an even flow, every syllable receiving equal stress. A neat brown hand was worrying the arm of his chair (he had no cigar to keep it quiet).

It was as though you were getting the film Groucho through almost imperceptible lace curtains. On the screen, the Groucho shades are black and white—particularly black, with the hair and the eyebrows, and that moustache. But sitting in the chair, the shade was brown; hair brown, with surprisingly little grey; brown skin; small brown moustache. His face is long, but not quite as long as in the pictures, and he is quieter, gentler. His art as an actor, one feels, is subtly to accentuate his natural personality.

We got down to business. Could he say why he was called Groucho? "Because I always look so solemn, I guess. My real name is Julius, but anything's better than that — I think that's why Caesar got assassinated. Can you think of any other Julius in history? There's a fish dealer in Philadelphia called Julius Garfinkle, but he sells pretty bad fish."

He builds his conversation in a sort of upside-down climax. Every step you take (and he somehow projects the talk around you, not himself), the ground seems to fall away beneath you.

Was it true that Mr. Marx and his four brothers once roller-skated along New York pavements to face a court charge? Mr. Marx thought that might have been the publicity men. "I don't know everything my brothers do." He paused, up went the eyebrows. "And they don't know everything I do."

Mr. Marx, who is sixty-three, was born in a tenement on Manhattan's Upper East Side, the son of a Jewish tailor from Alsace. Father Marx was a lovable man with a genius for failure. Only one of the boys ever reached high-school and that was not Groucho.

Although Groucho was the third son, and not the oldest, he had always seemed to be trying to play the part of the responsible one. The others—Harpo, the "dumb" harpist, and Chico, with his Italian accent and thumb-finger piano playing — never seemed to know reality existed. At a very early age, Groucho kept the family in funds by touring with a child act; when still in short pants, he knew all about bolting managers, unpaid landladies and revues that folded.

The other brothers joined him later, first in vaudeville, to form their act of well-planned chaos — the plans often being changed just before the curtain went up. For years, the brothers went from disaster to disaster, unnoticed.

Uncle Al, the brother of their mother, Minnie, wrote their first vaudeville act; later, in musical comedies and films, they were assisted by the best professional writers, such as Perelman, Kaufman and Ryskind, with whom they made their first great successes, "The Coconuts," "Animal Crackers," "Night at the Opera," and "Day at the Races." "We did a bit of writing, too," said Groucho.

The Marx brothers never got spoilt by success or adulation: things never stayed normal long enough. It soon becomes very evident that Groucho is completely unspoilt —he is too wise to let things go to his head. It may be because of this that he is more famous today, at least in the United States, than he has ever been before.

Four times after the war, Groucho thought of starting a radio career. Then came his chance with "You Bet Your Life" on N.B.C. It got off to a slow start in October, 1947; critics mourned that a great comedian was now an indifferent quizz-master. But by recording it and editing the pace, Groucho found his form. Within two years, he was acclaimed America's best radio comedian.

When he was ready, he turned to TV, and now "You Bet Your Life" runs on TV every Thursday evening and on sound radio every Wednesday. "I have seven free days a week," he remarks.

For these broadcasts, Groucho uses no scripts, no prepared anecdotes, no songs, and employs no gag writers or stooges. Crouched forward on a high stool, collar loosened, microphone between his knees, he attacks his guests. He does not choose the people, nor does he ever meet them beforehand or know what they look like. "They are four normal people — but two will be a little whackey. Everyone's a little crazy if you talk to them long enough. And they're all a bit exhibitionists or else they wouldn't come on.

"There was an elevator operator. D'you know what his hobby was? Translating popular American songs into Sanscrit. He sang a couple, too. They were pretty good. Recently I had General Omar Bradley —, a most modest, soft-spoken man. You'd never have thought he'd been in the profession of wholesale murder."

The interview proceeded.

Had he two sons? "One son. That's one thing I happen to be an authority on." Was it true that he lived alone in a large house in Beverley Hills? "Not every night." He looked out of the window at a rainy day. "I'd have thought the birth-rate here would be higher than it is." He looked absently around: "I wear a yachting cap and a raincoat when I'm in London, but it's not customary attire. Oh to be in a bathing suit now that June is here! Browning?"

London, he said, was one of his favourite cities ("flattery won't get you anywhere"), because it was one of the few places with good theatre. "But I don't understand half the jokes. I hear the audience laughing around me. I don't get what's going on. They say we all speak the same language. It's not true." But he thought a lot of one revue (that has received very mixed notices here). "That judge scene was worthy of Gilbert. "We've no one could write lyrics like that in the States."

He loves Gilbert and Sullivan, likes to sit for hours strumming their pieces on his guitar. He spoke of Henry James, Ring Lardner, most reverently of Thurber, and of E. B. White. "I think White's last book's as good as Lewis Carroll."

He spoke of Chaplin, whom he has known since before Chaplin got into movies. "I remember he turned down a hundred-dollars-a-week job with a movies studio. He said there must be a catch in it. No one could be that good. The next time I saw him he had gold plate." He mused: "I guess that guy's pretty mixed up in his politics now — as who isn't?"

He looked at his watch. It was 12:40. He had to go down to Buckingham Palace. No, he knew the way to the place. "We've been visiting there a lot out in front. My secretary here, Miss Hertford (one of the Connecticut Hertfords) wanted to get a picture of the Guard walking along. I walked along beside him — they go pretty fast — he said to me copy cat." Mr. Marx pulled on a large white cap — he seemed to have some trouble with it — and made for the door. "We go past the Palace almost every day," he said. An American View: HAUNTED

Old Witch In Moscow

By EDWARD CRANKSHAW

TUSHINO is a suburb of Moscow. It is also Moscow's main airport, where each year the grand display of the Soviet Air Force takes place, and where, very often, visiting foreigners first set foot on Russian soil.

Tushino stands, it can be said, for all that is up-to-date in the Soviet Union.

And so, up to a point, it does. But it also stands for something else — for the old Russia behind the gleaming concrete facade of the U.S.S.R.

Tushino is in the news today not because of the latest jetbomber, not because of a new giant runway, but because it is the home of a miracle woman, "the healer of Tushino."

The Communist party is furious, because Communists do not hold with miracles. The Party would like to deny that anything so degrading and reactionary as a miracle woman can exist in the Soviet Union. But the state of mind which can permit an old witch to flourish and grow rich in the suburbs of the capital itself is so widespread that the newspaper "Moscow Pravda" has considered it necessary to admit the existence of the evil in order to denounce it.

So Granny Martynova and her chief assistant, Aleshka the Stoker, have made the headlines.

Their cottage on Zakharkov street has become a place of pilgrimage. "Moscow Pravda" is particularly indignant because the "pilgrims" are not merely illiterate peasants and unskilled workers, but include representatives of the new Soviet elite, who should be ashamed of themselves for believing in a lot of superstitious nonsense.

To drive the lesson home, the newspaper names some of these people: a well-known musical comedy actor; the foreman of the technical control department of Moscow's leading "Hammer and Sickle" factory, a chief technician of the Moscow transformer factory, as well as many others "with diplomas from secondary and higher educational esablishments."

✧ ✧ ✧

THE SCENE at the wise woman's hut, so vividly described in "Moscow Pravda" is primitive in the extreme, and reminiscent of the 19th century Russian satirists.

A silent queue is lined up against the wall of Granny Martynova's pig-sty. All are men, except for one woman ("youngish, fashionably dressed, with a brightly colored head-shawl") who has come on her husband's behalf, for Granny will not heal women. All clutch a jar, a bottle or a cup, for the "holy water." The queue, with its strange mixture of primitives and intellectuals, is marshalled by the brawny Aleshka the Stoker, who also acts as master of ceremonies. Aleshka lets in six at a time.

"The old man with the goatee, the man in the green hat, a heavy fat man with three chins, and others who entered the hut saw a very old woman sitting in the corner," the newspaper says. "Beside her there stood an ordinary water tub full of water, and a drinking mug.

"Aleshka the Stoker went up to the old woman and shouted right into her ear: 'Now Granny! Up with you!'

"The old woman rose importantly from her seat, touched the tub with a shaky hand, bent right over it, and soundlessly moved her lips. Somebody coughed.

"'Sh . . sh! Quiet!' hissed Aleshka the Stoker. 'Granny is putting a spell on the water.'

And one after another the "pilgrims" go up to receive Granny's healing touch and a mugful of water ladled out of the washtub by Aleshka. Ordinary well-water, declares "Moscow Pravda," "put under a spell" by Granny Martynova and guaranteed by her as a "universal specific against cancer, heart disease, stomach ulcers, neurasthenia, rheumatism . . . "

For every mugful Granny gets a ten-ruble note. And "Moscow Pravada" wails: "How can people of good education stand in a queue outside Granny's hut, waiting for Aleshka the Stoker to fill their bottles and jars with water from the washtub?"

It does not ask what is wrong with an ideology that conditions the minds of its victims from the cradle onward to believe in nothing but the materialism of Lenin, only to see them stray from the straight and narrow path and kneel before the bogus old "Sorceress of Tushino."

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it.

And many people shall go and say, come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.

He shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. (Isa. 2:2-4.)

✧ ✧ ✧

Look upon Zion, the city of our solemnities: thine eyes shall see Jerusalem a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that shall not be taken down; not one of the stakes thereof shall ever be removed, neither shall any of the cords thereof be broken. But there the glorious Lord will be unto us a place of broad rivers and streams; wherein shall go no galley with oars, neither shall gallant ship pass thereby. For the Lord is our judge, the Lord is our lawgiver, the Lord is our King; he will save us. (Isa. 33:20-22.)

✧ ✧ ✧

The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord: and he delighteth in his way. (Ps. 37:23.)

✧ ✧ ✧

Teach me, O Lord, the way of thy statutes; and I shall keep it unto the end. Give me understanding, and I shall keep thy law; yea, I shall observe it with my whole heart . . . And I will walk at liberty: for I seek thy precepts. (Ps. 119:33, 34, 45.)

Personal Possessions

"The love of possessions has, I suppose, produced many ills and I have in my own experience known men and women who would have been better if all their property had been taken from them and they had been condemned to two years in a tub. But such unhappy people are exceptions. I know that my own possessions, the things I have gathered round me through life, perpetuate the variety of my jobs, confirm my idiosyncracy, and reflect, in their different and often funny little ways, such individuality as I possess." (The Hon. Sir Harold Nicolson, essayist and biographer, talking in the BBC's programme "London Calling Asia".)

A BRITISH OPINION

Helicopters received the Freedom of the City of London yesterday.

From Strachan to Sweatman & Dummer Ghost Churches St. Mark's, Warsaw, Endures

(Third in a series of three articles).

BY RICHARD F. CHOATE

In a retrospective survey of St. Mark's Church (Anglican) Warsaw, covering the period being commemorated by the present centennial observances, we meet a good many clerical figures of renown.

Of these church leaders, the most widely known was Bishop John Strachan (1778-1867) of the Diocese of Toronto, who came in for both warm praise and deeply-felt censure in the Mackenzie rebellion days, round about 1837. His bravery, as exemplified during the cholera epidemic, when he continued his personal ministrations to sufferers after even doctors had fled, has never been questioned. "As Bishop", it has been said, "he was hard-working and self-sacrificing; as teacher, he had to his credit a long line of famous pupils".

Over against this was his record in the polictical field, wherein he was associated with the Family Compact, and with dogged Scottish persistence supported the Clergy Reserve system. To him his church was the King's Church which should maintain the political prerogatives of the Established Church in England, notwithstanding the different climate of public opinion in Canada.

STRACHAN IN WARSAW

When Bishop Strachan went to Warsaw to conduct a confirmation service not long after the church was built there in 1854, the mosquito season was at its height. Hence the friendly greeting of Dummer people was tempered with a not-so-friendly humming serenade.

In consonance with a custom which prevailed for upwards of 50 years, when Anglican (or as they were often called then, "Episcopal") clergymen came to Warsaw to conduct services, the Bishop was entertained at the present writer's boyhood home—that of his grandfather, Thomas Choate, founder of the village.

Bishop Strachan was quite capable of taking the 'slings and arrows" of the mosquitoes calmly and in his stride as he had taken many other kinds of "slings and arrows" aimed at him in the polemics of the day. Wishing to walk along the Indian river, he invited the writer's aunt—later Mrs. (Professor) John Moore—to accompany him. From her the writer has heard at first hand the story of their pleasant pilgrimage along the old "Rock Road", after the Bishop had allayed fears of discomfort with the remark: "Oh, what are a few mosquitoes? Let them enjoy themselves—it isn't every day they have a Bishop to pick!"

(EDITOR'S NOTE: In last week's article on this subject it was stated that the 1858 Directory of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria gave the population of Warsaw as 1,550 and that of Lakefield as 80. This was a typographical error. The figures should have read: Warsaw 150; Lakefield 80.)

A survey of the clercial succession of a century at the Warsaw church calls to personal memory a later church leader, the revered Bishop Sweatman ("Arthur Toronto"). An interesting Sweatman anecdote is recounted in the notes on the church compiled by Canon Robert W. Allen, of Oakville.

To the Lakefield-Warsaw parish in 1882 came the Rev. (later Canon) John Farncomb of Newcastle, Ont. Arriving in Lakefield on one occasion, Bishop Sweatman was driven over to Warsaw by Mr. Farncomb who introduced him to Mr. Choate. The Bishop was in the habit of dressing very informally when on his holidays. The rector noticing that Mr. Choate was looking rather quizzically at the Bishop, contrived to take him aside where he learned the reason when their host remarked, "I do not appreciate jokes of that kind. That man is not a Bishop!"

"However", as Canon Allen adds, "we all know that Bishop Sweatman's dignity was in the man rather than in his clothes, a dignity which Mr. Choate on further acquaintance loved and admired. Times have changed." To which remark the present writer, who was confirmed by Bishop Sweatman and who as a boy walked with him along the same old Rock Road traversed by Bishop Strachan, is moved to subjoin a personal word of tribute. For the quiet dignity and broad culture of Bishop Sweatman won for him an affection which still persists in the minds of all who knew him.

EARLIEST SERVICES

So much for the prelacy, in particular—although volumes might be added regarding the services to the Peterborough district given by successive Bishops of Toronto, including our own Derwyn T. Owen.

From church records we learn little of the earliest services at Warsaw, which were held periodically, at least, in a little log schoolhouse. Rev. Samuel Armour, of St. John's, the first Peterborough Anglican rector, who was in charge of the whole district, visited the Dummer village, and his successor, Rev. Richard D'Olier, mentions it. Rev. C. T. Wade visited it in 1837, as a travelling missionary and it remained under the care of Rev. Robert J. C. Taylor until the present church was established in 1854, with Rev. Mark Burnham as first Incumbent. Both Mr. D'Olier and Mr. Taylor speak of the services conducted in different parts of Dummer.

In 1874, Rev. George I. Everest, who was an accomplished flautist, was appointed to Lakefield and Warsaw. In a letter written in 1875 he mentions the second fire at the Choate mills in Warsaw.

His successor (1882), Rev. John Farncomb, also was a man of diversified talent. He designed and installed the church's first stained glass window. During his term and that of Rev. (later Archdeacon) George Warren, a chancel was added to the church, the nave was redecorated, the pews rearranged to a middle aisle, and the gallery and screen at the rear removed.

"GHOST" CHURCHES

In 1898, Rev. Walter Archbold became the resident Incumbent at Warsaw, serving also the St. George's church built at Hall's Glen, near McCracken's Landing. Mrs. Archbold was the former Annie Morphet, sister of Mr. Vern Morphet, now a warden of St. John's, Peterborough. This attractive little church was well attended for some years, its annual summer tea meeting being a magnet for many Stony Lake sojourners. In 1902, Rev. A. S. Dickinson took charge, an attachment being formed with the South Burleigh Mission (i.e. Young's Point, Haultain and Hall's Bridge). Succeeding him in 1903 was Rev. F. H. Battersby, father of Miss Margaret Battersby, now Principal of the Peterborough Business College. Next in succession were Rev. C. R. Spencer (1908); Rev. P. B. Delom (temporary); and Rev. Cyril G. D. Browne.

St. George's on October 27, 1912, became another of the "ghost churches" of Dummer. Its history was brief but interesting. It came into being when Rev. George Warren, a self-sacrificing worker found himself overtaxed physically by distances he had to travel from Lakefield. He had conducted open air services at Stony Lake in summer and at the Orange Hall, Hall's Glen. Mr. F. J. Tate of Lakefield gave able and tireless assistance. The building committee of St. George's was: W. R. McCracken, R. Crowe, Sr., A. L. Dunford, William Armstrong, D. Crowe, A. F. Choate, H. A. Moore (treasurer), R. Cluff, David Madill and Robert Hunter.

The cornerstone was laid by Thomas Blezzard, M.P.P., East Peterborough. The Rev. Richard Hyde (Presbyterian), of Warsaw, was among the speakers. The church was dismantled in 1922, the pulpit being taken to Warsaw and other fittings sent to Haliburton.

St. Marks' at Warsaw was consecrated November 24, 1908, by the Coadjutor Bishop of Toronto, W. D. Reeve. The sentence of consecration was read by Rev. W. J. Creigton, the Incumbent being the Rev. C. R. Spencer. Among those who at different times conducted the services at Warsaw were: Rev. Sparham Sheldrake ("Sigma") and Rev. A. W. Mackenzie, both of the Grove School, Lakefield.

OTHER LINKS

In later years there were frequent changes in the church connections of the district. Warsaw being linked for a time with the Stony Lake Mission; with Norwood, with St. John's, St. George's and All Saints, Peterborough; and in 1950 again with Lakefield. Clergymen who served in this period were: Rev. John J. Robbins, Rev. J. H. Stringer, Rev. J. L. Hughes (who preached the Centennial sermon); Rev. Walter Cox; Rev. T. J. O'Connor-Fenton (Norwood); Rev. E. W. G. Worral, Ven. W. P. Robertson; Rev. T. H. Floyd; Rev. E. C. Moore; Rev. W. A. Filer; Rev. W. E. Kibblewhite, and the present rector, Rev. Lloyd J. Delaney.

In those days, St. Mark's was not without its humors. Heating with two wood-burning box stoves situated in the rear corners, which were connected with the main stove pipe running the length of the church, called for utmost skill in the fireman. Kindling being laid in each stove the match-bearer had to run at high speed from one to the other. Only when the two streams of smoke met head-on and merged at the middle pipe was the firing operation a success. Otherwise there was a smoky church. The church, too, was sometimes a resort of yellow-jackets. Care was necessary lest these would be called from their retreats by undue heating in midwinter.

One Sunday when the "Januar' winds were blawing wild", and snow drifts were piled high, a knot of several persons had assembled for worship. They had all but concluded that the holding of a service on such a day was out of the question, when the door opened and in walked the rector, the beloved Rev. Mr. Warren. An indefatigable worker, he explained that he had walked over from Lakefield, deeming it too bad a day to take out a horse.

100-YEAR RECORDS

Such in the main was the spirit of the long succession of "gentlemen of the cloth"—men of strong soul and high endeavor, whose 100-year record is written in "The Annals of the Parish".

Graven on the stones of St. Mark's Cemetery on the hilltop just above the church are the epitaphs of Dummer people of four or five generations.

"Their names, their years, spelt
by the unlettered Muse
The place of fame and elegy supply."

Is there need for fame or elegy, or "long-drawn aisle or fretted vault" for these people of "homely joys and destiny obscure", who lived their lives socially and not discretely or in detachment from those of their fellows? With dignity and self-respect they exemplified in their persons and their works the abiding truth that "we are members one of another".

Those who sleep in the Country churchyard at Warsaw are one with those of Thomas Gray's Stoke Poges. They have one tale to te'l—one lesson to teach. From them we have much to learn. But we shall not learn it by vain pursuit of speculative negations. We may be sure that among them were no "mute, inglorious Miltons". For as an eminent educational psychologist has remarked: "If they were mute and inglorious they were not Miltons". We find life only if and when we come to it. It is never embalmed in words. By their fruits—their living fruits—we know our pioneers.

Warsaw's hilltop ground is a place of final sanctuary for all dwellers in Dummer (and beyond), without thought of denomination or creed.

St. Mark's is The People's Cemetery. As the chimes at St. John's are the People's Chimes.

Hot? 80 Below In Omemee Box

By DICK CAMPBELL

Feeling the heat?

We were interviewing Tony Stacey's thermometer the other day, and a cowed, beaten and deflated thermometer it was too. It had just survived an 80-below-zero session in Mr. Stacey's custom-built deep freeze, handmade at Mr. Stacey's "Refrigeration Enterprises" firm in Omemee.

This unique firm, jointly operated by Tony Stacey and his brother, Fred, specializes in making off-beat items, not usually produced by larger refrigeration concerns. The $1,000 deep freeze, for example, will be used to test the staying powers of various types of varnish in a Fort Erie manufacturing firm. Presumably if a varnish can stand this cold, it could be used to polish up the North Role.

Keeping chilly company with the thermometer were two bottles of heavy duty motor oil. The oil was frozen harder than the heart of Scrooge.

Adventurously we touched a finger to the inside of the tank. The finger stuck. We yelped. Said Mr. Stacey: "You're lucky you got your finger back at all. It's pretty cold in there."

HAND-MADE

But this special-duty cabinet, believed the only one of its kind, is just one item manufactured by this family concern, which produces its goods almost entirely by hand. Other less-ambitious freezers also are equipped with stryofoam insulation and aluminum linings. Aluminum throws heat rays back better than steel or wood. The $1,000 job has nine inches of insulation all the way around.

The Stacey brothers manufacture most of the shipping cases for Red Cross blood. These crates contain three pints of blood, plus a can of water which is frozen solid. (Everybody, says Tony Stacey, asks why the can doesn't expand and crack, but this seems a trade secret.) The ice stays solid while the blood remains at a constant temperature of 38 degrees for as long as 48 hours.

If you are planning to go over Niagara Falls, you could do worse than squeeze yourself into a Stacey Red Cross crate. They have gone over the falls, to test their hardiness, and emerged with no more than a scratch or two. One crate was dropped from the Rainbow bridge above the falls, had quite a bumpy journey downstream and was completely unmarked inside.

Freezers for farms, homes, restaurants, open top display refrigerators for butcher shops, all manner of ice cream freezers are among the made-to-order items turned out by the Stacey brothers and their staff of three. Says Tony Stacey: "In refrigeration we've pretty nearly everything." They also make such non-freezing items as metal doors and arborite tabletops.

One thing they haven't got is motors for the various electrically-operated appliances they turn out. The compressor for the deep-deep-deep freeze, for example, was made by the CGE. The Staceys, however, install the motors and do most of their own designing and engineering work.

FISH-FREEZE

Off-beat items manufactured at the plant include a huge fish-freeze for the Department of Lands and Forests in Campbellford, a unit for the horse slaughterhouse in Norwood (which kills horses largely for the Quaker Oats dog-food plant in Trenton) and a blood bank for the department of health and welfare's Indian affairs division in Calgary.

Heavy duty oil and thermometer freeze in Tony Stacey's deep freeze. It's about 80 below zero inside this cabinet.

Manager Tony Stacey spends comparatively little time at his plant, although he supervises general layout and design. Most of the time he's on the road, touring hospitals, stores and government agencies which might be interested in his products. He's also been displaying his wares at rural fairs, but may not this year: "I don't get enough business for the time it takes."

The busines is a $40,000 one and the overhead, say the Stacey's, is practically nil. The workshop is a reconverted barn on the outskirts of Omemee and the rent is $25 a month.

WHY OMEMEE?

One of the most frequent questions asked the Staceys is why they should settle in Omemee (pop. 598) since it is not exactly an industrial metropolis. Says Tony Stacey: "The location is central, the rent is low, mine is not the kind of business where I get anything worthwhile from people calling at the shop, and I like Omemee."

Reason for the lack of business from callers is that the Staceys do not operate a retail outlet. Occasionally they handle commercial refrigerators on trade-ins, but this is a minor part of the business.

A Toronto native, Anthony Stacey, 34, entered the refrigeration business in Niagara Falls in 1946, working for a man who is now his chief competitor. He was general manager of this firm before setting up his Omemee business in 1951.

Tony's younger brother, Fred, brings a curious background into the deep-freeze business. He was for many years associated with the Iron Fireman concern, working on heating equipment. He joined his brother last fall. Fred is 26.

Although they have all they can handle now, the Staceys have some expansion plans in mind. They may expand their premises and may go further afield in sales. Although requests come from all parts of the country, the firm's usual bailiwick is bounded by Haliburton, Marmora and Lindsay.

Summer is coming, and summer, naturally enough, is the best season for the refrigeration business. Some day, when you feel especially soggy, consider the Staceys of Omemee. Or visit the plant and get a chilly reception. Perhaps the day will come when personalized freezing units will be marketed, along the same principles as electric blankets. If they are, the trade name likely will be Stacey.

If there is a journalistic phrase that is more threadbare and less imaginative that the belaboured one about black bass "Ounce for ounce and pound for pound, the gamest fish in fresh water," we have yet to find it.

Why writers cannot come right out and call it Black Dynamite, Bombshell Bass or Old Favourite, we shall never know. We have great respect for black bass and enjoy watching the males just about now in the shallows guarding their young in the gravel depressions. Pop Bass is the busiest thing underwater; he darts at everything from snooping fry of various types to grinning 'lunge that look to him the size of Moby Dick.

We hope Pop rides herd on his young 'uns till they are able to shove off for themselves because if his family are backward the Old Man is going to be grabbing at various hooked lures in five days time.

In other words, bass season opens and so does the season for 'lunge. Anchored boat fishing is finished and the fat, for fish, in the Kawarthas is in the fire.

We are in business. We wait panting for the sight of some of those splendid mantel models that fishermen will drag upstairs into the newsroom, flop across our typewriter and ask:

"Ya seen anything bigger than that, Buster?"

$1,000,000-Soaker

On our way to work one morning this week we ran into St. John's Church sexton Dick Ford who stood beaming at the well-soaked church grounds. The downpour of the night before was a "million-dollar rain", declared Dick.

Now a "million" is a mighty big word that we use sparingly in our vocabulary, so, we trundled off to confer with agricultural representative Ken Best to see if it was safe to write in such glowing terms. Apparently we were on safe ground and, though Ken could not tell us how far a half-inch rainfall might penetrate, it brought nothing but good at this season, he said.

Aside from the Kawarthas region the country was dangerously dry. The rain brought needed life to lush, maturing grain and hay crops. It dampened the fire hazard to "Low-low" and added to the water table in swamps.

The whole discussion ended with a finger-shaken warning that people who sprinkled their lawns half-heartedly each evening were doing more harm than good. It works this way.

Light lawn sprinklings raise the root structure of grasses to receive moisture when grass should be soaked to extend moisture down as far as possible. A good soaking once a week does more good than a piddling spray each night (often an excuse for the man of the house to get out of doing the supper dishes).

Chewing Match

We rarely hear of postmen biting dogs but visa versa seems to be an unpopular pastime. Letter carrier Frank Adam of 114 Dufferin St., had an experience this week that lifted him out of the ordinary. He has scars to prove it.

Frank was on his walk on Inverlea St., and stopped at a house to say "hello" to one of the children there. A black squirrel appeared from somewhere and jumped on his back; he brushed it off and with quick foot and handwork managed to trap the Thing between the screen and front doors.

The following day the same squirrel jumped Frank again at the same house. In trying to give it the brush-off this time the beastie bit his thumb, took a few chunks out of his back and ended up by biting Frank on the lips.

Frank knocked the animal off somehow and killed it.

Please, dear readers, don't write in saying the squirrel was killed out of season. As the aggressor it was killed as a matter of self-defence.

What would you have done?

Postie Adam didn't use up any of his sick-leave time over the incident; he is carrying around his mail and honourable scars regardless.

Petroglyph Paragraph

All archeologists and anthropologists we have written for information on our Burleigh township Indian rock carvings have replied. We are pleased with their prompt interest. University of Michigan's Professor E. F. Greenman says, in part:

". . . The large figure that looks to be an arrowhead would place the carvings at somewhere between the ages of 3,500 and 1,500 B.C. . . . totemic in origin, an attempt to gain magical control over animals or other things, either for the hunting of them, or, they were held in some special semi-religious relationship to a tribal group. . . . carvings resemble those found in Salinac county, Mich. . . . preserve them . . . they are worth it."

Hon. Harold Scott assured us that definite action is to be taken by the museum people this summer. Oh happy days.

With kickoff day July 5 for the Orfuns' quarterback club (ladies' division), a grid item might be of interest to wind up the week. This piece comes from Cobourg: "The Galloping Ghosts have not yet cast the die for the coming season, nor have they cast anything against it. The Ghosts need help if they are to survive and it may be that the help is forthcoming. But the chances of entering the Central Ontario group are not yet as good as they might be. Peterborough Orfuns, who won the loop, are now fearful that their biggest and bitterest enemies, the Ghosts, are hurt. Where once the Orfuns would gladly have hurt the Ghosts, now they are worried for fear their brothers-in-arms won't take the field this fall."

* * * * * *

How true. There has been hot rivalry for years between the classy Cobourg Ghosts and the Orfuns, the Wraiths ruling the roost for many pigskin seasons—after Orfuns went senior just before the war—and the Peterborough pack dominating for the past two years. But in these past two football campaigns, Orfuns found Cobourg their toughest opposition, and also their best gate attraction. While insults flow freely between the two centres each autumn, football players, officials and fans here would sure hate to see the Ghosts dissipate into the thin air wafting across district gridirons when fall brings the big-shouldered boys into the athletic picture once more.

It'll Be Oakville Next

No senior ball game here tonight, the Petes being unable to arrange one of their postponements as other VOBL clubs have weekend engagements. However, there'll be diamond action in Riverside Park at 8:30 Monday night, when Oakville Oaks play Joe Lowrey's squad. Their second appearance here this schedule, Petes having beaten 'em 4-1 last outing. Haven't heard who will toe the slab for the local club, possibly Jerry Frizzelle who was too much for the Oaks before. Petes need the win to keep up in the keen race. The July 1 holiday attraction is a night number, too, Satch Paige's Globe Trotters vs. House of Davids in a floodlight exhibition.

Local Trailermen trek this aft to St. Kitts for an OLA fixture. They don't know it—as this paper comes out after they leave—but they'll have another player awaiting them there to join the lineup tonight. Prexy Bob Peirson signed him and told no one but Bob Thorpe (who will keep it quiet) in order to surprise the Petes and give 'em a lift when they take the floor tonight. The player is Don Campbell, smart centre, who starred when Owen Sound won the Mann Cup in '50, some of his mates being Moon Wootton, Curly Mason and Russ Slater. He shone for Fergus last season. A canny little player (much like Ike Hildebrand, who will be loosening up here next week), Campbell is good for a couple of goals game after game. He should help the Petes plenty.

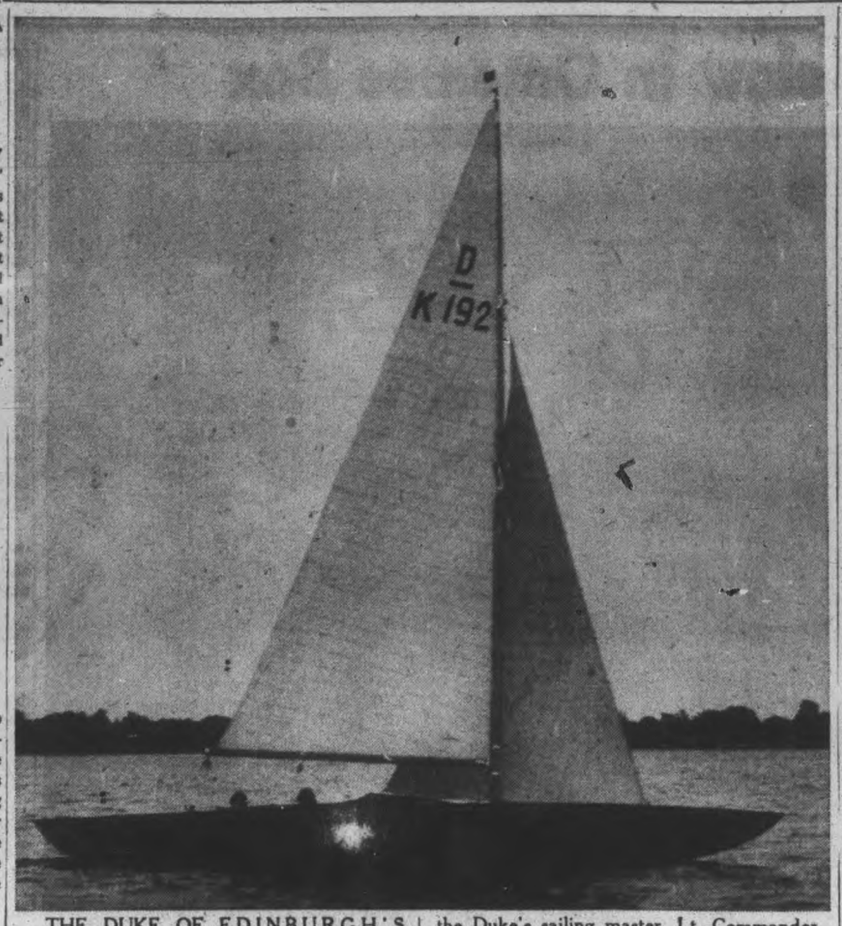
Wasn't Raining Violets

From what we hear Jupiter Pluvius was a sort of minor deity in the age of mythology, but he does send down the rains, and that is important at times. It certainly was last night with a large crowd gathering at Miller Bowl for the big lacrosse match betwixt A's and Petes. Jupe did his nasty worst a quarter of an hour ere game time and Ref Piper Bain (taking a look at the soggy field) said "no game tonight." After a warm day and a hot buildup for a Friday fray between the two top teams, tied for first place, it was really tough. Just cost the local club some 2,500 fans paid, and we trust they come back for the tilt when it's staged again. And NUTS to you, Jupe, you damp minor leaguer!



* * * * * *

Picking up a few loose lacrosse balls: Owing to last night's rained-out number here, ticket series No. 7 will be good for the next home game of the Trailermen, and of course the rain checks will be honored. Local club is away tonight to St. Kitts and in Mimico on Tuesday, with the Mounties coming up this way next Friday. Last night's tilt may not be staged again till toward the end of the schedule, as the clubs have a busy month coming up in July. Schedule ends Aug. 11. There's an OLA juvenile "A" fixture listed for 8.45 tonight in Miller Bowl, Long Branch playing the Young Petes. Latter won their opener in Brampton 9-5 earlier this week, and rate local support.

Anne Sharp Retains Crown Defeats Mary Gay 5 and 4

TORONTO (CP)—Anne Sharp, 25-year-old school teacher from Fonthill, retained her Ontario ladies golf title Friday by defeating Mary Gay of Kitchener 5 and 4. The victory assured Miss Sharp a place on the Ontario interprovincial team that will play in Halifax in August.

After losing the first hole to Miss Gay, 1952 champion, Miss Sharp of Lookout Point Club, settled down to play a steady game for the rest of the day. She took the lead at the fifth and sixth holes and never relinquished it.

Going into the final 18 holes this afternoon Miss Sharp was two up. Using her drives to good advantage she increased this lead to six up by the 30th hole. Miss Gay took the 31st hole but had to win the next five to tie.

On the 156-yard par 3 32nd hole Miss Sharp teed to the green and then putted to the lip of the cup. Miss Gay then conceded defeat.

Late in the first 18 holes, it looked as if Miss Gay might be getting back into form. She cut a five-hole deficit on the 14th to two then she took three of the last four holes.

In he afternoon, Miss Sharp took advantage of her opponent's weak putting to increase her lead. She birdied on the 23rd when Miss Gay Missed a five-foot putt, and she birdied again on the 26th when Miss Gay had to chip out of a bunker.

"I'll probably not hit the ball again like I did today," Miss Sharp, who comes from the same club as Marlene Stewart, said after the battle. She had to win Friday to get a berth on the interprovincial team as her teaching duties at Brampton High School kept her from competing in any of the team's test matches. The ladies champion is automatically on the team.

The consolation championships went to Roma Neundorf, Cedar Brae, when she defeated Mrs. T. M. Lockwood, Rosedale, two up in 18 holes.

Plan Racing Under Lights

OTTAWA (CP)—An official of the Connaught Park Jockey Club announced Friday that thoroughbred racing under the lights will be inaugurated at the track on the outskirts of neighboring Hull, Que., Monday. It will be the first time in Canada that flat races will be run at night.

T. P. (Tommy) Gorman, general manager of the club, said following a meeting of the Horsemen's Benevolent Protective Association at which all owners, trainers and riders attended, that night racing will start Monday. It will be continued for the rest of the current 14-day meeting which started June 19.

The department of agriculture recently ruled that the "day" as described in the Criminal Code amendments, under which parimutuel betting is allowed, begins at noon and ends at 11:59 p.m.

The provincial government at Quebec has issued a licence for the meeting and has also consented to the change in times.

The Connaught race track is the only track in Quebec featuring thoroughbred racing this year.

Weightlifting Record

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Norbert Schemansky of Detroit established a world record in the National Amateur Athletic Union weightlifting championships Friday night by hoisting 417 pounds in the clean and jerk. It was the most weight ever lifted by a man of his own strength. Schemansky held the previous record, 412½ pounds.

Costly Spree

VICTORIA (CP) — Two sailors went for a wild midnight ride here in a "borrowed" police patrol car. They were fined $75 each.

Sees Littler Breaking Record

NEW YORK (AP)—Gene Sarazen, whose brilliant golf career has spanned four continents and as many eras in the last 30 years, predicted Friday that 23-year-old Gene Littler would erase the gaudy records of Bobby Jones and Ben Hogan.

"If I'm lucky enough to live 17 more years—until Littler is 40," the 52-year-old Germantown, N.Y., squire added, "I am sure I will see this young man hang up an array of championships surpassing anything Jones and Hogan ever did.

"In every department, I consider him the finest golf prospect I ever saw."

Sarazen spoke of the new "Littler era of golf" at a luncheon given him before his departure for England. There he will play Percy Allis June 30-July 1 for the international seniors championship and later compete in the British Open at Royal Birkdale July 5-9.

Littler, 1953 national amateur champion from San Diego, Calif., was runner-up to Ed Furgol in the recent U.S. Open at Baltusrol. He missed an eight-foot birdie putt on the final hole which would have given him a tie for the title. He turned pro last winter.

Richards Keeps Sox On Bit

CHICAGO (AP) — Canny Paul Richards of the Chicago White Sox is trying "shock troop" tactics in hopes of outmanoeuvring Cleveland Indians and New York Yankees in the American League pennant drive.

Irked by criticism that the White Sox went stale in late season the last three campaigns, Richards is employing his bench to the hilt to keep his team sharp for the post-July 4th run.

Only shortstop Chico Carrasquel, second sacker Nellie Fox and leftfielder Minnie Minoso have played in all of the second-place Sox' 66 tangle with Boston.

On this home stand, particularly, Richards has been running his athletes in and out of games in steady fashion. Phil Cavarretta, former manager of the Chicago Cubs, has played at first base and right field. Another ex-Cub, Carl Sawatski, has re'ieved Sherm Lollar in catching. And Cass Michaels and George Kell have alternated with sound results at third base.

Mays Taking Careful Aim At Homer Record

NEW YORK (AP) — Wondrous Willie Mays takes dead aim at the major league's consecutive game home run record today, and the way he's been going, he could equal it in his first time at bat.

The brilliant New York Giants centre fielder slammed his customary daily homer Friday night as the league leaders handed Chicago Cubs their eighth straight setback, 6-2. It came in Mays' first time at bat as did all but one of Willie's six homers in the last five games.

FOUR PLAYERS

The major league record for homers in most consecutive games is six. It is held by four players, two in each league. George Kelly of the Giants walloped seven homers in six consecutive games back in 1924. Walker Cooper, another Giant, tied that mark in 1947. Lou Gehrig of the 1931 New York Yankees and Ken Williams of the 1923 St. Louis Browns hit six homers in straight games.

Mays, an easy-going youngster of 23, had no idea that he was anywhere near a record and if he had he probably would not have cared.

"What record?" he asked. "You mean I got one every day for five days? You don't say. That's pretty good. But records don't bother me. . . . If I get a homer—that's fine. But I'll take a single if it's going to win a game."

Team Reinstates Luke Easter

OTTAWA (CP) Luke Easter, who was suspended indefinitely without pay from the Ottawa Athletics Thursday night, has been reinstated and fined $100.

George MacDonald, general-manager of the International Baseball League club, announced Easter's suspension after the big first baseman had a run-in with Less Bell, the Athletics' field manager.

Bell gave Easter a blast for his poor showing in a cut-off play while the A's were dropping a 3-2, 13-inning decision to Havana Sugar Kings when the Ottawa team returned to the dugout.

The big former Cleveland Indians slugger grabbed Bell. Other players in the pit broke up the pair before anything else happened and Bell ordered Easter from the game. Easter played Friday night against Rochester.

LANDYS WINS

PORI, Finland (AP) — John Landy, Melbourne's marvellous miler, won a two-mile race Friday by 125 yards in the excellent time of 8:42.4, only two seconds behind Belgian Gaston Reiff's world record. Tip Top Trophy Captured By Mrs. F. Dawe

By HERB MARTIN

In presenting the Tip Top Tailors Trophy to Mrs. F. Dawe's rink, Friday night, Mr. William Saunders, of the Tip Top Tailor Co., once again thanked the club and the ladies for their support in this annual event. He said it was gratifying to see nearly all the lady bowlers taking part in this tournament.

Mrs. J. Adams, president of the ladies' section, in a neat speech, thanked Mr. Saunders and his company for their generosity.

It was rather odd that the tournament should begin and end under disagreeable weather, but that does happen sometimes. However, it was a good competition and enjoyed by all.

Lopez Takes Loss Stoically

CLEVELAND (AP)—What does a baseball manager say after the rival he wants to beat most gives his club the worst licking it's had all season while the biggest crowd of home fans so far this year looks on?

The baseball manager would be Al Lopez of the Cleveland Indians; the rival, the world champion New York Yankees.

The worst licking would be the 11-0 drubbing the Tribe took here Friday night for its first shutout in 66 games. And the home crowd of 49,808 was nearly 10,000 more than the previous high gate recorded at the April home opener.

NOT SO HARD

"I'd rather lose a game 11-0 than 11-10," was Lopez's post-mortem. "Honestly, a beating like that doesn't hurt as much as a close one. A close one eats your heart out playing it over and over. This ball game happened a million years ago. You forget it and start fresh tomorrow."

Lopez isn't conceding Casey Stengel's men a sixth pennant for quite a while.

"We've a better club, regardless of whether we lost," he protests. "This is the first time in late June since I've been manager that we are in first place and the Yanks are chasing us."

Bears File $150,000 Suit Against Hamilton Ti-Cats

CHICAGO (AP)—Chicago Bears of the National Football League announced Friday they have filed a $150,000 damage suit against Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Big Four for signing Bear player Jim Dempsey.

Dempsey, himself, was sued for $25,000 for breach of contract.

The damage suit, filed in Federal Court at Miami, Fla., also was directed against Hamilton's head coach, Carl Voyles.

It charges that Hamilton and Voyles "wilfully and maliciously" induced Dempsey, veteran linebacker, to jump his Bear contract and sign with the Tiger-Cats.

CLAIM OTHER TRIES

The Bears also claimed the defendants sought to further raid the Chicago squad by attempting to get other Bears to breach their 1954 contracts.

The Bears said no effort would be made to enjoin Dempsey, a resident of Miami and U. of Florida football product, from playing in Canada. Dempsey joined the Bears in 1950.

It was the second suit filed against a Canadian club by the Bears in two weeks. The first was for $100,000 against Calgary, for coaxing halfback Eddie Macon to Canada.

In Hamilton Voyles said he wasn't disturbed about the action. Tiger-Cat president Jake Gaudaur said he wasn't either.

"We haven't received any legal documents," Gaudaur said, "so all I know about this is what the reporters have told me. We signed Dempsey to play here. He wants to play here and we want him to play here.

"If they are going to sue us, we'll just turn the matter over to our club lawyer."

VOYLES BITTER

Voyles was more bitter.

"They started this," he said. "The Bears signed Bill Gregus when he was under contract to us. The Bears have just traded Bob Cross to Los Angeles and he's under contract with us, and Cleveland Brown, I hear, have signed Quincy Armstrong, who belongs to us.

"I'm only going after Chicago Bears and Cleveland players," he added. "And I'm not going for players under contract—just those on the option clause. That's what they're doing to us so I guess it can work both ways."

Mark St. Boys Take Title In Church Loop

Mark Street Bantams took the Jake Burnham Trophy from St. John's Church boys.

The game was played in King Edward Park and was the third game of a best of three tilt, each side having a game to their credit. Mark Street boys had the last game all the way through and finished with a score of 15-4.

Ed Smith presented the trophy after the game. This trophy was presented to the church league in 1947 by the Jake Burnham Memorial class of George Street church in memory of their former teacher.

The teams:

Mark St. — McKelvie, Cullen, Beavis, Eaton, Worboy, Duncan, Patterson, M. Allen, Allen Aiken.

St. John's—Dalliday Ongley, Irvin Rishor, Sargent, Haddow, King, Leggett, Dunford, Wagestor.

REARDON RETURNS

PROVIDENCE, R. I. (AP)—Terry Reardon, who was replaced as coach of Providence Reds of the American Hockey League in 1953 after a difference of opinion over coaching methods with owner Lou Pieri, is returning to the team as general manager, it was announced Friday. Reardon, former Montreal Canadiens centre and a native of Winnipeg, coached the Reds for six years beginning in 1947.

Yankees Slaughter Cleveland 11-0 Behind Reynolds

By BEN PHLEGAR, Associated Press Sports Writer

Allie Reynolds' reluctant decision to abandon his role as an oil tycoon with an aching back in favor of one more season of pitching looks more and more like the key move in New York Yankees drive for their sixth straight pennant.

The Big Chief from Oklahoma has been magnificent.

When he beat the first-place Cleveland Indians 11-0 Friday night it marked his ninth straight victory after losing his first decision. The third-place Yankees moved within three games of the Indians and the second place Chicago White Sox, who defeated Boston 6-4, climbed within one.

Reynolds, who had the backache often in the closing stages of 1953, was ready to stay on his reservation with his oil wells unless the Yanks meet his asking price of $40,000. They finally did.

FIRST TO DO IT

Reynolds really didn't need a shutout. His mates clinched the contest in the third with seven runs. The Chief got a bunt single and a driving single as 12 men batted during the rally.

Elsewhere on the majors' all-night schedule Washington edged Detroit 4-3 and Baltimore beat Philadelphia 5-2 in the American League. New York whipped Chicago 6-2, Brooklyn defeated St. Louis 3-1, Milwaukee whitewashed Philadelphia 7-0 and Cincinnati thumped Pittsburgh 8-4 in the National.

Bob Keegan of the White Sox became the first American League pitcher to win 11 games as he tamed Boston on eight hits. One of the hits was a pinch home run by Ted Williams with a man aboard in the ninth.

NEAR FIRST

Dean Stone and Camilio Pascual, a pair of rookies, pitched Washington to within a game of the first division by beating fourth-place Detroit. The Senators got only six hits but bunched them in the first and eighth innings. Eddie Yost homered and Pete Runnels drove in a pair with a double and a triple.

Willie Mays put the Giants on the victory trail against the Cubs with a two-run inside-the-park homer in the second inning. It was his sixth home run in the last five games and his 24th of the year.

Stan Musial came out of his slump with a home run and a single but it wasn't enough to beat Carl Erskine and the Dodgers. Roy Campanella singled home two runs off Vic Raschi in the first inning for Brooklyn.

Ted Kluszewski hit his 18th and 19th home runs in Cincinnati's victory over the last-place Pirates. The blows accounted for four runs, half of the Redlegs' total against Max Surkont, who suffered his eighth loss.

Bisons Blank Slumping Havana 2-0

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ken Johnson, veteran lefthander of the Buffalo Bisons, has plenty of stuff despite his so-so 6-5 International League record.

The 31-year-old pitcher, who had turned in a two-hitter earlier this season, hurled a brilliant one-hitter Friday night as the Bisons blanked the slumping Havana Cuban Sugar Kings 2-0.

Johnson missed a no-hitter when Ray Noble, former New York Giant catcher, doubled in the eighth inning. The lefthander struck out seven, walked three and hit one man in registering his sixth victory.

Rochester moved to within one-half game of the league-leading Toronto Maple Leafs as the Reds Wings trounced Ottawa Athletics 7-1 in the first game of a scheduled double hearder. The second game was rained out.

Bill Virdon smashed two bases-empty homers to pace the Rochester 12-hit attack. Pitcher Niles Jordan, who won his sixth game against three losses, aided his own cause with a two-run homer.

Meanwhile, the Leafs split a twinbill with Montreal Royals. Toronto won the first game 10-7 while the Royals took the second 17-7.

Montreal and Toronto pounded out a dozen home runs in a wild doubleheader that saw 41 runs scored. The Royals belted three round-trippers in the first game and four in the second and Toronto slammed out one in the opener and four in the nightcap.

First baseman Ed Stevens of the Leafs led the parade with three homers, one in the first game and two in the second, as he drove in six runs. His three-run homer in the opener provided the margin of victory.

Sandy Amoros and Rocky Nelson each collected a pair of homers for the Royals.

Bob Bowman drove out four doubles in a row for a perfect night at bat, and his fourth two-bagger scored the winning run as Syracuse Chiefs nipped Richmond Virginians 6-5.

Wimbledon Goes On Overtime Basis

WIMBLEDON, England (AP)—Wimbledon't tennis factory was scheduled to go on an overtime basis today as harassed officials sought to catch up on time lost by rain.

The all-England tennis championships were washed out Friday. A crowd of 18,000 held on until late evening before the announcement: "No play today."

Col. W. J. Legg, an official of the All-England Lawn Tennis Club, met with other officials on how to catch up on the schedule.

"We've decided to bring all available courts into action once again, and it's the first time I can remember this happening," said Legg. "But it's the only way we can catch up on lost time."

The feature match will pit Tony Trabert of Cincinnati, seeded No. 1 against Sweden's Sven Davidson, ranked No. 9.

Jones Topping Fielding Marks

NEW YORK (AP)—Willie Jones of the Philadelphia Phils, the National League fielding leader at third base in 1953, has picked up where he left off defensively last season.

Jones currently tops the third basemen with a .982 fielding average, after setting the pace a year ago with a .975 mark.

The 28-year-old third baseman has handled 219 chances while committing only four errors. Jones, in his sixth season with the Phils since graduating from Toronto Maple Leafs, can threaten the National League fielding mark for third basemen if he continues his defensive gait. The highest percentage is .983, set in 1924 by Heinie Groh of the New York Giants.

Bobby Adams of the Cincinnati Redlegs is runner-up to Jones for National League honors at .970.

Churches Failing To Speak On Capital Punishment

BY REV. A. C. FORREST

Perhaps the most significant feature of the present study and discussion of capital punishment is the relative silence of the Canadian churches. Even those which have spoken have spoken in an uncertain voice.

In this respect they have been traditional as far as I can discover. Although individual churches and churchmen in times past have given strong leadership, the majority of churches and Christians have sat back in discontent as spectators of the official axe, rope, chair, or gas chamber.

Capital punishment has had a long and devious history. In primitive societies, the putting to death of a person for some criminal offense did not belong to the class of deliberate or formal ordinances enacted by the community. Execution was usually the impulsive act of an individual or group committed in the spirit of vengeance.

As society evolved civilization at first tolerated it, then regulated it, and finally limited it. Mob action, lynching, stoning, clan, family and gang feuds have belonged to the lower stratas of culture and education. The higher the culture the more restrained has been the use of capital punishment.

Capital punishment was well established in the Roman Empire at the beginning of the Christian era, and the coming of Christianity made little change. Centuries later when the church came into contact with the Germanic kingdoms of the north it was discovered that society approved the execution of an offender by private vengeance and the confiscation of his property. The church's influence was to strengthen orderly official justice, and to cut down on the numbers of private vendettas.

As a system of law grew up, the clergy were forbidden to take part in an execution and were admonished to provide asylum for the criminal, and in other works of mercy help the offender to improve. When the war against hersey broke out, this position was somewhat modified.

The Reformation brought no appreciable change. In fact, capital punishment seemed to increase, and the century between 1530 and 1630 saw a high watermark in the numbers of executions in European countries.

About 1700, a third form of punishment was established in a regular system of imprisonment. In England over 200 crimes, most of them petty, were punishable by the death penalty. And the great public executions, supposed to be a deterrent to those tempted to resort to crime, were among the fruitful places for the pick-pocket and the petty thief to work.

About this time, a strong reaction against capital punishment and its excesses began to grow, and it had a lot to do with the development of the penitentiary system. It did not get its inspiration from the churches, however.

During the last century, a great many countries have abolished the death penalty, and in others, although it has not been abolished, it has been suppressed in pracitce. And in most civilized countries it ceased to be the punishment for any crimes except murder and certain offenses against the state, such as treason in wartime.

There may be still a few who will support the system of capital punishment on an "eye for an eye, tooth for a tooth" philosophy. But the majority who support it do so on the grounds that it may serve as a deterrent to crime. If this could be proven, I would have to alter my position. For it is more important by far to protect the innocent in society against the vicious crimes of murder and violent robbery than it is to preserve the life of a man who has destroyed the life of another. But it cannot be proven.

Some years ago, Samuel J. Barrows, writing in the Enclypaedia of Religious Knowledge, wrote: "It remains yet to be proven than an increase in capital crimes has followed the abolition of the death penalty in any country." On the other side, there are those who argue that the effect of the death penalty is to excite and brutalize society and directly contribute to violence. Some of the countries which abolished the death penalty years ago have a very low rate of crime. The U.S.A., which still provides the death penalty in 41 States, has one of the highest murder rates in the world.

I've been impressed with the testimony of so many penologists who are opposed to the death penalty. The late Warden Lewis Lawes who watched the execution of over 300 offenders was a bitter opponent of the method of punishment.

In the absence of practical evidence that capital punishment is a deterrent to capital crime; and in the presence of so much testimony that capital punishment has so many attendant evils, it seems that the churches have a duty to point to the moral impli-

MINOR COLLISION

Only one motor accident was reported to city police Friday. No persons were injured and damage totalled $80. Drivers of cars which collided at Monaghan Road and Romaine St. were L. Caravaggio, 158 Montgomery St., and Kenneth Hutton, 777 Lock St.

SWIMING CLASSES

Summer swimming classes at Bridgenorth are commencing on Tuesday, July 6 at Blewett's wharf with Instructor Mrs. Earl Blewett in charge. The classes are to be held every Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at 1:30. Red Cross and life saving awards are taught and ladies' classes are scheduled Wednesdays.

KINSMEN CARNIVAL

The Kinsmen's carnival, rained out Friday night on the first night of its scheduled two-day run, has been tentatively postponed to July 9 and 10. These dates have not been confirmed but will depend on whether or not Riverside Park can be made available.

SWIMMERS' DRAW

Prizes will be drawn Monday at 5:45 p.m. over CHEX in aid of the Peterborough Ornamental Swimmers. Among the prizes will be a power mower, mirror, trilight, rug, dishes and groceries. Proceeds from the draw will help the swimmers, under Mrs. Pansy Forbes, get to Vancouver for the British Empire Games.

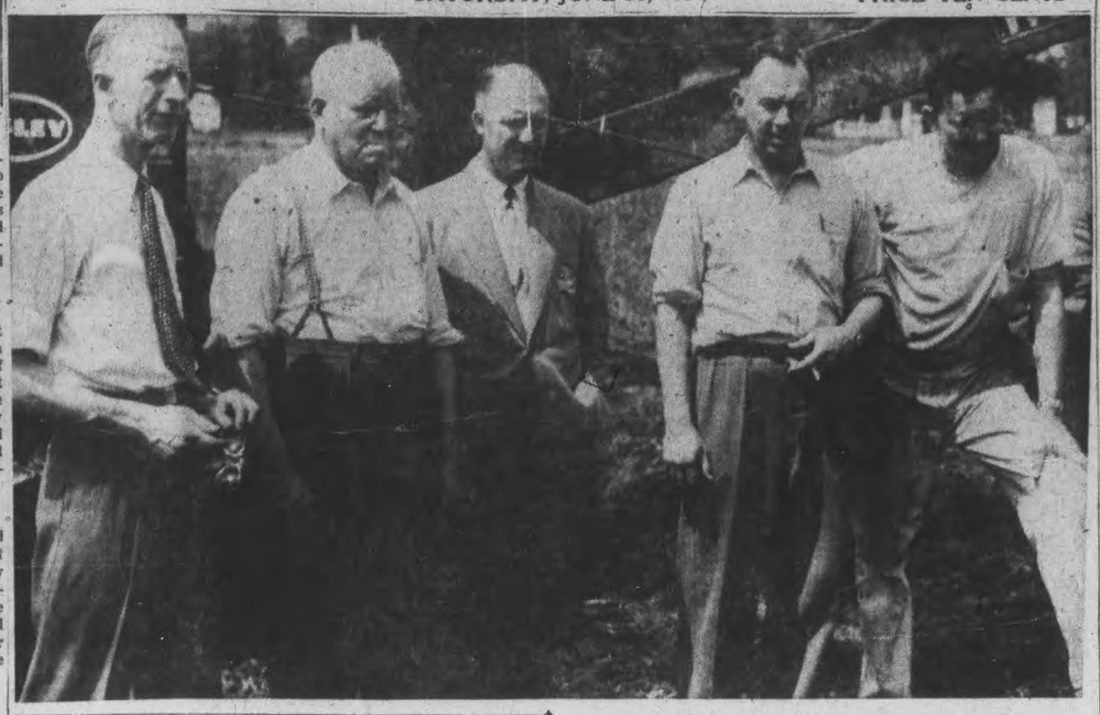
OPP PRESENT TABLE

A coffee table was presented Friday night to OPP Constable Tom Parker and Mrs. Parker (absent) at a stag party in the Legion Hall. The presentation was by OPP Constable Tom Armitage on behalf of the No. 8 District Athletic Association. The Parkers were recently married and this was an association gift, somewhat belated. Constable Parker, originally from Toronto, has been at the Peterborough headquarters a couple of months.

RABBITS DISAPPEAR

William Ayotte who lives on the River Road, north, in Douro township is wondering who made like Houdini with his 15 rabbits.

TheOPP are more than wondering at the disappearing act; they're investigating it as theft. Mrs. Ayotte went out to feed them Wednesday and found that the hutch had been opened and 15 of the 17 bunnies had been stolen. On the off chance that they might be found in some artful magicians silk topper, here's a description of them: from six weeks to two months old, and with black and white and grey and white markings.



Editorial On Borden

LONDON (Reuters)—The Times today says that Sir Robert Borden, Conservative prime minister of Canada from 1911 to 1920, was primarily responsible for the memorandum which gave effective recognition of full nationhood for the Dominions.

It devoted an editorial to Borden's career on the 100th anniversary of his birth.

Provincial Police Cruiser Sliced In Two By Train

COBOURG (ENS)—OPP Constable Ralph Tremills, 26, of Cobourg, was injured today when a southeast-bound passenger train sliced off the front of his cruiser as he started across the CPR tracks, east of Cobourg.

The speeding train cut off the front of the car flush with the dashboard, scattering the parts on the road and along the tracks. The motor was ripped out and hurled 25 feet through the air, striking another car at the crossing occupied by a Detroit family.

Coincidentally, the driver of the second car was also a law officer — an FBI man vacationing in in Canada.

REMAINED CONSCIOUS

Tremills remained conscious and, though dazed, he was able to talk to OPP Constable Lyle Erskine who investigated the accident. He was taken to Cobourg General Hospital suffering from a broken right kneecap, cuts and shock.

The freak accident occurred at 6.30 a.m. as Tremills was driving east to an accident on Highway 2 near Grafton. He approached the Kingston crossing where there is a CPR line and then a CNR line. He saw a CNR train go by in the heavy rain but didn't notice the CPR passenger train going southeast until too late.

He slammed on his brakes but the cruiser skidded on the slippery highway and the train struck the front of the cruiser.

DIDN'T NOTICE TRAIN

"I had pulled up for the train and the police car approached from behind," said Arthur Murthea of Detroit, who was going east with his family and had stopped at the crossing. "The train on the far track (CNR) went over the crossing but apparently the police officer didn't notice the train coming on the near track. (CPR).

"The next thing I knew there was a crash and something came hurtling through the air and hit my car. It was the motor."

The engine, which travelled 25 feet after being knocked out of the cruiser, struck the Detroit car on the driver's side, shattering the window and denting the driver's door.

Police To Check Hour Parking On City Streets

Equipment for the policeman is usually a gun, a baton, a pair of handcuffs and the proverbial notebook. However, very soon Peterborough force members will be carrying something else. Nothing particularly noteworthy . . . just a piece of white chalk. Nevertheless this little piece of white chalk is going to cause some headaches.

Very soon, probably next week, chief John Thompson will be issuing his beat men with a stick and chalk and orders to "Go get 'em". The chief is after parking meter offenders and he intends to have the limits strictly observed, or else!

PARK ONLY ONE HOUR

There is a city bylaw which states that vehicles may park only one hour at any meter on city streets. The general practice among motorists it to deposit a nickel, which keeps the meter ticking for an hour, and then an hour later, deposit another nickel.

Innocently, or otherwise, persons who do this are breaking the law and this is where the chalk comes into play. Constables on meter duty will mark the vehicle tire and a corresponding line on the road. If he returns in an hour's time and finds another nickel has been deposited, then the motorist will get a ticket for overtime parking.

DOES NOT AFFECT LOT

This bylaw does not affect the parking lots where space may be purchased for several hours. On the streets, however, the bylaw is intended to keep cars from staking a claim at any particular meter, a fancy with some store owners and employees who drive to work.

City officials have decided that one hour should be ample time for any person to shop in one area. By moving on they give space for someone else.

Chief Thompson said today that he advised the parking public to keep a watch on meters in future, and to look for the black and white signs which state "Parking Limit — One Hour" . . . , they are going to be observed from now on.

Havelock Rotarians Change Waste Land Into Park

HAVELOCK (ENS)—The Havelock Rotarians commenced work Friday to transform the waste land on the southwest corner of the intersection of Nos. 7 and 30 Highways into a tourist park and recreation grounds.

The project has been undertaken to provide attractive scenery at the entrance to Havelock from the west and also provide a park for the town folks and a place where tourists can stop. The plans include tables for lunch purposes.

SMALL POND PLANNED

A creek runs through this plot of ground and a small pond has been planned for landscape purposes. A tree at the spot selected will be left in the centre of the pond.

The estimated cost of the project is around $3,000 as it is hard to estimate the amount of fill required, and the amount of work to be done by a bulldozer.

Davis Appointed

OTTAWA (CP) — The long-expected appointment of Hon. T. C. Davis, 64, of Prince Albert, Sask., as Canadian ambassador to Japan, was announced Friday.

Mr. Davis will replace Hon. Robert Mayhew, 73, of Victoria, who is expected to retire from public life. He was recently taken ill in Tokyo.

Youths Remain On Critical List

Stewart Whetung, 17, and Kenneth Boast, 15, two of the six Burleigh young people in Civic hospital as the result of Tuesday night's truck accident north of Buckhorn, were still listed as "critically ill."

The boys, Whetung, suffering scalp wounds, head, arm and leg injuries, and Boast, suffering fractured jaw and wrist, and head injuries, were reported "slightly improved and responding a little."

At the same time Gweneth Boast, 16, was described as still "seriously ill" with chest injuries and shock.

The other three Grace Brown, concussion and shock, Mrs. Lloyd Brown, an injured knee, and Jesse Spencley, a broken collarbone, are all in "satisfactory condition."

Can't Agree With City

Firemen's Contract Goes To Arbitration

The dispute between the city and the firefighters over their 1954 contract has gone to arbitration.

C. L. Dubin is the appointee of Local 519, Peterborough Fire Fighters Association (TLC), and Norman L. Mathews, QC, is the city's appointee. A chairman has still to be selected.

The parties have been negotiating since last November.

Principal demands of the firefighters are:

SALARY INCREASE

1. A salary increase of approximately $1 a day to be paid every Friday instead of once every two weeks. This would bring the weekly rate to $87 for assistant chiefs; $79 for captains; $79 for a mechanic; $79 for an electrician; $79 for inspectors; $73 for 1st class firefighters; $71 for 2nd class firefighters; $69 for 3rd class firefighters; and $67 for 4th class firefighters.

2. A 48-hour instead of a 56-hour week on the two platoon system.

3. Employees entitled to three days off in each calendar week.

4. Employees called in on general alarms or on their days off, statutory holidays or annual holidays, to be compensated with time and a half pay, with a minimum of three hours pay for the time worked. Compensation may also be in time off.

5. A week's vacation with pay after six months' service; two weeks' after one year; and all employees to get 12 additional holidays in lieu of being employed on statutory and declared holidays.

6. A hospital and surgical welfare plan, half the cost to be met by the employees and the other half by the city.

7. As an alternative to getting an overcoat every five years, shoes and a burberry coat to be provided.

Other sections deal with uniforms and equipment, use of the hall for union meetings, leave of absence, and keeping the establishment up to strength. A number of these items are not in dispute but the union want them written into the contract, not just understood verbally.

Steps of a grievance procedure should also be written into the contract, the union contend.

INTERPRETATION

The union also want the arbitration board to interpret clause 6b of their 1953 agreement which says: "Any employee acting in the capacity of an officer, or any officer acting in the capacity higher than that for which he was hired and in which he normally serves, shall when he is acting in such higher capacity or as an officer, for a minimum of one complete work shift, be paid for the higher rank or as an officer so long as he shall serve in that capacity."

There is a difference between the union and the city over when this clause comes into effect.

For example: When a 1st class firemen is in charge of a pumper despatched to a chimney or flooded oil burner fire is he entitled to a captain's pay? Should a captain who temporarily takes over at a fire be paid as an acting assistant chief?

Tragic Week

Sunday, June 27, marks the first anniversary of a week of violent deaths and serious injury in Peterborough, probaby the worst period in the history of this area. During the week ending June 27, 1953, there were seven deaths in traffic accidents, three drownings and 19 persons injured in motor collisions. The week's total was 10 lives and thousands of dollars in damage.

Minister Names Conciliator Settle Dispute

A conciliator has been appointed to try and settle the dispute between the 106 non-medical hospital workers at Civic Hospital and the board of governors, says a report from Toronto.

The same report names Louis Fine, Ontario's chief conciliation officer, as the man appointed by Labor Minister Daley to try and break the deadlock.

NEITHER PARTY INFORMED

As yet neither of the interested parties has been informed of this. Max Swanston, chairman of the board of governors, and George Linsdell, president of Local 19, National Union of Public Service Employees (CCL), both said today that they had no information on the labor minister's reported move.

Mr. Swanston said today that arrangements are going ahead for a meeting between the parties Tuesday afternoon.

Though the membership turned down the majority report of a government conciliation board and the union executive have been given power to act, there has been no indication that the union have given up negotiating the dispute.

Coe Hill Man Convicted Of Timber Theft

BANCROFT (ENS) — Magistrate I. C. Jackson sentenced a Coe Hill man, 19-year-old Charles Conlin, to a two-year suspended sentence in Bancroft court Wednesday. Conlin, who was defended by W. J. Arthur Fair, QC, was convicted of the theft of standing timber from the property of Mrs. Eva Thompson of Coe Hill.

Conlin testified that he had been cutting timber on his father's farm at Coe Hill and had not known that his operations had taken him into the adjoining property owned by Mrs. Thompson.

Mr. Fair argued that the timber country in the area was of a wild and unfenced nature and that his client's offence had been caused by an error in knowledge of the dividing line between the properties.

PAID $500

The complainant's husband, under cross-examination by Mr. Fair, admitted Conlin's father had paid him $500 for the timber taken from his wife's property He agreed that Conlin had only received $365 for sales of logs drawn from his wife's property and others cut on the Conlin property. Thompson said he had prosecuted Conlin after receiving the $500, which he claimed was restitution.

The magistrate said he had considered Conlin's defence, but was of the opinion that the timber had been taken from an area which was far from the place that could be assumed as the dividing line between the properties. He therefore considered a conviction in order.

Welfare Officer Asked To Analyze Brief Written On Unemployment

Peterborough One of Three Ontario Cities Not Hard Hit By Unemployment
A. G. Metheral Tells Welfare Committee

Peterborough is one of about three cities in Ontario that have not been hard hit by unemployment, according to welfare administrator A. G. Metheral.

Mr. Metheral has been asked by the welfare committee of city council to analyze and make recommendations on a brief presented by the local joint labor committee on unemployment. The brief, which city council has been asked to endorse, contains 10 recommendations for easing the current unemployment situation.

TAKES NO ACTION

Although it was similarly worded to one of the recommendations in the labor brief, the welfare committee took no action on a resolution from Windsor city council calling on the federal government to extend supplementary benefits under the Unemployment Insurance Act.

"This probably should be passed on to local members of parliament," acting mayor John Dewart commented, "because it falls outside the scope of the municipalities. It is a local problem in Windsor where there is a good deal of unemployment.

"This is something that happens right along," he said. "One municipality passes a resolution and asks all the others to endorse it. I think it should be received."

OTHERS HARDER HIT

Mr. Metheral said he had attended a welfare convention in Owen Sound, where he discovered that other municipalities had been "a lot harder hit than we have for 100 per cent relief."

"There were only about three places in Ontario that hadn't been hit hard and we were one of them," he said.

Committee chairman Ald. Stan McBride said he had studied the brief from the local labor committee and little of it seemed to deal with matters at the municipal level.

"I think Mr. Metheral should analyze it and bring us back a report," the acting mayor suggested.

RECOMMENDATIONS MADE

The joint labor committee on unemployment contains representatives of the Peterborough Trades and Labor Council (TLC), the Peterborough and District Labor Council (CCL) and the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (Indep.).

In their brief to city council they made the following recommendations:

1. Protection against dumping foreign goods in Canada.
2. Development of new industries to process raw materials in Canada.
3. Increase of maximum unemployment insurance benefits from $24 to $40 a week, continuation of supplementary benefits, payment of benefits from the first day of unemployment and extension of benefits to workers not now covered.
4. Planned allocation of government contracts to offset seasonal unemployment.
5. Immediate construction of the St. Lawrence seaway and power development.
6. Speeding up public works programs.
7. A stepped-up housing program for those in the lower income groups and a moratorium on mortgages on houses of unemployed workers.
8. An immigration policy consistent with the unemployment situation and giving prospective immigrants a true picture of Canadian conditions.
9. Lifting trade restrictions.
10. Increased assistance under the Colombo plan.

DRYDOCK AT SAINT JOHN—Canada's aircraft carrier, HMCS Magnificent, is shown about to enter the big drydock at Saint John, N.B., on one of her visits to the port for overhauling. The drydock is one of the world's largest and can accommodate any big liner. Removal of water from the dock is a simple matter—it empties when the Bay of Fundy tide recedes. The shipbuilding and repairing industry is one of the larger employment fields in the old Bay of Fundy seaport of Saint John.—(CP Photo).

Canada's Oldest Incorporated City Chief Industrial Centre Of Maritimes

By JOHN MOSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—This old Bay of Fundy seaport is proud of its distinction as the leading industrial centre of the Atlantic provinces.

It has more factories than any other city in New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island or Newfoundland. A list of larger industries, businesses and other establishments, compiled by the Board of Trade, numbers 112. Manufactures have an annual value of $40,000,000.

Most breadwinners among the Saint John and greater Saint John populations (50,779 and 78,337—1951 census) have industrial occupations, providing goods and services for a trading area of 180,000 in the southern half of New Brunswick, excluding shipments to more distant points.

IN OTHER FIELDS

Larger employment fields include shipbuilding and repairing at a big dry dock, sugar refining, fish and other food processing, building construction, railways, foundries, broom and brush making, sulphite pulp manufacturing, waterfront work and the telephone business.

Canada's oldest incorporated city, Saint John attained that status in 1785, two years after thousands of United Empire Loyalists fled New York and endured hardship while building a community here. It's still frequently called the Loyalist City.

In 1871 Saint John had grown to Canada's fourth city with a population of 41,000. Toronto had 59,000 and Winnipeg was a village. Shipping and shipbuilding flourished here but sails finally gave way to steam, central Canada began getting the lion's share of manufacturing and Saint John slipped in comparison with newer cities.

It was once the world's second largest ship-owning port and shipping remains vital in the city's economy. Most of the docks and other harbor installations were built since 1931, when a $12,000,000 fire destroyed the west side piers.

The "Saint," spelled out in the city's name, is abbreviated for the St. John river and St. John county.

FAMOUS FALLS

A Saint John phenomenon is the reversing falls in a gorge at the narrow mouth of the 450-mile-long river, which rises in Quebec and Maine and bisects the length of New Brunswick. When the Fundy tide rises above the river level twice daily and then ebbs far lower, the gorge becomes a mass of boiling rapids. For brief periods, when ocean tide and river meet with equal force, the water is calm and navigation possible.

French explorer Samuel de Champlain discovered the St. John river on St. John the Baptist's Day, June 24, 1604, and so named the river. Colorful celebrations are marking the 350th anniversary of the event.

Saint John features, in addition to the reversing falls and mighty Bay of Fundy tides which range more than 25 feet, include Canada's shortest main thoroughfare. From Market Slip, where the Loyalists landed, King street runs for only three blocks, uphill.

Hills and valleys form a picturesque motif for the calm, old city. Architecture around Market square is reminiscent of London.

Saint John has many sections of pleasant homes with lawns and trees but slum districts remain a problem. Time-battered tenements are reminders of hasty wooden building after a conflagration swept the city in 1877.

Newcomers, as well as regular residents, appreciate the air-conditioned city's climate. The mercury rarely climbs above the 70s. Only a few miles inland the weather is apt to be 10 or more degrees warmer in summer and colder in winter.

Many world notables have lived in Saint John. They include movie magnate Louis B. Mayer, actor Walter Pidgeon, actress Margaret Anglin, Lord Beaverbrook when a cub reporter at $5 a week, and Francis Scott Key, a Loyalist's son who lived here as a child and later as a Maryland lawyer wrote "The Star-Spangled Banner," now the national anthem of the United States. On the infamous side was Benedict Arnold, the American traitor, who opened a general store in Saint John but received no Loyalist welcome and left Canada.

Your Garden:

Increase Stock Of Shrubs By Using Cold Frame

By HENRY PREE, NEA.

It is easy to increase your stock of most of the flowering shrubs at this time by taking cuttings. These may be rooted in a cold frame.

In case you lack a frame or it is occupied with other plant material, a propagating frame can be made easily from a bushel box. Knock the bottom out and sink the box three or four inches deep in a shady spot.

Fill the inside to about an inch above the ground level with a mixture of sharp sand and peat moss. Have a glass cut to fit tightly on the top. Cuttings should be three or four inches long. Remove a few of the lower leaves, dip the bottom of the cutting in a hormone powder like Rootone and insert about half its length in the sand and peat moss.

Water well to settle the cuttings and cover the frame with the glass. Cuttings may be made of climbing and bush roses, and most of the spring flowering shrubs. Beside multipying plants that you already have, it is a good way to get a start of varieties that your friends have.

Cultivating is more valuable than watering at the start of a dry spell. The loose soil on the surface prevents evaporation of moisture. Watering is apt to draw roots to the surface where they dry out more quickly in the heat. Cultivating keeps them deep in the soil where they will be cooler.

Better than either, cultivation or watering, is a mulch. It will not only conserve the moisture in the soil but will keep weeds from growing, and improve the look of the garden. There are a number of different materials that may be used such as peat moss, shredded sugar cane, ground corncobs and vermiculite.

Many growers state that peat moss will absorb water from the soil and will hold light rains without allowing any to seep through to the soil. It can, however, be worked into the soil in the fall to the advantage of the garden. It helps to lighten heavy soils and increases the water holding capacity of sandy soils.

In addition as it breaks down it releases a certain amount of plant food. Sugar cane, corncobs and vermiculite will not draw water from the soil but when worked into the soil none has any fertilizer value.

The vermiculite will improve the physical condition of the soil when used in limited quantities but all are better removed and stored for use the following year.

It is easy to plant cuttings if you will follow directions.

Gardening Questions

Q—The leaves on our red Japanese maple are developing brown spots, and in many instances drying up completely. What causes this, and what can be done?

A—Leaf spotting of maples is abundant after a period of cool, wet weather. There is nothing to do now, other than fertilize the soil and water during periods of drought. However, next spring, several applications of Bordeaux mixture or fermate at ten-day intervals should be made, starting when the leaves are unfolding from the buds.

Q— What spray or dust is best to use on potato vines?

A—The United States Department of Agriculture recommends one which includes DDT or malathion.

Q—Of what value are wood ashes in the rose garden soil?

A— They add a little potash to the soil, and slightly reduce its acidity. To be of any value use 15 to 20 pounds per 100 square feet of area. However, for real help, rely upon a complete rose food, composed of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash.

Q — What nontoxic chemical spray may be used for controlling Japanese beetles?

A— The answer is a prayer, hand-picking and dusting with a 1 per cent rotenone.

Q — What type of peach is one called Vedette?

A —Vedette is an improved Elberta, fruiting three weeks earlier, has yellow flesh and is a freestone most seasons.

Fear Gas Pools May Be Delayed Unless Protected

OTTAWA (CP)—Development of Ontario natural gas pools may be retarded unless producers are given adequate protection in the face of imported United States and Alberta gas, the Commons was told Friday.

D. R. Michener (PC—Toronto St. Paul's) said Ontario gas producers must be assured of a fair share of the Ontario market for natural gas if huge quantities are piped in from outside the province.

Two projects have been approved by Parliament. One concerns construction of a pipeline from the Niagara river, on the Canada-U.S. border, to Toronto, for the importation of gas from the southern states. The second deals with construction of a multi-million dollar pipeline for Alberta to Ontario and Quebec.

UP TO ONTARIO

Mr. Michener said a fair share of the eastern market for local gas producers must be the concern of the Ontario and federal governments. Otherwise the development of the Ontario pools would be retarded and stifled.

Mines Minister Prudham said the Ontario fuel board, recently set up by the Ontario government was responsible for the production and conservation of natural gas. The federal government, responsible for the importation of gas, co-operated closely with the Ontario government.

Festival Goes Over Objective

STRATFORD (CP)—The Stratford Shakesperean Festival has gone over the objective in its 1954 campaign for $120,000, John Anderson, festival campaign chairman, announced Friday.

A grant of the Rockefeller Foundation of $40,000 was conditional upon $80,000 being raised in Canada. Of this amount $38,656.25 has been raised in Stratford.

Just a week ago, the Canadian campaign was still short of the amount required but committees in Toronto, Montreal, Hamilton, Ottawa, London, Kitchener, Woodstock, Owen Sound and other cities within the last two weeks raised funds to make up the $80,000 and qualify for the grant.

On the eve of opening of the 1954 festival, the campaign has realized $121,979.75. Campaigns are still proceeding in a number of centres and Mr. Anderson expressed the hope that the final sum will be substantially more than the bare minimum for working capital.

Clothes Hamper Easy To Build

No washday aid, perhaps, is of more use throughout the rest of the week than the clothes hamper.

Simple as a box, convenient as a third hand, the easy-to-build plywood hamper shown here fits neatly into either the bathroom or utility area.

Front and side panels are of ¼ inch plywood. Holes for air should be space in the ½-inch hinged top. Bottom should be of heavier ¾-inch plywood to give stability.

The frame of ⅝x½ inch strip can be assembled with and nails (or use screws). The panels and quarter-round corners are similarly attached. The partition of the fir plywood hamper can be installed using small, triangular strips to hold it in place.

Dollars Without Ideas Do Not Make Interesting Home

The lot — down payment — and loan are only the economic necessities for the contruction of your new home. Ideas are just as important if you want your home to stand out a little above the average in appearance and convenience.

Dollars without ideas may be satisfactory for the construction of barns and chicken coops, but the difference between a property you can sell quickly if the need ever arises and one just as good which must be sold at a cut price, usually goes right back to the amount of thought put into it when it was built.

On the inside—There are dozens of little details which if carefully considered can distinguish a house with very little extra cost. Don't just take it for granted that you are going to have all plain plaster walls like every other house. Think of the places where inexpensive bookshelves can be built. Don't dismiss the floors—there are many patterns in wood, linoleum and composition floors. Give consideration to the pattern of your doors. Pay attention to the types of trim you can get.

Look into the matter of a cove at the ceiling line of principal rooms. How about corner cupboards for the dining room — they transform an otherwise ordinary room into something visitors admire and ask about. The cost is not nearly so great as the effect they create for this important room.

Built-in bed is not only a highly decorative item, but also an efficient one in small bedrooms. Most three-bedroom houses have one small room which needs the extra working space a built-in bed makes possible. If you think this item isn't popular with the children just try it.

Watch these things on the outside — How do the windows line up? Are the second storey windows over the first floor windows? Does the front door treatment fit the house? See that the color of the roof harmonizes with the rest of the house. Be sure your house does not rear up out of the ground.

These are all minor items when considered against the total cost of the house and lot, but they can make any house a much happier investment.

Abundant Storage Space Makes Garage More Useful

By MR. FIX (NEA)

Your garage could be a lot more useful if storage space in it were more abundant. As it is now, the family car is near being evicted by a clutter of odds and ends, garden and lawn tools, storm windows, bicycles, and other sundries.

Short of building a wing, there is only one direction to go for more space—upward, to the walls and to the rafters.

Up to the present you have been spiking nails into garage wall studding to serve as "hooks" for hanging up small items of miscellany. Now there is more miscellany than there's room for on the walls. There are a number of ways to increase this usable wall space. Here are three:

Nail two or three horizontal rows of 1x3 lumber to the vertical studs the entire length of each wall. Into the strips—at intervals determined by the size of the items to be hung—drive nails or clothesline hooks.

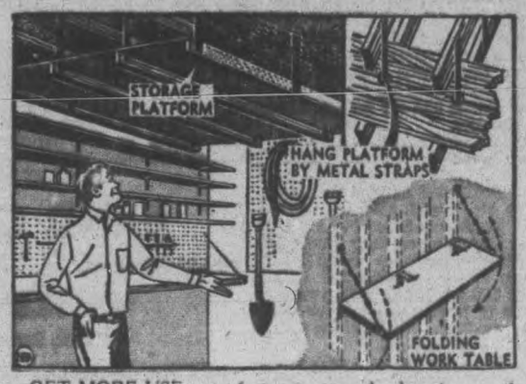
Smaller garden tools should be hung on the highest strip and larger items on lower ones. This system keeps all tools off the floor and out of the way of foot traffic.

Another way to accomplish the same thing is to nail panels of the popular new perforated hardboard to wall studs. With interchangeable hooks and various metal fixtures you can store any number of things in any arrangement you choose. Use ¼-inch thick panels and fasten with three-penny nails spaced six inches apart at intermediate studs and four inches apart on the edges. Nail at centre of panel first and work toward edges.

Still another way to increase wall storage calls for 1x8 lumber in the least expensive grade. Ask your lumber dealer for "resawed" boards. Erect several rows of shelves out of long lengths of this lumber, supported by ordinary screwed-on shelf brackets. Bottom shelves should be no lower than four feet from the floor.

While a workbench is a nice item to have in a garage, it appropriates a lot of valuable space. An acceptable substitute is a folding work table, hinged to the wall at one edge with three strap hinges. The table can be made of ¾-inch Plyshield-grade exterior plywood or ¾-inch hardboard. Raised it could be supported by hinged legs or by chains extending from table edges to eye hooks on wall studs. Lowered, it's entirely out of the way.

Now move up to the roof of your garage. If it is a gable-roofed structure there is plenty of room there for a second attic for storage of storms, screens, lumber and other building materials too bulky for storage elsewhere.



You can build a garage "attic" platform using metal straps to suspend 2x4 crossmembers from existing joists. Decking lumber is applied over 2x4s. The metal straps, spaced 36 inches apart on joists and 2x4s, are fastened to them with wood screws.

The platform can be built on the floor of your garage, then raised as a unit and attached to the joists. Or you can suspend 2x4s from the joists first and install decking afterward. If you have help the first method is to be preferred.

FIX-IT FORUM

Q — Moisture has evidently caused two successive coats of paint to blister on the siding of our house. What can we do to prevent further damage?

A — Moisture causing paint to blister may come from indoors or outdoors. Your house may have been painted early in the year before siding had sufficient time to dry out, or shortly after a rainy period. Or water vapor from inside may be condensing within the walls, penetrating siding and damaging paint. Employ an exhaust fan or open windows while cooking, bathing, washing or drying clothes, etc.

GET MORE USE out of garage space by keeping on the floor only those tools and supplies which cannot be raised out of the way.

972 Houses For Indians

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration Minister Harris said Friday night that 972 houses were built for Indians on reserves last year.

Reporting to the Commons on Indian affairs, for which he is responsible, Mr. Harris said there had been a "noteworthy" increase last year in the number of Indian children in school—31,000, an increase of 2,700 compared to 1952.

He said he hoped an agreement reached with the Sarnia, Ont., board of education would provide an example for other communities where Indians live.

The federal government had agreed to pay for some classrooms in a Sarnia school and make a per capita annual grant for Indian children attending that school. As a result, there now is no separate Indian school in Sarnia and Indians are free to attend all schools in the city.

Jailed 10 Days For Slapping Child

OTTAWA (CP)—George Lortie, 49, slapped Yate Hong, 12, a school traffic patrol officer of Chinese origin. Chinese, he said "weren't needed to tell white children what to do."

Said magistrate Glenn Strike: "This is not a case for a fine."

Lortie, arrested a short time later while boarding a bus, was sentenced to 10 days in jail.

Series To Probe Discrimination

The department of labor in co-operation with the Canadian council of Christians and Jews will present a series of eight radio broadcasts, the first of its kind in Canada, on discrimination in employment. CHEX will carry the broadcasts.

The Hon. Walter Harris Minister for citizenship and immigration will introduce the series Monday.

It will be followed by "Discrimination and Democracy in Canada" by Ralph Allen, editor of Maclean's magazine, and "Discrimination, What It Does To Man", by Dr. J. D. Griffin, general director, Canadian mental health association.

On July 19, Lister Sinclair will discuss "Ignorance — Discrimination Cannot Live Without It"; July 26, "The Churches Look At Discrimination" — by the Rev. Richard D. Jones, National Director, Canadian council of Christians and Jews; August 2, "Discrimination: What It Does To Business" by E. P. Taylor; August 9, "Discrimination: What It Does To Trade Unions", by Claude Jodoin of the trades and labor congress of Canada; and "Law As An Anti-Discrimination Weapon", by Hon. M. F. Gregg, Minister of labor.

New Technique Answer To Cinemascope

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The battle of the dimensions still rages.

This week saw much activity in behalf of new movie techniques. Paramount's William Holden was circling the globe to sell the studio's process, Vistavision. RKO demonstrated its superscope throughout the United States.

And in Hollywood, the press trooped out to see two new developments. One was the long-waited Todd-AO process, in which "Oklahoma" will be filmed.

It's good — in fact, it may be the best. The screen is broad, slightly curved and taller than the ribbon-like cinemascope. It excells in clarity. The film is 65mm, instead of the normal 35, and the film runs through the camera at 30 frames a second instead of the usual 24.

These factors, plus a great bug-eye lens, give a picture that seems as close to real life as anything I've seen on a movie screen.

The other showing was the improved methods of cinemascope. Its parent, 20th Century - Fox, showed some film using a new lens that seems to eliminate the fuzziness that plagued early cinemascope films. The depth of focus is pleasing to the eye.

MORE IMPRESSIVE

Twentieth-Fox, the first big firm to bring out a new technique, is attempting to win back some of the play stolen by the newer developments. Some impetus was lost because the studio put out such claptrap as "Hell and High Water," "12 Mile Reef" and "King of the Khyber Rifles." The list of new cinemascope films looks much more impressive.

Here is a refresher course on new dimensions and what is happening to them:

Cinemascope—It squeezes a wide scene on to normal film. A special lens projects the result on a broad screen. It is still the most used of the new techniques.

Cinerama—Three projectors throw a continuous scene on a huge, semi-circular screen, giving the audience a sense of being in the picture. It is doing great business in a dozen cities, but is limited to a roadshow operation.

SAYS 3D IS DYING

Vistavision—The image is received on two frames of normal film. The bigger negative can be blown up to fit any size of screen and still retain clarity. This has not yet been seen by the public.

Superscope—A trick lens can convert any kind of film to fit all screen sizes. It is still unseen by the public.

Todd - AO—A mammoth lens, 65mm film and big screen combine for utmost clarity. This also appears destined for limited, roadshow use.

3D—The viewer looks through polarized glasses at two images, achieving an illusion of depth. Not much life left in 3D.

Failure To Introduce Segregation Leaves Puzzle

BY JOHN WORRALL

CAPE TOWN, (OFNS)— The defeat of the South African Premier, Dr. Daniel F. Malan, on the Coloured vote issue at his fifth attempt to crash through the constitutional barrier protecting the common roll voting rights of the Coloured (mixed blood) people of the Cape Province—leave another series of question marks.

Dr. Malan failed by nine votes to get a two-thirds majority at the joint sessions of both House of Parliament for his amended Bill to separate White from Coloured voters. And one more session of the South African Parliament has ended in an atmoshere of uncertainty. The next session does not begin until January.

Dr. Malan has a clever new plan up his sleeve, according to some reports, to achieve his aim of securing political separation between Whites and Coloureds. This plan if it came off would give him another seven votes towards the two-thirds majority needed under the South Africa Act to pass Coloured Vote Bill.

It concerns the method of electing the Senate. Since the Union of South Africa was formed, the thirty-two elected members of the Senate (eight from each of the four provinces, Natal, Orange Free State, Transvaal and Cape) have been elected under a system of proportional representation. They are chosen in each province by an Electoral College consisting of the Members of Parliament and Members of the Provincial Council of the province. Thus a Party with just over half the votes in the Electoral College wins five of the eight Senators, while a Party with just under half wins the other three.

MAJORITY PLAN

Dr. Malan's reported scheme is to change the Senate election method from proportional to majority representation. Thus a Party which has a bare majority in a province would be able to annex all eight Senatorial seats for itself. In the Cape, the Orange Free State and the Transvaal, where the Nationalists have smaller or larger majorities, they will be able to return twenty-four Senators instead of the four, seven and five they hold respectively under the present system. Only in Natal would they suffer, because the majority of Members of the Electoral College there support the Opposition Parties. Their holding there would drop from one to none.

The government has discovered that all that is necessary to change the Senate electoral system is a simple decree by the govenor-general (in effect, the cabinet). The senate can be dissolved by a simple amendment to the South Africa Act, and dissolution of Parliament is not necessary. This would be done next session.

If this is the plan Dr. Malan has in mind, the whole emphasis will now shift to the forthcoming provincial elections which the (Nationalist) Government has already announced will be fought on the Colored vote issue. The government would have to make certain of getting a majority in the Cape and the Transvaal — the Orange Free State is solid Nationalist. It is an extremely clever and extremly simple scheme, and it is amazing that no one has thought of it before.

NEW FARTY

Another political development here this week has been the creation of a middle-road "Conservative" Party. This has been formed by the rebel United Party M.P.s., who voted with the Nationalists on the Colored Vote Bill. They claim they left the United Party because they disagree with its new 'Left tendencies' and prefer the Nationalist line on the color issue, but are not republican. The party in parliament now number six-there were originally seven, but one has returned to the United Party fold.

Thus three new South African Parties have been formed in the past year—the Liberal Party, the Federal Party (mainly Natal) and the Conservative Party. All are in effect losses to the United Party from which they sprang.

2-Day Bus Tour Of St. Lawrence

MILLBROOK (ENS)—A busload of high school students returned on Thursday evening from a two-day educational jaunt which included a boat trip through the Thousand Islands. The students were accompanied by the principal, by Harry Williams science and mathematics teacher, and by Mrs. B. B. Dawson, president and Mrs. James McMaster, secretary of the Home and School Association.

The bus left Millbrook at 5.30 a.m. Wednesday, and reached the Gananoque boat dock four hours later. After the boat trip the party picnicked on the shores of the St. Lawrence overlooking the islands they had just visited by boat.

That afternoon they were the guests of the vice-president of the Caldwell Linen Mills, and visited his modern plant.

They saw the village of Iroquois which will be completely wiped out when the plans for the new St. Lawrence waterway are carried out.

Iroquois Point, long ago the camping grounds of Indians, where relics are dug up regularly was also visited as were the famous Galop Locks. On their way to Farrans Point they passed the Sault Rapids. These rapids too, will be lost in the rising of the water when the dam at Cornwall is built.

The students had the evening free to visit movies or sightsee and they stayed overnight at a Cornwall hotel where reservations had been made.

Thursday morning they visited a paper mill where they were shown the making of the finest quality of paper.

After free time for shopping the students boarded the bus again for Kemptville where they inspected the agricultural school. The party stopped in Smith Falls for supper. They arrived back in Millbrook a little after 10.30 p.m.

Two MP's Talk Out Divorce Bill In House

OTTAWA (CP)—Two CCF members of Parliament Friday helped talk out a divorce bill which they described as possibly an injustice to the wife of the man seeking the divorce. The action, in effect, killed the bill for this session.

H. A. Hosking (PC—Wellington South) argued that the bill, entitled an act for the relief of Joseph Delphis Guillaume Delorme of Montreal, should be approved because no real marriage exists between the couple.

He charged that R. R. Knight (CCF — Saskatoon) and G. H Castleden (CCF — Yorkton) were trying to kill the bill because their party wants to abolish the Senate. They tried to discredit the Upper Chamber whose divorce committee hears divorce evidence on Quebec and Newfoundland applications and recommends for or against granting a divorce.

LONG SPEECH

Mr. Knight who launched the protest against the bill's passage spoke for nearly three-quarters of the hour allotted to consideration of private bills. Mr. Hoskings spoke another 10 minutes and Mr. Castleden still was on his feet protesting against its passage when the hour expired. Parliament is expected to prorogue before another opportunity for debate arises.

Before the debate began, State Secretary Pickersgill appealed to the CCF to allow members to vote on the bill without delay.

However, Mr. Knight said the bill has been bothering his conscience. The woman did not want a divorce. Her husband took divorce action, charging adultery, 19 years after first discovering the alleged adultery.

Mr. Knight said the man had admitted in sworn evidence that he did not start his action until the wife had taken proceedings in the Quebec courts for a separation and it appeared the husband would have to pay her $20 a week.

SAYS CHARGED

The husband, he said, had been charged with attempted rape last April, a charge which later the husband said in his evidence had been modified.

Russell Reinke (L — Hamilton South) said this charge later was reduced to one of common assault.

Mr. Knight said the man testified that he sought the divorce for the sake of the good name of his children. But under questioning he said he did not know where his children lived. The children—boys 18 and 20—testified to being beaten, kicked and abused by the father until they had to leave home.

GIVES VIEW

Mr. Hosking said the CCF referred to each divorce as being handled in an improper way in order to discredit the Senate.

When a member protested that it is unparliamentary to impute motives, E. T. Applewhaite, committee chairman, asked Mr. Hosking to withdraw the remark.

Mr. Hosking complied but shortly afterwards said Mr. Knight and his supporters were preventing the divorce bill passing "purely and simply to discredit the Senate."

Mr. Applewhaite ordered Mr. Hosking to withdraw. Again Mr. Hosking complied.

ASKS QUESTION

Stanley Knowles (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre), sponsor of several unsuccessful measures to have these divorces handled by the Exchequer Court, asked if Mr. Hosking thinks it fair for a woman who does not want a divorce to suffer loss of money and reproach to her name.

Mr. Hosking replied that if as in this case the woman left her husband and lived for years with another man she had forfeited the right to alimony.

Mr. Castleden said he takes his stand because he believes there is a great possibility of injustice being done. If Parliament erred prestige suffered and it was the responsibility of members to uphold Parliament.

Eagles Build Nest On Telegraph Pole

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — George Scott, a lineman for the CPR, says he is considering putting up a sign on a telegraph pole saying:

"Eagles please do not nest here."

It won't have any less effect than his efforts for the last five years to prevent two osprey (fish eagles) from building their nest on a key telegraph pole.

The eagles' penthouse is on a pole half a mile inside the eastern border of Banff National Park. The pole carries lines which serve Canadian Pacific Telegraphs, the trans-Canada service of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the Canadian Press.

Scott reports that the persistent ospreys never heard of the word futility. The birds no sooner get to feeling at home in a nest and thinking of drapes and things than Scott, prodded by duty, has to knock it down.

Scott says the osprey seem well aware that they are protected by park regulations. Scott adds that he once asked a warden about the osprey and for all the satisfaction he got, he might as well have asked the osprey.

BUILD AGAIN

The lineman, as part of his duties, knocks down the nest twice a year and the birds immediately start rebuilding.

An osprey is a big bird and builds a big nest. Scott has knocked down some that have been three feet across and he has seen the birds carrying two-foot-long sticks to rebuild.

The feud between Scott and the birds got into the news when Milton Wells of Cochrane, Alta., a bird watcher, wrote the Calgary Herald asking if "a little publicity and some backing from fellow naturalists (would) save this nest."

Railway officials agree it is tough on the birds but they are forced to have the nests removed.

Commons Cleans Up All Odds And Ends

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament is expected to prorogue today after the lengthiest session since 1903.

The Commons cleaned up odds and ends of estimates from four departments Friday, clearing the decks for a final debate on the spending of the citizenship and immigration departments.

Immigration Minister Harris in a brief statement on his department Friday night said the number of immigrants arriving this year is expected to be slightly fewer than the 168,000 arrivals of 1953.

The date after which only dependents and relatives of immigrants are admitted will be moved to Sept. 30, a month earlier than last year.

The opposition groups are expected to launch their criticism at today's session, starting a half-hour earlier than usual at 10:30 am. EDT.

The 139th day of sitting today easily exceeds the long session of 1944-45 when Parliament took 136 days to complete business. The post-war record was established June 2 when the Commons exceeded the 119 sitting days in 1947-48. Sitting days in the 1903 session aren't recorded but Parliament was in session 236 days without any long adjournments.

Few surprises marked this session which began last Nov. 12. The major pieces of legislation included the two-year-old job of redrafting the Criminal Code, the revision of the Bank Act undertaken every 10 years and a rewriting of national housing legislation.

A clean-up of the mines department estimates brought an exchange of charges between Mines Minister Prudham and Solon Low, Social Credit leader, that the problems of the coal mines were being used for political capital.

Mr. Low accused Mr. Prudham of getting into the political gutter by criticizing Premier Manning of Alberta and Social Credit members of Parliament who urged adoption of a national fuel policy.

Mr. Prudham said such a policy now exists and that the Social Crediters are trying to shift the responsibility for mineral development from provincial to federal shoulders. That didn't include oil and gas development which was bringing in millions to Alberta but only coal which was causing some trouble.

CONCLUDE STUDY

Members concluded study of the agriculture department estimates and the last of the fisheries and public works departments spending programs were approved.

During the session, a considerable portion of the sitting time in recent weeks was devoted to study of expenditures totalling $4,534,065,000, a peacetime high compared with $4,389,979,000 estimated as spent in the fiscal year ended last March 31.

Budget tax cuts were worth about $36,000,000, less than one per cent of the national tax collection. They were confined largely to cuts in taxes paid at the manufacturers level.

Orlon Shirts Affect Compass

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (CP)—If a ship's compass acts up it may be because someone on the bridge is wearing an orlon shirt.

A report issued to shipowners and harbor boards by the New Zealand secretary of marine, W.C. Smith, points to this new navigational hazard.

A ship's officer reported recently that the compasses were oscillating in a queer way. On investigation it was found that they behaved in this manner only when this particular officer was in the vicinity.

It was found that he was wearing an orlon shirt. When he wore it the compasses oscillated, but when he changed to a shirt of other material they behaved in an exemplary manner.

It is considered that static electricity may have been responsible, because it was noted that when he pulled off the shirt it gave off sparks and attracted small pieces of paper.

The news hits mariners who have profited by the easy laundering of synthetic fabrics.

Canadian Stock Markets Fail To Follow New York

By GEORGE LINTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets failed to follow New York this week when the market there surged to 25-year heights.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at New York closed at $127.30—the highest since Oct. 23, 1929. It had gained $1.40 on the week.

At Montreal prices also moved ahead, though less spectacularly. But at Toronto industrials and golds hit a slide and losses were particularly heavy in western oils.

The first four days of the week at Toronto saw a slow decline with no real strength anywhere. Prices rallied Friday but the upswing was not enough to put the market ahead on the week.

Steels were the lowest industrial group. General Steel Wares dropped $4.25 in a slow decline that was stepped up at week's end by announcement of a dividend reduction.

BACK B.C. PROJECT

Aluminium was the week's most-talked-about issue, gaining $5.12½ in the heaviest trading since the stock was split in September, 1952. Brokers said investors were confident of big production from the company's Kitimat project in British Columbia, scheduled to open late this year.

Senior base metals bucked the lower trend and moved ahead firmly. Noranda hit a number of successive 1954 highs and closed up $1.25. International Nickel, Hudson Bay and Quemont climbed about $1.

The lower western oil board was featured by Calgary and Edmonton's $1.12½ loss and Canso Oil Products' $1 drop. But the three issues that lost heavily last week —Canadian Atlantic, Peace River Gas and Pacific Petroleums—recovered some of the slide with gains of 30, 35 and 55 cents.

The Friday - to-Friday indices: Industrials down .41 to 343.58, golds down .18 to 73.22, base metals up .34 to 149.17, and western oils down 1.49 to 88.50.

TOBACCO DOWN

The New York market saw Tobacco shares fall on news of the American Cancer Society's study linking smoking with cancer and heart disease. At Toronto, Imperial Tobacco lost 87½ cents.

At Montreal prices showed few trends early in the week but industrials led most of the market up toward the end. The Friday-to-Friday averages showed banks up .21 to 41.21, utilities down .3 to 106.7, industrials up .3 to 204.2, combined up .1 to 171.7, papers up 3.77 to 929.39, and golds up 1.50 to 58.53.

Suggests Committee Set Up Next Session

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons special committee on procedure recommended Friday in a report to Parliament that a similar committee be set up early at the next session to continue a study of parliamentary practices and conventions.

Speaker Rene Beaudoin tabled the report of the 21-member committee which met 22 times.

The report said the committee which studied possible chamges to parliamentary procedure has made progress.

Cayuga Returns To Service Aided By Office Workers

TORONTO (CP)—The return to service of the Cayuga, a 48-year-old Great Lakes institution and the last remaining passenger craft on Lake Ontario is the result of a mixture of business and sentiment.

For the first time in two years, the Cayuga, completely renovated, is again carrying passengers between Toronto, Niagara-on-the-Lake and Queenston, Ont.

An unusual venture, called the Cayuga Steamship Company, has saved the veteran passenger ship from the scrap-heap, where she was headed at the end of the 1952 summer season.

The company was formed in March, 1953, under the directorship of Alan Howard, Toronto marine artist, who was determined to keep the Cayuga operating.

OFFERED TO PUBLIC

Shares were put on the market at $5, later at $6, and more than 750 supporters enthusiastically subscribed the money needed to buy the Cayuga and its docking facilities, and to renovate it completely.

Most of the shareholders are office workers, clerks and housewives, many of whom rarely ride anything more exciting than a street-car to and from work.

To them, a trip on the Cayuga brought relief from the heavy heat of downtown Toronto, and they bought the three or four shares they could afford to keep the old veteran running.

Others bought shares for sentimental reasons, and some invested because of prospects of financial gain.

About $130,000 has been subscribed. The ship and the docking facilities at Niagara-on-the-Lake were purchased for $100,000 and the remaining $30,000 was spent on insurance, new equipment and new furnishings.

COMPANY FORMED

Mr. Howard's fight to save the Cayuga from being scrapped began in May, 1950, when he heard unofficially that Canada Steamship Lines Ltd. planned to remove her from service.

Col. K. R. Marshall, then president of CSL, advised Howard to form a company and take the ship over if he wanted to keep her operating.

Howard travelled many times from Toronto to Niagara Falls trying to raise interest in his plan. Last year, he met George Mallen, president of Gordon-Daly Corporation, who suggested forming the Cayuga Steamship Company and selling shares by public subscription.

Roland Mitchener, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Toronto St. Paul's, is president, and Allan Grossman, a city alderman, vice president.

The company bought the Cayuga late last year.

Niziolek Holds 3-Stroke Golf Tilt Lead

By GARY SMITH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Eddie Niziolek, a young darkhorse, had a man-sized job today as he headed into the 36-hole final for the Ontario Open golf championship against plenty of hot golfers.

The 24-year-old assistant pro at Toronto Scarboro held a three-stroke lead over the field and had to test his nerves against the final two-round assault by his 54 opponents. Niziolek fired a three-under-par 67 over the Cedar Brae Golf and Country Club in the opening round Friday. He was the only man to break par 70 and only those who shot 75 or less qualified.

Right behind Niziolek were four men bunched with 70s. They were Rudy Horvath of Windsor Essex, the pre-tournament favorite, Eric Hanson from Scarboro, Moe Norman, an amateur from Kitchener Rockway and Murray Tucker of Toronto Rosedale. Tucker is a former winner of the title.

HOT PUTTER

Niziolek, who came from Windsor this year, was riding a hot putter and was four under para at the 17th, where he took a bogey four. On the 11th and 12th he sank a pair of 15-footers for consecutive birdie threes.

Niziolek blasted four other birdies, on the second, fifth, seventh and 16th holes. He was one under para with a 35 going out and two under on the back nine with a 32.

Horvath, who finished in a tie for 13th money in the United States Open last week, birdied the third and 10th and parred the last eight holes.

BOGEYS BEAT HIM

Norman, who has won four of the eight tournaments he has entered this year, birdied the fifth, 10th and 12th. He might have broken par but he had consecutive bogeys on the 15th and 16th holes.

Tucker had four birdies, three on the back nine, in posting his 70 while Hanson, who was out with the first foursome in the early morning, birdied the seventh, eighth and 15th in carding his pair of 35s.

Jay Randolph, 19-year-old son of U.S. Senator Jennings Randolph, posted a 38-33—71 for the third highest score. He was tied by Toronto Thornhill's Jack Wagstaff.

GOOD CHANCE

On the strength of their scores Hanson, Norman and Wagstaff stand a good chance of making the Ontario Willingdon Cup team. The four Ontario amateurs posting the lowest score over the 54 holes will make up the Ontario squad.

The four must play in the Ontario amateur at the Thornhill Club July 28-31. If the Ontario amateur winner is not among the four already chosen he automatically gets a berth and the fourth members in the standing will be dropped.

Officials feared that the professionals might be too strong and stipulated that the low 15 Ontario amateurs and ties must play today. Their fears proved groundless. Of the 55 qualifiers, 28 are amateurs and 27 are pros.

New Yorker Breaks 43-Year Record

By JIM PEACOCK

TORONTO (CP)—A three-country field takes another crack today at Canadian track and field records.

One mark—a record that stood for 43 years—fell during the Canadian open championships Friday night, at the hands of 22-year-old New Yorker Martin Engles, who holds the U.S. hammer throw record of 195 feet, 4½ inches.

Officials looked to another American champion, sprinter Art Bragg of Baltimore, for a new standard in the 220-yard dash, one of 20 events to be staged at today's wind-up.

SETS RECORD

Engles, a recent graduate of New York University, put his six-foot, two-inch, 200-pound frame behind the 16-pound hammer Friday night for a record 190 feet, 11 inches. That topped the old mark of 182 feet, four inches set at Montreal in 1911 by M. J. McGrath of the Irish-American Athletic Club of New York, by eight feet, seven inches, and was less than 10 feet off the world mark of 200 feet.

The Canadian native record—the best by a Canadian—is 158 feet, 2½ inches.

Four other titles left Canada Friday night, three to Americans and one to an Australian British Empire Games entrant.

Stan Raike, Norm Williams and Rich Ferguson, all of Toronto, and Selwyn Jones of Hamilton, won other men's championships, and Gwen Hobbins also of Toronto, took the only women's final staged.

WINS SHOT PUT

Raike, 31-year-old Toronto policeman who has almost certainly earned a Canadian B.E.G. berth with a native record heave last week of 50 feet, nine inches in the 16-pound shot put, won that crown Friday night over Engles. Raike's winning distance was 50 feet, eight inches.

Williams won the 120-yard high hurdles in 15.3 seconds, nine-tenths of a second off his own Canadian mark. Jones, a top Canadian middle distance runner, won the six-mile run in the 80-degree heat in 32 minutes, 40.4 seconds.

In the mile run, Ferguson was not pressed by the all-Canadian field, and his time of 4:20.8 was well off the record.

Miss Hobbins won the women's 220-yard dash with a time of 27 seconds, coming in just ahead of Joan Wood, second, and Kathy Barecki, third, both of Montreal.

AUSSIE WINNER

Australia's winner, Doug Stuart, 22, of Sydney, matched a meet record of six feet, 3⅝ inches in winning the high jump. Stuart has been a student at Michigan State University since December, and will be one of three Australian high-jumpers at the games in Vancouver July 30-Aug. 8.

Reg Pearman, 38, George Shaw, 22, and Jim Gathers, 22, all 1952 U.S. Olympic team members and all from the Pioneer Club of New York city, were the other American winners.

Gathers upset Bragg, the U.S. national 100-yard and 220-yard champion, in the 100. Gathers finished a yard ahead of Bragg in 9.7 seconds, just under the meet record of 9.9. Pearman took the 440-yard dash in 48 seconds, and Shaw won the running broad jump with a distance of 22 feet, 3½ inches.

TITLE FIGHT SET

NEW YORK (AP)—Light-heavyweight champion Archie Moore and top contender Harold Johnson of Philadelphia Friday signed for a 15-round title fight at Madison Square Garden Aug. 11. This time it looks as if the fight will be held.

A few months ago it was announced they would have it out in San Francisco July 14 but the 38-year-old Moore backed out because he was carrying too much beef. He weighed a hefty 189¼ on June 7 when he stopped heavyweight Bert Whitehurst in six rounds here.

He'll have to make the 175-pound limit for Johnson. The bout will be telecast with the New York area blacked out.

Tough Course Faces Women At Brightwood

By GERRY MARTIN

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP)—The Brightwood Golf and Country Club, rated as one of the toughest and prettiest courses in the Atlantic provinces, will be the scene of this year's Canadian women's amateur tournaments.

It will be the first time for the ladies closed tournament over an Atlantic course. The open was held at the Riverside Club, Saint John, N.B., in 1948.

The closed championship will be played Aug. 5-7 and the open Aug. 9-14. The interprovincial team matches and the east-west junior championships will be played along with the closed tournament.

TO OPPOSE BRITONS

The top Canadian women golfers in the tournaments will be picked to represent Canada in a match with a visiting British team later in August at Montreal.

The Brightwood course, on rolling hills overlooking Halifax harbor, has been hacked out of the woods and is noted for its rugged surroundings.

Its fairways are narrow, its traps rough and it is not uncommon to see deer straying across the links.

Laid out in 1914 as a nine-hole course, it was increased to 18 holes in 1925. Today it measures a few yards more than the 6,000 required for championship play.

A move taken by the Canadian Ladies Golf Union in lowering the par at Brightwood might lead competitors to believe the course is easier than it looks, but they will soon realize their mistake.

Women's par has been dropped from 75 to 73, with a stroke lopped off No. 3 hole, a 375-yard dog leg to the right, and one off No. 13, a 379-yard hole over a swamp. The men's par is 68.

HILLY COURSE

The fairways are long and narrow, climbing up or dropping down steep hills.

Kas Zabowski, professional at the Halifax Ashburn Club, expects to see the women have a tough time at Brightwood.

"The course is a little more rugged than any other in the Atlantic provinces. A lot depends on the weather, if it's dry, pitch and run . . . But if it's wet . . . well?"

It is expected that Marlene Stewart of Fonthill, Ont., winner of the closed title last year, and open champion Barbara Romack of Sacramento, Calif., will defend their titles.

Opens Bridge

THORNDALE, Ont. (CP)—Highways Minister Doucett officially opened a $200,000 bridge over the River Thames near this community about 10 miles north of London Friday night. The 360-foot concrete bridge replaces a light steel girder bridge built in 1902 and taken down last year.

Many Talents Needed In BEG Cycle Race

By GRAHAM McMULLIN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Almost anyone can win a gold medal in the British Empire Games cycle race next Aug. 7, if equipped with a few simple talents.

Talents like picking a lunch off an outstretched arm while pedalling up to 40 miles an hour. It helps if a flat tire can be changed in about 35 seconds, and of course you have to keep clear of flying spokes if someone ahead piles up.

The odds in the 62½-mile grind favor the Australians who pretty well controlled the cycling in the 1950 games at Auckland, N.Z.

KEEN CONTENTION

South Africa and England, who showed well at the last Olympics, are rated highly, while New Zealand and Canada are figured in the next-to-best category.

Canada has some fine riders, especially in Quebec, but there is a general lack of knowledge of the sport here. Racing cyclists and their equipment are more often viewed with curiosity and alarm than with enthusiasm.

The road race, considered by Australian tourists to be a good test, consists of a nine-lap course circling through the fashionable Point Grey residential district.

SHARP INCLINE

Riders will hit a fairly sharp incline right after they swing onto the course from the opening stretch west on Broadway. They climb about 300 feet in the first 1½ miles. The course then levels off and circles alongside the university endowment lands before making an abrupt right turn near the half-way point.

A sharp down-hill pitch carries almost to sea level and easy going alongside beautiful English bay. They will climb again at the three-quarter mark. On the final lap, the cyclists will swing off left and east for the spurt to the finish line back on Broadway.

Because the leading riders are breaking wind for those following, contestants usually sweep around in a tight bunch, unable to shake each other off.

BREAK CHANCES

The chance for a "break" from opponents, the high points of a race, will come on one of five sharp corners or on one of the hills where reduced speed cuts out the "wind-screen" effect. Should the weather turn bad, spectators can look for a lot of action on corners where a reckless rider may try for a break.

Regular and auxiliary police, an ambulance, Red Cross workers and a physician will be on hand with escorting radio-equipped cars. One feeding station and two repair stations will be spotted on the course.

A rider in distress can depend on a team member for most things short of a major mishap. Wheels and cycles may not be exchanged, but a rider may share his pump, spare tire, food and water bottle.

CARRY FOOD

Chocolate, raisins and other sources of quick energy are carried in the pockets of the riding jersey while a bottle strapped to the cycle contains a mixture of water, glucose, and orange juice.

Team seconds will be allowed to hold out food to the speeding cyclists twice during the race. Feeding can be difficult if someone decides to touch off a sprint while a rider has his bottle of glucose uncorked.

Cycles are equipped with quick release hubs in case of punctures. A rider can whip off a wheel, strip tire and tube, replace it with the spare carried around the shoulders and inflate it with a bottle of compressed air in about 35 seconds.

Contestants wil race as teams and individuals. The country with the thee fastest men will be awarded a first place while points will also go to the first three rides across the finish line. Canada's team will not be known until after the trials in Vancouver July 5-7.

You always want a second look

How many times a day do you take a second look at something? If you have a chance—you do it every time something new comes along.

When your team wins, by skill or weird luck, it isn't enough to see it pictured—to hear it told—just once. You take a second look . . . in your newspaper. It's the only sports medium that gives you a chance to gloat and mastermind to your heart's content.

Whenever a politician, or a labor leader, or an act of God changes the traffic light for your business, you take a second look . . . at your newspaper. It's the only news medium that gives you a chance for quick complete re-evaluation.

When you want a house, or refrigerator, or television set, you look in your newspaper . . . at A's ad, then B's and C's, then back to A's. You take a second look. And your newspaper is the only advertising medium that gives you a chance to shop and compare, and see what's for sale here and now.

Everybody wants a chance for a second look—on the things that interest him most. That's why practically everybody reads the newspaper—every day.

Just as you read the paper now, your customers and prospects read the paper too—at the time they choose, for as long as they choose—for the advertising as well as for news or for fun.

• When your selling is backed by newspaper advertising, your story has a chance to reach almost everybody. Not just comedy fans, or mystery fans, or sports fans . . . but everybody.

That's why advertisers today invest far more of their money in newspapers than in any other form of advertising.

Only the newspaper is first with the most news . . . first with the most people . . . first with the most advertisers!

The newspaper is always "first with the most"

Stress Need To Cook Trout Properly

OTTAWA (CP)—It's one thing to catch a trout; it's another thing altogether to cook it properly. The culinary angle will be taken care of at the Flin Flon, Man., trout festival by two home economists of the federal department of fisheries.

Miss Edna Raynor of Winnipeg and Miss Jean MacDonald of Ottawa will give daily demonstrations of the cooking of fresh-water fish at the festival, which lasts from June 30 to July 4.

FEATURED RECIPE

Their featured recipe is for a baked whole lake trout. For the benefit of people who can't get to Flin Flon, it goes like this:

Take one 4-5 pound dressed lake trout, wipe it with a damp cloth, sprinkle the inside with salt, and stuff it loosely with rice and olive dressing. Fasten with string, brush the outside with two tablespoons of melted fat (butter recommended) and bake in a hot oven (450 to 500 degrees fahrenheit.)

Allow 10 minutes per inch thickness of stuffed fish.

The dressing is made this way: To ¼ cup melted butter, add ¾ cup chopped onion and 1 cup diced celery, and cook until tender, (about 3 minutes). Add 1 1-3 cup cooked rice, 1 cup chopped stuffed olives, and ¼ teaspoon each of salt, pepper, dried sage and dried thyme. Toss lightly, and stuff fish.

This amount stuffs a four or five pound fish.

During the week, members have debated and introduced a new, streamlined constitution which includes membership of women television script writers for the first time.

Dancers Of Laird School Present Pleasing Recital

Dance Follies of 1954 presented by the Marion Perry Laird School of Dancing drew a near-capacity crowd to the Collegiate auditorium Friday evening and provided two hours full of snappy entertainment.

Every form of dancing was included in the three-part program. From tots to teens there was the mark of Mrs. Laird's expertness in teaching young people tap and ballet dancing. She quickly recognized special abilities and proceeds to guide them into work that is delightful to watch. This was noticeable particularly in the acrobatic dancing by young Nancy Norris.

Other pleasing solo specialties were tapping on the drum by Mary Lou Ahern, a waltz clog and a blues number by Jenis Glover, "Home on the Range" by Donna Gail Woodman, "Bell Bottom Blues" by Mary Ann Panter, and an acrobatic number by Beverly Teevins.

One of the best received numbers was the Dream Ballet by Marjorie Sherry and Mary Ann Willamette, both giving a professional-like performance.

All of the perennially favorite dances were there, Highland Fling, Wooden Soldiers, Sailors' Hornpipe, Sword Dance, Irish Colleens and Hawaiian Maidens. No one explained, though, just how a young man got in with the Can Can Girls.

Group members demonstrated dance positions and exercises and rhythm. All of the dances were composed by Mrs. Laird. She also designs the costumes and these make the show so very attractive.

Pairs who danced were Margaret and Florence Bannister, Dorothy Ann Lucas and Terry Faiers, Nancy Flint and Jeffery Parker, Carol Walker and Jimmy Peters, Helen Charlton and Patsy Bratttain, and Judith Stock, Beverly Jones, and Vivian Gillespie were a trio of gypsies in a serenade.

Young Nancy Crary and Jean Louise Callaghan led the juniors in a rhythm number and Connie Price and Georgina Murney were leaders in a Hawaiian chorus. In the sword dance were Nancy Flint, Dorothy Ann Lucas, Elizabeth Sanderson, Jeffery Parker and Terry Faiers.

Other children taking part in the recital were:

Beginners' tap: Wendy Loucks, Sherine Loucks, Ann Curtain, Mary Fitzpatrick, Darragh Scollard, Maureen Scollard, Pauline Byrd, Shirley Marsh, Donna Laton, Tanna Nichols, Nancy Crary, Jean Louise Callaghan.

Can Can girls: Sonia Alberico, Donna De Carlo, Sharon Woodhouse, Ann Maron, Rocky De Carlo, Donna Dufane, Lynn Lavoie, Darlene Williams.

Oh Mein Papa: Maureen McDonald, Patty Taylor, Nancy Hood, Judith Ainsley, Linda Parnell, Dianne Smith, Charlene Hutchins, Nancy Miller, Sharon Smith.

Parade Wooden Soldiers: Judith McFaul, Mary Jane Hughes. Sandra Sutton, Mary Jane Smoothie, Susan Stemp, Jenifer Panter, Carol Simmons, Mary Caravaggie, Shiela Payne, Carol Worsencroft, Doreen Healy.

Sailors' Hornpipe: Nancy Flint, Carol Campbell, Yvonne McIlmoyle, Yvonne Longhurst, Gail Gregg, Brenda McConnell, Shirley Peterson, Blanche Woodhouse.

Tulip Time: Mary Lou Ahern, Ann O'Brien, Elaine Seabrooke, Mary Jane Hickey.

Finds More Pretty Girls In U.K. Phone Exchanges

MONTREAL (CP)—Ouida MacLellan, a Canadian girl who works for the Evening Standard in London, is convinced there are more pretty girls in the telephone exchanges than in any other type of London business.

Miss MacLellan, whose home originally was in Moncton, N.B., was interviewed here while spending a holiday in Canada.

Her decision about pretty girls in London followed a survey she made for her newspaper, which started after John Baker White, owner of a big store, made a statement that his business had a monopoly of pretty girls.

INTENSIVE SURVEY

Miss MacLellan interviewed thousands of girls working in stores, telephone exchanges," the civil service and private business. Although she is 26 herself, she set the age limit for the survey at 25. "After that the lines begin to show, especially in press photos," she said.

After deciding in favor of the telephone girls, Miss MacLellan admitted that in John Baker White's store "there were quite a number of slightly above average looking girls, but the British on the whole are not a beautiful race and the average isn't high."

She said the average British girl has little idea of good grooming.

"It's odd but I soon realized that if a girl had a neat back to her head there was something wrong with her face. And if her face was pretty she neglected her hair. Very few of the girls I interviewed really knew how to handle make-up. All too often they were heavily made up from forehead to chin and then forgot their necks."

APT TO OVERDRESS

Miss MacLellan, herself a tall, slim brunette who dresses smartly, said London girls have a tendency to overdress.

"I was always encouraging them to peel off layers of loose jackets, extra sweaters, little scarves and surplus broaches."

One habit which annoyed her was the combination of big earrings and low - heeled walking shoes.

"British women think Canadian women are softies," she said. "They picture you eating entirely out of cans, letting your husbands do the dishes and generally living a push-button existence. I'd like to give them a truer picture of your life over here."

DOROTHY DIX:

Futile To Hope For Change After Girl Given Own Way

DEAR MISS DIX: I have a friend who is worried about her daughter. The girl, now 17, is the most defiant, impudent child I have even seen. She wasn't taken in hand in early childhood, and now her parents can do nothing with her. She has a good position, spends all her money on herself, goes where and when she likes, giving no information as to destination, companions, or time of return. She claims her home life is unbearable and she's leaving as soon as she's 18.

Do you think her parents should try to stop her, or let her go? Her folks are very good people, but made the mistake of spoiling the girl when she was young. If they tried to scold her, she always burst into tears and said no one loved her, etc.; so, being softhearted, her father and mother did everything to keep her from crying. The mother will be heartbroken if she leaves, but what can be done to stop her?

MARGE.

ANSWER: When a situation has been permitted to go along unchecked, gathering momentum every year, it's rather futile to hope that a radical change can be made at this late date. Continued and increased concessions might keep the girl home, but eventually the limit will be reached. It would be better to face the issue now. As your friend has so firmly established the pattern of letting her daughter have her own way, you certainly have no reason to assume that she'll begin a disciplining program now, even if one might be effective. Anyway, the girl probably has no intention of leaving home. Why should she? She has unlimited freedom, complete control over the money she earns; her clothes are cleaned and pressed, her meals cooked, her room kept clean. She's enough of an opportunist to realize that such service will not be available if she goes out on her own.

SHE NEEDS RESPONSIBILITY

A bit of responsibility is what Miss Defiance needs; mother should open the door and send her off instead of deciding to have a nervous breakdown. Mom is shedding the tears that daughter should have shed many years ago. If Mom would dry her eyes and set up a bit of authority, something might be salvaged yet. The shock, alone, of being told to launder her own clothes, contribute financially to the household, and explain her late hours, might bring the young lady to her senses. Try to strengthen Mom's backbone if you really have friendly impulses.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm 16, and though I have lots of boy friends, there are two in particular I like —Peter and Rob. Peter can't come over to see me very often, as he has no means of transportation but Rob has a car. They both want me to go steady, but I can't decide which one to choose.

MARCIA.

ANSWER: There's really no point in tying yourself down to one boy when you like them all equally well. Tell both boys you aren't ready for steady dating and the best they can do is wait until you are.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: One of my brothers-in-law takes great pleasure in teasing our 6-year-old son, to the point that the boy becomes very nervous after ever family visit. When the child shows signs of annoyance, the uncle will strike him—ostensibly in fun, of course, but leaving black-and-blue marks that to me aren't funny. If the uncle is here when I'm not at home, the situation becomes almost uncontrollable. If I'm present it doesn't get so bad. How can it be stopped?

FATHER.

ANSWER: Drastic though the measure may be, I'd forbid the uncle to come to the house unless he will control his antics. He's covering a cruel streak with a thin veneer of "playing with the boy." Either have the boy in bed when the family visits, or curtail the calls of this particular pest.

Study Map Canada As Part Of Dominion Day Activities

BY NANCY CLEAVER

Each Canada or Dominion Day we are reminded of our Canadian heritage. This is a good time to send for the new map of Canada which may be obtained from the department of mines and technical surveys for half a dollar. This is an attractive colored map showing many islands in the northern section which do not appear in earlier surveys. Mother and dad might point out the places where they have lived or visited, and tell their children about them.

One of our happiest memories of childhood was mother telling us about teaching in Halifax, and walking in the beautiful pine woods outside the city. There she found heather and she could hear the waves pounding on the shore on a windy day. She also told us of her early married life in the Okanogan Valley. Sometimes she went on a picnic in the summer when the sun would be shining on the peaks of one range of mountains, while on the other side of the valley a thunderstorm was pouring down upon the mountain slopes. Later when we visited the East and West coasts, these stories of other Canadian provinces heightened our enjoyment of the magnificent scenery.

THIRD LARGEST

A map of Canada or another person's description cannot give an accurate idea of the vastness of our country. Few Canadians realize that we have the third largest nation in the world with its land area of almost three and one half million square miles. Only Russia and China cover a larger territory. Canada is larger territory. Canada is larger than United States and Alaska combined.

Parents should not leave the cultivation of a love of Canada completely to teachers. They should encourage their children as they grow up to learn more and more about Canada as a nation, about her history, her contribution to the world of art and literature, and the part her scientists have played in this new industrial era.

Whenever possible parents should take their children on trips to other parts of this country and visit the Art Galleries and places of public interest. Stop and read the inscription on monuments of historic interest. Camping in the lovely National and provincial parks can be a thrilling family adventure in the vacation weeks. Mothers and fathers should do all they can to help their boys and girls catch a glimpse of the beauty and vastness of our country, the amazing resources and the variety and number of her industries.

Almost every school child in most areas in Canada is aware of the new Canadians who have come to make their home here. Parents might well point out the fine contribution which is being made by many of the potential new Canadians who have come here in the displaced persons quota. It is up to the mothers and fathers to keep before their children the ideal of the nation being one large family — a family which has been growing greatly in numerical strength.

25 DIFFERENT RACES

We in Canada with our population of over 14,505,000, have about twenty-five different races speaking thirty different languages. Here in our land what a variety we have of races — British, French, German, Ukranian, Scandinavian, Netherlandish, Polish, Italian, Russian, Cezch and Solvak, Finnish, Chinese and others. These people have all sought a new life here and are bound together by the ties of loyalty to their new homeland. What a challenge this mosiac of races presents to the thoughtful citizens, to the true patriot.

Let's all work a little harder, each in our own small way, at being worthy citizens. Let's keep alive this ideal of a Great Canadian family, colorful and strong because of the very diversity of our racial strains, knit together by bonds of understanding and appreciation.

"God gives all men all earth to love
But since man's heart is small
Ordains for each one spot shall prove Beloved over all."

—Kipling.

MARY MOORE SAYS:

Readers' Saturday Column

QUESTION: Would like to tell you how much benefit I get from your column. There's always a lift in it for a gal like me to whom cooking just doesn't "come naturally." — I really have to work at it . . . author strongly recommends using a natural sweetner like honey in place of white sugar. Except in a limited way such as on fresh fruit, I didn't see how it could be done but I was surprised to read that the family of your friend Garny used honey in place of sugar entirely. I'm intrigued! Could you possibly elaborate giving examples of how Garny does it and if possible more recipes with honey —especially in nourishing desserts and cookies. Incidentally our 3 boys really go for gingerbread'n whipped cream with orange sections. . . Margaret G.

ANSWER: It is really quite simple: just use honey in place of sugar in everything that you think requires sweetening. The only place where this could go wrong is in baked products, but even then you can do your own experimenting, always remembering that when heat is applied to sugar it dissolves and becomes a syrup, of much the same consistency as liquid honey. Write to Saskatchewan Honey Producers Co-operative at Fort Qu'Appelle, Saskatchewan, for the booklet entitled "Honey All Through the Week" published by Canadian Beekeepers' Council and prepared by Mrs. Vera C. Maguire. Their recipes are excellent.

LETTER: . . I enjoy the news of your family almost as much as news of my own relations . . I sincerely hope Marianne has as lovely a wedding as I had to look back upon now (I know she will) and do hope she will have the happiness that my husband and I have shared in our eight years of married life . . our minister told us that marriage was not built on a 50-50 basis as many people believed, but every marirage would be much happier if everyone tried 100 per cent instead of 50 . . we now have 3 lively boys who keep me very busy as they all have huge appetites and will eat whatever is put in front of them. My husband claims this is because of my cooking and management so I feel flattered. I have served so many of your recipes and we enjoy them all. I am enclosing 3 of our favorites . . I thought Marianne would like to have them when she starts to keep house . . .

Small tin pineapple, ½ cup butter, 1 cup sugar, 3 eggs, 1 cup graham wafer crumbs, ½ pint whipping cream. Cream the butter and add the sugar. Add eggs one at a time. Arrange layer of crumbs ¼-in. thick in bottom of pan. Cover with batter. Sprinkle with pineapple—drained and cut up. (I sometimes use drained crushed pineapple.) Cover with ½ pint cream, whipped. Garnish with remainder of crumbs. Set in refrigerator all day. This may also be made with fresh strawberries or peaches.

SALAD DRESSING—(1 pint

(Courtesy Catherine C.)

Three eggs, 1 cup white sugar, ½ cup each vinegar and water, 2 teaspoons mustard, 1 teaspoon salt, cayenne, 1 tablespoon flour. NOTE: Catherine C. takes it for granted readers will know how to mix this but for novices I want to say mix dry ingredients in top of double boiler thoroughly, then add remaining ingredients and stir over hot water until thick. Cool and store covered.

ANSWER: Thank you Catherine for such a generous letter. I gave your Delicious Orange Bread in column of May 31. I hope you saw it. Blessings on all of you for your sound advice—and for following it.

How to KEEP FIT after 50

In the old days fifty seemed the signal to slow down—take things easy—watch your diet—get more rest. It's still good advice. But these days you can face fifty with many interesting and active years ahead,—active, that is, if you can avoid backache and the "tired-out" feeling, due to kidney and bladder disorders, that often develop around that age. For more than 60 years Dodd's Kidney Pills have been helping men and women of all ages to keep kidneys and bladder in good order,—helping them to feel better, to work better, and get more fun out of life. If you are approaching fifty, or past it, Dodd's Kidney Pills may help you, too. You can depend on Dodd's. 54

Miracle Foot Aid.
Dear Sirs:

I would like others to know of the great improvement to my health and arthritis that I received through Miracle Foot Aid.

Ten years ago I was a stretcher case. I couldn't walk at all. Through great perseverance I was able to get about a very little. I tried everything; many forms of treatment; my spine was badly affected from arthritis; my leg muscles were all tightened up, and walking was a big chore. I had to use a cane constantly.

In August, 1950, I was fitted with Miracle Foot Aids. They have helped me a great deal. My arthritis is gradually leaving me, so that I can use my hand now. My leg muscles have strengthened with the use of them. Although I still use my cane from time to time, with the improvement I've had I expect that in the future it may not be necessary to use it at all.

Thank you for your help.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) FRED TAYLOR.

6—In Memoriam

LEWIS—In loving memory of our dear son Sherwood, who was accidentally killed June 27, 1953 aged 25 years.
When evening shadows are falling,
And we sit in quiet alone,
To our hearts there comes a longing.
If he could only come home,
How we miss the welcome footsteps,
Of our son we loved so dear,
Oft we listen for his coming,
Fully sure that he is near.
—Sadly missed by Mother and Dad.

LEWIS—In loving memory of our dear brother Sherwood Lewis who passed away suddenly one year ago, June 27, 1953.
They say time heals all sorrows,
And helps us to forget
But time so far has only proved
How much we miss you yet.
God gave us strength to fight it
And courage to bear the blow.
But what it mean to lose you
No one will ever know.
—Clarence and Ferol.

LEWIS—In loving memory of my dear brother Sherwood Timothy Lewis who died suddenly June 27, 1953.
I sit and think of you each day,
And think of how you died.
To think you could not say Goodbye
Before you closed your eyes,
My heart still aches with sadness,
My eyes shed many a tear,
God alone knows I miss you
As this ends the first long year.
—Rhea and Brian.

HOWDEN—In loving memory of my dear husband and father, Herbert D. Howden, who passed away suddenly at the noon hour, June 26th, 1952.
Time speeds on, two years have passed
Since death, its gloom, its shadow cast
Within our home, where all seemed bright,
And took from us a shining light.
We miss that light and ever will,
His vacant place there is none can fill.
Down here we mourn, but not in vain,
For up in heaven we will meet again.
—Sadly missed by his wife Pearl, Mansell, Laurine and family.

WHETUNG—In loving memory of a dear father, Arthur Whetung, who passed away so suddenly three years ago today, June 27, 1951.
A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our hearts,
Which never can be filled.
—Art, Doreen and family.

City Market Profuse With Flowers

Flowers were out in profusion at the open-air market opposite Little Lake this morning, and customers were trotting off with as much as $10 worth at a time. Other citizens, hay-fever sufferers, felt just a bit trapped, surrounded by more flowers, in dozens of varieties, than have been seen anywhere in Peterborough this year.

At least half the flowers on sale were blue, purple, white or pink Canterbury Bells. These were selling for from 30 to 50 cents a bunch and drawing many customers.

Running a strong second were Sweet Williams. There was a wide price fluctuation and a wide spread in quality in these flowers, but the average was 35 cents for a bunch of 12. Canterbury Bells and Sweet Williams almost had the flower market cornered, in preparation for Decoration Day on Sunday, although many other species were on the market.

SOME PEONIES

Strong contenders were peonies, many from out-of-town and unfazed by Monday night's storm. Peonies suffered the most damage from the storm as their stems were driven to the ground by heavy rains and wind.

Jack-in-the-pulpits were beginning to look a little tired under glare of the hot morning sun. One Warkworth gentleman announced that he was cutting his prices from 50 to 35 cents a bunch so he "could get out of this miserable sun and get home to a cold drink."

Other flowers on sale included pansies, Christmas cactus, potted lilies, foxgloves and a few roses. Many were all bunched together to form composite bouquets, but most customers seemed to prefer single species.

A local lady, surrounded on both sides by Canterbury Bells, was selling bath mats at $3 apiece. The bath mats were hand made from the cloth from boys' jerseys.

FRESH BREAD

Another local lady was selling beautiful hand-made pillow-cases, runners, wool socks and hooked circular rugs. She was vying for attention with another woman who had a table full of freshly baked bread at 25 cents a loaf.

Other off-beat items included unpainted lawn chairs at $4.50, garlic, onions and bunches of radishes. There also were the usual displays of chickens and eggs (59 cents a dozen for the largest) but these did not seem to be having a very good day.

The city hall market building was almost deserted. One lady, perhaps 70, was sitting disconsolately behind her display of Sweet Williams, reading a crime comic.

Yanofsky, who also is co-champion of Canada, said Friday confirmation has been received that the Russians will come west following games in Ottawa, Toronto and Montreal. They are Alexander Kotov and Igor Bondarevsky.

Tendency To Condemn All Prisons Deplored

TORONTO (CP)—Major General R. B. Gibson, federal commissioner of penitentiaries, today criticized "the tendency to condemn all prisons . . . merely because some are badly administered."

In an address prepared for delivery to the Canadian conference on social work he said that a third of all prisoners in Canadian penitentiaries are under 25 years of age. A constructive reform program was working so successfully that less than 20 per cent of those trained and released acquired a subsequent criminal record.

"It should be the objective of the courts to make the punishment fit the criminal as well as the crime," he said.

Every effort should be made to make the period of imprisonment constructive and purposeful.

Dr. Walter M. Wallack, warden of Wallkill Prison, Wallkill, N.Y., said that in the United Statts about 97 per cent of all convicted criminals will eventually be back in the community and more than half of those released will "continue their depredations."

YOUTH CRIME PAMPANT

He said the U.S. is greatly alarmed by the unprecedented increase in juvenile crime during the last decade. Narcotic traffic sponsored by organized crime syndicates has succeeded in penetrating elementary, junior and senior high school classrooms.

New York had revealed "nearly every kind of sin known to man" among the pupils of city schools — "sex in all its ugly forms flaunted and indulged with unabashed nonchalance. The liquor bottle passed in the classroom. Vandalism. Hoodlumism. Theft. Assault. Reefers. drugs. Shakedowns. Terrorism. Gangsterism."

Teachers are said to remain helpless in fear of their pupils, said Dr. Wallack.

Dr. Wallack said that in the U.S. legal codes are a jumbled mess, methods of detection archaic and justice often unjust. He said the economically and socially favored often have a better position before the bar of justice than the poor.

Thruway Construction Contract Awarded

ALBANY, N. Y. (AP) — The award of a contract for construction of part of the Niagara section of the state thruway to the Tomlinson Construction Co. Ltd. of Rotterdam Junction, N. Y., has been recommended by E. T. Gawkins, deputy chief engineer of the state public works department.

The Tomlinson company submitted the lowest of six bids—$4,250,001.20. The department's estimate of the cost was $4,948,000.

The project involves construction of 5.13 miles of pavement to link the Grand Island state park south and north bridges, construction of 8.19 miles of access roads in the area, and grading and paving of the interchange at the south bridge.

The Tomlinson company constructed a portion of the thruway in the Montezuma swamp section, in central New York.

Find $190, Costs For Ignoring Order

OSHAWA (CP) — Phillip Druz, 52, was fined $190 and costs Friday after being convicted on four charges of failing to obey a fire marshal's order.

Four children, five years to 18 months, died in a fire that destroyed a house owned by Druz in November, 1950.

Fire captain W. R. Murray testified that doors to the children's rooms were stuck and rescuers could not get in to rescue them.

One Detective Kept Busy Delivering Summonses

It seems that Peterborough motorists forget all about traffic laws when they visit other Ontario towns. At least they manage to collect a vast array of summonses for breaches.

Inspector of detectives William A. Clarke says that the task of delivering summonses from outside cities, has become a full time job for one of his detectives. Actually, it requires eight man hours a day to deliver them.

A majority of the summonses and warrants come from Toronto for Peterborough residents. An average of four arrive every day and sometimes there are as many as 12 to be delivered.

REQUIRE PERSONAL SERVICE

As these summonses require personal service, the detective has to find someone at home before he can relinquish the "bluey". Often the addresses given Toronto police turn out to be incorrect and the local policeman can waste many hours finding the right house.

Then there are the multitude of inquiries concerning past and present Peterborough persons, which come from points all around the world. Tedious work, which takes up much time.

RECIPROCAL ARRANGEMENT

The inspector admitted that the arrangement was a reciprocal one among police forces throughout the Dominion, but things seemed a little one-sided. He figured that visitors to this city behaved themselves fairly well, because summonses and inquires coming in exceeded those going out by about 75 per cent.

Hurt In Canada, Ballerina Dances Again

By MURIAL NARRAWAY

LONDON (CP) Prima Ballerina Violetta Elvin was thinking about Canada when she faced a tumultuous welcome home to Covent Garden recently after a six-month absence.

The dainty, 28-year-old Moscow-trained dancer was making her first appearance since she tore a calf muscle last November at Vancouver while on tour with the Sadler's Wells Company.

"I was thinking how wonderful it is to make a return after a long absence," said the dark-eyed, raven-haired ballerina who has become one of the prime favorites of London ballet-goers.

KIND TREATMENT

"And I was thinking how kind everyone was to me in the hospital in Vancouver," she added in an interview. "They seemed to want to make up for my being left behind."

She waved aside a suggestion that she might well have regrets about the tour—her third to Canada.

"My leg never felt better," she said in her heavily-accented voice. Her welcome back was an ovation. She had chosen the one-act "Ballet Imperial," which is technically difficult, "because I felt wel and strong."

The interval stretched from 15 to 40 minutes while bouquets of flowers were handed over the footlights.

MUSCLE TIGHTENED

Her accident was due to the tightening of a muscle. Ballerinas, like sprinters and other highly-tuned performers, have to be careful.

"I'll know better next time. I'll not dance the same night," said Miss Elvin who left Moscow in 1944 after marrying British diplomat Harold Elvin.

Miss Elvin wore a cast for three weeks. She spent five days on crutches and recalls that she was "permanently" on her toes because her leg muscles were too stiff to let her toes and heel touch the ground at the same time. She had to wear her highest heels. But physiotherapy and practice got her back into dancing trim.

Miss Elvin, who married New Yorker Siegbert J. Weinberger, her second husband, in 1953, shrugged off questions about the hard training and diet involved in a ballerina's life.

LIKES STEAKS

She likes steaks when she has time and keeps a wary eye on fat foods. Her cooking?

"She hasn't had a chance to prove herself but she'd better be good," said her husband.

Miss Elvin has one traditional ballet superstition about which she received some ribbing from her husband. She sews on her own ballet straps—"it would be so serious if one came even half off"—and it keeps her busy. In pieces such as "Ballet Imperial," a pair of shoes lasts just one show. They rarely last more than three performances.

Shortly after her return in "Ballet Imperial," Miss Elvin appeared on television as one of Britain's outstanding beauties and danced "The Dying Swan."

She will appear at the Edinburgh festival with the company in August, then later in Milan, Rome and Paris.

Tribute Paid To Work Of A. D. Merkel

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — Premier Harold Connolly, a former newspaper man, paid tribute Friday to A. D. Merkel, former Atlantic bureau chief of The Canadian Press who died earlier in the day at Halifax.

Premier Connolly said:

"For many years . . . he was a familiar and loved figure in the life of these provinces.

"Mr. Merkel, because of his instinctive nose for news, his innumerable friends and his knowledge of these provinces, made an invaluable contribution to the association in whose service he spent the greater part of his life."

FINE CONTRIBUTION

HALIFAX (CP) — R. J. Rankin, president of The Canadian Press, said Friday that Andrew D. Merkel, former CP Atlantic bureau chief who died Friday, contributed greatly to the development of the news-gathering service.

Mr. Rankin, managing editor of the Halifax Chronicle - Herald and Mail-Star, paid this tribute to Mr. Merkel:

"The passing of Andrew D. Merkel removes from the Canadian scene a pioneer newspaper man who made an outstanding contribution to the development of the nation's news - gathering service. Through his long period of service, Mr. Merkel gave to Canadians vivid stories of many thrilling chapters in Canadian history. Under his capable guidance, there developed many young newspaper men who are holding top positions in the newspaper world of today. In literature as well as in news writing, he made a name for himself and in both fields he did a real and lasting service to the people of this country."

Appeal Court Upsets Ruling

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Court of Appeal ruled Friday that the provincial legislature has no power to "surrender the civil rights of a person resident here to a foreign jurisdiction."

The decision upset a recent ruling by Chief Justice J. C. McRuer of the Supreme Court of Ontario that a magistrate can confirm an order for maintenance of a dependent made by a court in another province or country having a reciprocal agreement with Ontario.

The wife of John Lewis Scott, a resident of Barrie, Ont., recently obtained a provisional court order in London, England, compelling Mr. Scott to maintain his wife and their two children.

The order was served on Mr. Scott by the Ontario attorney-general's department because England is one of the states with which Ontario has a reciprocal agreement.

The Court of Appeal Friday said an Ontario resident can not be expected to know what defences he will have to raise in a foreign country and that he does not have the power of presenting any defence or of cross-examining evidence presented against him.

Big Heap Rain

YORKTON, Sask. (CP) — There will be no rain dance on his reserve this summer, says Vincent Peepeech, chief of the Little Bone Indian tribe south of here. "Too much rain; reserve all mud," said the chief.

Don't Expect Flood To Be Like 1948

WINNIPEG (CP) — Officials at Brandon said today there is little danger the flood situation will become as serious as that experienced in 1948, but an emergency committee has been formed in case further rainfall changes the picture sharply.

The Assiniboine river at Brandon remains 17 feet seven inches above normal, unchanged from Thursday.

A city official said the heart of the city itself is 15 feet above any possible flood level. Only a handful of homes will be affected by flooding if the river reaches 21 feet. Another 103 homes would be affected if the river level hit 25 feet.

Pumping Out Russ Oil Cargo

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP) — Unofficial reports circulated today that the job of pumping a cargo of oil from the seized Russian tanker Tuapse was under way or about to be started.

Nationalist China announced Friday night that one of its warships had intercepted the Tuapse off Formosa Wednesday and had escorted it to the port of Kaohsiung. Official sources refused to discuss the matter.

Meagre press reports and other unofficial sources said, however, that Nationalist intelligence officers have been questioning 40 to 50 crewmen, all of whom are Russian.

Some of the crewmen were said to have been co-operative, and some officials reportedly considered it likely that a number would ask political asylum in Formosa.

There was speculation that the Tuapse might be released if the Nationalists satisfy themselves it is owned by Russia and not Communist China.

46 Plumbing Permits Issued During May

The city issued 46 permits for the installation of plumbing fixtures during May, plumbing inspector A. G. Metheral reported to city council.

There were 29 connections to city sewers, including 22 new houses, a new school, a school addition, a three-suite apartment, a new bank, one old stable into a house and two old houses doing away with septic tanks.

A new house and an old house were each connected to a septic tank.

Two houses were converted into duplexes, one store into a bank and two new rest rooms were added to a bank. Four tile drains were replaced with iron drains and 13 additional fixtures were placed in seven buildings.

There were 35 plumbing jobs completed during the month and 198 are still unfinished.

A total of 169 inspections were made, as follows: 74 water tests, 21 layouts, 28 smoke tests and 46 miscellaneous.

Most Canadians Week In Bed During Year

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. G. D. W. Cameron, deputy minister of national health, said today that in one year nearly 60 per cent of Canadians spend about five and a half days in bed through sickness.

He was speaking to the Canadian Conference on Social Work on a Canadian sickness survey undertaken in 1950-51 on 10,000 representative households in all parts of the country. Preliminary findings of the survey are now being released.

"It is known that diseases of the respiratory system, mostly the common cold and influenza, represent over half of all reported disturbances in ill-health," said Dr. Cameron.

"In spite of new methods of treatment, the real problems in terms of disability, services and costs still remain."

Dr. Cameron said that about three per cent of the population are suffering from chronic disabilities and deformities which interfere considerably with work or normal living. The group is believed to include 110,000 totally disabled.

"You may feel that we Canadians are surely a sickly people but this is not so. An estimated 20 per cent of Canadians experienced an entirely complaint-free year and another 20 per cent reported complaints not sufficiently serious to interrupt their normal activity for at least a day."

Canada now had the fourth lowest death rate in the world and the lowest death rate for elderly persons in the leading countries, he said. But one of the by-products of extending life is that the incidence of chronic and other diseases associated with old age has increased.

While two-thirds of all families earning over $3,000 held some type of health care insurance, only half of all families with incomes between $1,500 and $3,000 and slightly more than a quarter of those under $1,500, had much protection.

Truck Runs Off Road Crashes, Kills Man

RIDGETOWN, Ont. (CP)—Gerald Towsley, 24, of Ridgetown, died early today when the truck he was driving ran off Highway 3 near here and crashed, exploded and burned.

Conrad Felder, a nearby farmer, said he heard an explosion and ran to the truck but was unsuccessful in getting the the cab.

Firemen from Rodney and Howard township arrived soon afterward and removed Towsley's body.

The truck, owned by Charron Transport of Chatham, about 20 miles west of Ridgetown, was reported carrying a load of fertilizer.

Caribou No Longer Roam Woodland Areas Of Quebec

By ROMEO MAGERA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC (CP)—One of the oldest mysteries baffling Quebec wild life experts is the disappearance of most of the caribou that roamed the province in colonial times.

Some reports say a mysterious illness causing animals to cough up blood killed off most of the herd. Others blame it on the wolf.

Four groups of caribou, or North American reindeer, exist on this continent—the dwarf, located in the Queen Charlotte islands west of the Rockies; the Arctic or field caribou in the northern tundra; the Rocky Mountain caribou, largest of all, and the woodland caribou in Ontario, Quebec and Newfoundland.

CIVILIZATION BLAMED

Gaston Moisan, biologist of the provincial game and fisheries department, believes civilization caused the Quebec herd to almost vanish.

Mr. Moisan spent several years doing research in the Gaspe region and other parts of Quebec. He reports some of his findings in an article published in les Carnets (the notes), the French-language monthly organ of the Quebec Zoological Society.

The male woodland caribou weighs between 200 and 400 pounds, the female less. It can be identified by enormous antlers and yellowish-white neck, belly and hooves against a usually dark brown background. The fur turns greyish black or brown in winter.

In colonial times, caribou were said to have been found in abundance through Quebec province. A mysterious illness was reported to have killed off a large numbe rin the 17th century. In 1872, however, great herds were said to have been found in the forests.

At one time in the region from Quebec City, south to Richmond and east to Rimouski, it was estimated at least 10,000 caribou existed. For unknown reasons, this herd began to decrease and Laurentides Park, north of Quebec City was created to help these and other animals. Despite the efforts, the animal almost vanished from the north shore of the St. Lawrence.

The story is the same on the south shore. Caribou were found as far south as New Hampshire at one time. They were last seen in Maine in 1913, Nova Scotia in 1924, New Brunswick in 1927. Survivors of this particular herd are to be found only in the Shick-Shock mountains of Gaspe. Hunting them has been prohibited since 1949. The herd numbers about 1,000.

SPECIAL REQUIREMENTS

Caribou require special living conditions, needing both tundra or something resembling it and a forest of fir trees that has reached maturity. The tundra is known for abundant moss and lichens, constituting the animal's major diet.

Pine spruce forests are usual summer habitats, where caribou feed on moss, or old man's herb which hangs from trees. Only old forests are favorable as the moss takes years to mature.

Disappearance of caribou in the Laurentide Park, for instance, has often been attributed to the wolf. But the wolf disappeared from that region with the caribou, and reappeared with the growth of deer and moose.

Believers of this theory are unable to explain the sudden disappearance of caribou in Gaspe where the wolf never existed.

Mr. Moisan believes the solution lies in change of habitat for the caribou. Invasion of civilization—people, villages, lumber camps, railroads—have driven them into a corner where they can do nothing but die.

Present knowledge, although incomplete, makes Mr. Moisan suggest three measures be taken if Gaspe caribou are to increase: protection of the actual herd and protection and expansion of old forests.

Artificial Ice Benefits Skaters

MARMORA (ENS)—Marmora rink commission has issued a statement reviewing the benefits which artificial ice has given to Marmora and district.

The past season ended with finances on a breakeven basis. Income from paying activities made it possible for 2,885 public and separate school children to skate free on certain days and 465 high school students to skate and practice hockey free, making a total of 3,350 Marmora district school-age children who had free admissions.

Several community school and Sunday school classes had free time. Midgets, juveniles, bantams and squirts had 94 hours of free time and the Trent Valley hockey team had 66 hours for practice.

Rink manager Mr. Albertson received commendation for cooperation with the commission and supervision of activities. No accident occurred and no complaint was registered.

A new floor has been laid to facilitate the operation of the rink next season, with the hope that a surplus may be built up from future activities.

Goldfish Cruise Right Back Into Lap of Commons

OTTAWA (CP)—Goldfish cruised right out of a government publication and back into the Commons Friday night.

In their second appearance this session, William Hamilton (PC—Montreal Notre-Dame-de - Grace) steered them figuratively into the lap of State Secretary Pickersgill, acting fisheries minister.

The goldfish, he recalled were the subject of a government publication on the cruising speed of goldfish. But the publfcation described experiments undertaken in the fall of 1946 to determine the soundness of a fishway which had been built for $2,000,000 the previous spring.

IN EXPERIMENTS

He said Fisheries Minister Sinclair told him last month the goldfish were used in experiments to determine how to contract some of the steps in the fish ladder at the Hell's Gate canyon on the Fraser river in British Columbia.

But, he said, the experiments were undertaken in the fall of 1946 and published in 1947 and the fishway was completed by the spring of 1946.

Mr. Hamilton recalled that he complained last month to Mr. Sinclair about the government printing these pamphlets and others, among them one which the newspapers had dubbed "The Sex Life of the Lobster."

Mr. Sinclair's replies had been something like this, said Mr. Hamilton:

If the government printed 1,000 publications at $2 the wastage was $2,000. But if 500 copies were given away, the wastage was halved and if all were given away there was no wastage.

"SHUDDERS"

That, he said, was the theory on which Mr. Sinclair replied. He said he shudders to think, if rumors are true and Mr. Sinclair becomes finance minister, what will happen to the country under Mr. Sinclair's theory that the more that is thrown away, the more is saved.

Mr. Pickersgill replied that the publications aren't available for free distribution. They were technical pamphlets offered for sale by the Queen's printer on the possibility some scientist might find them useful.

He said that despite their titillating titles they aren't good general reading. He was sure the one concerning the sex life of lobsters wouldn't be found objectionable if found in the hands of children, even by E. D. Fulton (PC—Kamloops) who recently sponsored an amendment to the Criminal Code banning distribution of crime comic books.

Remand In Deaths

WOODSTOCK (CP) — David Beatty, 29, of Ingersoll Friday was remanded to July 16 on charges of manslaughter and dangerous driving. Beatty was charged following the highway death of two youths May 25 at nearby Centreville. Killed were George Huntley, 17, and Eddie Rutherford, 16, both of Centreville.

WHEN THE CANADIANS LANDED in Normandy to take part in the liberation of France, they found the mines in the Courseulles area had been removed. A local resident, Paul Dubois, who was a lieutenant in the Courseulles fire department, had led a British mine disposal squad into the mine-infested part of the beach-head to locate the death traps and remove them. Dubois is seen showing his much valued letters of commendation and a copy of the "Canadian Army at War" to D-Day veteran Pte. J. Ray, of Montreal, on his recent visit to France.—(Fednews Photo).

Churches Failing

cations. Many Christians believe that it is desirable to abolish the death penalty, if along with it crime could also be decreased. Now seems to be the time to base our judgments on ideals and principles, rather than tradition and sentiment, and follow the lead of the many countries which have abolished the sentence and maintained a high level of law, order, and justice.

Decide To Press Forward On Asia Defence Pact Washington Announcement

WASHINGTON (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill and President Eisenhower declared today they will "press forward with plans for collective defence" of Southeast Asia, regardless of whether peace negotiations for Indo-China are successful. In a communique, they also expressed "conviction that further delay" in the creation of the European Defence Community and granting of sovereignty to West Germany "would damage the solidarity of the Atlantic nations."

This was apparently intended to prod France to get on with ratification of EDC.

On another major point, the American and British leaders jointly declared that "both our countries would benefit" from "technical co-operation" on atomic energy to the fullest extent permitted by United States law.

The communique, issued at the White House, was the first formal statement out of the four - day round of talks here on British-American policy differences.

ASIA PROBLEM UNSETTLED

The communique left unanswered the critical question of when an international conference to create a Southeast Asia anti-Communist alliance might be called.

This has been a major issue, with Britain wanting no definite action pending a conclusion of present French efforts to negotiate peace in Indo-China.

The United States on the other hand desires quick action. The communique appeared to bear out reports on continued disagreement by failure to report any agreement.

REDS CAUTIONED

"We are both convinced" the communique said, "that if at Geneva the French government is confronted with demands which prevent an acceptable agreement regarding Indo-China, the international situation will be seriously aggravated."

WASHINGTON (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill made a plea today for a "real good try" for peaceful co-existence with Russia to minimize the risk of a conflict which would "leave us victorious on a heap of ruins."

This was one of three terse paragraphs dealing with the Southeast Asia, and it set forth a warning to the Communists to offer the French honorable terms to end the war.

The two leaders discussed Southeast Asia and "examined the situation which would arise from the conclusion of an agreement on Indo-China."

They also "considered the situation which would follow from failure" of Indo-China peace negotiations.

"We will press forward with plans for collective defence to meet either eventuality," the communique said.

ANOTHER STATEMENT

The communique said a second statement on "basic principles" underlying British and American policy—probably a kind of harmony statement—will be issued Tuesday.

Railway Hand Held For Murder Of Young Mother

PORT ARTHUR (CP) —Raffaele Esposito, 30, today was charged with murder in the bludgeon slaying a week ago of Mrs. Hedwig Kopplin, attractive blonde wife of a German immigrant, at the lonely flagstop of Kelly, 80 miles west of here.

Inspector Jack Craig of the Ontario provincial police laid the charge against the former barber who has been working as a railway section hand in northwestern Ontario.

Espositio was arrested last Monday at Larsen, six miles from Kelly, where he was employed with a section gang. Police said he formerly worked with a section gang at Kelly, where Mrs. Kopplin was the only woman.

HUSBAND AWAY

Mrs. Kopplin's husband, Reinhart was working at Mine Centre in the Atikokan district at the time of the slaying, having been transferred here last month. She planned to join him as soon as he found a suitable house.

Police said Mrs. Koplin was found beaten to death with a heavy instrument. The body was clad in a nightgown and dressing gown. Her home and outbuildings had been set ablaze, police said. In the ruins of the dwelling, police found the charred bodies of her children, Reinhart, 5, and Rita, 10 months.

For the last week, police have been questioning dozens of men in the vicinity of the Kelly flagstop on the Canadian National Railways Fort William-to-Sioux Lookout line.

See Compromise On Indo-China

GENEVA (AP) — A high Western source said today there appeared to be "a good chance" that East and West will agree soon on the composition of an international armistice supervisory commission for Indo-China.

The question of the commission's composition and its powers has been argued for weeks in the Geneva conference. The East, and particularly the Soviet Union, insisted at first that the two Communist states of Czechoslovakia and Poland be included in a four-member commission. The West rejected this idea.

The Communist view has softened somewhat. The Western source said it now appeared some compromise could be reached on the basis of British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's proposal that the five Colombo powers make up the commission.

SWEDES NOT EAGER

This source said the most likely compromise appeared to be a commission composed of India, Ceylon and Burma of the Colombo powers, one Communist country and one European neutral.

This Western source said it was hoped Sweden would accept the post. Sweden, however, has joined with Switzerland to complain about obstructive tactics of Czechoslovakia and Poland in a similar commission now operating in Korea and might well turn down the invitation. In this event, it was said, an effort would be made to persuade Norway to accept it.

Truman Reported Slightly Improved

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Former president Harry S. Truman was reported somewhat better today after passing through a critical phase in his post-operation convalescence.

His condition, however, remained serious.

A hospital spokesman said the 70-year-old former president went through thec ritical stage Saturday Sunday and "had a satisfactory day."

He underwent surgery eight days ago for removal of his gall bladder and appendix.

Robert Adams, acting administrator at Research Hospital, said Truman's recovery had been hampered by secondary infections and hypersensitivity to drugs needed in the treatment.

Missing Nine Hours Child 3, Unharmed

ORILLIA (CP)—Lost for more than nine hours Sunday in a maze of rock and bush, Elaine Lamoureux, 3½, was found trudging up a steep rock slope some three miles from home just before nighfall.

She was found by Robert Armstrong, 15, of St. Catharines, whose family has a cottage near Honey Harbor, about 30 miles northwest of here.

The child disappeared Sunday morning after she was forbidden to accompany one of her older sisters on a berry-picking expedition.

About 50 civilians and 15 provincial police took part in the organized search which began in the late afternoon.

Porter Accepts Responsibility For Failure

TORONTO — (CP) — Attorney-General Porter today took the full responsibility for the failure of officials of the Ontario highways department to appear before the legislature's highways investigation committee in Fort William last Friday.

And in turn, he was criticized by committee chairman Kelso Roberts (PC—Toronto St. Patrick) and Liberal opposition members of the committee.

Mr. Porter said deputy minister M. A. Elson received too short notice from the committee.

"Senior officials in the department are now engaged in very important work in the department. . . . I don't know whether the committee appreciates the job being done. . . . I knew the committee was meeting here today and so I took on myself the responsibility of detaining the officials here.

UNANIMOUS DESIRE

Mr. Roberts said the committee's action in asking for the officials to appear was "the unanimous request" of the committee "and if you had been with us as a private member of the committee you would have joined in the request."

The committee chairman asked that the attorney-general drop the subject. "You can't come in and upset our meeting," he said.

"I'm not upsetting the meeting," the attorney-general replied. "I'm merely explaining the position. If I'm at fault then I am willing to admit it."

Mr. Roberts interjected: "I didn't raise the matter, and I don't want any suggestion the officials didn't want to co-operate."

Opposition leader Farquhar Oliver said the committee was "given the run-a-round" at Fort William and the department should have made their men available to us."

Albert Wren (Lib-Lab—Kenora) asked Mr. Porter if the government was not aware of the Fort William meeting.

"I didn't receive any notice of it," replied the attorney-general.

Warship Hunts Pirate Gang

JESSELTON, Br. North Borneo (Reuters)—A British warship was ordered today to hunt for a gang of blood-thirsty pirates terrorizing isolated settlements on the coast of this colony.

The frigate Dampier was ordered to comb the myriad islands around here and the rugged jungle-clad shores of the mainland for the pirate gang. Planes were detailed for air support.

On June 21 the gang raided the island of Balambangan, slashing to death two native men and a woman, and carrying off everything of value in the island's tiny village.

Recently pirates attacked the town of Semporna and killed six persons.

The frigate is looking for an armed cumpit, a narrow canoe-like wooden boat, powered by two outboard motors.

The pirates are believed to have come from the nearby Philippines.

Adenauer's Party Suffers Setback In State Election

DUESSELDORF, Germany (Reuters) — Chancellor Konrad party suffered a setback today in Adenauer's Christian Democrat a state election involving a quarter of West Germany's voters.

A Christian Democrat - Centre party coalition in the North Rhine-Westphalia district, Germany's biggest state, lost its majority in the face of Social Democrat gains in state polling Sunday, according to unofficial results announced early today.

The coalition's campaign rested almost entirely on the chancellor's popularity.

Social Democrats won 76 seats in the new 200-seat house; the Christian Democrats 90; Free Democrats 25; Centre party 9.

In the old 215-seat house, the Social Democrats had 67; Christian Democrats 94; Free Democrats 26; Centre party 16; Communists 12.

The Communists were wiped out in yesterday's election.

Karl Arnold, state prime minister, is expected to start trying to woo he Free Democrats into the coalition so that he can continue in office. Free and Chrisian Democrats serve together in the federal government—but there have been signs recently of increasing tension.

Won't Accept New Gov't Rebels Say

Threaten Bombings Unless Ultimatum Met By Army Chief

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The anti-Communist rebel radio said today "we do not recognize" the new Guatemalan government of Col. Carlos Enrique Diaz.

It said insurgent planes will launch a "general attack" on military targets in Guatemala City if the rebel conditions for peace are not met.

The rebel radio heard here said Col. Diaz would have until 10 a. m. EDT to reply. But the rebel radio was still repeating the warning at 10:20 a. m.

The rebels declared, "We fight a system, not a man" and said the same seven conditions "for peace and order" which they broadcast last Saturday still stand.

URGED TO JOIN REBELS

The rebels Saturday urged the army to form a military junta, arrest Jacobo Arbenz Guzman, then president, and "all other Communists" and join the rebels in forming a new government. Arbenz quit Sunday night and Diaz took over as head of a ruling junta.

The insurgent warnings this morning said that if their conditions are not met "Our air force has its precise instructions for today:

"1. A general attack on all military basis in Guatemala City and

"2. A concentrated attack on one in particular." (This target was not identified.)

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras—(AP) — Radio Guatemala said today ex-president Jacobo Arbenz Guzman is leaving today for Buenos Aires by way of San Salvador and Panama.

The rebels appealed to the Guatemalan army not to obey the new chief.

Diaz in a broadcast pledged the army to continue the war against the invading exiles led by Col. Carlos Castillo Armas, but the switch in government appeared to signal the end of the Communists' strong influence on the regime Arbenz had led. Army leaders are known to have become increasingly opposed recently to the Reds' strong influence on the government.

The ouster of the 41-year-old Arbenz followed reports of a big rebel victory at Zacapa, key railroad centre 75 miles northeast of the capital. Army forces, particularly their artillery, were reported shattered there.

News of the army reverses was followed by rising popular support for the rebels, whose Radio Liberation" had called Saturday for the armed forces to revolt, jail Arbenz and form a military junta to negotiate a cease-fire.

END SEEN NEAR

With the rebels reported Sunday night only 70 miles from the capital, the battle for Guatemala was expected here to end within 48 hours. The Communists, backed by hastily armed and trained labor groups, were expected to try to keep up the fight, however.

Plane Strikes Mountain, 14 Die

MARCH AIR FORCE BASE, Calif., (AP) — Fourteen men of the U. S. Air Force were killed early Sunday when their big refueling plane, groping through a heavy overcast, crashed and burned on Box Springs Mountain near this base.

The KC-97 Stratotanker of the 96th bomb wing at Altus (Okla.) Air Force Base was headed for this southern California base, but because of murky weather was directed by radio to land at Norton Air Force Base, San Bernardin, 12 miles to the north.

Box Spring Mountain, a small range, lies between the two air bases. Air force officials said that in circling to head for Norton the big craft hit the mountain at about the 3,000-foot level and then ricocheted onto a boulder strewn ridge.

The air force said the plane, carrying a crew of seven and seven passengers, hit the mountain and exploded at 3:08 a.m. PDT. Within an hour and a half a crew from the 42nd air rescue squadron of March Air Base reached the scene and found the flaming wreckage with all aboard dead.

ON HIS WAY to investigate a truck accident which had occurred at Grafton, Provincial Constable Ralph Tremills of Cobourg had a remarkable escape from death on Saturday when a CPR passenger locomotive sliced the engine from his cruiser when it skidded onto the tracks. When the train struck the cruiser the impact threw the motor into the air and it struck the side of a car driven by Arthur Murthea of Detroit who was stopped at the crossing. Murthea escaped injury, but Tremills, who saw a CNR train go over one crossing and did not see the other train approaching on the CPR line, suffered a broken knee cap and lacerations. —(Murray Smith Photo)

Train Passengers Evacuated By Helicopter

LANGTRY, Tex. (AP)—Daylight was the signal for air force helicopters to resume ferrying out several hundred persons marooned in this famed west Texas town by heavy rains.

With Pullman ticket - holders going first, about 116 of 266 passengers on the Southern Pacific's streamliner Sunset Limited got their helicopter rides before darkness Sunday night.

This left about 150 train riders, all coach passengers, and 260 motorists stranded in the town where judge Roy Bean was the only law west of the Pecos in frontier days.

TRACKC SWEPT AWAY

Debris-laden flood crests swept away railroad and highway bridges on the Pecos and Devil's rivers and sent a wall of muddy water boiling down the border Rio Grande, into which they empty.

About 120 miles downstream, the people of Eagle Pass evacuated homes, the federal customs building and business houses on the river side. Police chief John Chamberlain said the Rio Grande rose 20 feet in 24 hours Sunday and may rise another 10 feet today.

Bombers Sink British Vessel

WASHINGTON (AP)—A 2,036-ton British-owned merchant steamer burned and sank in the harbor at San Jose, Guatemala Sunday after being hit by two bombs dropped from a rebel plane, the Guatemalan embassy said Sunday night.

The crew of the Grace Line ship Springfjord were rescued, the embassy said. The vessel was reported bombed while loading coffee, cotton and other produce.

Ex-Winnipeg Mayor Charles F. Gray Dies

VICTORIA (CP) — Charles Frederick Gray, 84, mayor of Winnipeg during the general strike in 1919, died here Sunday.

Sailor, prospector, engineer and adventurer, Mr. Gray moved to Winnipeg in 1911 as chief engineer for Westinghouse Corp.

He subsequently went into business for himself in Winnipeg as a consulting electrical engineer. He was elected to the city council for four years and was elected mayor for 1919 and 1920.

He was the founder of the Cutty Sark Club, past president of the Empire Club of Winnipeg and of the Navy League of Canada. He was also founder of the On to the Bay Association which led to the building of the Hudson Bay Railway.

Tragic Graduation

NORTH TARRYTOWN, N. Y. (APp—The baccalaureate address for North Tarrytown high school's senior class ended abruptly Sunday when the speaker collapsed and died midway through his talk. The Rev. Geo. A. Feare, pastor of the First Methodist Church here, faltered and then crumpled to the floor. His wife was among the 300 persons in the auditorium.

Asks Royal Commission Investigate Administration Of Immigration Department

OTTAWA (CP)—Opposition Leader Drew wants a royal commission investigation of administration in the immigration department.

He proposed the investigation in the Commons Saturday during a day-long immigration debate which concluded Parliament's business for the session.

He mentioned a number of cases, included what he described as a bare-faced racket to smuggle persons to Canada illegally, and said they leave so many unanswered questions that an investigation is needed.

Immigration Minister Harris made no mention of Mr. Drew's proposal for a royal commission when he replied but he said that Mr. Drew misinterpreted the facts of two cases. He also outlined the present status of prosecutions against those involved in the immigrant smuggling racket.

VARIOUS COMPLAINTS

Members of all opposition parties complained of a variety of matters during the debate, including discrimination against Chinese and Negro immigrants, failure to give reasons for rejecting applications and the painting of too rosy a picture of Canada by immigration officials overseas. On the last complaint, Mr. Harris said he is satisfied immigration officers are not misrepresenting the facts about Canada while encouraging immigration.

Mr. Drew said Mr. Harris has never given Parliament a statement of how the smuggling case was handled. He said Mr. Harris should say exactly what has taken place concerning prosecutions and also what was done "to clean out the conditions that made it possible for that racket to develop."

Mr. Drew asked for an explanation of the different treatment given one man whose only offence was defending his wife from assault and a union official convicted in Canada and the United States who, he said, lived the life of Riley as Canada's representative at a labor conference with government assistance.

QUOTES REPORTS

He quoted news dispatches stating that Henri Zorin was ordered deported from Canada following conviction for assault in Quebec City. The charge was laid as a result of the man's defence of his wife from attack.

British Ready To Quit Suez

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Times says today the United States and Britain have agreed on a method for total withdrawal of the 80,000 British troops in the Suez canal zone.

In a dispatch from Washington written by Dana Adams Schmidt, The Times quotes "high diplomatic sources" as saying "that Sir Winston Churchill and President Eisenhower were prepared to back a proposal for complete British evacuation from the zone over a two-year period."

The Herald Tribune, in a Washington story by Ned Russell, carries a similar account.

CANAL TO BE AVAILABLE

The British, the Times says, were understood to have dropped earlier insistence on keeping 4,000 uniformed military technicians at Suez to protect supplies.

The plan calls for Egypt to replace British supervisors with civilian personnel of her own choosing. Egypt would also agree, the newspaper reports, "to make the canal zone available to allied forces in the event of a Soviet attack on any Middle Eastern state."

Two Small Boys Derail CPR Flyer

VANCOUVER (CP)—Two boys, aged five and seven years, Saturday admitted derailing an eastbound Canadian Pacific passenger train here, Thursday night. The case has been turned over to CPR police.

Detective Sylvan Armeneau said the two admitted placing rough planking and rocks on the curve. Three cars umped the rails but no one was injured.

Det. Armeneau said: "all they'll probably get is a spanking by their parents."

Plane Finds Motor Boat Near Swamp

Sighted Three Bodies Lying Near Boat Search Pilot Says

SIMCOE (CP)—A small outboard motor boat missing with three Hamilton men on lake Erie was found overturned today near Long Point.

Reg. Spence, chief instructor at Hamilton Flying Club, who spotted the boat from the air, said he saw what appeared to be three bodies near it.

The boat was found in a swampy area near Long Point, 22 miles across Long Point bay from Turkey Point from which the trio set out Sunday morning in the 16-foot craft.

LAUNCHES SENT

The three — Daniel Lackman, 35; Norman Morris, also 35, and his son, Raymond, 16 — had planned to return to Turkey Point late Sunday.

Launches set out today to the point where the overturned boat was seen.

A high wind swept the lake Sunday night. Shortly after midnight, Lackman's wife reported the three missing.

Fishermen from nearby Port Dover joined provincial police in the search.

Made Mistake Wrong Treatment

CHAPLEAU (CP) — Six men, believing that a friend was a drowning victim, applied artificial respiration for half an hour Saturday before discovering he had a broken neck.

Roy Bryant, 40, of Jackson, Mich., on vacation with a number of friends at Oba lake, 80 miles northwest of here, tumbled into 18 inches of water from a dock.

An unidentified holiday partner jumped in and dragged him out. Bryant was unconscious when carried to shore and artificial respiration was applied.

The men reported later when Bryant began to recover, he became violent. He was flown to hospital at Chapleau for treatment and later flown to Toronto in a department of lands and forests aircraft.

2 Children Hurt In Stove Blast

WHITBY (CP) — An oil stove explosion in a cabin north of here today injured two Toronto children.

Investigators said Lorne Greig and Marlene Hayes, both 11, ran screaming from the cabin with their clothes on fire and threw themselves over a five-foot embankment into a creek to put out the flames.

It is believed the children, alone in the cabin at the time, had tried to refuel a coal oil stove.

The children, who had been holidaying with their parents at Linbrook park, were admitted to hospital in Oshawa. Doctors said the boy suffered severe burns to his face, arms, body and legs. The girl has a fractured ankle and burns to her right hand and leg.

The cabin fire was soon extinguished with pails of water.

Talks Made Progress

Chou Gets Warm Reception In Burma

RANGOON, Burma (Reuters) — Premier Chou En-lai of Communist China arrived here by air today from India.

Hundreds of uniformed children from Communist Chinese schools in Rangoon greeted Chou, here for a two-day visit with Prime Minister U Nu.

More than 5,000 persons, most of them from the city's 80,000-strong Chinese community, gathered at the airport to cheer Chou as he drove to Government House. He will be the guest there of President Ba U.

SAYS PROGRESS MADE

Before leaving New Delhi this morning, Chou said his three-day talks with Nehru made "definite achievements" since they were held in a spirit of mutual understanding and co-operation.

Later, in a recorded interview broadcast over All-India Radio, he referred to a five-point set of principles he had announced earlier for maintaining world peace.

The plan is based on the abstract principles of the India-Communist China treaty on Tibet signed last April: "Mutual respect for each other's territorial integrity and sovereignty, mutual non-aggression, mutual non-interference in each other's internal affairs, equality and mutual benefit, and peaceful co-existence."

His three-day visit to India left stern-faced Chou well entrenched with Prime Minister Nehru's government.

Chou climaxed his stay here by suggesting that Asian chiefs of state get together periodically to work for peace and to evolve "mutual respect" pacts similar to the one India signed with China April 29 to govern relations with Communist-occupied Tibet.

Chou's proposal for an Asian get-together drew no distinctions between Communist and non-Communist nations. He said it applied to the "principal Asian countries."

He told reporters in a press conference statement: "It is my view that, in order to seek common measures for the maintenance of peace and security in Asia, it is desirable for the appropriate persons of the principal Asian countries to meet occasionally and to consult with one another."

Both Chou and Nehru intimated that their declarations of mutual friendship and co-operation were only a beginning in closer relations between their big nations.

Sources close to Chou's delegation arrived at this estimate of the Chinese leader's plan:

Chou hopes with India's active assistance to build a stout Asian wall both politically and economically and thus oust Western interests.

The keystone of his program is "Asia for the Asians" and its aim is to combat so-called colonialism.

1,000 Attend Shorthorn Field Day; 20 Breeders From U.S.

Biggest Event of Kind In North America Ontario President Says; Pigeon Lake Breeder Opens Farm For Show

Presence of more than a score of American breeders gave a deeper international aspect and awareness to the annual field day of the Peterborough district Shorthorn Association Saturday at Louada Manor Farms on Pigeon Lake in Harvey township.

Attendance was estimated at 1,000 with a broad representation of the purebred Shorthorn industry of Ontario from Huron county to the Ottawa river, and several breeders from Quebec.

Said Grant Campbell of Moffat, president of the Ontario Shorthorn Association: "This will be the biggest event of its kind in North America this year. There is none better on the continent. I've never met so many people from the United States at a field day as we have here today."

Mr. Campbell was confirming the separately expressed opinion of Lorne Pimmett of Indian River, president of the Peterborough Shorthorn Association, whose travels on both sides of the border have been only less than Mr. Campbell's.

This memorably successful cattle show and picnic was made possible on its expansive scale by the interest and generosity of Louis Cadesky, proprietor of Louada Manor Farms, who has become one of the outstanding figures in the Scottish Shorthorn industry an both sides of the border.

SECOND INVITATION

For the second time in three years, Mr. Cadesky invited the Peterborough district Shorthorn breeders to hold their field day at Louada Manor, assumed all the expense, and was complimented and thanked from all sides for his hospitality. The farm was in perfect order, the main part of his herd were on display in the central buildings, and the others were grazing in nearby fields.

The Louada Manor herd comprises 140 Shorthorns, the foundation stock imported from Scotland, a few others from the United States and the home breeding was noticed down to calves of the last few days.

The U.S. visitors were from eight States—Texas to Minnesota—and included two past presidents of the American Shorthorn Association.

The afternoon program included dinner served to 850 persons by the women of the United Church and Presbyterian Church of Lakehurst. Not in that number were the people who did not arrive until afternoon.

There were judging competitions, a few addresses, presentation of prizes, a great deal of visiting and strolling about the Manor properties, including some of the pastures which were showing a good growth of forage.

LOTS OF VARIETY

For the small boys and girls there were races and refreshments. Dr. Harold Worton, provincial veterinarian, contributed a lot to the success of the afternoon as Master of Ceremonies from a truck stage at one end of the show ring for the cattle judging. Benches and other seats were placed around it.

Orange Lodges Urged To Win New Victories

"Just as we can't go on forever ing on the victory won over the or any other victory, I ask you to forget the battle of Boyne and Martin Luther's victory", said the Rev. Charles Boyd preaching in St. Paul's Presbyterian church Sunday night. "There are other victories to be won."

Mr. Boyd was addressing more than 200 members of the Peterborough county Orange Lodge who attended their annual church parade at St. Paul's. The parade, which was escorted from the Brock St. Hall to St. Paul's by the Havelock pipe band, was led by county master, Herb Stinson, with lady members led by past grand mistress Mrs. Roy Pilling. At the conclusion of the service, the Orangemen marched to the war memorial where past grand mistress Pilling and deputy grand mistress Rose Sexsmith laid a wreath. They were assisted by county master Stinson and deputy county master Palmer Howden.

THREE PILLARS

Mr. Boyd chose as his sermon theme. "The Three Pillars of Protestantism".

The first was a beliefe in the revealed knowledge of God.

Second came justification by faith, or acceptance by God, not because of man's efforts, but rather by His generous grace.

The third pillar was the church. "The church is where Christ is, said Mr. Boyd. "And Christ is wherever the word concerning Him is preached and the sacraments properly administered. It does not matter where it is, in a church or on a hill side; as long as the Word is being preached and people hear and believe in faith, then Christ will be there and that is His church.

Mathers, Mason City, Illinois, a past president of the American Shorthorn Association, and guest speaker on the field day program; Lorne Pimmett, Indian River, president of the Peterborough Shorthorn Club; Louis Cadesky, owner of Louada Manor Farms and its herd of purebred Scottish Shorthorns, host to the 1,000 visitors; Wilbert W. Donaldson, superintendent at Louada Manor Farms, widely known among Shorthorn breeders in the U.S. and Canada. Opinion was unanimous that no bigger and more successful cattle breeders' field day would be held anywhere on the continent this year. More than 20 of the guests were from eight of the states south of the border.

Parents Envious Observers At Nursery School Closing

While 21 boys and girls, ranging in age from three to five, were playing quietly in the nursery school at Dickson Community Centre, Friday, parents watched silently from the sidelines. Smiles of approval and pride appeared on the parents' faces as they watched the children go through a typical day at nursery school.

The parents had been invited by the supervisor of the school, Mrs. Keith Borland, and her assistant, Mrs. Douglas Gray, to attend the closing day party. The school will re-open in September.

The relaxed children didn't pay any attention to the visitors, but went right ahead with their play.

"If only the children would keep this quiet for us," said one mother.

"It looks like they're very good at school, but demons at home," remarked another.

SCHOOL'S AIM

Mrs. Borland, a Peterborough normal school graduate, said the school's aim is to teach children to learn to help themselves and to help others.

"We have found that every child will make an effort to learn, because he or she really wants to do things," she said.

For instance, she continued, at the beginning of last winter only four children could dress themselves, while we had to put on galoshes and coats for the others—quite a chore, we found. But by the end of the winter, most of the children could dress themselves.

She said the children are proud if they can zipper their own galoshes, and particularly if they get the rubber on the right foot.

When the children arrive at the school, they play outside in the sand box, on swings or with hollow blocks. (Mrs. Borland said the school is sadly limited in outdoor equipment.) After a certain period of time, they return to the classroom and each child puts away some playground equipment.

PLAY PERIOD

A supervised play period follows, where the children can do anything they like. They can paint, paste, play with trucks or with dolls. Suppose Johnny gets bored with a ball, he takes it back from where he got it and picks out a toy car. Each toy is always replaced and the children learn there is a place for everything.

In the home, it frequently happens the mother picks up after the child and doesn't let him do things for himself, said Mrs. Borland.

The basis of the school's success lies in not changing things but in introducing new things. The children learn what to do and what not to do; there are no contradictions.

During the class the children have a "washing time," in which three children at a time go upstairs to the washroom. When one child comes down, he tells another child to go up.

A lot of learning is done to the accompaniment of songs. After the playtime period, Mrs. Borland begins to sing "Put away your toys," and the children join her. They are given a glass of fruit juice and return empty glasses to a table in the kitchen. If a child is sitting at one of the small tables and leaves, he always remembers to push his chair in.

ROOM FOR 20

The nursery school can accommodate 20 children comfortably. Morning classes are held from 9 to 11.30 a.m. and afternoon classes 1.30 to 4 p.m.

The cost of operating the school is shared by the provincial government and the city. During the past year, the parents have been paying a monthly fee of $5.50 for the morning and $4.50 for afternoon classes. Next year there will be an increase of $1.

Pictures and drawings befitting the season gaily decorate the classroom.

On the play program is the children's participation in the rhythm band, one of the activities which they really enjoy. Their eyes light up as they are given cymbals, rhythm sticks and bells to keep time to a song.

And then the children have a rest period. From a low shelf, each child takes a small blanket, lays it out on the floor, and then stretches out on his back.

While they are resting, Mrs. Borland reads a story from Peter Pan or some other children's book. She said the children take everything they hear very seriously. For instance, when she read the chapter were Peter Pan asks all the children in the world to clap, several children spontaneously clapped their hands.

What do Mrs. Borland and Mrs. Gray think about their work? They love it. And guess what — the children like them.

Rescue Child After 40 Hours In Mountains

MARKLEEVILLE, Calif. (AP)—Little Kathy Paxton, who survived more than 40 hours without food or shelter in the High Sierra wilderness with no more serious consequences than a couple of bumps, is going back today to Woods lake to finish her vacation.

The red-clad five-year-old was located by the granite cliffs 1½ miles from Woods lake Sunday by Alvin Van Dell, 30, a timber cruiser.

Van Dell and a friend, Louis Avery, started to work the high country because they thought others among the 500 looking for Kathy had thoroughly worked lower lands. Woods lake is at 8,500 feet elevation near Kit Carson pass on the ridge of the High Sierra.

They found Kathy's foot prints—but lost them. After circling fruitlessly, Van Dell called "Lou, Lou" to Avery.

GIRL ANSWERS

But it was Katy wo answered when Van Dell called from only a few feet away.

Hardly daring to believe it could be, the tall lumberman asked: "Are you Kathy?"

"Yes," she replied with a tiny smile, "and I'm tired."

So Van Dell carried Kathy, chattering about her experiences, half a mile back to a road where a California highway patrol car was waiting with her stepfather, Stewart Crandall.

Kathy was rushed to search headquarters, where an air force doctor was waiting. Aside from a bruised eye, and a chipped tooth, plus not having eaten for more than a day and a half, she was declared all right. Kathy smiled and waved at every one, and only cried when she learned that an ambulance waan't to take her back to camp at Woods lake.

Fear 7 Drowned By Giant Lake Wave

CHICAGO (AP)—A giant Lake Michigan wave rolled over Chicago's beaches and piers Saturday, sweeping more than a score of fishermen into the churning waters. Four bodies were recovered and police estimated that at least three others drowned.

Onlookers said the wave rose five to 20 feet over beaches and harbors on a 25-mile stretch from Chicago's South Side to suburban Wilmette in the north.

The wave, which followed a line squall, rolled in at 9.45 a.m.—more than an hour before the beaches normally start filling up with thousands of children and adult bathers. Most of the persons along the shore were fishermen, seated on piers or jetties that jut out into the lake.

Fishermen at North Ave. pier saw the wall of water coming and started to run. Those closest to shore made it. The wave brushed off the others like a giant arm.

Need Prevention In Accidents Not Punishment

TORONTO (CP) — Greater emphasis on the prevention of breaches of the traffic laws, not punishment for infractions, was urged today by the Ontario Motor League.

In a brief submitted to the Ontario legislature's select committee on highway safety, the league said the fundamental purpose of traffic laws was to assure the safe and efficient use of the streets and highways.

"The more conspicuous and numerous the constables, and their vehicles, the less serious and fewer the breaches of the law by drivers."

The league said complacency of the average driver was possibly "the most formidable bastion that must be reached."

MANY THINGS BLAMED

"The average driver must be persuaded not only that he is not as consistently good a driver as he should be, but also that he must be better because collectively his momentary inattention, impatience, irritation, petulance, arrogance, irascibility, exuberance, vanity, fear and many other mood and emotional impulses that should be inhibited, cause most of the appalling toll of life, limb and property on our streets and highways. Acute fatigue and even absentmindedness at the wheel can be as lethal as inebriety and ostentatious exhibitionism."

The league urged the introduction of driver training every secondary school in the province and improvement of tests for driver proficiency.

The deputation, headed by league president Nate Wilson, also urged that both driving too slowly and breaking the speed limit should be vigorously discouraged. It said psychiatrists and psychologists agree that in both practices motorists display not only their selfishness but also their inferiority complex.

Spike Churchill Retirement Rumors

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill's constituents had assurances Sunday that he has no intention of retiring before the next general election. This would normally mean 1956 unless an election is called before then.

John Harvey, acting chairman of the Conservatives in the Woodford district that Churchill represents in Parliament, spiked the retirement rumors at a political garden party Saturday.

Lady Churchill, who has been pressing her 79-year-old husband to step down, was present and heard Harvey declare:

"Sir Winston, subject only to the natural limitation of health and strength, will be representing your interests in Parliament, at least until the time of the general election."

Churchill will have another meeting with the president beginning at 11 a. m. EDT Tuesday, although this morning's meeting, lasting two hours, had been scheduled as the last of their sessions. Churchill departs Tuesday for Ottawa.

The communique revealed little of the substance of the many conferences which have been held between British and American officials since Churchill and Foreign Secretary Eden arrived here Friday morning.

It did not disclose what possible alternatives to the European Defence Community may have been considered. Nor did it indicate what was meant by the pledge to "press forward" with security plans for Southeast Asia.

Most of the words dealt with the European defence issue.

They were clearly designed to reassure the Germans about eventual sovereignty and rearmament and to prod the French to get going on ratification of the EDC treaty.

They reminded the French that both Britain and the U. S. have given assurances they will retain armed forces in Europe so long as necessary.

The French have been afraid that once Germany was rearmed, Britain and the U. S. would pull out and leave France alone with a revived, powerful and traditional foe.

FEELS SOMETHING DONE

External Affairs Minister Pearson is expected here Tuesday in an RCAF plane which will carry Churchill and his party to the Canadian capital.

A spokesman for the British group here said today the general feeling is "one of substantial achievement" and that Churchill feels his visit has served a useful purpose.

There is better understanding on all problems outstanding between the two countries and what friction had existed as a result of recent happenings has largely been removed, he said.

(Diplomats in Washington speculated that the army takeover was a manoeuvre to give the military a chance to negotiate the best terms it could from Castillo Armas and his rebel forces.

(Luis Coronado, secretary general of the rebel provisional government proclaimed by Castillo Armas, said in Tegucigalpa that the rebel fight would continue "with redoubled impetus unless the resignation of Arbenz means the acceptance of our ultimatum and the turning over of the government to insurgent leader Castillo Armas.)"

PREDICT MUCH SHOOTING

Although the military operations appeared rapidly drawing to an end, foreign observers here predicted there would be considerable shooting and resistance before the Communists are cleaned out.

Most observers felt convinced the more rabid Communists would seek revenge for what they consider a United States victory, and that considerable bloodshed would result. But they believe that the general situation will be considerably eased.

Arbenz' resignation climaxed a day of mass defections from is cause by leading cabinet ministers, army officers and others who fled to the Salvadorean embassy in Guatemala City for refuge.

Papers Believe Churchill Getting Way

LONDON (AP)—All but one of London's morning newspapers told their readers today that Prime Minister Churchill is winning American approval for Britain's go-slow policy in Southeast Asia.

The Times, in its account of the Washington talks, said that "even now agreement seems no nearer."

But headlines in other morning papers left a different impression. The Daily Mirror said: "Churchill and Eden putting the brake on Ike."

The Mirror's Washington correspondent said flatly:

"There will be no rush into united action in Southeast Asia and there will be no immediate Southeast Asia alliance of the Western powers—on the lines of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO)—as America wished. . . .

"The Anglo-American policy in Southeast Asia now will be "wait and see"—but at the same time both governments will maintain a state of 'vigilant preparedness.' "

The Daily Sketch carried a similar story under this boxcar type headline: "Winston does it! Ike agrees with his plan."

"Churchill firm with Ike. No yielding on East," said The Daily Herald.

The Communist Daily Worker headline: "U. S. bows to Churchill on Far East."

The News Chronicle: "On Germany agreement is certain. On Asia, views are tending to converge and agreement is within sight."

The Daily Express said that Churchill's expression that "Jaw jaw is always better than war war" impressed many congressional leaders.

The Daily Telegraph said the U. S. position on Indo-China "has moved closer to the British one."

France was automatic in this man's case under an immigration regulation requiring deportation of immigrants convicted of criminal offences.

However, he said, Hal Banks, Canadian director of the Seafarers' International Union (TLC-AFL), remained in Canada until going to Geneva to represent Canada at the conference of the International Labor Office despite a conviction for cigaret smuggling.

He said Mr. Banks was convicted a month before being granted permanent residence in Canada. He also had been convicted and charged frequently in the United Staets with serious offeces.

Replying later, Mr. Harris said that within the last three weeks a board of inquiry had been established to sit in Montreal concerning the Banks case. Since its decision might be appealed to him as immigration minister, he declined to comment on the facts of the case.

He also declined comment on the Zorin case which he said still is before the courts. He said "it is regrettable that the leader of the Opposition sought to interpret the case in a manner which . . . does not bear very much resemblance to the facts."

(An immigration official said outside the Commons that Mr. Zorin still is in Canada.)

Concerning the smuggling of immigrants into Canada, Mr. Harris said one man was fined $100 and dismissed from the immigration service, another was fined $200, a third $250 and one case still was before the courts. A fifth man had not been caught and avoided doing so by living in Britain from where he could not be extradited.

Highways Minister Doucett should be present at the current meetings of the committee, Mr. Roberts suggested.

"I would ask the deputy minister to get in touch with Mr. Doucett and ask him to be here," the chairman added.

When advised by Deputy Minister Elson that Mr. Doucett is out of town, the chairman retorted:

"A wire or phone call should be sent to him that it is highly advisable he be in this room when the meetings are on."

"I will convey that as a message to him," Mr. Elson said.

DECORATE GRAVES — Families and relatives honored dead loved ones Sunday in the annual decoration day at Little Lake cemetery. In the afternoon about 1,000 persons were arranging flowers (top photo) about the graves. It was also the occasion for the annual service of the IOOF lodges who marched from the war memorial (Confederation park) to the cemetery, working their way through lines of cars (middle photo) along the shore of Little Lake. Typical of those visiting the cemetery are Wes Husk and Edith York (bottom photo) who arrange flowers about the grave of Mrs. York's husband, Herbert, a soldier who died in 1918.—(Examiner Staff Photos).

Decoration Day Services United Effort

Two lodges of Oddfellows and Rebekahs paid their respects to the dead Sunday afternoon in the 65th annual decoration day Sunday at Little Lake cemetery.

Previously they had marched from their Water St. hall to Confederation Park where lodge member Elmer Pearce placed a wreath on the war memorial.

A hundred and seventy Oddfellows from Otonabee No. 13 and Peterborough No. 111 marched to the cemetery to the accompaniment of martial music played by the Salvation Army band. At the entrance to the cemetery they were joined by 40 Rebekahs for the service.

SERVICE WELL ATTENDED

Despite the cool, windy day the service was well attended and about 1,000 people joined the Oddfellows in decorating the graves of relatives and friends.

The Rev. H. J. Scuse of St. George's Anglican church referred to the flowers that were used in decorating the graves as "symbols of the resurrection and symbols of hope."

"We are gathered together today full of hope," said Mr. Scuse. "We show our sincerity today by the hope we have of tomorrow."

Though not an Oddfellow, Mr. Scuse said he shared their ideals. In this annual ceremony he said they were renewing their pledge of service to God and their fellow men.

"We have a common purpose today. What about tomorrow?" he asked.

Evans Hatherly, chairman of decoration day, thanked the people of the city and the community generally for their support during the past years. He introduced and thanked Mr. Scuse at the short open-air service.

Richard Ford, James Price and Stanley Gillespie placed wreaths on the Oddfellows' plaque during the service. As they did so two cantons (the military branch of the order) presented swords.

A dozen uniformed firemen, each carrying flowers, paraded with the Oddfellows and took part in the ceremony at both the war memorial and Little Lake.

Saskatchewan MPP Uses Plane, Toboggan To Get Around Constituency

ISLAND FALLS, Sask. (CP)—James Ripley has a power toboggan, a snow tractor, a light airplane and several canoes. He needs all of them.

Ripley, 40, is Liberal member of the [illegible]chewan Legislature for Athabaska, at 86,000 square miles one of the largest constituencies in Canada. But Athabaska, which runs along Saskatchewan's northern boundary, has only 15 miles of highway.

Ripley tries to get around his constituency once a year. It takes a fleet of diversified vehicles plus ingenuity to cover the land of lakes forests, tundra and rock.

This community is listed as his home address, but Mr. Ripley says his home is "the North." He has log cabins on Kipahagan lake, Reindeer lake, Brightsand lake and Lake Manistiawan.

CHEERY NEIGHBORS

"Above all other things, my wife and family love to live in any of these cabins," he says. "At one of them we have a private radio station and if conditions are good, we tune in and speak with our neighbors 500 miles away.

"We speak of the fishing and weather and then the womenfolk take over and gossip just as they do in a city when they get together."

Ripley makes his living by fishing and flying. He was born on a cattle ranch near Medicine Hat, Alta., in 1913, and moved to Brandon, Man., at an early age with his parents. His studies in medical school at the University of Manitoba were interrupted by the Second World War, when he enlisted in the army. He returned to medical school after the war, but quit to become a commercial pilot.

He became interested in commercial fishing in the Athabaska region, where his travels brought him in contact with persons in many communities. When he is in Regina for a session of the Legislature, the plane stays at Flin, Flon, Man. It is fitted with floats in summer, skis in winter.

Plywood Damages Fender Of Taxi

A high wind shuttled round the Examiner building about 10 o'clock Sunday morning, and buffeted the plywood protective wall that is at present hiding face-lifting operations.

The wind heightened just as an Allied cab, driven by Miss Betty Zwicker, pulled up on Water St. while waiting for the light to allow a right-hand turn north on to Hunter St. A piece of plywood flapped loose and landed on the fender of the cab, scratching the paint.

Miss Zwicker told an Examiner reporter today: "I saw it coming but I couldn't do anything to avoid it".

"What did you do with the plywood", asked the reporter.

"Well, I guess I just left it there", she replied.

However, contractor Bob Huffman was making inquiries Monday morning. He figures he must have an unknown worker, because someone nailed the plywood back in place.

The Last Independent Car Makers

The progress of the automobile industry on this continent leads inescapably to this conclusion: the more cars, the fewer makers. Thirty years ago there were more than a hundred manufacturers of automobiles in business on this continent. Now—when the latest merger, that of Packard and Studebaker is completed—there will be only six. And yet, in the course of the decades, the number of cars manufactured every year and put on the roads has increased ten thousandfold. Another anomaly is this: in a country devoted to "private enterprise", private enterprise does not endure.

* * *

The automobile business in both Canada and the United States has driven independent firms to the wall and resulted in an industry as monolithic and almost as monopolistic as any state enterprise in a Communist country. The end result of the economics of capitalism and communism—in this instance, at any rate—is therefore approximately the same. True, the State does not own the industry, as in Russia; it operates for private profit. But a glance at the long lists of shareholders shows that a great firm like General Motors is essentially a public utility, owned by the public, by hundreds of thousands of shareholders. A look at the annual financial statements of these great automobile concerns shows that the private profit is negligible compared with the vast sums paid to employees (the public army of workers) and to the national treasury in the form of taxes. Must one conclude, therefore, that much of the fuss about the economic virtues of capitalism and the similar evils of Communism is hokum?

* * *

The merger of Studebaker and Packard puts an end to the last two independent automobile manufacturers on this continent. Studebaker, which calls itself "the oldest name in highway transportation in the world" was founded as a blacksmith and wagon shop in Indiana in 1852, and in 1902 it produced its first "horseless carriage"—an electric one. The first Packard appeared in 1899. Like the McLaughlin car (which later became McLaughlin-Buick and then Buick and a General Motors product) Studebaker and Packard are the names of men who made them. These private, independent firms have all gone now. Willys-Overland merged with Kaiser Motors Corporation in April, 1953. The Nash-Kelvinator Corporation and the Hudson Motor Car Company were merged as the American Motors Corporation on May 1st last. On Tuesday last in New York, the directors of Packard and Studebaker agreed on a merger of their two companies.

* * *

The economics of competition have forced the three mergers—competition from the "Big Three" of the industry: General Motors, Ford and Chrysler. Thus out of more than 1,700 manufacturers of cars in the U.S. and Canada in the last fifty years—the half-century of the industry—only six firms exist now: six to conduct an industry and supply a market which has become one of the most important elements in the entire economy of this continent. Could state control, in Communist or Fascist form, go farther towards monopoly and the destruction of private enterprise? We do not say that the decay of independent producers is necessarily bad; no moral or social judgement of that kind can be made; it is merely the consummation of economics in mass production for mass markets. The end seems to be the same, whatever the country or its method of government.

* * *

And so, to the long list of names once car-famous—Durant, Franklin, Graham (-Page), Gray(-Dort), Hupp(mobile), (Willys-)Knight, Maxwell, Marmon, Overland and hundreds of others—are added the last independent survivors. As the names Cadillac, Dodge, Lincoln and Buick did not disappear when General Motors, Chrysler and Ford became gobbling giants, so the names of Packard, Willys, Nash, Hudson and Studebaker need not be lost to view. While the automobile industry is cannabalistic, the names of the courses, if not the details of the ingredients, are sometimes preserved. For instance, Cadillac (first manufactured in 1902 by the Cadillac Motor Car Company) has very decently survived its mastication into the system of General Motors.

Tent Caterpillars Always With Us

During the recent several years of heavy infestations of tent caterpillars, the hope was held out by the Department of Lands and Forests that each would be the last bad year for a decade. The facts have not supported this appeasing statement. Bad invasion followed bad invasion. This spring and summer the pest has not been as rampageous and numerous. Apparently the parasite or whatever it is which is said to be the natural control of tent caterpillars, has come out on top for a change. Nevertheless, there have been enough of the caterpillars and their vicious eating habits and nasty tents to spoil shrubs and fruit trees and defoliate country hedges and lakeside woods.

Because the destruction has not been as great this year, there has not been the public outcry one heard in the last four seasons. The biologists, tree-men and Department of Lands and Forests should not, however, sit back with folded hands. The caterpillars are still with us in sufficient numbers to be pestilential.

From Sudbury, Algoma and Nippissing comes information that the annual infestation has occurred again this year. The caterpillars are said to be particularly bad in the Kirkland Lake area. The Sudbury Star remarks that these districts have never been without tent caterpillars in almost twenty years. "The Department of Lands and Forests must now recognize tent caterpillars as an annual scourge rather than a one-in-ten-years kind of pest". To which we say: Hear, hear. The ten-year-cycle is a myth.

The Comic Strip Doctor

We were greatly interested in an official word of appreciation given by the American Medical Association to one of its members on Thursday last. It reads, thus: "The American Medical Association takes pleasure in presenting this citation to Nicholas P. Dallis, M.D., in recognition of the outstanding health educational service he performs as the medical member of the team which creates the illustrated feature 'Rex Morgan, M.D.' "

We think this important because it expresses the opinion of a powerful and thoughtful professional association that a comic strip (though many such strips have long ceased to be comic) can be educational and positively beneficial in its influence. Although The Examiner does not publish the strip in question we see it often in other papers, and we read it with interest. Frankly, if Rex Morgan lived in Peterborough we should not seek his advice as our personal physician; we have a preference for quieter doctors, less given to gaudy adventure. But we would appreciate him as a creator of news, and as a man of courage and integrity.

There is only one thing about Rex Morgan which perturbs us, and that is way he treats his nurse, June. Dr. Morgan is unmarried, which is in itself remarkable, for although we have known may scores of physicians, we cannot recall a single one who has not married, or who was not at least engaged. Our observation has been that student doctors get themselves engaged very early in life, and marry as soon as they can. But Dr. Morgan, in his comic strip life, has no domestic solace; instead, he permits the pretty June to assist him in every professional way, but fails to see that she is deeply in love with him. She gives him meaning glances; she tries to protect him against the impetuous generosity of his own nature; she weeps into the sterilizer whenever he shows appreciation of another woman. How Dr. Morgan can be in the same room as June for twenty minutes without knowing that she is in love with him is utterly beyond our understanding. Our only conclusion is that Dr. Morgan is a fine crusader but a rotten diagnostician.

NOTES AND COMMENT

Definition of a reformer: a man who is prepared to let his conscience be your guide.

The McCarthy hearings will fill 35 books, each the size of a big-city telephone directory. How many readers, we wonder, will be so anxious to learn who done it that they will get right to the last chapter?

Toronto crooks have been selling clay mixed with lampblack to suburban gardeners as 'rich loam'. Remember the old song, If A Rose Told You All That It Knows? In this case it would say, 'Mighty queer loam'.

The Canadian Medical Association has officially recognized the existence of chiropodists. And the chiropodists turn happily toward their patients, who are humming My Fate Is In Your Hands.

The Brantford Expositor calls attention to the following omelette of metaphor from a recent Commons speech: 'These gentlemen opposite shout "rotten fish" . . . and now the pigeons have come home to roost . . . they think there is some soft pedalling to be done'. This is a poor showing from a politician who hopes to retain his foothold in the public eye.

Uranium In Australia

By WILLIAM FITTER (in Sydney)

AUSTRALIAN Atomic Energy Commission leaders who went to the United States last week and who are scheduled to visit Canada and then Britain, have a two-fold mission—to discuss the disposal of Australia's growing uranium production, and to investigate what progress is being made abroad in the application of atomic energy for industrial purposes.

Australia, as the world's fifth-ranking uranium producer (and with a potentially far greater output) is vitally interested in the future world market for uranium once the Western nations have stockpiled enough for the mineral's only use at present—the manufacture of atomic bombs. Millions of pounds are being invested here in the search for uranium and in its extraction. There are three proved fields and half a dozen good prospects. Most of the money is coming from the Governments of Australia, the United States and Britain, but private enterprise has now entered the field and is spending money lavishly in exploration.

✧ ✧ ✧

INDEED prospecting, for uranium and oil, is now Australia's biggest stock exchange gamble. New companies are being floated almost daily. Already nearly forty uranium prospecting authorities have teams out testing some five-thousand one-hundred square miles of country in the Northern Territory which the Commonwealth (Federal) Government has thrown open for private investigation.

✧ ✧ ✧

THERE is no immediate worry about uranium sales. The Commonwealth Government is prepared to pay private mining companies ten pounds to 504 pounds Australian a ton for unprocessed ore, depending on its quality. The Government can give this guarantee because in January last year Australia signed an agreement with the Combined Development Agency, the body representing the British and United States Governments for the sale of unspecified quantities of uranium to Britain and the United States. Close secrecy has been observed about the agreement, and the sale quantities and price have never been disclosed. The agreement will operate for ten years. One of the terms of the agreement was that Britain and the United States should assist with capital and technical advice in the development of uranium deposits at Rum Jungle, fifty miles south of Darwin in the Northern Territory.

✧ ✧ ✧

THIS field, discovered by chance by Michael James White, a farmer-prospector, is reported to be Australia's richest uranium find; but here again official secrecy prevents any accurate estimate of its worth.

White was given twenty-five thousand pounds reward for his discovery, and the Commonwealth Government then took over the field and called in the Consolidated Zinc Corporation, one of Australia's most experienced mining companies, to exploit it. Sample ore consignments sent to America have proved to be extremely rich, but the main output will not be achieved until August this year, when the treatment plant now under construction at Rum Jungle begins producing uranium oxide.

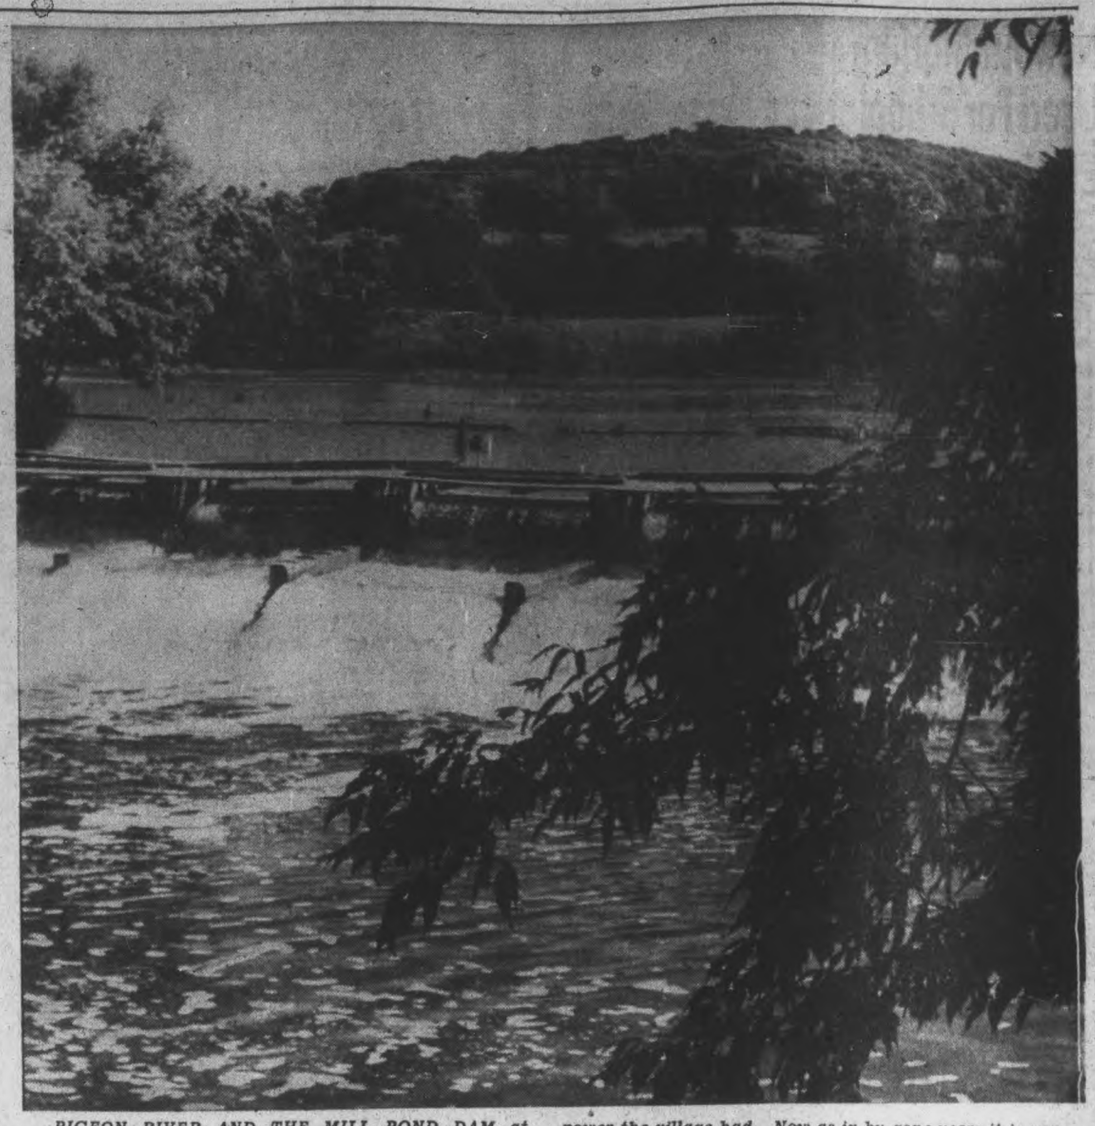
✧ ✧ ✧

RUM JUNGLE uranium, of course, is the property of the Commonwealth Government, which controls the Northern Territory. But two other proved fields, at Radium Hill and Myponga, lie within South Australia's boundaries; and while that State's Government, led by Tom Playford, a practical farmer with a down-to-earth approach to today's scientific wonders, is content to sell the uranium for defence purposes, at present it is anxious to exploit it for commercial uses.

Playford has signed an agreement with the Commonwealth Government permitting Radium Hill uranium to be sold to the Combined Development Agency until Rum Jungle is fully productive; but he insisted that South Australia should be recompensed at some future date with equal consignments of Rum Jungle uranium. Playford, spurred on by Professor Marcus Oliphant, Professor of Nuclear Physics at the National University in Canberra, and Professor H. Messel, head of the Faculty of Physics at Sydney University, is pressing the Commonwealth Government and the National Atomic Energy Commission, a Federal organisation, to speed research into the commercial uses of uranium.

✧ ✧ ✧

MESSEL, a forthright, unorthodox professor who thinks secrecy about atomic developments is overdone, recently persuaded Austrian businessmen to subscribe fifty-thousand pounds towards a $150,000 fund for Australian research into non-defence aspects of atomic energy. He alleges that British interests are discouraging Australian research because they hope to beat the world in the race to perfect industrial nuclear power plants and sell them to other countries, including Australia.



✧ ✧ ✧

THE COMMONWEALTH Government is not very interested in nuclear power plants and other industrial uses of atomic energy. Such functions fall within the duties and powers of State Governments. Canberra's main concern is to ensure the production of such amounts of uranium as the ten-year contract with the Combined Development Agency calls for, and to encourage private prospecting to gauge the full extent of the country's uranium ore reserves.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE Government's decision to send the chairman of the Australian Atomic Energy Commission, Major-General J. E. Stevens, and the deputy chairman, Professor J. P. Baxter, to the United States, Canada and Britain is designed partly to placate those groups which are charging it with being reluctant to encourage wider research into "Atomic Age" possibilities. Britain, of course, has been handicapped by the U. S. McMahon Act, which prevented the United States from giving certain information on atomic energy to its allies, and stipulated that any information given to Britain should not be passed on. Congress is now amending that Act, and Australia will be eligible to share in the information pool. One of the Australian mission's tasks will be to work out an arrangement for the receipt of such information. Other tasks will be: firstly to seek an arrangement with Britain under which both countries will be able to establish cooperative research into industrial uses of atomic energy; secondly to discuss amendment of the ten-year uranium sale agreement to meet the latest Rum Jungle developments, including the sale of increased quantities of uranium and associated minerals, such as copper; thirdly the exchange of more top-level atomic scientists.

Letters To The Editor

SHOW THE FLAG

Sir: For several years now, such organizations as The Daughters of The Empire, The Canadian Legion, The Loyal Orange Association, The Sons of England, and many others have been protesting a suggested change in our Flag, but I noticed on May 24th, last that very few of our so-called flag lovers took time to have it flown or displayed. Perhaps there were a dozen displayed throughout our city.

With Dominion Day coming up on Thursday next, let all of us who profess to love The Union Jack, see that it is displayed where our holiday visitors may see it.

Let our Loyalty be more than mere words. Fly the Jack on each and every occasion or holiday there is.

"ORANGEMAN"

HELPING THE BLIND

Sir: Are Peterborough people reticent about doing things for the blind? They need your help. There are over one hundred blind people in Peterborough. Some Service Clubs are doing a great deal to help, but there's need for more helpers. It would be a good project for Young People's Societies, Sunday School Classes and Men's Church Clubs.

Much is being done in welfare work in Canada, and the blind people were the first to receive Government aid, but no increase has been made for a long time. They depend mainly on the kindness of their fellowmen. Such kindness is shown in unexpected places. A blind person and a friend travel at reduced rates on our railways. In Peterborough through the kindness of Mr. Mitchell, bus transportation is free and the managers of our theatres give free passes.

In many cities the people arrange helpful ways for the blind. Hamilton and Vancouver vie with each to have the best clubs for the blind. In Hamilton the "Gyro" club lives up to its name, and is always getting new ideas on how to make life more pleasant for the blind. The club building is large and has rooms for various purposes—reading, story telling, bowling, badminton, handicraft, etc. Almost any hour of the day or night, readers are busy, reading the daily papers, either local or otherwise. Usually one person reads for an hour, and then another reader takes over. There are many of these volunteer readers, so the task is not burdensome to anyone. In this way, the blind are in touch with all the papers and magazines, and don't feel so behind the times, and "left out".

In the home it is surprising how much a blind mother can do for her family. She learns to do the washing and ironing. But for the mending and sewing on of buttons and other fasteners she needs help. She also needs help in shopping. This is where outside help is appreciated.

A blind person also appreciates being taken for a walk, but at a crossing it is neither polite or kind to have the blind persons go first. It was during the First World War that the White Cane was first used. In helping a blind person, do it the right way, use his left hand or arm so he can use his cane.

Yours truly,
WHITE CANE USER

New Strength Abroad

(Saskatoon Star-Phoenix)

There is a surge in the world towards freer trade, Mr. Howe told the Chambers of Commerce of the British Empire the other day. He said he hopes the momentum will be maintained and built up. "I believe we are on the threshold of a great opportunity in large parts of the world to make significant progress during the next year or two towards freeing of multilateral trade and towards increased convertibility of currencies," he said. The United Kingdom he added, in recent years has provided an inspiring example to others in getting rid of controls. Mixed with general trends, however, are some protectionist tendencies; and uncertainties about international economic policies in the United States becloud the international economic picture.

In view of these "uncertainties" in the United States and certain undercurrents in Canada which seem to favor more instead of fewer trade restrictions. Mr. Howe's remarks may have caused a few raised eyebrows. It can be taken as fairly certain, though, that he was basing himself on some solid facts.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

And he said unto his disciples, Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat neither for the body, what ye shall put on . . . For all these things do the nations of the world seek after: and your Father knoweth that we have need of these things. But rather seek ye the kingdom of God; and all these things shall be added unto you. Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. (Luke 12: 22, 20-32.)

✧ ✧ ✧

And it came to pass, as he went to Jerusalem, that he passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee . . . And when he was demanded of the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, The kingdom of God cometh not with observation: neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you. (Luke 17:11, 20, 21.)

A BRITISH OPINION

"Despite the fact that Grandma's corns were giving her what ho this morning there will be brilliant sunshine everywhere." (Meteorological report.)—British cartoonist Giles comments on the unusually cold wet June in England, the worst June weather in decades.

Sunday School Picnic At Crowe River Park

MARMORA (ENS)—Rain held off until the return journey of St. Paul's Sunday school from their annual picnic held at Crowe River park, formerly known as Chard's Bridge which is situated about two miles from Petherick's Corners. Mr. and Mrs. H. Bourne of Toronto who acquired the property from Frank Osborne of Campbellford are operating the resort for the second season.

Swimming was enjoyed by the scholars before their lunch under the shady trees and then a program of races in which sack races proved popular with both sexes, was held in an adjoining field under supervision of Canon J. M. Brownlie, assisted by W. J. Cottrell. The bus returned for the party at 4 p.m. and the participants sang merrily all the way home.

Three Ordained As Deacons In Service At St. John's

Three men were ordained as deacons Sunday, in St. John's Anglican church by the Right Rev. F. H. Wilkinson, MA, DD, co-adjutor Bishop of the diocese of Toronto.

They are Walter John Dyer of Peterborough; Charles Edward Olive of Ajax; and W. Schofield Battersby of Lindsay. Deacons are the first clerical order in the Anglican church.

In a solemn ceremony, Bishop Wilkinson, placed his hands on the heads of each of the kneeling men and gave them authority to preach and read the gospel.

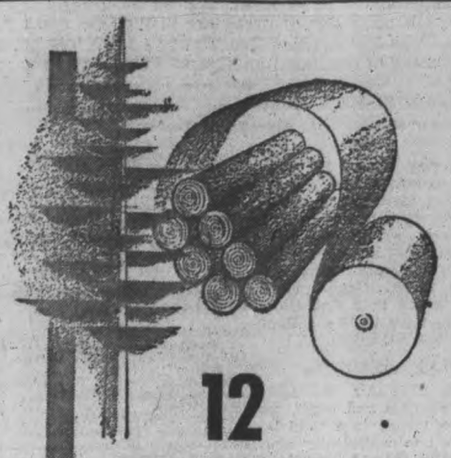
A large congregation, that filled the church, attended the ordination service and the families, relatives and friends of the three ordinands took communion.

FELT CHRISTIAN CALLING

Archdeacon W. P. Robertson, in his sermon, said the candidates for deacons are not young men in their 20's, coming from universities after six years in arts and theological studies. They are mature men, who were or are in other occupations, but have felt the Christian calling.

He told the congregation that they were taking part in a solemn act through which the church perpetuates her ministry.

He also pointed out that the Rev. Battersby's father was ordained in St. John's some 50 years ago.



The Rev. F. G. Ongley, MA, rector of St. John's extended to the deacons on behalf of the parish best wishes in their ministries.

One of the diocesan examining chaplains, the Rev. Professor M. T. Newby of Trinity College, Toronto, presented the ordinands. Assisting in the service was the Rev. H. Hesketh, rector of St. Paul's church, Lindsay.

All three deacons are married. The Rev. Walter Dyer will take the parish of the Creemore, Banda and Lisle. Formerly he operated a grocery store in Cavan.

The Rev. W. Schofield Battersby, will continue as principal of Central Public school, Lindsay, and as deacon will assist the rector of St. Paul's church, Lindsay.

Recently retired as professor of engineering at the University of Toronto, the Rev. C. E. Olive will assist the rector of the Church of St. George's on-the-lake at Scarboro, and develop a newly formed parish.

French Communist Party Lost Half Of Its Militant Strength

BY DENNIS BLOODWORTH

PARIS (OFNS)—The adoption by the French Communist party, the second biggest Communist organisation in the free world, of Moscow's new line of "collective leadership" and of a policy of "popular front" alliances with non-Communists was confirmed at the Party's thirteenth congress which has just ended at Ivry, near Paris.

The congress, which was the first to be held for four years and was attended by nearly one thousand delegates, also revealed in its frank self-criticism both the internal discords and weaknesses of the party and its still impressive strength.

M. Marcel Servin, the new secretary for organisation, disclosed for example that there are today only 506,250 card-holding members of the French Communist party, against 786,855 in 1949 and 907,785 in 1947. The party has therefore lost nearly half its militants in the past seven years. M. Servin also stressed that the Communists were failing to attract youth into the party and that, as a result, nearly thirty per cent. of members were now more than fifty years old.

STRIKES FAIL

The failure of recent strikes mounted by the Communist-controlled C.G.T. (trade union confederation) was examined in a comprehensive "autocritique" made by Benoit Frachon, the CGT's secretary-general. Other delegates exposed the faltering ideological campaign to give party members a proper training in Marxist theory, and the feeble attempts to increase the number of Communist cells in factories, to which only twenty-five per cent. of militants at present belong.

This seems a sorry picture of failure, but it has to be remembered that the French Communists still number half a million and that Communist voting in strength in parliamentary elections, curiously unaffected by the party's internal shrinking, still stands at more than five million. This means that, on average, one of any four adults sitting at a cafe table or sharing the back bench of a bus with you votes the way Moscow wants at election time.

FEELING OF INSTABILITY

There is nevertheless a feeling of instability in the party which has been provoked less by depressing facts and figures than by its recent palace revolutions. At the end of 1952 Andre Marty, national secretary and veteran Communist hero, was proved by his smooth-tongued rivals in the Politburo to be a double-dyed traitor and was thrown straight out of the party.

At the same time Charles Tillon, leader of Communist wartime resistance and member of political bureau, was reduced suddenly to being a humble cell-member. In March this year Auguste Lecoeur, all-important secretary for organization, and particular protege of Maurice Thorez, secretary-general of the party, was accused of sectarianism and "liquidatory tactics" and demoted. Now, after further heavy attacks, he has been cast out of the central committee altogether.

FOLLOWERS DROPPED OUT

It was incomprehensible, bewildering, and to those militants who had genuinely admired the fallen idols, the final disillusion. I learn, for example, that in at least one mass organization—the Association of Spanish Civil War Veterans—up to eight per cent of members have quietly dropped out. These were comrades of Andre Marty. In the Pas de Calais mining area, from where Lecoeur comes, unrest was emphasized in a recent by-election, when five thousand theoretically - assured party votes went to a deadly enemy—Claude Lavezzi. A former Communist, Lavezzi is prominent in a small opposition Communist party which, while ideologically faithful to Moscow, aims to overthrow the politburo of Maurice Thorez.

Purges are a sure sign of discord and instability, and it is significant that the party congress dropped no fewer than fourteen members of its previous central committee and brought in twenty-one new men to replace them. Those dropped included not only Lecoeur and Victor Michaud, editor of the party's ideological monthly, but also Molino, Linet and Lunet. These latter three are at the same time secretaries of important CGT organization and their eviction can be directly related to the events of April 28 when a 24-hour strike called by the CGT proved an unqualified fiasco. Experts see in these changes the possible downfall of another giant—Beniot Frachon, the CGT's leader.

In his concluding speech, Maurice Thorez, who confounded all rumors of physical and mental disability by appearing at the congress rubicund and eloquent as ever, said: "The party must interest itself in all democratic movements and not be afraid of reaching temporary agreements, even with unstable allies. It must not refuse possible compromises with other social classes as long as they help the working class . . . the Communists must redouble their fraternal efforts to win for the united front socialist workers and organizations."

FUTURE PARTY LINE

The tone of these remarks was that of the whole Congress and, coupled with the disgrace of Lecoeur—accused of trying "to form a (elite) party within the party" and of "proposing to give up the role of avant-garde" — indicates clearly the future party line.

"Collective leadership," as against individual rivalry and the creation of powerful cliques, has been adopted in the Soviet Union and must now be adopted in France. In accordance with the new Soviet policy "to win friends and influence people," the Communists must not retire behind walls of spiteful isolation and snobbish sectarianism but find the popular front platforms that will win over the mass of non-Communist workers and permit alliances with non-Communist parties.

Two such platforms are already in use—agitation against the war in Indo-China and repudiation of the European defence community treaty. There is a great wave of popular feeling here for peace in Indo-China, for most Frenchmen are sick of the fighting. Nor have the Communists any trouble in finding fellow-opponents to EDC, for almost all the Gaullists, more than half the Socialists, half the Radicals, and several smaller groups are against forming a European army. Their reasons are not those of the Communist party, but, working towards a united front, the Communists have already started committees directed against EDC to which important representatives of non-Communist parties in the National Assembly and the senate have been attracted.

There have been many arguments over Satchel Paige's hesitation pitch. Some major leaguers claim it is illegal, but others insist it is okay. Casey Stengal remarked once: "That is the toughest pitch to hit in baseball. I don't know whether it's legal or not. All I know is that Satch does it so cleverly that you can't make a ruling on it. When he was with Cleveland I'd tell my players to get as big a lead as possible early, because if they sent the old man in later we'd get nothing off him." The veteran Negro winds up, hesitates and throws — and keyed-up hitters often swing before the ball gets to them. He'll probably show it here in the July 1 exhibition betwixt Globe Trotters and House of David.

Doug Vaughan points out that a ball player can get credit for almost a dozen putouts without ever handling the ball. He means a catcher. The guy gets a putout when the ump calls the batter out for swinging with one foot, or both, outside the batter's box. Or if the batter fouls off a third strike bunt. Or is his by his own fair batted ball. If his thrown bat deflects his hit ball. If he hits out of order and is caught. Or if he fans on a wild pitch and there are less than two out and first is occupied. If he is hit by a pitched ball at which he swings for a third strike, If the batter is out for interference by a spectator when a catcher is after a fly ball. If he steps from one box to the other when the pitcher has started his motion. If the batter interferes with a play at the plate on a runner coming in from third. That's it.

Oaks Playing Petes

It's rather tough trying to keep track of the VOBL standing as the loop statistician in Toronto neglects to send it out, and various postponements are being worked in without writeups showing in Toronto sheets. But Oshawa is on top, with Belleville and Hoskings battling for second spot. Petes, Dependables and Oakville are bunched closely behind and fighting to stay up around third place. Weather permitting, it'll be the Oakville Oaks vs. the Petes at 8:30 tonight in Riverside, a floodlight fray which both teams will be most anxious to take. Should be a keen contest.

Bud Fisher has a clipping of The Examiner of 25 years ago when CGE started a field lacrosse team back in '29. That was the season before the Wall St. crash which started a decade of depression. Bud, who retires from CGE this summer, was a player and also club president, with Eddie Foley vice-prexy, and Harold Bannon the secretary-treasurer. They had a committee of Dick Bates (quite a distance runner, too), Jack Thornton, big Gene Hurtubise, and Pete McGillen. Coach was Jack McCabe. It started to be a shop team but later added Doug Miller, Pete King and some more, and eventually represented the city in OLA action before box lacrosse was begun.

A's Take Over Lead

Athletics finished stronger in a three-period OLA fray at St. Catharines on Saturday to gain an 11-9 win and top place in the group race. They came from behind, cashing in on a penalty to Don Ashbee, for the winning tally and later tossing in an insurance marker. A hefty crowd and a dandy duel between these hot rivals. Petes had Don Campbell in the lineup, but he needs more conditioning after his layoff. Harry Wipper, Bob Thorpe, Russ Slater, Jerry Fitzgerald and Lou Nickle were prominent on the Petes' attack, with Moon Wootton good in goal. Grent Burns laboured hard too. But the A's got more goals toward the finish and that did it. Petes are at Mimico tomorrow.

Quite a shower of rubber at Miller Bowl on Saturday e'en as the juvenile Petes pasted Long Branch 18-2 for their second straight OLA victory. A lot of good boys on this team to make one partially forget our folded junior squad. Ira Dundas is coaching the Young Petes and has 'em showing fine teamwork. Mainscorers were Parnell, Kennaley, Quinlan, McDougall, Blodgett, Floyd, MacInnes and Gardner, while Pat Baker was solid in goal. Long Branch only had half a team for the first half and one wonders if the OLA will toss 'em out as it did our juniors for being shorthanded one night. Local lads are off to St. Kitts this weekend.

LAWN BOWLING

By HERB MARTIN

Between 550 and 600 local lawn bowlers played on the greens during the past week and that number would have been greater but for rain on Monday evening.

That was a very heavy week for the bowlers and this coming week promises to be just as active.

On Monday and Tuesday we have regular schedule games.

Wednesday evening at 7:00 o'clock sharp, it's men's doubles.

Chose your own partner and, as this is the last local mid-week tournament until the middle of July, a good crowd is expected. The prizes will be displayed in the club-house this evening.

MIXED TOURNEY

On Thursday, July 1, Dominion Day—it's the open mixed doubles tournament for the new Seagram Trophy. Three 15 end games, play commences 1:30 o'clock. This has all the earmarks of being one of the outstanding events of the season.

On Friday evening we draw a blank.

And then on Saturday night the regular Family Hour tournament.

Now there we have the week's program. Take advantage of it. The summer passes all too soon.

TP And Marines Gain Wins In Men's Loop

T.P.T. Transporters registered their fifth win of the men's senior city league softball season, at the expense of the second place U.E.W. nine, at the East City Bowl, Saturday night, in the top-half of the regular twin bill; while Outboard Marines staged a dogged and thrilling comeback from an 11-run deficit, to edge out a keen 14-13 decision over Kingdon Lumber of Lakefield, after a bristling struggle in the nightcap, before a good crowd of fans. It was Marines' first victory of the season, to date; while Transports' victory moved the Bennett boys to within a half-game of the second slot.

Haddy Eakins, fireball king, toed the rubber for the Ray Tanner sponsored Transports, and enjoyed one of his better nights on the hill; he fanned a half-dozen; walked five and allowed but four hits, one a triple by Jim McGrath.

Kenny Hall started on the mound for U.E.W. seeking their sixth win; but ill-fortune struck early as Transport hickory, aided and abetted by three walks, netted four runs in the first frame, a pair in each of the second and third and three in the fourth. Jerry Killingbeck replaced Hall in the fourth with two aboard; was greeted with a triple by Buck Legrow and a single by Eakins, for three (one his own) but quelled the storm till the seventh, when Ray Allan finished without further scoring damage.

Leading the hit parade for TPT's, was Legrow with three solid hits and three R.B.I.'s; Junior West, two for three and two R.B.I.'s; Don Floyd two for five; Ed Redmond, Castle and Eakins each a bingle, and, with Floyd an RBI. McGrath had two R.B.I.'s for U.E.

RON ON SLAB

Ron Akers, toed the slab for Reg Luther's Marines, and despite an 11-run barrage in the first down and came through to a inning by Lakefield, steadied 14-13 triumph by an eyelash, in a thrilling finish.

Kingdon's opened a powerful sortie in the first as three walks, two hits by Neil and one by Red Wasson, Perc Elmhirst, Jack Burger and two errors, totalled 11. Marines fought back steadily by innings to reduce Kingdon's margin by half, at the end of five. Burt Fife, who started for Kingdon's and twirled fair ball, retired as Red Wasson essayed the task of protecting his team's 12-6 lead.

Marine bats were not to be denied and a four-run splurge in the home sixth, led by Bill Corrigan, Ron Akers (who hit two for four) and Ted White put Marines back in the game. Meanwhile, Akers, assisted by his mates afield, held off every thrust till the eighth, when the Wasson gang scored one. A brilliant rally in the final frame to net four, led by Gord Mongram, Corrigan and Jack Morgan enabled Marines to make their first victory a thriller, before a cheering crowd.

Morgan had three R.B.I.'s for the winners; Cam Wasson, Red Wasson, Jack Burger and Jerry Bryans, two apiece for the losers; while Akers, Henry, Neil Wasson, O'Brien, Leether, Crowley, White, Corrigan, Perc. Elmhirst each accounted for one run batted in.

P-W "B" Team Victorious In Cricket Tilt

In a council cricket match in Toronto on Saturday, the local "B" team came up with their second schedule win, due chiefly to excellent bowling by veteran Frank Dyer and Skipper Ken Illingworth. They got 23 for five wickets to win, against Dovercourt's 22.

Dyer go the first wicket off McNeilly with the fifth ball of his first over, and followed with another wicket on his second over to make it 0 for 2. When the total reached 11 for 6, Jones came up with a seven to put on eight for the seventh wicket but the inning closed at 22. Dyer had five wickets for 10 runs and Illingworth five for 12.

D. Dyer as usual allowed no extras behind the stumps. Against this low score, the local opened batting with Freeman and Jennings, the latter going for nothing at the third ball of Mawe's first over. Tydd joined Freeman and they took the score to 15 for two, when Freeman was caught in the slips off Worthington. At 19 for three, Tydd was out to a grand catch by Worthington at mid-off, and then two wickets fell at 21. Sorman came in and glided a ball to leg to pass the home team and take the victory.

Juvenile Petes OLA Victors

Peterborough juveniles pounded out an 18-2 OLA victory over Long Branch in a loop fixture here Saturday evening. It was the second win in as many starts for this classy young club coached by Ira Dundas with John managers in Walter Murphy's Parry and Angus Bradley the co-good PMLA setup. The boys are in St. Catharines next Saturday, and the schedule will be published this Tuesday.

Long Branch had but six players to start the game, the rest arriving by halftime, but Peterborough—only leading 8-2 at the half—showed plenty of power the rest of the way against a full team. They led 3-2 in the first quarter and 12-2 going into the fourth. Long Branch drew 10 of the 19 penalties, Campbell, Dicks, Ketcheson and Brooks getting it for fighting, and the latter having a misconduct in the lively joust.

SPREAD AROUND

The scoring by Peterborough was well spread around, showing fine teamplay, and some who weren't in so much on the sniping did a first-rate chore in checking. Kells scored both goals for the losers.

Dan Quinlan, Kennedy and Blodgett got three goals each for the victors, Parnell; MacInnes and McDougall getting two apiece, and singles going to Gardner, Perry and Floyd. In assists, Parnell led with three, one apiece being marked to Floyd, Ketcheson, MacInnes, Quinlan, McDougall, Brooks, Gardiner, Blodgett and Hunt. Neat goaltending was shown by Pat Baker.

Teams: Long Branch—Cuddy, Dicks, Kells, Pettit, Wilton, Howard, Ward, Campbell, Vanderagen, Torsell.

Petes—Baker, Hunt, Blodgett, Gardner, Brooks, Pace, McDougall, MacInnes, Quinlan, Perry, Floyd, Ketcheson, Kennedy, Ferguson, Parnell.

Referees, R. Danahey and C. Brioux.

Apsley Boys Win

APSLEY (ENS)—Apsley Central School ball team captured the championship of the North Hastings League for the third straight year.

They defeated Bancroft by the lopsided score of 15-5 in the first playoff game and trimmed them 15-1 in the next tussle. Lakefield were badly beaten by the classy Apsley crew, the final count in their clash being 33-5.

Avro Gets Win Over P-W By One Wicket

The Avro "A" cricketers defeated Peterborough - Whitaker "A" team by one wicket in a keen council match in Toronto on Saturday. The winners' total was 55 for nine wickets and for Peterborough 50. Peterborough plays Rawlinson Selects at Upper Canada College in Toronto on Thursday.

P-W team arrived with two men short and Avro offered the first chance at bat to Skipper T. Clarke. It was accepted and F. Booth and B. Roberts opened against Martingell and Risk. Peterborough soon lost Roberts in the second over, caught behind the wicket off Risk for a "duck." R. Smith started well but was clean bowled in Risk's next over for six, the score reading 10 for two. E. Bedford joined Booth and they went along well to 36, Bedford being lbw to Risk for 10 and Booth caught off Martingell for 20. Clarke also fell to Martingell clean bowled at 36, the score then being 36 for five.

H. Dibben and B. Brier took the score to 45 then being caught out smartl yby Davis. Dibben scored one and Brier four. The inning closed at 50 with Cridland lbw to Martingell and W. Smith four not out. Martingell and Risk bowled unchanged for Avro, each having four wickets and getting excellent support from Davis in the field.

Cheetham and Risk opened for Avro against Clarke and Booth, with Cheetham attacking strongly to score 15 off the first two overs. With the score at 19, he was caught smartly in the slips by Bedford off Booth for 17. Martingell joined Risk and this pair proceeded to "sneak" some quick singles before Martingell tried it once too often and was run out for six with the score 27 for two.

Tea was taken with the score at 30 for two and P-W revived and gave Avro a stiff struggle. For the addition of 11 runs, Avro lost four wickets all clean bowled by Booth. Daintith and Kelly, however, added nine to tie Peterborough. Needing but one run, Avro lost three more wickets, two falling to B. Brier who replaced Clarke. But the home team finally won when the last man, Binding, hit a single, the Avro inning closing at 55 for nine, with Davis not out three, and Binding not out two.

WILLIAMS RETURNS

CHICAGO (AP)—Ted Williams, the Boston Red Sox' hard-luck slugger, Saturday returned to active play for the first time since a virus infection benched him June 5.

Kingston Loses To UEW In Soccer Fray

UEW defeated Kingston United 8-1 in an eastern soccer fixture Saturday at Morrow Park to keep atop the loop, with the Uniteds next.

It was quite even for 20 minutes with both sides forcing corners and showing good midfield play. Hoyle scored first with a nice head shot, while UE began pressing. Hoyle then added another, and a newcomer from Scotland, Hardie, playing halfback came through with two in a row to make it 4-0 at the half.

UE came back with some beautiful soccer with the forwards combining smartly, and Holroyd finally scoring a picture goal after combination. Biddie got the next one with a header from a corner by Holt, and Biddle passed to Hoyle for No. 7. Ryan was next with one of his distance shots. The defence played excellent football, but made one slip by handling in the penalty area, and Hurdley scored from the spot for Kingston's lone goal.

WINS ANOTHER

CHICAGO (AP) — Hasty Road, one of the leading three-year-olds in the U. S., notched another victory by winning the $28,625 Warren Wright Memorial at Arlington Park Saturday.

A's Get First Place Over The Petes With 11-9 Victory

St. Catharines Athletics pulled out an 11-9 win over the Petes' Trailermen in the Garden City on Saturday night to take over sole possession of first place in the OLA senior "A" standing. The loss dropped Bob Thorpe's team into second position, ahead of the Hamilton Tigers. Petes play tomorrow in Mimico.

The biggest St. Kitts' crowd of the season saw another nip-and-tuck tilt between these well-matched rivals, a three-period game with Athletics showing a shade more punch in the final frame. They cashed in on a Peterborough penalty to get the winning goal, but had enough left to sink an insurance marker before the finish. Goalie Moon Wootton turned in a fine chore and had 35 stops to 18 for Doug Favell of the homesters.

SOLID LACROSSE

After spotting A's two early goals by Powless and Croft, the Trailermen turned in a solid lacrosse effort to control play most of the first period and throughout the second. But the Saints sank four without a return in the third heat as they came from behind to gain the triumph.

Bob Thorpe figured in three straight goals in the initial inning to give the champs a 5-4 lead, and they had a 9-7 bulge to end the second. St. Catharines caught fire in the final frame with Croft and Rog Smith scoring within a minute, and the big break came when Don Ashbee drew a slashing penalty and Derry Davies tore in close for the winning marker. Later Croft got another, his third, to clinch things.

Harry Wipper was in top form to tally three, Thorpe getting a pair. Grant Burns looked good with steady running all through. Ken Croft counted three for the A's, with two each going to Roger Smith, Derry Davies and Al Frick. Teams:

Petes Goal, Wootton; defence, Fitzgerald and Peterson; centre, Mason; wings, Slater and Ashbee, alternates, Wipper, Campbell, Allan, Thorpe, Nickle, Powell, Killingbeck, Curtis and Burns.

Cleveland Salvages 4-3 Victory From N.Y. Yankees

By JOE REICHLER, Associated Press Sports Writer

Five teams are waging a bitter battle to gain first place by the Fourth of July—the date that tradition has marked as "Championship Day."

Since the turn of the century approximately seven out of every 10 major league leaders on July 4 have gone on to win the pennant.

With only a week to go, no team is assured of the top spot on the mid-season holiday. The New York Giants lead Brooklyn by one game today but the National League pacesetters face a "crucial" three game series with the Dodgers at the Polo Grounds starting Tuesday.

TIGHT RACE

Cleveland boasts a game-and-a-half advantage over Chicago in the American League but the White Sox can dislodge the Indians with a sweep of their four-game series in Cleveland next week-end. A letdown by each can pave the way for the New York Yankees to move into the lead while the Indians and White Sox are at each other's throats, the Yankees will engage the second division Washington Senators in a four-game set at Yankee Stadium.

The Indians widened their lead Sunday salvaging the last of a three-game series from the Yankees 4-3 while Chicago was held to a split by Boston's Red Sox. Beaten 2-1 in the opener, the White Sox bounced back to trounce Boston 9-1 in the second game of their doubleheader. The loss widened the Yankees' deficit to three games.

New York's sizzling Giants maintained their one - game advantage over the Dodgers with an uphill 3-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs in 10 innings.

TIED IN NINTH

Blanked by Warren Hacker with two hits through eight innings, the Giants tied the score at 2-2 when Whitey Lockman hit a two-run homer with two out in the ninth and won in the 10th when Willie Mays doubled, stole third and scored on pinch-hitter Bobby Hofman's single off loser Hal Jeffcoat. It was the Giants' 21st victory in their last 25 games and the Cubs' 10th straight defeat.

The Dodgers equalled a team record by blasting five home runs to polish off the St. Louis Cardinals 8-6 for a sweep of their three-game series. Gil Hodges drove in four runs with his 19th and 20th homers and Jackie Robinson, Roy Campanella and Junior Gilliam each had one.

Harvey Haddix, the Redbirds' brilliant lefthander, was the victim of all the home run blasts that fractured his 10 - game winning streak.

Granny Hamner was the offensive star as the Philadelphia Phillies swept a twin bill from Milwaukee 4-3 and 2-1. The leading second base candidate for the all-star team banged a three - run homer to give Curt Simmons his seventh victory in the opener. Hamner tripled with one out in the ninth to drive in both runs in the nightcap.

Frank Thomas' ninth - inning single gave Pittsburgh a 4-3 victory after the Cincinnati Reds had won the opener 9-0 behind Corky Valentine's five-hit pitching. Ted Kluszewski drove in two Redleg runs with a double and two singles.

First baseman Dick Kryhoski drove in the winning runs in each game as the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Philadelphia Athletics twice 4-3 and 3-2 to climb into sixth place. Kryhoski extended his hitting streak through 18 straight games.

Bob Porterfield, backed up by the homer hitting of Eddie Yost, Pete Runnels and Mickey Vernon, coasted to is ninth victory as Washington walloped Detroit 8-3 to move within a game of the fourth place Tigers.

Roy Pelia Breaks Record For Discus Throw

By JIM PEACOCK

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian open track and field championships, last major meet before the British Empire Games trials at Vancouver next month, point to three strong-man field events as Canada's best games' hopes.

A husky but trim Toronto school teacher, a Toronto policeman and a football prospect from Sudbury gave notice during the week-end competition they intend to top Canada's track and field team in the games July 30-Aug. 8.

Possibly the most convincing performance was that of Roy Pella 23, of Sudbury, who this spring graduated from the University of Michigan where he played football and kept his discus-throwing arm in top condition.

Pella broke the Canadian record Saturday in hot and humid weather at East York Stadium here, throwing the disc 160 feet, nine inches, 3½ feet better than the previous mark.

Policeman Stan Raike, 31, and teacher Jackie MacDonald, 21, didn't surpass records in their respective shot put classes, but both were close.

Raike, who set the Canadian mark of 150 feet, nine inches in the 16-pound shot last week, was an inch short of this Friday night. Miss MacDonald was 1¾ inches off the women's Canadian eight-pound shot record of 42 feet, 7¾ inches which she set a week earlier.

None of these marks are too near world records, but they are closer than those set by Canadians in other events during the meet.

In track, Murray Groziuk of Hamilton and Gwen Hobbins of Toronto established themselves as team candidates, each in hurdles events.

Groziuk, 23, matched the meet record of 56.8 seconds in the 440-yard hurdles, and Miss Hobbins, who'll be 17 about the time the games start in Vancouver, was one-tenth of a second under the 51.1 meet record for the 80-metre women's hurdles. Miss Hobbins also won the 220-yard dash in 27 seconds.

Others who indicated games' team ability include: Norm Williams, Toronto, 120 - yard high hurdles winner in 15.3 seconds; Rich Ferguson, Toronto, one-mile run winner in 4:20.8; and Selwyn Jones, Hamilton, six-mile run winner in 32:40.4.

Martin Engles of Long Island, N. Y., one of several American competitors, topped a 43-year-old Canadian open record when he threw the hammer 190 feet, 11 inches, eight feet, seven inches over the previous mark set in 1911.

Art Bragg of Baltimore, U. S. national 220-yard champ, won that event in 51.5. Reg Pearman took the half mile in 1:56.8 and the 440 in 48 seconds; Jim Gathers won the 100 in 9.7; and George Shaw won the broad jump with a distance of 22 feet, 3½ inches. The latter three are from New York City and all were 1952 U. S. Olympic team members.

Henry Kennedy of Toronto won the three-mile in 15:14.8; Ron Miller of Toronto took the pole vault title with a height of 13 feet, one inch; Bob McLaughlin of Toronto won the hop, step and jump with a distance of 45 feet, 11 inches; and Pete Vuasola, Sudbury, won the javelin with a distance of 177 feet, six inches.

Barbara Jones and Alfrances Lyman, both 17 and both of Chicago, won the other women's events, Miss Jones taking the 100-yard dash in 11.3 seconds and Miss Lyman the 75-yard dash in 8.9 seconds.

Alan Robertson of Cornwall, Ont. placed third in the men's 440-yard three-foot hurdles final. John Ford of Hornepaine Ont. was third in the final of the men's three-mile run.

FALLING HARD—A tense Tessie Hopkins fails to clear the bar in the high jump in the Women's Amateur Athletic Association Championships at London's White City. Arms shoot out instinctively to break the fall. Better luck next time, m'm!

Remember When—

Jack Darragh, known as the pinch-hitter of hockey because of his ability to score goals when they were needed, died at Ottawa 30 years ago today. Darragh, only 32 at his death, played for the old Ottawa Senators for 13 years.

Royals, Leafs Divide Doubleheader

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ken Lehman, Montreal Royals' ace lefthander, is making a bid for another chance with Brooklyn Dodgers.

Brooklyn, in need of a southpaw hurler, will undoubtedly call a replacement from their International League farm and Lehman could get the nod. The 26-year-old southpaw has sharpened his control which bothered him in two previous trials with the Dodgers.

Lehman posted his eighth victory against three losses as he held Toronto Maple Leafs to three hits and pitched Montreal to a 6-1 victory in the second game of a doubleheader Sunday. Toronto took the opener, 10-8.

NO WALKS

Lehman didn't allow a walk in notching his eighth victory. The only run off him came on a homer by Loren Babe.

Rochester Red Wings dropped half a game out of first place as Ottawa Athletics nipped them 13-11. The defeat snapped Rochester's 10-game winning streak and ended Ottawa's three-game losing skein.

Ottawa scored in each of the last six innings and tied the count at 9-9 in the seventh. The A's came up with three runs off reliefers Tony Jacobs and Niles Jordan to win in the eighth. Jordan suffered the loss.

Reliefer Carley Haag pitched four-hit ball over the last 6⅓ innings to get credit for the win.

Frank Carswell drove in five runs and Al Lakeman three more to lead Buffalo Bisons to a 12-3 victory over Havana Cuban Sugar Kings.

Syracuse Chiefs trounced Richmond Virginians 15-2 in the opener of a doubleheader. The clubs battled nine innings to a 2-2 tie in the second game, which was called on account of rain.

Horvath Wins Ontario Open

TORONTO (CP)—Rudy Horvath, the Windsor Essex smoothie, Saturday proved himself a professional who can stand up under pressure as he won the 31st Ontario open golf championship with a 54-hole total of 208.

He is the third player in the history of the Ontario open and amateur tournaments to win both titles.

Moe Norman, Kitchener Rockway amateur, finished second in a three-way tie with Al Balding, Credit Valley pro, and Murray Tucker, Toronto Rosedale pro. Each carded 212.

Eddie Niziolek, assistant pro at Toronto Scarboro, paced the field by three strokes going into the second round. He then soared to a 77 and a total of 215.

ON WILLINGDON

Norman, Eric Hanson, Toronto Scarboro, who finished sixth, one point behind Niziolek, and Nick Weslock of Windsor Essex who had 217s, assured themselves berths on the Ontario Willingdon Cup team.

Horvath let neither the gallery, the sultry weather, the rain-soaked Toronto Cedar Brae course, an annoying heat rash nor the fact he was three strokes off the pace after the first 18 holes stop him in his bid for the title and he $500 first-place slice of the cash.

The pre-tournament choice to finish in top spot, Horvath shot a three-under-par 67 on the second round for a 137 total and a one-stroke lead over Norman at the 36-hole mark.

PAID OFF

On the final round the champ just aimed for par, took no chances and waited "for the other fellow to make the mistakes."

And it paid off. Horvath came in with a one-over-par 71 for the last 18 holes.

The turning point in his game came in the first round Saturday at the 14th hole where he sank a 35-foot putt. From then on his game was right and after his birdie-strewn 67 he was in the driver's seat.

Horvath said the only real trouble he had was at the par four, 398-yard eighth hole where he went two over par.

STAYED CLOSE

Norman, the irrepressible quipster, stayed close all the way, but his erratic putting on the final 18 holes cost him his title chances. He three-putted three holes on the final round to post a four-over-par 74.

The fourth member of the Ontario Willingdon team, Jerry Magee of Toronto Lambton could be dropped if none of the foursome wins the Ontario amateur at Toronto Thornhill at the end of July. The Ontario amateur champ automatically gets a berth on the team.

Final results with the 36-hole score listed first (a-denotes amateur) included:

Favor Marlene To Keep Crown

GANTON, England (AP)—Marlene Stewart, the little 20-year-old swinger from Fonthill, Ont., is favored to retain her crown in the British women's golf championship opening here today.

Miss Stewart meets Anne Scargill, former Yorkshire champion, in the first round.

The Canadian, who stands five-foot-one, became something of a sensation when she set the veterans down in last year's championship play to become the first Canadian winner of the British crown.

She has been attending Rollins College in Florida and has participated in several tournaments in the last few months without winning any.

One of her top opponents here will be Margaret (Wiffy) Smith, 17-year-old long-hitter from Pasadena, Calif., who reached the semi-finals in last year's U. S. championship.

Turn Down Request To Admit Team

TOLEDO, O. (AP)—The International Hockey League board of governors Sunday rejected a request to admit a team in Indianapolis.

Te league will operate this year with eight teams — Milwaukee; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Johnstown, Pa., and Toledo Troy, Cincinnati and Marion, O.

Only change from last year is that Louisville will not compete.

Bosses Shelve Action On Fight In Soccer Game

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — World soccer championship bosses today shelved any action on Sunday's battle fight between the Hungarian and Brazilian soccer teams, officials of the two teams reported.

The organizing committee of the championships called the team officials into an official inquiry on the fight this morning. The officials said they were told it was up to each national delegation to punish any of its members who joined in the battle.

At the inquiry, Gustave Sebes, vice-president of the Hungarian national sports committee, wore plaster on a gash from his nose to his chin.

Geja Kroetowth, another Hungarian official, had a heavily bandaged forehead and several small gashes in his scalp.

Hungary defeated Brazil 4-2 in one of the most vicious international games on record during which one Hungarian and two Brazilians were ordered off the field by referee Arthur Ellis of England.

The two teams continued their battle in the dressing rooms with broken bottles and football boots and had to be forced apart by Swiss police.

Five players — three Brazilian and two Hungarian—three policemen and two Hungarian officials were injured.

Ernst Thommen of Switzerland, president of the organizing committee, summoned Ellis and officials of the two teams to this morning's meeting. The investigation was initiated by Hungarian team manager Istvan Krajcsovitz who made a formal complaint to the organizing committee.

Pale with indignation, Krajcsovitz announced that the Hungarian team's projected tour of Brazil scheduled to start July 12 had been cancelled.

GERMANS WIN

In the other game Sunday, played at Geneva, Germany scored a goal in each half to defeat Yugoslavia 2-0. Semi-final matches will be played Wednesday—Hungary vs. Uruguay in Lausanne and Austria vs. Germany in Basle.

The International Olympic Committee was reported considering banning the men ruled off the field during the Hungary-Brazil game from further play.

As the players walked off the field following the game, Hungarian captain Ferenc Puskas slashed one of the Brazilians with a bottle. Puskas did not play because of an injury.

The Brazilian — Jao Baptiasta Carlos Pinheiro—was carried off by teammates with a three-inch gash in his head.

The fighting resumed in the dressing rooms.

33 Fatalities Reported Over Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Thirty-three persons, including 13 children, died violently in eastern Canada during the week-end. Highway accidents and drownings accounted for all the fatalities.

One highway mishap claimed the lives of a young Ottawa couple when a 70-foot elm tree snapped and fell on their moving convertible near Carleton Place, Ont. Dead are Robert L. Diser, 21, and his wife, Rose.

More than half the deaths were in Ontario—18. Nine persons were killed in traffic accidents and nine persons were drowned.

Seven fatalities were recorded in Quebec, five in Nova Scotia and three in New Brunswick. There were no violent deaths in Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland, a Canadian Press survey showed.

TRUCK BURNED

In Ontario, Gerald Towsley, 24, of Ridgetown was killed when his truck ran off No. 3 highway and crashed, exploded and burned.

Three children were killed when struck by cars in separate accidents in Ontario. They were: Aafke Looper, 6, Muirkirk; Susan Malcho 5, Stratford; Grant Wilkins, 2, Owen Sound.

3 Generations Have Tended Lighthouse

PORT MENIER, Anticosti Island (CP)—On a bleak, wind-furrowed point of Anticosti island stands a white tower surrounded by a number of small buildings. This is the world of J. M. Duguay, lighthouse keeper.

The department of transport beacon, nine miles over a bumpy road from Port Meunier, Anticosti's only settlement, has been the home for three generations of the Duguay family.

The light that Duguay's father tended until he died at 71 flicks out over one of the country's busiest shipping routes—the St. Lawrence. His grandfather, too, climbed the long stairs to the tower loft to light the lamp at dusk and extinguish it at dawn.

Life around the lamp is simple but hard for spare, tanned Duguay, his wife and the three of their eight children who have not yet gone off to school.

TIGHT LITTLE COMMUNITY

Everything revolves around their own tight little community—the barns, the Duguay home, the boat houses, the buildings housing the fog and radio equipment and, overlooking it all, the slender tower housing the light.

Between late November and early March, while winter stops shipping and the light stands idle, Duguay overhauls the lamp, the radio beacon and other equipment. In odd moments he hunts for squaw duck or deer and rabbit.

Mrs. Duguay cans the meat to provide variety to the supplies brought twice a year by a transport department supply vessel. She also looks after a cow and bull, poultry and hogs to keep her family in fresh milk and eggs, pork and occasionally veal.

Their home is modern, with a large refrigerator and running water from a stream Duguay traced, dammed and then tapped.

When the shipping season starts, Duguay rises before dawn. He joins an assistant, an islander whose salary he himself pays, in the light chamber where they check instruments and extinguish the light.

POWERFUL BEACON

The light itself is virtually a huge coal-oil lamp, revolving to the steady click-clack of bearings every 18 seconds. It is rated at 56,000 candlepower and is lit with a match.

With the light out, Duguay returns to bed for an hour's sleep and is up again at six o'clock to work around the house and do odd jobs until early evening when it is again time to light the lamp.

One of the major chores of the summer months is painting the 120-foot tower from front steps to beacon. All the inside jobs get a mustard-yellow coat. Mrs. Duguay and the children manipulate the pulley-board in which Duguay stands to paint the tower's upper part.

As king of his little world, Duguay must be a hunter, boat builder and woodsman, a qualified radio operator and repairman.

But his biggest responsibility is that of weatherman. He must know when he goes to bed at night that there is no chance of fog or storm rolling up while he's asleep to hide the light.

At noon or midnight, with the first wisp of mist, the fog horn must take over for the light to lead the ships past the point of land on which stands Duguay's little world.

Follows Open Course Of Action In Investigations

By HAROLD TILLEY

MELBOURNE (Reuters)—There are interesting contrasts in the way in which Canada and Australia set about handling the problem of wholesale espionage disclosures.

An Australian royal commission with unprecedented powers now is holding an inquiry into the disclosures made by Vladimir Petrov, who defected from the Russian embassy last April 13. Open hearings will resume June 30 with Petrov and his wife, Evdokia, the first witnesses.

Petrov turned over to Australian authorities hundreds of documents outlining Russian espionage activities in Australia. Included in the documents were the codenames of at least 30 Australians said to be part of the espionage ring. The senior Commonwealth counsel at the hearings, W. J. Windeyer, said at the last hearing on June 11 that the activities of at least 70 persons mentioned by Petrov would require investigation.

Many of these persons are expected to be named in the open royal commission hearings, and some of them may appear as witnesses. If they do, there will be no way for them to avoid giving testimony, because of the special way in which the hearings have been set up.

The royal commission to investigate the Petrov disclosures differs from other royal commissions in Australia, in that the others have never had the power to compel witnesses to appear and testify. This espionage royal commission, having been set up by a special bill which was hastily enacted by the Australian Parliament, has such power to compel attendance, and to punish by fine or imprisonment the refusal to give evidence.

MUST ANSWER QUESTIONS

The supreme court justices sitting as the royal commissioners have wider power over witnesses than they have in a supreme court. Witnesses before the commission are not excused from answering any question or producing any document on the ground of privilege.

A witness who is unwilling to answer questions is informed by the royal commissioners that he must reply truthfully, and that he will be protected from future proceedings. That is, a witness does not legally incriminate himself, nor is he open to civil action, because of anything said by him in evidence.

That means that confidential communications between a witness and his legal advisers, his trade secrets on which his livelihood depends, his most intimate family and financial affairs, must come publicly into the open if the commissioners fell they are relevant. It has been held that under this system even the physician cannot refuse to reveal the secrets of the consulting room, or the priest those of the confessional.

The only reservation made in this respect is that members of parliament retain their right to refuse to give certain types of evidence, or to answer certain questions put to them.

When he introduced the bill to set up the espionage royal commission, Prime Minister Robert Menzies said: "The commission will have complete responsibility for investigating these matters so that nothing hidden shall not be made known. Let there be no doubt about that."

The commissioners have been instructed to reach findings from their inquiries and report them to the government. So far, they have not been instructed to make recommendations on their findings, nor will they impose penalties against any persons because of disclosures made in evidence.

When the commission makes its report it will be for the attorney-general to decide what court action, if any, should be taken against anyone on charges of sedition, subversion, treason or other offences.

Apart from representatives of the crown, who are charged with assembling and presenting all relevant evidence, nobody has the "right" to appear before a royal commission. The commissioners have the full say as to who is to appear before them, and whether or not such persons may be represented by counsel.

The hearings have been mainly uneventful so far, but it is inevitable that in the weeks ahead the conduct of a number of Australians will be challenged; the commissioners have said that every man will have the right to answer the challenge, and the opportunity to clear his name.

Most of the hearings are open to the public, although the commission has the right to sit behind closed doors if it feels that public hearings on any given issue would prejudice the national welfare and safety.

Australian authorities are following a much more open course of action in investigating the Petrov disclosures than was followed in Canada when Soviet embassy cipher clerk Igor Gouzenko made his disclosures in September, 1945.

Gouzenko left the Soviet embassy with a sheaf of papers Sept. 5. The next day he was able to see officials of the Canadian government. A secret investigation by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police was launched at once. Nothing whatsoever was made public for more than six months.

The cabinet passed an order-in-council on Feb. 5, 1946, setting up a royal commission to investigate the espionage ring. The commission started its sittings behind closed doors on Feb. 13, and had been in session for two days before Prime Minister Mackenzie King made the first public statement on the case.

On Feb. 15, the prime minister disclosed the existence of the suspected spy ring and announced the appointment of the royal commission. His announcement did not name Russia, stating only that an unspecified number of persons were being detained in connection with the disclosure of state secrets to members of a foreign mission in Ottawa.

The royal commission questioned the 13 persons detained. This evidence was included in the commission's final report and was used at the trials of 19 persons eventually brought to trial.

Canada Observes Birthday Beyond Confederation Dreams

By HAROLD MORRSION
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canada, the "lady of the snows" who sprang to life in 1867, observes her 87th birthday this week, looking down from economic heights which probably surpass the best of Confederation dreams.

Fired by ambition and endowed with a rich natural heritage, the young domain has travelled fast and far along the economic road to achieve greatness and recognition in world production.

Now third among the trading powers, Canada in her 87 years, not many for a country, has quadrupled her population, boosted her foreign trade about 60 times, grabbed world leadership in some forest and mine output and multiplied her bank deposits about 300 times.

Increasing her wheat harvest some 40 times, she produces enough to feed herself and many of her overseas allies, and still has to worry about an embarrassing surplus.

She's the top world producer of newsprint and nickel and compares with the best of them in output of other metals and forest products.

And in recent history she has startled the world with her big discoveries of oil and natural gas.

Finance Minister Rose, who brought down the 1867-68 federal budget, predicted cautiously that "under the blessing of a good providence," there was a "certain and prosperous future before us."

But he was hard-pressed on the federal budgetary expenditures of $17,300,000 and the public debt of some $70,000,000. Compare that with this year's estimated federal expenditures of $4,700,000,000 and the public debt of more than $11,000,000,000.

Mr. Rose spoke glowingly of foreign trade, exports of $40,000,000 and imports of $47,000,000, and predicted that exports would increase by about $2,000,000 a year.

Today, Canada does a foreign trade of more than $8,000,000,000 a year, taking a back seat only to the United States and Britain. She exported last year about $4,300,000,000 worth and imported just a little more than that.

Money, of course, has grown a lot cheaper over the years, but bank deposits have made some tremendous strides, soaring to more than $9,000,000,000 last year from $31,000,000 in 1867.

Japan Slams On Brakes To Halt Bankruptcy Rush

TOKYO (AP)—Japan in the last three months has slammed the brakes on the downhill plunge toward bankruptcy and social chaos.

The hands at the controls belong to hard-bitten Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida and his conservative-minded Liberal party.

This is Japan's economic problem: It is buying products, mostly raw materials for factories and food for the people, from other countries at the rate of $2,300,000,000 a year. Japan is selling abroad only about $1,200,000,00 a year.

Now Japan has only $800,00,000 in foreign currency in reserve to buy the things she needs from abroad.

To halt the drain, the government first tackled inflation by reducing the budget and the supply of credit. This will help increase exports by cutting prices of the things Japan sells.

UNEMPLOYMENT AHEAD

It also helps to cut imports by taking from circulation the money people would use to buy luxury goods.

Government, economists, architects of an "austerity" program, see an increase in unemployment and propose a social security program of unemployment insurance and the like to ward off unrest.

Japan is concentrating on building up industries where it can best compete in the free world—optical equipment, cameras, textiles, machinery, toys, canned fish and plastics.

To help sell these products abroad, small trading companies are combining into large firms reminiscent of the pre-war "zaibatsu" (literally "money cliques"), the giant cartels blamed for sparking the last war.

Van Johnson Optimistic About Hollywood's Future

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—It isn't true that to be a Hollywood star you have to own three swimming pools —labelled "his," "hers," and "theirs."

"Haven's even one," said Van Johnson, who has made 50 pictures since 1941.

Johnson, now hitting the peak of his career, is a cheerful relief from the breast-beating type of actor who predicts the west coast film colony will become a ghost town.

"I've never felt more excitement in Hollywood," he said. "They have a new feeling out there. They are concentrating on quality pictures, and they are turning out better pictures all the time."

OSCAR CANDIDATE

Van hit a new top himself recently as Lieut. Steve Maryk in "The Caine Mutiny," a role that may make him a candidate for an academy award.

Van has had to surmount three handicaps to gain serious recognition as a film actor: (1) red hair, (2) freckles, and (3) a "face like the boy next door."

"In my first picture, a crime short," he recalled, "they insisted on dyeing my hair black and covering my freckles. Then it started raining, and the dye ran all over my face—and darn near washed me right out of Hollywood."

BOBBYSOX IDOL

As "the boy next door" Van clicked quickly and became a bobbysox idol.

"I still hate that term," he said. "But the bobby soxers all grew up and became mothers. I had the problem of growing up, too. I got pretty tired of being the boy next door with the apple pie face."

He will team with Deborah Kerr in his next film, "The End of the Affair," to be made in England. One of the steadiest workers in the industry, Van doesn't want to become a picture-a-year actor.

"What would I do the rest of the time?" he asked. "I go crazy if I have more than two weeks off."

Six-Month Toll—Two Killed, 75 Injured

Summer Holiday Season Sees Annual Increase In Highway Fatalities

There are two ways to die . . . the easy way and the hard way. There are also two ways to live . . . again the easy way and the hard way. Every time a motorist ventures out onto a highway he takes his life in his hands, and what is more serious, the lives of many others. It is therefore up to every driver to be fully conscious of his great responsibility and to act out the common sense rules of safety.

Every year, and especailly during the summer holiday period, traffic fatalities and road injuries mount to alarming heights. In a majority of cases it is carelssness which causes the numerous accidents and strikes a tragic note into times of pleasure.

484 CITY ACCIDENTS

So far this year the city of Peterborough has not shown any signs of becoming more safety conscious. In the six months ending June, police had investigated a total of 484 accidents. Two of these have resulted in fatalities and 75 persons have been injured.

At this rate city accidents will total over 1,100 by the end of the year, as compared with 1,075 in 1951, 950 in 1952 and 1,057 in 1953. Last year there were three road fatlaities, and 60 pedestrians received injuries in accidents. Some 160 motorists were given medical treatment following collisions.

TRY TO EDUCATE PUBLIC

Police chief John Thompson, commenting on the accident statistics, said today that an increasing volume of traffic would probably mean a higher acident rate. However, efforts were being made to educate the public in the necessity for awareness on the roads.

With the Dominion Day holiday beginning the main summer holidays, he hoped that every road user would make a special effort this year to keep acidents to a minimum.

"Investigations over the years have revealed that most of these accidents are the result of negligence," he said. "I don't suggest that every driver should run around with a rule book in his hand, but I do think that most people could pay just a little more notice to plain, everyday commonsense."

DEATH BY DROWNING

Peterborough, being the centre of a vast and popular inland water area, always comes in for more than its share of drownings. Stony lake has already claimed three lives this summer and the season has not yet come into full swing, Unfortunately, it is usually children who are the victims.

The delights of cool lakes, locks and rivers prove too much for the ypungsters during their two months' respite from school, but the yearly tragic toll of life is matter of great concern to every community. Every effort is made to ensure the safety of swimmers and boaters, but like charity, the knowledge of safety begins in the home.

Praents, who take time to instil a theme of safety in the minds of their families, have done no more than their duty and can feel reasonably assured of an accident-free summer. No one should expect a six-year-old to know the safest swimming holes, but many people do.

EASY RULES TO FOLLOW

There are several easy rules to follow, which any youngster can understand and follow.

(1) Never swim alone; (2) if you must dive, then be sure the water is deep enough and that it hides no submerged rocks or trees; (3) do not enter the water too soon after a meal and do not stay in too long; (4) if you cannot swim, keep to supervised bathing pools, or lake areas that are known to be shallow and safe.

Here is a little rule that can apply to everyone, young and old, motorist, pedestrian and sportsman:

"There is no great hurry; it is better to be 10 minutes late in this world, than 10 years early in the next."

German Troops Not Barred

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration Minister Harris says that generally speaking members of Hitler's wartime SS troops are not allowed into Canada as immigrants.

But that does not mean that general German army troops are barred.

"I have always taken the view that service in the German army by a German national should not be held against him," said Mr. Harris during a Commons immigration debate Saturday.

"This is his duty i ntime of war . . . the fact that he was in the German army should not be held against him."

He was replying to W. H. Herridge (CCF—Kootenay West). Mr. Herridge said a manager of a national employment service office reported "the arrogance with which a former SS man treated him because he could not give him a job immediately."

Thinks Parliament Should Sit Longer

OTTAWA (CP)—Senator W. M. Aseltine (PC — Saskatchewan) doesn't think Parliament makes any headway sitting eight months of the year.

He told the Upper Chamber Saturday, a few minutes before prorogation, that he is opposed to Parliament meeting in November with recesses at Christmas and Easter. The House should meet in January and carry on until it finished work.

Solicitor - General Macdonald, government leader in the Senate, said he would bring Senator Aseltine's views to the attention of his cabinet colleagues.

CITY POLICE CHIEF JOHN THOMPSON Says:

TRAFFIC WILL BE HEAVY

Thousands of motorists will be coming to Peterborough and Peterborough district from many neighbouring and distant communities in addition to the already heavy traffic anticipated by Peterborough citizens.

Therefore we urge that all drivers observe these tips—

1. Drive at average rates of speed.
2. Stop occasionally for a rest period.
3. Use scenic side-roads for leisurely driving.
4. Be sure your car is fit for the trip.
5. Do not consume liquor before driving.
6. Obey all road signs, signals and pavement markings.

If you're driving during the long first of July Vacation week, GO EASY. Families and groups going by motor car to a lake, Provincial Park, resort or other destinations this weekend can have a carefree time without becoming careless.

Chinese Premier Visit To India Comes As Surprise To Western World

By PHILIP DEANE

DELHI (OFNS) — The arrival of Mr. Chou En-lai, the Chinese premier and foreign minister, is attributed here to Chinese anxiety about recent evidence of increasing Indian alarm over Communist moves in South-east Asia.

The Chinese premier's visit was arranged through last-minute telegraphic consultations after Mr. Krishna Menon, the Indian special envoy, had discussed in general terms at Geneva the possibility of a visit. It comes as a complete surprise to both Indian political circles and foreign diplomats who point out that in the past Delhi has discouraged Chinese leaders from visiting India. In this particular case, I am authoritatively informed, Mr. Nehru, the Indian premier, did not send any invitation but merely did not oppose the visit in view of Mr. Chou En-lai's insistence.

The visit was to have been kept secret for security reasons at the request of the Chinese embassy, which has already protested vigorously to the Indian foreign ministry at the disclosure of the news.

TIMED WITH WASHINGTON

According to well-informed Indian official sources, the timing of Mr. Chou En-lai's visit was connected with Sir Winston Churchill's visit to Washington. In the recent past, diplomatic sources say, the Chinese government has let it be known to the Indian government that it felt that India was taking an unneutral line in backing the Western demand for a cease-fire before a political settlement in the three associated states of Indo-China and in demanding the evacuation of Laos and Cambodmia by the Vietminh while advocating the continued presence of French troops in Indo-China. India has also understood from Peking's attitude that it considers her neutral behaviour in Keora as hostile to the Communist camp. Indian anxiety has also been increased by the Chinese attitude over Tibet.

According to diplomatic sources, Mr. Chou En-lai was expected to try some political fence-mending and hoped to stimulate an "Asian solidarity" propaganda campaign as an antidote to the rising tendency in the Indian press to discuss eventual and inevitable action against Communist expansionism.

ENDANGER INDIA

Certainly there is growing evidence of anxiety in the Indian government about Communist expansionism. The minister of commerce and the deputy minister for defence have openly expressed their antagonism to the spreading of Communism and members of the governing Congress party have been prohibited by public announcements from taking part in fellow-travelling or "world peace" organisations. The Indian leaders have, of course, known of Communism's subversive intentions in India for a long time. In 1948 an International Union of Students meeting in Calcutta was discovered to be an international Communist planning body preparing the outbreaks of violence which caused so much bloodshed in Hyderabad and elsewhere. A member of the Indian government told me last week, "It is not generally known, but following a murder a few years ago in Calcutta we discovered that the Communist parties of India and Burma act together. We know that the increase of Communism in Burma would endanger the security of India. It is not for nothing that our intelligence service concentrates mainly on dealing with Communist subversion."

The Indian Communist party has so far failed to take advantage of India's internal weaknesses because it is itself weak and divided. At its congress the vicissitudes of the party were attributed to the fact that it had not had the possibility of support from a neighbouring Communist power. Hence the party's decision to concentrate its efforts on building its strength in the northern areas of India and near-Burma where, with outside support, it could be more dangerous.

PUBLIC NOT AWARE

But although the Indian government is aware of the Communist danger, the Indian public is not. A feeling of Asiatic and "colour" solidarity and the old habit of opposing the Western powers as the 'colonisers' of yesterday militates in India in favour of the Chinese Communists. Because of the restricting effect of public opinion and anxiety over Communist infiltration at home, India might be tempted by further guarantees of her territorial integrity and promises not to help Indian Communist subversion. Yet most Western diplomats here agree that India's leaders will not put too much store by Communist promises. They believe that increased Communist pressure in South-east Asia would not produce appeasement in Delhi but rather a more severe neutralism, which would preclude India's acting as an arbiter as she did in Korea, to avoid entanglements, while at the same time reducing the volume of Indian opposition to Western anti-Communist measures. Therefore the Western diplomats here believe that in the long run Mr. Chou En-lai did not stand to gain much by visiting Delhi.

Britons To Burn Ration Books In Nation-Wide Ceremony

LONDON (AP) — The biggest book-burning since the heyday of Hitler will take place next month in the United Kingdom.

The fuel will be hundreds of thousands of copies of an obnoxious, buff-colored little government publication containing dozens of coupons with cryptic symbols.

They're ration books, the bane of the British housewife's life for 14½ long lean years.

The last rationing—mainly of butter, bacon and red meat—ends in the first half of July.

Then the housewife will be able to walk into her butcher shop, point to a side of beef, and say firmly: "Give me some of that. Quite a lot of it."

And those ration books will be strictly for burning.

CONSERVATIVES RUN SHOW

Formal organization of bonfire clubs to get the job done with proper ceremony is mainly in the hands of local Conservative party groups.

That's only natural. The Conservatives, in power since the autumn of 1951, claim it was their policy which set the land free from those confounded books.

One of the biggest of the bonfires will be held at Terling Place, the Essex county seat of Lord and Lady Rayleigh, on July 17. They're counting on more than 10,000 bookburners.

A spokesman for the ministry of food was asked whether there might be an appeal to the housewives to turn in their books for salvaging as wastepaper. He replied:

"No, we feel that perhaps people would like to do something a little more demonstrative."

Parliament Ends Longest Modern Session

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliamentarians have ended their longest modern session with a reminder that the government must face political tension in the world with strength to deter aggression and a desire for peace.

This was the keynote in the speech from the throne read Saturday at prorogation of the first session of the 22nd Parliament by Mr. Justice Patrick Kerwin, deputy governor-general.

As senators and commoners concluded 139 sitting days—during which 81 bills, including 14 private measures, and 378 divorce bills were passed—Prime Minister St. Laurent's cabinet faced some heavy-duty work.

CHURCHILL VISIT

First comes the visit Tuesday and Wednesday of Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Secretary Eden of Britain. It is likely Sir Winston and Mr. St. Laurent will discuss the possibility of a Commonwealth conference to discuss the troubled world situation.

The British leaders come here after private talks with President Eisenhower in Washington.

The government also must consider appointment of a new chief justice of Canada's Supreme Court to succeed Thibaudeau Rinfret, who retired at 75 last week. Mr. Justice R. L. Kellock, now on the Supreme Court bench, is rumored to have the inside track on the job.

There is also speculation concerning a possible shuffle in the cabinet. The changes may arise out of Finance Minister Abbott's announced intention to leave his portfolio and the rumored appointment of Transport Minister Chevrier as chairman of the St. Lawrence seaway authority.

OPENING DATE

After the session's work was reviewed in the throne speech, Mr. Justice Kerwin announced Aug. 5 is the provision date for reassembling Parliament. Progressive extensions of the date—possibly to November—are expected to be made later by order-in-council.

The throne speech dealt with Canada's commitments for defence and international programs of relife, rehabilitation, technical assistance and economic advancement of under-developed areas.

On foreign trade, it noted a huge wheat surplus, but said grain exports continue above the average of the past 10 years. Trade agreements with Italy and Brazil were mentioned.

The speech also noted legislation adopted at the session which started Nov. 12. Bills dealt with a new Criminal Code, a decennial revision of the Bank Act, housing, transfer of federal jurisdiction over inter-provincial highway traffic to provinces which want it, disabled pensions on a federal-provincial basis and a natural gas pipeline from Alberta to Ontario and Quebec.

UMPIRE SCHOOL

The baseball phrase "don't know nothin'," will not apply to Peterborough umpires this summer. Pat Calladine, Bill Leggitt, Len Williams, Leo Sullivan and Wimpy Borland completed a two-day instruction course at city hall last week sponsored by the Peterborough recreation commission.

CAMP OPENS

The Y's Men's Club's Camp Kawartha opened at Clear lake Saturday under camp director Bill McFarlane. With school not yet out, attendance this week is limited, but accommodation is booked from next week until camp closes August 7. The YWCA camp will be held after that, on the same site, from August 8 to 18.

FROG FIREMEN GET GLASSES

Firemen practising underwater swimming with a self-contained breathing unit had their first call Saturday. Pete Nicholson assisted.

MORNING ECLIPSE

You'll have to get up early Wednesday to see the eclipse of the sun. The moon will start to come between the sun and the earth at 6.05 a.m. and will reach maximum coverage around 7 a.m. The sun will be about 85 per cent covered in this area. The Toronto weather office reports that it will be all over within a few minutes of 8 a.m.

RAISE PRIVATE NURSES' SALARIES

The active private duty nurses of Peterborough voted at a meeting held last week, to bring their salaries in line with those of other cities of Ontario. Effective July 1, 1954, the rate will be $10 for eight hour duty. The nurses are members of the Registered Nurses' Association of Ontario.

RICH BLUE CARPET

A field of blue weed on the east side of the highway south of Buckhorn is one of the present beauty spots of the Peterborough countryside. So thick is the growth of this weed, also commonly called blue devil, that it has spread a broad and deep azure carpet which seems to suffuse the air above with its superbly rich coloring. It is an arresting sight probably halting at the weekend more than one car in passing flight. However, as Melville Johnston, county weed inspector would say, each plant has an average production of 3,500 seeds. Even so, there is nothing in a long journey to surpass its atmosphere, a deeper blue than the sky.

SCHOOLS CLOSE

This Tuesday is destined to be one of the happiest of the year as is one summer day every year. It is the day that primary school children take leave of their teachers, books and desks and begin a three month vacation. Some country children were even luckier. There schools closed last Friday.

$10,000 Fire Damages Barnum Place

Historic Landmark East of Cobourg Is Badly Damaged

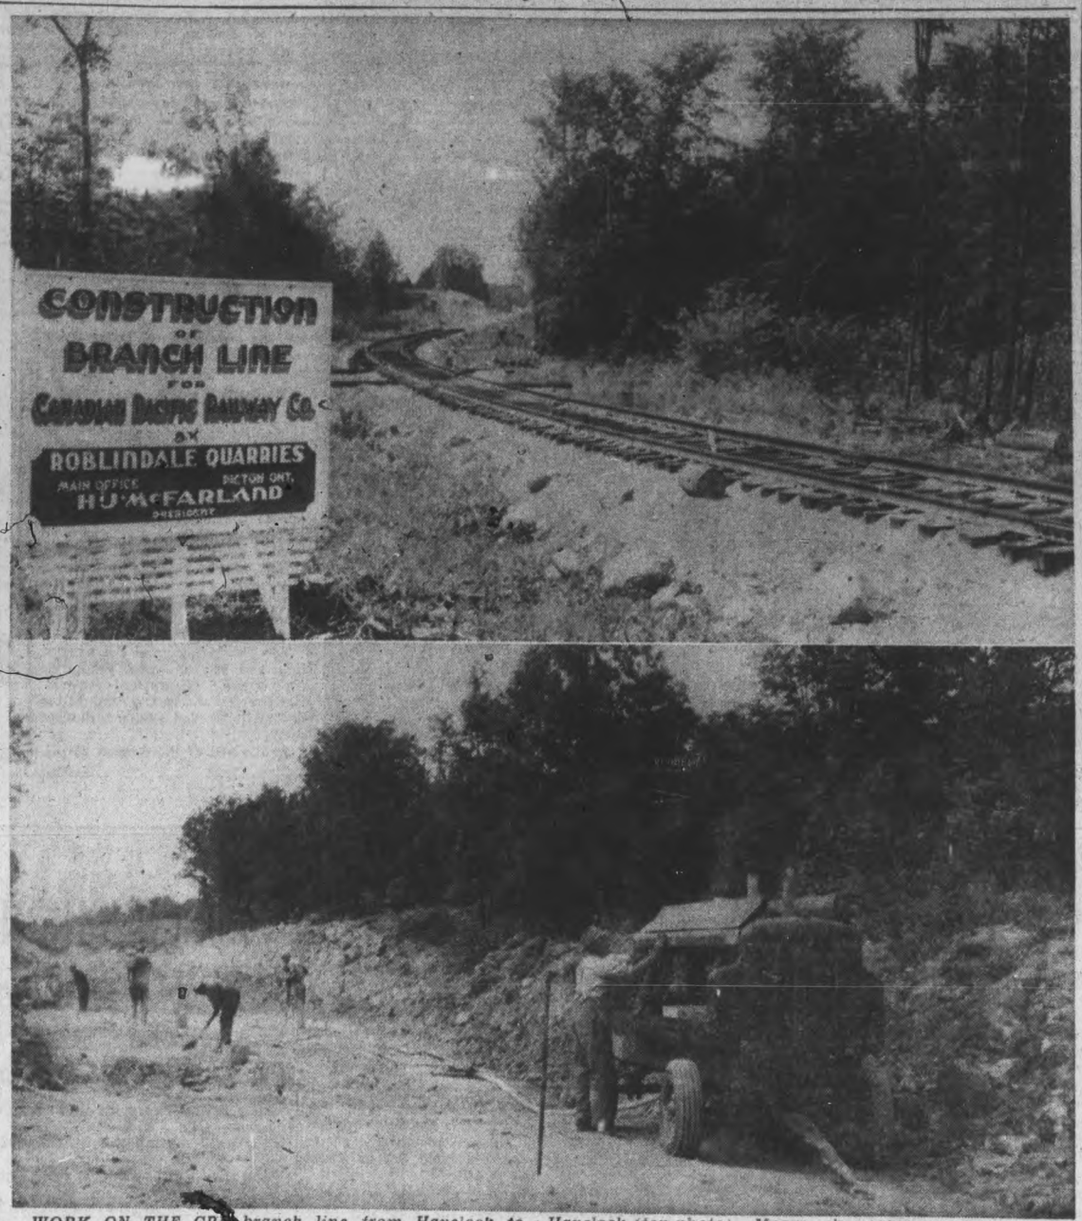
COBOURG (ENS) — Historic old Barnum House, a colonial-type frame mansion that was a landmark on the No. 2 Highway near Grafton, was badly damaged by fire which broke out around 4 a.m. Sunday.

The fire started in a lean-to kitchen located on the east side of the huge square dwelling and worked its way up into the attic. Cobourg fire department had plenty of water from a nearby creek but the fire had gained a good start and the fact that the whole structure is of wood made it difficult to get the blaze under control.

Firemen battled the fire until 9:30 in the morning and it is estimated that replacement value of the fire and water-damaged interior will be around $10,000. The east wall was badly damaged by the fire but the west side and front escaped.

Once owned by the Architectural Conservation Society, it was recently purchased by William Vanders of Toronto who was stocking it with antique furniture. Some years ago the dwelling, more than a 100 years old, was restored to its original condition and was a show place for early Canadian furniture.

Accident Fund Totals $417



The Burleigh Falls Accident Fund in aid of the 15 young boys and girls who were injured last Tuesday, when their truck turned over, has reached $417. Funeral expenses have been paid.

Two boys in critical condition and one girl in serious condition are still hospitalized.

The fund committee, which includes Robert Beal, Robert Brown, Victor Brown and the Rev. W. B. Day, all of Burleigh Falls, has opened accounts at the Bank of Montreal, Peterborough, and the Royal Bank, Lakefield.

Anyone wanting to make a deposit may do so or mail directly to a member of the committee.

Mr. Day said the hospital expenses will be very high as none of the injured were covered by hospital insurance.

WORK ON THE CPR branch line from Havelock to Nephton, the first branch line built in this district in half a century, is progressing rapidly. Already track has been laid across Highway 7 to a point about a half-mile north of Havelock (top photo). Meanwhile workmen are busy blasting a path through rocks and woods (lower photo) about five miles north. The line is expected to be completed by the end of the year. —(Examiner Staff Photos)

No Conciliator Named To Settle Dispute

Louis Fine, Ontario's chief conciliation officer, today denied a Toronto report that he had been appointed conciliator in the dispute between the board of governors at Civic Hospital and the 106 non-medical employees.

Mr. Fine said that he had talked to parties concerned but no conciliator has been appointed.

(However the department of labor is concerned about the contract dispute between the governors and Local 19, NUPSE (CCL), and there is a strong possibility of a new development by Wednesday.

The last move was when the board turned down a compromise offer from the union asking for an immediate wage increase of seven cents an hour; and, providing a two-year contract was signed, there would be another five cents an hour next January.

Press Agent Awarded $359

A press agent who felt she had been wronged collected $359.15 in a judgment today in county court.

Gertrude Cavanaugh of New York is getting the money and Roy Lisogar of Edmonton, carrying on a business known as the Canadian Ice Fantasy, is paying it out.

Lisogar didn't appear and Judge John de N. Kennedy gave judgment in favor of Cavanaugh.

Cavanaugh, an office manager who lives in New York, claimed she was hired to do publicity work between Oct. 5 and Oct. 24 last year at a salary of $100 a week, plus five cents a mile for travelling expenses. She claimed a four-week salary of $400, plus $191.50 for 3,830 miles travelled, plus $50 for long-distance telephone calls. Total $641.50, less $250 that she was actually paid.

The defendant, Lisogar, claimed that Cavanaugh had reprsented herself as an experienced press and publicity agent but she wasn't and he had to do part of the job himself.

W. Donald Bark was counsel for Cavanaugh.

Erect Stone Gateway St. Mark's Cemetery

Attended by several hundred persons, many from a distance, Decoration Day services were held Sunday at St. Mark's cemetery, Warsaw. The Anglican congregation is now celebrating its 100th anniversary, though the cemetery was deeded to the church in 1846 by Hon. Zaccheus Burnham, of Cobourg.

The service was conducted by the Rev. L. J. Delaney, rector of Lakefield and Warsaw, in association with Mr. G. Dyson, of the Warsaw United church.

Leading the music was the Peterborough Pentecostal Brass Band of some 25 pieces, with Eldon Johnson, of Lakefield, conducting. The scene as the hymns were sung on the hillside was impressive and appreciation was expressed of the services given by the visiting musicians.

A new stone gateway at the entrance to the cemetery is nearing completion. A collection was taken by the church wardens, Messrs. Thomas Davis and Carl Cooper, for the fund to carry on the improvements.

Thieves Fail To Open Safe

The Ocean Blend tea warehouse on Water St. attracted the attention of burglars during the weekend. A breakin was discovered by manager Bert Hooey at 8 a.m. today when he went to open for business.

It was found that thieves had gained entrance to the building through a rear window. Inside the building they took a door off its hinges and then tried to open the safe, but without success.

The hinges on the top of the safe door were broken off, but an attempt to force the lower hinges was in vain. Nothing else was missing from the warehouse.

City detectives are investigating.

Peterborough Pelts Sold In New York

Several chinchilla pelts from the Trent valley were among hundreds on display at the first auction of chinchilla pelts in many years, held in New York last week.

Prices, says Eric Gunter, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian board of the Chinchilla Breeders Association were highest yet and the quality of the furs, particularly the Canadian ones was "really excellent."

Average price brought in New York for a chinchilla pelt was $175. At least forty pelts are required for a fur coat, or at least $7,000 on the wholesale market.

With president J. W. Miles in the chair, breeders heard Mr. Gunter and a tape recording of a speech by Calvin Skinner of Salt Lake City at their meeting in Library last week. Mr. Skinner is executive secretary of the National Chinchilla Breeders of America.

Mr. Gunter told the group that another chinchilla auction is expected in New York in February or March of 1955.

Morrow Family Owned Lot For 111 Years

The familiar and aged features of the property at the northwest corner of Sherbrooke and Aylmer streets, owned for 111 years by the Morrow family, are disappearing from that fringe of the central business section of the city.

The lot was bought early this year by the McColl-Frontenac Oil Co. for a service station site. Work of removing the tall old trees and the weather-beaten three-house terrace has already levelled everything, leaving only a clearing-up job preparatory to building the new station.

CROWN GRANT IN 1843

That lot at the Aylmer St. corner was Crown grant in the spring of 1843 to a man named James Holmes. In September he sold it to Oughtrey Morrow who bequeathed the estate to his son, R. A. (Bertie) Morrow. In 1912 it passed into the possession of the late Harold A. Morrow remaining in his estate until it was sold this spring. That must be one of the longest terms of ownership in the city.

The Morrow home was at the top of the Sherbrooke St. hill, on the north side, once a solitary residence looking across the city, and now surrounded on all sides by new houses. Harold A. Morrow was the donor, in trust, of the Exhibition Grounds in memory of his father for public purposes primarily for the benefit of agricultural in this area.

The old terrace was tenanted until recent required vacancy. Before he purchased a house for himself on Sherbooke St., years ago, one of the tenants was a well known citizen the late Alex Murray, an alderman. He was prominent in the Trades and Labor Council and was elected to the city council with a labor group of four or five members.

Aged Man Dies In Fire When Home Is Burned In Baptiste Lake Area

Rescuers Unable To Reach Man 94 Trapped In Upstairs Bedroom Of His Five-Room Frame Dwelling

BANCROFT (ENS)—Believed to have been the oldest resident of the Bancroft district, Francis Xavier Lavalley, 94, was burned to death Sunday night when fire completely destroyed his five room frame house near the northwest shore of Baptiste lake in Herschel township.

The fire was discovered about 9:30 p.m. by Reg Summers of Baptiste lake. Resort owner Art Nicholl called forest rangers for assistance 10 minutes later.

When neighbors arrived at the scene, the top storey collapsed. Lavalley is presumed to have been sleeping in an upstairs bedroom. It is believed the fire started downstairs.

TRIED TO GET BODY

The body of the elderly man was observed near the staircase of the burning house by his son, Bill Lavalley of Bancroft. He and Alan Stringer tried to retrieve the body from the flames, but the floor gave way and the body fell through into the basement.

The remains were recoverd at 1:30 a.m. today by funeral director Jack Hattin, after the fire had been extinguished by forest rangers.

Coroner Dr. O. W. Anderson said no inquest would be held.

LIVED ALONE

A neighbor named Freckus said everything had appeared to be in order at the house at 9 p.m. when he called to give a fish to the 94-year-old man, who lived alone.

He had be residing with his son Bill in Bancroft and had returned home only last Wednesday. He was born June 12, 1860. Only the son survives.

Corporal Archie Grayling and Constable Ray Hooker of the OPP investigated.

Four Motorists Escape Crash

A level crossing collision was narrowly averted Saturday evening when an old-model car with four passengers swung off the road near the southwest outskirts of the city as the early CPR passenger train from Toronto pulled in. The driver of the car swung his vehicle into the ditch beside the railway track. The car remained upright and the train was stopped while the undamaged vehicle was pushed out of the ditch, with the help of the train crew. The scene was observed by scores of passengers who poured off the crowded train.

Damage Light Over Weekend In Accidents

Five motor accidents causing about $1,200 damage were investigated by city police over the weekend. No injuries were reported.

Six minor collisions were reported by the OPP. Damage was light and there were no injuries

A city motorist had a narrow escape from a watery plunge Saturday night, when his 1951 model car crashed into the side of the canal bridge at McFarlane Ave. Gerald Airey, 32, of 676 Park St., escaped without injury, but his car sustained about $200 damage.

He was later taken to the police station by Sergeant Andy Dalton and appeared in magistrate's court Monday morning to face a drunk driving charge.

CARS COLLIDE

Michael Connolly, 236 Rubidge St., was parking his car in front of his home Sunday evening when he came into collision with a car driven by Miss Pauline Griffin, 193 Hunter St. E., who was making a left turn onto Rubidge St. from Sherbrooke St. The Connolly car sustained about $500 damage and the Griffin car $200.

A car driven by Kenneth Anderson, 540 Gilchrist St., had a brush with a train at the CNR tracks on Bonaccord St, at 9 p.m. Saturday. The rear of the car was struck by the train, but only $50 damage resulted. Train engineer was J. R. Graham, of Lindsay. Conductor was John Monick, of Toronto.

At Park St., a vehicle driven by Jack E. Bertrand, 121 Douro St., collided with a parked car owned by Russell A. Bell, 716 St. Mary's St. Damage was light.

Joseph Johnson, 485 Bolivar St., and Fergus Moher, 29 Park St., were driving cars which collided on Aylmer St. near the Montreal House. There was only slight damage.

TV Effects Reconciliation Of Mother, Son

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Among the wonders effected by television is the reconciliation of shimmy dance Gilda Gray and her son.

When the entertainer embraced her son, Martin, on the TV show "This Is Your Life," last week they bridged a gulf that had existed between them for nearly all of his 40 years. Today Miss Gray and her son, her daughter-in-law and her grandson, are a tight family group and she is proudly showing them off to her Hollywood friends.

The happy ending to a bitter chapter came in the closing minutes of the Ralph Edwards show. Miss Gray had wept as the highlights of her fabulous life were paraded before her. But when her son appeared, she broke down completely.

TOLD MOTHER ILL

The reconciliation was arranged by Edwards' aides. One of them phoned Martin in Mercer, Wis., and it was in that call that the son learned for the first time that his mother had been desperately ill. About all he can say now is, "it's wonderful. She's great."

With the excitement wearing off, Miss Gray is able to recount why she and her boy have been estranged all these years.

"My husband and I separated shortly before Martie was born in 1914," said the shimmy artist, still amazingly beautiful for her years (approximately late 50s). "Shortly after he was born I went into show business. This required a lot of travelling. I just didn't want him around the theatre.

NEVER VERY CLOSE

"So I left him with my foster parents. I saw him whenever I played Milwaukee, but we were never very close.

"One of the reasons I kept working was because I wanted Martie to have an education. So I saw to it that enough money was provided for him to go to military schools."

During the Roaring Twenties, Miss Gray became the toast of Broadway, the continent and a star of movies with her unique wiggling dance style. She earned more than $3,000,000.

HUSBANDS EXPENSIVE

Where did it go?

"Well, I had three husbands, and you know they're very expensive," she smiled. "I lost a million and a half dollars in the crash alone."

Miss Gray faded from sight in the late 40s when she was fighting for her life against tuberculosis in Colorado. She conquered the disease and started hitting the comeback trail.

MP Questions $360,000 For 5 Paintings

OTTAWA (CP)—A Progressive Conservative member of Parliament Saturday questioned a $360,000 expenditure by the National Gallery on five oil paintings by obscure European artists.

Walter Nesbitt, Oxford, said in the Commons he does not understand how the paintings could cost $72,000 apiece when one famous painting in the Toronto art gallery is valued at less than half of that amount.

He said the painting in Toronto is "Elevation of the Cross" by Peter Paul Rubens. It was valued at only $30,000 and was one of the most famous paintings in the world.

CAN'T UNDERSTAND IT

"I do not understand how these paintings by relatively obscure artists would be valued at $72,000 apiece," he said. "It is something that does not seem reasonable to me."

Citizenship Minister Harris said paintings for the National Gallery are purchased by the director after approval by the board of trustees. Members of the board were well informed on art matters and in most cases had a knowledge of pictures purchased. He was sure the board was competent.

St. Giles' Scholars Hold Picnic In King Edward Park

A very successful congregational and Sunday School picnic was held on Saturday afternoon in King Edward park by the congregation of St. Giles' Presbyterian church. It was the second annual picnic held and about 250 Sunday School students with their parents turned out for an afternoon of sports to be followed by a supper in charge of the Friendship Group.

A booth on the grounds was in charge of Earl Powers and Roy Juby and the picnic was under the direction of the newly organized men's association of which Harold Dunford, the president, had organized an able committee. A highlight of the picnic was Roly Johnson who dressed as a clown delighted the children with his acts. Prize for the oldest on the grounds went to Joseph Mackness and the winner of the largest family award went to Mr and Mrs. Lloyd Estabrooks who were present with their five children.

She injured her right arm when she fell over the materials at a time when the restaurant was being renovated.

SUPERTEST SURGING POWER

Private Members Make Lttle Progress On Laws

OTTAWA (CP)—Private members of Parliament didn't have much success at the first session of the 22nd Parliament with their proposals for new laws.

During the 139 day session, longest in modern times, some 50 privately-sponsored bills and resolutions were placed before the Commons. Most of them were proposed by members of opposition groups, particularly the CCF party.

Only one resolution was approved. Other resolutions and bills were defeated by recorded votes or talked out in the time alloted for debate. These measures did not include private members legislation to incorporate various organizations under federal laws. There were 14 of this nature approved during the session.

PASSED — WITH CHANGES

The single private member's resolution approved was sponsored by Hon. C. G. Power (L — Quebec South). It proposed that a committee of the House be established to seek a better method to redistribute parliamentary seats.

However, it was not approved in the form proposed by Mr. Power. State Secretary Pickersgill moved an amendment that the inquiry should be conducted by the standing committee on privileges and elections.

The House accepted the suggestion and the amended resolution received unanimous approval. However, the standing committee on privileges and elections did not meet.

At the end of the session 46 private member's resolutions or bills remained on the order paper. Many of them will be reintroduced at the next session.

Among them are proposals to give Canada a distinctive national flag, to pay western farmers for farm-stored grain, to give Canada a bill of rights, to increase family allowances, to nationalize the coal and steel industry and to decentralize war industries.

During the session 378 divorce applications from Newfoundland and Quebec were approved by Parliament.

The CCF again protested the procedure by which Parliament handles divorce petitions from the two provinces which do not have their own divorce courts. They urged that this responsibility be transferred to the Exchequer Court of Canada and Stanley Knowles (CCF —Winnipeg North Centre) announced that he will introduce a bill next session to make this possible. Mr. Knowles has introduced similar bills at previous sessions.

School Teachers On Low Rung For Salaries

BIGWIN INN, Ont. (CP)—T. J. Emmert, vice-president of Ford Motor Company of Canada, said today in a speech prepared for delivery here that in terms of salaries paid, school teachers are on the low rung of the professional ladder.

Mr. Emmert spoke to the 35th annual convention of the Ontario Uban and Rural School Trustees Association.

In his prepared speech, he said an individual is sleeted for a job according to his aptitudes, training and experience and paid a salary that recognizes these personal qualifications. He said teachers must get a little weary of, hearing listed the compensations other than salary in their jobs.

Mr. Emmert said the only way to raise salaries was through an aroused public opinion "and that . . . is a responsibility I feel you and I must accept."

10-Point Program For Safer Swimming

TORONTO (CP) — A 10-point program for safer operation of automobiles was presented today by the Ontario Chamber of Commerce to a select committee of the Ontario legislature.

The program, as prepared for presentation, suggests driver education for teen-agers; more thorough screening of all applicants for driving licences; re-examination of all drivers periodically, probably at five-year periods; compulsory annual inspection of all motor vehicles and direction signals as standard equipment.

Under further suggestions, driver-licence examiners would be employed on an annual-salary basis, rather than on commission; "accident-prone" drivers would be controlled by a points system; the present 50-miles-per-hour speed limit would be retained, but surveys made to see whether it might be increased to 60 miles in some areas.

Increased safety measures for school buses are also asked and it is suggested that it be compulsory, on open highways after dusk for all bicycles to be equipped with white- or amber-lighted lamps in front and red-lighted lamps at the rear. Motorists planning right- or left-hand turns from one-way streets would be required to travel "for a reasonable distance" on the side from which they plan to turn.

The program was presented by a committee with A. Roy Courtice of Toronto Board of Trade as spokesman.

The recommendation on driver education said that according to statistics, while only 17 per cent of the driving population are in the teen-age group, these drivers are responsible for some 30 per cent of accidents in the province.

The committee said it did not intend to suggest a program which would increase educational costs in any substantial degree, but it hoped for increased co-operation of educational authorities, municipal bodies and responsible civic groups.

VISUAL AIDS

Considerable progress had already been made in some municipalities by provision of visual aids for classroom instruction, and automobiles for actual driver training.

Under the suggestion for more careful screening of driver-licence applicants, each applicant would be required to complete a written test on basic rules, and to meet the physical and mental requirements of a competent driver. A sufficient knowledge of English to understand traffic signs would be required.

Under annual inspection, each vehicle in satisfactory condition would be given a suitable means of identification.

To deal with "accident-prone" drivers, the committee suggests that every driver be given a basic points credit; that demerit points be deducted from it for each conviction for violation of the Highway Traffic Act (except for parking violations); and that a credit system of merit points for each year of accident-free driving might also be set up. Drivers who exhausted their credit would be subjected to thorough investigation before being permitted to retain licences.

The committee recommended a review by the highways department of regulations concerning school buses "with a view to providing adequate protection to students," and further suggested:

Uniform color for all school buses within the province; periodical mechanical inspection by competent authorities; and identification of all school-bus stops with suitable signs. All school-bus drivers should hold chauffers' driving licences and be encouraged to take first-aid training. Adequate first-aid kits should be compulsory school-bus equipment.

NORWOOD (ENS)—At their last meeting the wolf cub pack of Norwood presented their former leader, Rev. R. D. Duncanson, with a pen and pencil set.

John Stewart read the following address:

"Dear Ex-Akela,—We are all sorry to have you leave us, for you started this organization and have given a lot to us and to it. We trust that you have made a wise decision and that you will be guided by an even greater Akela as you have been to us.

"We decided, when we heard of your going, that you would appreciate a little remembrance of this pack. We know it is only a small portion of what we owe you, but we also know that you will accept it with the feeling we have for you. Thanking you again for your past leadership, we remain: Cubs Jackie Cronin, Roderick Rork, Teddy Andrews, John Stewart, Bobby McKey, Gordon McKey, Garry Irwin, John Goodswan, Ronnie Wilford, Robert Wright, Jackie Thompson, new Akelas Tommy Starke and Gord Williamson."

Rev. Mr. Duncanson in reply wished the pack well and hoped that each boy would become in the fullest sense a real boy scout.

He reminded them of the cub law and their promise, and thanked them for the gift. He said: "I will use this to write your new Akela and send greetings from whatever cubs and scouts I meet in South America." He then presented the pack with a wolf cub pennant and each boy with a crest.

Senator Blasts Killing Of Divorce Plea

OTTAWA (CP) — A Progressive Conservative senator Saturday described the killing of a Quebec petition for divorce in the Commons as a travesty of justice.

Senator W. M. Aseltine (PC—Saskatchewan) made the charge in commenting on the fate of a bill for the relief of Joseph Delphis Guillaume Delorme of Montreal.

The application was opposed in the Commons by CCF members on grounds that granting a divorce to Delorme might be a possible injustice to his wife. They prevented approval of the petition by debating it until the time allotted for its discussion had expired.

THINKS SHOULD BE CHANGE

Senator Aseltine said there should be a change in the rules of the Commons to prevent divorce petitions being killed by that procedure. Petition for divorce should either be approved or rejected.

He said the petition was considered by the Senate divorce committee and approved. It received final reading in the Senate and was sent to the Commons where it was considered in committee and given second reading — approval in principle.

Solicitor - General Macdonald, government leader in the Senate, said the protest should be considered by the Senate divorce committee. If the committee believed that divorce petitions should not be killed by talking them out it should make a recommendation to the Commons.

Evangelist Enters Hospital For Checkup

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP)—American evangelist Billy Graham, who got up from a sickbed to preach to 75,000 Germans Sunday in Berlin, entered the U. S. Army hospital here today for a medical checkup and treatment.

The 35-year-old North Carolinian flew to Frankfurt from Berlin this morning and went directly to the hospital.

Graham's press spokesman said: "He's getting along fine and it's nothing serious. We hope to be able to fly to Paris Tuesday."

Graham was stricken with a kidney ailment in Duesseldorf last Thursday night. He rested Friday, then flew to Berlin Saturday to keep his Sunday preaching date.

Wed In Dummer 52 Years Ago

WARKWORTH (ENS) — Mr. and Mrs. Ira Clark of Warkworth celebrated their 52nd wedding anniversary at their home here on Friday, when members of their family gathered to honor them.

Mrs. Clarke is the former Sarah Maud Davey of Centre Dummer. Mr. Clark operated a sawmill there for many years. They retired to Warkworth in 1946.

The couple were married in June 1902 in Dummer township by the late Rev. Robert Taylor. They have five children: Mrs. Erwin Parker (Reva May) of Spencerport, N.Y.; Mrs. James Esbie (Elsie) of Rochester; Mrs. Wilson Dugan of Norwood; Earl Clark of Hastings and Harvey of Norwood. They also have 19 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Pointed Ruling

CLACTON-ON-SEA, Eng. (CP)—Tony Collins, 31, was told to remove an eight-inch nude figure of the goddess Diana from the hood of his taxi. The objection was to Diana's hound, which had a pointed nose that might injure pedestrians.

Independent Housewives

PLYMOUTH, Eng. (CP)—Housewives here opposed a gas board plan to start a stove-cleaning service. They said that "doing too much for the housewife might make her lazy."

MR. AND MRS. IRA CLARK, of Warkworth, on Friday celebrated their 52nd wedding anniversary at their home. Four generations (top picture) of the family were present for the celebration. They are, Mrs. Erwin Parker, of Spenceport, N.Y., a daughter, Mrs. John Brown, of Spenceport, a granddaughter, great-grandson Paul David Brown and Mrs. Clark. French-Canadian Expected To Head TLC

OTTAWA (CP)—Labor observers are predicting the Trades and Labor Congress of Canda, the country's largest union body, likely will choose this year its first French-Canadian president in 45 years.

With the TLC's annual convention two months away, Claude Jodoin, 41-year-old vice - president from Montreal, is conceded the inside track at this stage of the race for the post held 12 years by retiring president Percy R. Bengough.

Chances of the burly Dressmakers' Union officer have been enhanced by a decision of Gordon G. Cushing, general secretary-treasurer and a strongly-favored prospect, not to run for the office regarded as about the most influential in Canadian labor.

WOULD LIKE TO STAY

"I'm pretty sure I won't be a candidate," the 39-year-old officer said. "If the Congress sees fit, I'd like to stay on as secretary-treasurer, and I'll be very happy in the job."

If supporters don't induce the popular Cushing to run, it shapes up largely as a contest between Jodoin and R. K. (Roly) Gervin, a Vancouver street railway union official who is the TLC's vice-president for the west coast.

A third possibility is an Ontario candidate. Ontario vice - president William Jenoves of Toronto has stated he will not run, but some support has been gathering behind A. F. MacArthur of Toronto, prominent in TLC national affairs and president of the Ontario Provincial Federation of Labor.

Mrs. Clark Hostess Norwood WA Meeting

NORWOOD (ENS)—The Women's Association of the United Church held their June meeting at the home of Mrs. Edgar Clark with an attendance of 42.

The president, Mrs. A. M. Weir, opened the meeting with a hymn, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The several secretaries gave their reports. The worship service was taken by Mrs. E. Clark and her group. The scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Earl Bangard.

Mrs. Max Scott gave a reading on "Stewardship and Service." Mrs. W. Pugh led in prayer. Mrs. S. Jennings gave a solo, "Think on Me."

The topic, "Stewardship," was given by Mrs. A. E. Metcalfe. The association then heard a duet by Mrs. Earl Bongard and Mrs. Max Scott entitled, "Waiting On Jesus."

The hymn, "Breathe On Me, Breath Of God" and the Mizpah beendiction brought the meeting to a close.

Search 11 Hours 8 People Safe

SARNIA (CP) — An 11-hour search for eight persons believed missing on Lake Huron was called off Sunday night when the party was reported safe at Port Lambton, 25 miles south of here on the St. Clair river.

J. W. Murphy, Liberal member of Parliament for Lambton West, said he received a telephone call from his son-in-law, Foster Stark, one of the occupants, that all are safe.

Search for the missing launch, started when a squall arose after the boat set out, was carried out by RCAF and private planes, RCMP and U.S. Coast Guard cutters, Ontario provincial and Michigan state police.

Later in Sarnia Hugh D. Garrett, one of the party, said they made a "bad mistake" in making reservations at a Grand Bend hotel and not telling anybody where they went.

"We went south on the river, about 35 miles, and that's all there was to it," he said.

2 Soccer Teams Said Unsporting

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — The organizing committee of the World Soccer Championships severely censured both Hungary and Brazil today for "unsporting conduct" in their quarter final match Sunday.

Hungary won 4-2 after one of the worst - tempered international games in football history. Referee Arthur Ellis ordered two Brazilians and one Hungarian off the field. Several players, officials and policemen were hurt in a pitched postgame battle fought in the dressing rooms with broken bottles and studded football boots.

An emergency meeting of the committee this morning passed a resolution of severe censure on the two teams and ordered the two associations to take immediate action to punish one Hungarian and three Brazilian players guilty of misconduct on the field.

The associations were ordered to report to the committee at once what punishment they were imposing on the four players.

The players to be punished were Newton Santos, Humberto Barbosa and Mauro Rafael Maurinho of Brazil, and Jozsef Bozsik of Hungary.

Canadian Golfer Wins First Match

GANTON, England (AP) — Defending champion Marlene Stewart, tiny 20-year-old redhead from Fonthill, Ont., rallied brilliantly after a bad start to win her first round match in the British Women's golf championship today.

She edged Anne Scarsgill, former Yorkshire champion, 3 and 2. Marlene landed in sand traps seven times going out and only a successful four-yard putt at the ninth saved her from being three down at the turn. She hit her true form then and won the next five holes and the match.

Fine Ship Model

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Although he has worked on construction of ships and boats for most of his 80 years, A. O. Cunningham had to do a lot of research before he constructed a nine-foot eight-inch scale model of a ship which could have been used by Sieur de Monts and Champlain when they named the St. John river 350 years ago. The model is being used in anniversary celebrations.

Canadians Hurry Too Much Says Sari-Clad Indian Nurse

Women, dressed in pastel-colored saris are an uncommon sight in Peterborough, but during the weekend, the sari clad figure of Miss Gnanaselvam David, of India was seen here.

Miss David, a charming, brown-eyed nurse born in Madras, was a weekend guest of Mrs. C. M. Scott, national convener of the IODE Commonwealth and Empire committee.

Since September, Miss David has been taking a post-graduate course in hospital administration at the University of Toronto, and will continue her studies for another year. The IODE of Canada, which is interested in strengthening the bonds of friendship from one member of the Commonwealth to another, is financing her training.

Throughout the years it has sent financial assistance to India for a school, a hospital and for the work of translating and printing nurses' text-books into Hindi.

At the annual meeting of the IODE in 1952 plans were made and funds were collected to give a nurse from one of the Commonwealth countries, a post-graduate course in a Canadian University School of Nursing, to make her more efficient professionally and at the same time let her see and realize something of the Canadian way of living.

Miss David was the nurse chosen. She is a graduate of the Christian Medical College and Hospital at Vellore, South India. She took her training in nursing in 1933-36 and in midwifery in 1937.

Later she took a short in-service training in administration at the Dufferin hospital in Calcutta. For some years she served in the Calcutta hospital and later returned to Vellore. She has served on Vellore staff for 11½ years, several of which she was in charge of the outdoor department and the eye, nose and throat theatre in that department. In the last three years she has been in charge of the obstetrical department and has been teaching in midwifery.

The one big difference noted betw Canada and India by her, w.s the much smaller number of people on city streets here.

She said people hurry too much in Canada. They are always going somewhere.

"And I'm afraid I'm getting to be like that, too," she said laughingly.

She saw her first snow in Canada, bought her first winter coat and said she didn't mind the Canadian winter. In the section of India where she lived, for the coolest weather, only a cardigan sweater is needed.

Although she didn't do any actual skiing, she stood on skis for pictures to send to her parents and relatives. However she did go skating and loved it.

The training she is receiving at Toronto is extremely valuable, Miss David said, and the days go by too quickly.

Miss David's ancestors were Hindu, but her grandparents, converted to Christianity by missionaries, gave up their Hindu religion. They also changed their Hindu name and chose a new surname, David, from the Bible.

As a child, Miss David attended mission schools and was brought up in the Christian religion. In fact, she said, she knew very little about the Hindu religion until people began asking questions about it and she found she had to read up on the subject.

Although Miss David has adopted many Western customs, she still retains the traditional Indian dress. She wears saris and her choice falls to soft pastel shades.

She received her first sari at the age of 13 as a sign of reaching maturity. At that time she put away her school uniform of blouse and skirt and never has worn a skirt since.

Even in her nursing work, her uniform consists of a white blouse, a six-yard starched sari and a white cap with black band.

When she returns to India next spring, she'll take the position of assistant to the director of nursing at the Vellore Medical College and Hospital. She said the need for nurses is great in India today, where there is one nurse for every 43,000 population.

GUEST OF HONOR at a tea attended by IODE members of the city on Saturday afternoon was Miss Gnanaselvan David of India who is seen here with Mrs. George Barns, regent of the Municipal Chapter, IODE, at left, Mrs. C. M. Scott, with whom she was a guest for the weekend (second from right) and the hostess for the tea, Mrs. R. S. Allin (extreme right). Mrs. James Heffernan is pouring tea.

She came to Peterborough for the week-end as guest of Mrs. C. M. Scott who is National IODE convener of Commonwealth and Empire.

Wearing a soft blue sari, Miss David received with Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Allin, Mrs. W. G. Hall and Mrs. George Barns, regent of Municipal Chapter received the guests.

A bright bouquet of garden flowers made up the tea table centerpiece, while bouquets of white and pink peonies, arranged by Mrs. M. E. Clarke and Mrs. Allin, were placed throughout the rooms.

Tea convener was Mrs. A. R. McWilliams and hostesses were Mrs. Clarke, Mrs. F. Foster, Miss Jean Hamley, Mrs. W. Nash, Mrs. J. L. Evans, Miss Eleanor Taylor, Mrs. G. A. Stewart and Miss Louise Spriggs.

Silver Wedding Couple Honored By Congregation

SPRINGVILLE (ENS)—On the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stevens were honored by the Springville congregation. They were presented with a large silver tray and two vase ornaments.

Mrs. A. B. Preston read the address and Gordon McIntosh made the presentation.

Mr. Stevens teaches the senior Bible class in Sunday school. When the organist is absent, he hasp layed the electric organ. As a member of the Gideon's organization and also of the Christian Business Men's Committee, he has brought outstanding speakers from these organizations to Springville.

Mr. Stevens has also been assistant Sunday school superintendent, assisting M. H. Johnston.

LARKE CHAIRMAN

The Rev. A. E. Larke was chairman for the evening program and in his remarks he mentioned that it meant a great deal to a minister to have people in his congregation who were "such deep students of God's word", as Mr. and Mrs. Stevens.

The evening programm opened with the singing of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds". Gerald Cooke gave two reading. The quartet, Roger Hanbidge, Gordon Clifford, Ray Kelk and Neal Whitfield, sang several sacred selections. Mr. A. B. Preston sang a solo. Clifford Johnston contributed a humorous reading. Mrs. Larke arranged a contest based on the food served at a wedding twenty-five years ago.

Speeches of congratulations were made by Bruce Sargent, Bruce Elliott, Walter Brown, Manson Cathcart and Mrs. Lloyd Whittington.

NCW Pass 7 Resolutions

By PAULINE KENNEDY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

FREDERICTON (CP)—The National Council of Women annual meeting entered its third day today as delegates considered two controversial resolutions left from Saturday's session.

The resolutions ask for a more thorough investigation of people emigrating to Canada and for curtailment of free-franking privileges of members of the Commons and the Senate.

Saturday eight resolutions were considered. Two were left over for discussion, five passed and one thrown out by the council.

Resolutions passed requested the federal government to: Rescind legislation increasing postage and re-establish former postage rates; provide legislation for equal pay for men and women doing equal work; establish uniform standards for sizes of children's clothing; participate and support the inter-governmental committee for European migration.

ASKS FOR LESS

The fifth resolution passed came from the Brandon, Man., local council and was aimed at the National Council of Women itself. It asked that fewer resolutions be considered each year and more weight thrown behind those passed to get real action.

The vetoed resolution asked that unemployment insurance benefit regulation 5A be cancelled. This regulation protects the insurance commission against married women who cash in illegally on unemployment benefits after marriage when they have no intention of working again.

RCAF Couple Go To France

Two members of the Royal Canadian Air Force, LAW Agnes Marie Robinson and Corporal Kenneth Frank Hopkins, were married in Peterborough on Saturday. The ceremony took place in St. George's Anglican church with the altar banked with baskets of red and white gladioli. The Rev. H. J. Scuse officiated.

The groom, who is son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hopkins, of Peterborough, will take his bride to France where he has been posted to RCAF Station Gros Tenquin. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Robinson, of Montreal, and has been stationed at Centralia, Ontario.

For her wedding the bride chose a formal gown of white nylon tulle over satin. It was fashioned with a strapless bodice, topped by a redingote of white lace and the skirt was in alternate panels of lace and tulle. Her fingertip veil of tulle was caught to a pearl-studded tiara and she was carrying a bouquet of stephanotis and Sweetheart roses. She was given in marriage by Mr. Ted Hebbel.

Miss Shirley Hopkins was maid of honor and Miss Jackie Hopkins and Ardeth Thackeray were bridesmaids. Their frocks were of silk shantung, the maid of honor wearing violet and the bridesmaids romance blue. The full skirts were cocktail length and matching boleros topped the strapless bodices. Bands of popcorn 'mums were worn as headdresses and they carried bouquets of the 'mums, the maid of honor having in hers blue carnations and the bridesmaids having pink carnations.

Mr. William Johnston attended the groom and ushers were Ronald Robinson and Gerald Hopkins.

Wedding music was played by Mrs. R. G. Shoudice and during the signing of the register Mrs. J. Morley sang "O Perfect Love."

A reception was held at the Empress Hotel with Mrs. Ted Hebbel receiving for the bride, dressed in pink and grey nylon and pink straw hat and wearing pink roses. The groom's mother was wearing a dress of Dior blue shantung and a pink straw hat and her corsage was of white 'mums and pink roses.

The couple will honeymoon at a cottage on Lake Chemong before leaving for France. Going away the bride wore a mauve linen suit with matching straw hat and purple linen shoes and purse and had a corsage of white baby orchids.

In an ordinary room, RCAF jet pilots get regular and systematic practice in instrument flying and procedures — takeoffs — letdowns — precision instrument turns — cross country flights — radio aids practice.

And — if things are going too smoothly — the instructor can twist dials to simulate all the flying conditions that the pilot is likely to meet, such as rough air—lightning—static—changes of wind speeds and directions.

It's all part of the continuous training that makes RCAF pilots among the most competent airmen in the world!

Strawberry Season Now In Full Swing–Mary Moore

One reader asks for jams using sucaryl — strawberry, raspberry and black currant. I have given the strawberry jam using sucaryl for diabetics and reducers once, but will repeat here today.

Another sends a good recipe for regular strawberry jam — so if we want to get in under the wire of strawberry season this is the last chance.

SUGARLESS STRAWBERRY JAM

Five well-packed cups strawberries which are perfectly fresh and ripe and choice, 4 tablespoons glycerin, 1 teaspoon certo crystals, 12 sucaryl tablets. Wash strawberries in sieve under running cold water. Hull them, placing on towel to dry. Cut in quarters and measure 5 cups pressed down a little. Mash these with potato masher and boil gently 15 minutes. Add remaining ingredients and stir with sterile spoon over medium heat for 5 minutes. Pour into sterile jars and seal at once. Sugarless products depend on sterility to preserve them — so take no chances by using unsterile spoons or jars or equipment of any kind.

BECKY'S STRAWBERRY JAM

Three cups strawberries crushed slightly, 1 cup finely cut raw apple, 5 cups white sugar. Mix well and boil 20 minutes, put in sterilized glasses and put hot paraffin on top at once, then another coat when cold.

Becky adds "Here's hoping this is in lots of time for the berry season. This recipe works equally good with raspberries."

Becky asked for method of canning peas. As usual I want to point out that in canning any vegetables except tomatoes it is imperative to have a pressure cooker.

HOME CANNED PEAS

(Using Pressure Cooker)

Shell and wash young tender newly gathered peas. Just cover with boiling water. Bring to boil, covered and boil 1 minute. Pack loosely and boiling hot in sterile jars. If using pint jars add ½ teaspoon salt; quarts 1 teaspoon salt. Cover to within 1 inch of top jar (peas should be loose enough in jar that none protrude above this 1-inch headspace) with boiling hot cooking liquid for peas. Process pints at 10 lbs. pressuer (240 deg. Fahr.) for 40 minutes; quarts 45 minutes. If you care to take the chance and process these in boiling water bath they require 3 hours, but when they are opened they should be boiled for 10 minutes in an uncovered saucepan before using or tasting even.

QUESTION: after moving here it did not take me long to get into the swing with all the other local housewives to look eagerly for your tips and wonderful recipes in your column . . . I am Austrian has persuaded me to stick to some . . . came to Canada 3 years ago, my husband being Austrian too of the (native) dishes.

NOCKERLN (Courtesy I. O.) 5 or 6 tablespoons flour in bowl, pinch of salt, beat egg in teacup and add water to fill. Pour egg water mixture into flour and beat with fork. It mixes into a thick spongy dough. Spoon into boiling water with a teaspoon, dipping spoon into the water to make the spoon clean, to dip again. Boil 10 to 15 minutes; serve hot with liver and onions.

LINZER TORTE (Courtesy I. O.) Four ounces walnuts, ¾ cup each sugar and butter (or margarine), 2 cups flour, 3 egg yolks, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 2 tablespoons milk, pinch cinnamon, rind and juice ½ lemon. Mix all together in bowl (by hand is easy). Use 2/3 of mixture to press down in bottom of 8-inch square pan (ungreased). Put thin layer of any kind of jam on pressed down mixture. Use remaining third of mixture to roll out into strips and put on top of jam in lattice work. Bake at 350 deg. oven for 50 to 60 minutes, until light brown. Leave in tin for 24 hours for best taste results.

Thank you Becky and I. O. I hope readers recognize the excellence of I. O.'s Linzer Torte and try it.

When making preserves, you can avoid cracking the glases by preheating them. Set hem on a cloth wrung out in hot water for a minute. Then slowly pour in the jelly or fruit.

Contrary to popular belief, floriculturists tell us that cut flowers should be placed in hot water; it moves easier and faster in the stems than cool water. Use water at normal bath temperature and allow it to cool naturally.

How to be loved by a man

Says Marlene Dietrich: "Love him, unconditionally and with devotion. Don't try to change him. When he comes home at night, let him be. When you feel like grumbling, or you're hurt, or bored —"

In July Reader's Digest, Miss Dietrich, a symbol of romance and glamour to many, tells you what you should (and shouldn't) do to keep your husband's love alive.

Read her frank answer to the eternal question: "How to be loved by a man" in July Reader's Digest. It's just one of 38 articles of lasting interest, condensed from leading magazines, current books. Get your copy of July Reader's Digest today.

DOROTHY DIX:

Heartless Husband, Father Say His Family Too Dull

DEAR MISS DIX: I've been married eight years, have two children and expect a third in October. My husband says now that I bore him, and he goes out every night on his own. I guess I'm not a very interesting personality at that. I've never worked so haven't had much chance to meet people. I don't make friends easily, and even when people are pleasant to me, I don't hold their friendship. Since I am alone every evening, I'd like something to do after the children are asleep. Is there any school where I can develop my personality, improve my mind, or learn to be a more interesting person? Perhaps I'll never be able to win my husband's attention again, but at least I'd like to have a sense of personal accomplishment.

M. S.

OUTSIDE THE PALE

ANSWER: High on my list of people who "never would be missed" is the father who considers his children uninteresting, and is bored by the mother who cares for them all day. This same father almost invariably takes great delight in bragging about his offspring, showing their pictures, accepting congratulations on each new arrival. But it never occurs to him that he has any obligation to his family except to hand over (very reluctantly) as little money as possible to support his wife and children.

If you think these fathers are rare, take a look around your own social circle. Many fathers grasp any excuse — business, lodge, visits to their own parents—anything to get out of the house and away from the youngsters. If they'd only make an effort to become acquainted with their children and to understand the manifold problems that daily beset a harassed mother, they would acquire an entirely new idea of family life. Children are most interesting, even fascinating, and the father who deprives himself of the joys of their formative years is cheating both himself and his family.

If you can possibly make your mate see this angle of home life, Marcia, he may get over being so bored. Encourage him to teach the children things, to take them on little expeditions around the city so he'll become better acquainted with them. Right now you seem to have too much to do to go in for personality courses and the like, but perhaps you could inveigle Dad into baby-sitting while you take a course at the YWCA, or at one of the colleges in your city. Better still, hire a baby sitter one night a week and take hubby along. Then make a determined effort to be pleasant to your neighbors; ask some of them in for an evening of TV, cards, or, best of all, just good conversation. Your home life undoubtedly does need a bit of spiking, and it's up to you to make the friends.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: How can I learn to keep my temper under control? I'm a single woman of 32, living with my parents. U pto a year or so ago we all got along beautifully, but lately it seems that everything my mother does irritates me. I get to the point where I throw things.

Tess R.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: When a person of usually even temperament begins to give vent to tantrums, the cause usually is fatigue, boredom, or both. A checkup by your doctor will probably correct the first and an interesting vacation will shoo away the boredom. Try a cruise to a place you've always wanted to visit. You'll return with so much to talk about that you'll forget your fits of anger.

DEAR MISS DIX: Two years ago I was godmother to a little boy. Since then his parents seem to be thrusting all their responsibilites on me. They claim it's my duty to baby-sit for them and to buy clothes for the child. Are they right? Ellie O.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: The responibilities of a godmother are spiritual; obligatory baby-sitting doesn't come into the picture at all. You're being imposed upon, my dear Ellie, and it's up to you to set the parents straight.

Policeman Charged

WICHITA, Kan. (AP)—An apparent berserk Wichita policeman shot his girl friend to death in his car Sunday and stuffed her body into the trunk. Later his car crashed into a pickup truck, critically injuring the driver. Charged with murder is Robert Ronald Stewart, 24. The victim was Elsie Winifred Warner, a 35-year-old Wichita divorcee.

Law's Long Arm

SHELTON, Conn. (AP)—Lionel Adams, 23, of Southbury was paged at a movie theatre here Sunday night. He left his seat and went to the lobby where he was met by state policeman Glen Thomas. Thomas took Adams to the state police barracks and booked him on a charge of stealing a rowboat. He was released on $100 bail.

Drobny Scores Tennis Upset

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jaroslav Drobny, the Czech who fled his Communist homeland in 1949 and now represents Egypt, scored the biggest upset of the 68th Wimbledon tennis tournament today when he won a straight-set victory over second-seeded Lewis Hoad of Australia.

Drobny, seeded No. 11 and the sentimental favorite of many British tennis fans, beat the highly-rated Aussie 6-4, 6-3, 6-3 in the men's singles quarter-finals.

MAN OF PREDICTIONS

Two years ago Drobny defeated Hoad in the fourth round of the Wimbledon singles and remarked afterwards: "The boy will win the Wimbledon in about two years."

Before today's match he said: "Now it's up to me to stop him." He did just that.

Third-seeded Ken Rosewall, Australia, defeated eighth-seeded Rex Hartwig, also of Australia, 6-3, 3-6, 3-6, 6-3, 6-1 in another quarter-final match.

Tony Trabet of Cincinnati, top-seeded, reached the semi-finals by defeating Mervyn Rose, Australia, in straight sets.

Farewell Sermon Preached By The Rev. R. D. Duncanson

HAVELOCK (ENS)—The Rev. R. D. Duncanson concluded six years of ministry at Knox Presbyterian church Sunday evening.

The congregation of Havelock United church withdrew their service in order that members of their congregation might hear Mr. Duncanson's farewell message and their minister the Rev. R. G. Newman assisted with the service.

"And I brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom declaring unto you the testimony of God. For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ and Him crucified. And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power."

Upon these word written by Paul to the Corinthians, Mr. Duncanson based his farewell message.

The introduction to the sermon was an outline of the sermon that Mr. Duncanson used for the first sermon he preached in Knox church. The same Scripture lesson and hymns were also used for the farewell occasion.

His message centred around the holiness of God and the sinfulness of man; the justice of God and man condemned because of his sin; and God as a God of love revealed in the cross of Christ that the sinner might have life.

God's grace and redemption through Jesus Christ and Him crucified is the only message a true minister can proclaim he said. Paul sought to make it plain, not in flowery language but solemnly he preached the message of the cross in all its simplicity.

Mr. Duncanson said he would be amiss in his calling if in this last message he did not proclaim the message of the judging, saving word of God, for there is no other message that will bridge the gulf between God the Creator and sinful man.

He referred to the many happy experiences and fellowships he had enjoyed here, and asked that the congregation would remember him and his family in their prayers in the mission work they were undertaking in British Guiana. Two anthems were sung by the choir under the direction of Mrs. L. Burtt.

Joint services will be held with the congregation of Havelock United church for July and August. For July the service will be in the United church at 11:15 a.m. each Sunday.

The Rev. James M. Drennan of Spa, Ireland, has been called to the Havelock-Norwood charge of the Presbyterian church. The service for August will be in Knox church, other arrangements to be made if Mr. Drennan is unable to reach here by that time.

Ladies Tour Factories Bowmanville, Orono

LAKEFIELD (ENS) — Thirty ladies of the Lakefield Women's Institute enjoyed a sight seeing trip to Bowmanville, Newcastle and Orono recently.

Their first stop was at Bowmanville where they were taken on a conducted tour of the Goodyear rubber plant. They then had lunch and visited the Dunham nurseries where they were given a demonstration of rose grafting and the use of the newer types of fertilizers.

Newcastle was their next stop when they visited a box factory where they saw the making of silver chests from the cutting of the lumber when the chests were first started until they were finally packed for shipment. Here they were treated to refreshments by the manager.

At Orono they visited the forestry department and the Ganaraska project, where, from the top of the tower, 1,275 feet above sea level they had a long range view of Lake Ontario.

The serving of supper at Bewdley concluded the trip.

Cars Derailed

PEMBROKE (CP) — Railway wrecking crews are clearing the transcontinental line of the Canadian National Railways, blocked late Saturday when an eastbound freight train was derailed. No one was injured as 16 box-cars were strewn along the right-of-way three miles east of this town 75 miles west of Ottawa. It is believed heavy rains Saturday night may have caused a washout.

Present Awards To Students For Athletics

CAMPBELLFORD (ENS)—The end of the public school term here was cause for double celebration to six students who won competitions in the field day at the fair grounds last week.

The entire student body and staff gathered on the lawn of the school to watch the presentation of specially designed proficiency shields to the winners in the senior, intermediate and junior track and field events.

The Kinsmen Club, Rotary Club and Canadian Legion each donated a shield, on which will be engraved the names of the winners. The shields will hang in the school.

Kinsmen president Ray Hall presented a shield to Marie Brethour and John Beatty, winners of the girl's and boy's senior competition. In the intermediate class, Georgina Venn and Wally Rutherford received the award from P. J. O'Sullivan of the Rotary Club. William Hampel presented the Canadian Legion Branch 103 award to Nancy Tatham and Richard Dunham in the junior section.

NORWOOD PRESBYTERIAN MINISTER the Rev. R. D. Duncanson was designated on Friday night as missionary to British Guiana by the Presbytery of Peterborough. Mr. and Mrs. Duncanson, their son Robert who has been the Examiner correspondent, and two daughters, Margaret and Kathryn, shown above.

Norwood Minister Designated To Missionary Work In Guiana

NORWOOD (ENS) — The Rev. and Mrs. R. D. Duncanson were designated on Friday evening by the Presbytery of Peterborough for overseas work in British Guiana. The Presbytery designated Mr. Duncanson by request of the General Assembly Board of Missions of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Duncanson have been in Norwood for six years. They have three children, Bob, Margaret and Kathryn, who will be going with their parents to the mission field. The Duncansons will leave for British Guiana on August 2.

The Rev. W. H. Heustin, the moderator of the presbytery, conducted the service of designation in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. The Rev. A. E. Toombs of St. Andrew's church in Campbellford read the scripture. A duet was sung by Misses Jacquelyn Rogers and Shirley Godin.

Dr. J. Alan Munro, MC, BA, DD, secretary of the General Board of Missions, told about the difficulties that might be encountered in such a field and called upon the people to pray for Mr. and Mrs. Duncanson. The actual designation was carried out by Mrs. Heustin, asking various questions of Mr. and Mrs. Duncanson as a renewed assurance of faith and integrity of purpose. The choir sang a lovely anthem entitled "It May Not Be on a Mountain Top."

FAITH OF A CHURCH

The address was given by Dr. Munro, whose subject was "Faith of a Church and the Faith of a man." He spoke of the misunderstanding there was of what the church and the faith of the church are. "Since we are emphatic in our declaration of democracy we think of the church of the living God must be a democracy. It is a very common fault in men and women to define faith in their own terms. The two over emphasis on democratic ideas and the emphasis on the kind of faith that may be foolhardy. The church is the Kingdom of God and the Body of Christ. In some ways democracy may ruin the church by some of its ideas.

Dr. Munro presented a Bible to Mr. Duncanson on behalf of the General Board of Missions. The congregation of the church presented the Duncanson family with luggage with a personal piece for each member of the family and a brief case for Mr. Duncanson to match the suitcases.

TWO BOOKS PRESENTED

On behalf of the United church in Norwood, Rev. H. K. Wright and G. A. Brethen presented to Mr. Duncanson two books, one the Presbyterian Book of Praise, and the other a "Treasury of Sermon Illustrations."

Reeve John G. Nixon presented Mr. Duncanson with handwritten, hand-painted, framed Wall Inscription bearing these words:

Rev. R. D. Duncanson,
St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church,

Reverend Sir:

We, the undersigned, being members of the Municipal Council of the Village of Norwood, desire to express our sincere regret in learning of your departure from this community.

"On this, the eve of your departure to far-off lands, we take this opportunity of wishing you a safe and pleasant journey to your chosen field of labour in the cause of Christianity.

"May the Grace of GOD be with you and your beloved family at all times and may your efforts be crowned with success far beyond your fondest dreams.

LADIES SERVED LUNCH

Later in the Sunday School room of the church a delicious lunch was served by the ladies aid of the church to which everybody was invited. Words of thanks were expressed by Robert Hope of Westwood Presbyterian church, Alex Buchanan of Knox Presbyterian church, Havelock, and Keith Ross of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. The Rev. Gilbert Smith of St. Giles' Presbyterian church, Peterborough and Keene Presbyterian Church, as interim-moderator of the Norwood charge, thanked the ladies aid for the tea. Wm. J. Goodswan, on behalf of the Christ Church Anglican in Norwood, said he carried the sentiments of the Anglican people, when he expressed the thanks to Mr. Duncanson for the splendid co-operation the two churches had had during his stay in Norwood. He wished the missionary family every success and God's richest blessing as they go forth.

Mr. Duncanson, on behalf of his family, said they felt their departure very keenly, yet it was with mixed feelings that they go because of the greatness of the work of the Kingdom. He expressed words of thanks to the people for their many kindnesses shown to his family not only at their departure but also through the years they have lived in Norwood.

The family will be seen around the district for a few weeks yet, but leave at the beginning of August for their new work.

Editor Hurt

HAMILTON (CP)—Frank Keen, city editor of the Hamilton Spectator, and two members of his family were injured Sunday when he swerved his car to avoid hitting a boy on a bicycle. The automobile struck a tree after Mr. Keen lost control. He, his wife and his daughter, Barbara, 19, suffered cuts and bruises.

Young Priest Dies In Crash

COCHRANE, Alta. (CP)—A 29-year-old priest was killed Sunday when a light plane piloted by Alberta Attorney-General Lucien Maynard crashed and burned near a cemetery adjoining a Franciscan retreat in this foothills town.

Killed was Rev. Vincent Prosser, professor at St. Anthony's College, Edmonton, and formerly of Sutton, Ont. He was trapped in the wreckage and burned to death.

Mr. Maynard, believed flying his own plane, was thrown clear when the plane crashed. He was taken to a hospital in Calgary, 25 miles east, suffering a broken arm, undetermined internal injuries and cuts. His condition was described as good.

Eye-witnesses said the small plane failed to gain sufficient altitude after taking off from a field. It struck high-tension wires and plummeted to the ground 50 yards from the cemetery.

Mr. Cadesky welcomed the attending crowd, saying it was a great pleasure to have them visit his place. He expressed his appreciation that so many had come out for the field day, said he was glad to be associated with the Peterborough Shorthorn breeders in their work, and hoped they would all enjoy themselves as much as he did in having them as visitors and guests.

SPLENDID HERD

"This is our first visit to Mr. Cadesky's beautiful place here," said Leslie E. Mathers of Mason City, Ill., guest speaker. "We are enjoying his wonderful hospitality. He has a splendid herd of Scottish Shorthorns, efficiently managed by Wilbert Donaldson, and I know they are going to be heard from. When you see the foundation that is being set up here, you have a feeling that these Shorthorns are bound to have an effect on the animal history of this continent."

Mr. Mathers said he heartily endorsed the kind words of introduction by Harold White of Guelph about ambassadors of goodwill between the two neighbouring countries, and their happy realization that the boundary line was not important.

"I'd say it is of very minor importance and I believe it should be even less," Mr. Mathers said. "We're the same stripe of people as you are, we like to do business with each other, and visit back and forth. Maybe some day we'll agree to tear up the boundary altogether. We have both become cosmopolitan in our populations, and by the way I know you have a lot of good Scots up here. They are people who are willing to admit they're right and don't have to prove it."

Mr. Mathers said he had judged a lot of cattle up in Canada and always felt at home here.

"There is one thing I'd like to say to those farmers who consider themselves 'small breeders.' That is how they have described themselves when they have approached me about the cattle industry and their place in it and they often say 'but I'm only a small breeder'."

MATTER OF ATTITUDE

"I'd say that being a big or little breeder is only a matter of attitude. We all know that a man of means can buy what he wants, but as the coach of the football team says about the players they all have got to pull their pants on one leg at a time.

"To the man who is a small breeder, in his words, I'd say that, to start with, get possession of good cattle whatever number you can; treat them right and merchandise them right. I know that is a big order, treat good cattle and you will arrive all the sooner at the destination you have your eye on."

Mr. Mathers punctuated his suggestions with bits of philosophy. He quoted Robert E. Stevenson, a Scott, "it is better to travel joyously than to arrive."

"One thought I'd like to leave with most of you: take every judging opportunity you can get. If you are going to be a cattle breeder, you will have to make decisions, judgments. That is a most important way in getting to know cattle, and I hope you'll have many."

WELL KNOWN MAN

In his introduction of the speaker, Harold White, said Mr. Mathers as a former president of the American Shorthorn Association was known south of the border as Mr. Shorthorn, and most breeders in Canada knew him just as favourably, if not quite so well.

Mrs. White complimented Mr. Cadesky and the Peterborough Shorthorn Club on the big success of their field day and picnic. Mr. Cadesky had made a substancial contribution in international goodwill by inviting a large group of Shorthorn breeders from the United States, promoting better relations and in particular providing the opportunity for them to "know us better and to realize when they get back home that they have made friends up here."

Charles Thorne of Galt complimented Mr. Mathers on his practical talk and his bright philosophy.

"Mr. Cadesky has done a big thing today for our industry, and I sincerely hope that he will be appreciated as he deserves to be," Mr. Thorne said. "And I wish that this fine herd of his continues to prosper."

Judge Harvey, Barrie, expressed to Mr. Cadesky the appreciation of his guests, "His hospitality has provided for everything, and we have had a grand time with him. The presence of our friends from the United States, all interested in the Shorthorn breed, has given us a deeper sense of neighbourly understanding and good relations. In speaking for all the people here today I can only say to Mr. Cadesky that we thank him very deeply."

High Old Time Promised As Drama Festival Opens

By JOHN PATERSON

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP)—A high old time is promised for tonight in this once-quiet industrial city in southwestern Ontario.

At 8:30 church bells will peal, factory whistles shriek, planes from the nearby RCAF station at Centralia will make a flypast, a six-pounder will be fired by soldiers of the Perth regiment, trumpeters will sound and Governor-General Massey will descend the steep aisles of the tented theatre to mark the official opening of the second annual Shakespearian festival.

A company of more than 60 Canadians from across Canada plus imported stars James Mason of London and Hollywood and Douglas Campbell from the London stage will present "Measure For Measure," as the first-night presentation.

Tyrone Guthrie, internationally famous for his work on the London stage, Edinburgh festivals and theatrical presentations in Greece, Israel and Finland, is in charge of productions. Cecil Clarke, artistic director of the festival, is directing "Measure For Measure."

Decor, stage and costumes are by Tanya Moisewitsc of London. Canadian composer Lou Applebaum of Ottawa as provided background music for the festival. Jacquelin Cundall (Mrs. Cecil Clarke) is in charge of properties. Ray Diffen of London and Broadway is head cutter and in charge of the bustling wardrobe room.

Bread Special "Treat" For Visitors To France

By HAL BOYLE

PARIS (AP)—Leaves from a touring notebook:

Cooking is a form of poetry in France, and her fine restaurants are almost as famous as her great cathedrals.

But the average tourist coming here isn't a gourmet on a pilgrimage to a culinary paradise. He just wants a good meal that is typical of the country.

To many a diet-starved American there is no greater taste thrill here than big chunks of tough-crusted French bread spread half an inch deep with yellow Normandy butter.

It takes a man back to the days of childhood, when coming home hungry from play, bread was the golden food.

A French waiter, watching a group of us put down plate after plate of the wonderful bread here, asked:

"Don't you have bread in the United States?"

It was a hard question to answer.

SAUSAGE IN GERMANY

In Germany the best food buy is Bratwurst. It is a section of pork sausage about a foot long and so heavy it takes two small boys to lift one.

This Teutonic hot dog is broiled over a charcoal fire and served with a bun, costs less than two bits.

Owners of baseball clubs wishing to lure fans back to the ball parks might try replacing their present anaemic hot dogs with these St. Bernard lengths of Bratwurst. After downing one, a fan would be too sleepily satisfied to complain about the quality of the mustard—or the pitching.

JOHN NIAGARA Talks about: HOW TO GET A Friendly Loan

You know a lot of people the first time they come to Niagara Finance worry about whether or not it's the right thing to do. It's quite true that we don't make a loan every time anybody walks through our doors. Frankly, we'd be out of business if we did. But you'd be surprised at the number of people who do get loans, and chances are good that if you need money, you can get it too. We've grown to be a big organization now but the men we have in our offices spread across Canada, we like to think, are pretty well trained. They're trained to understand how to solve your money problems, in a friendly way. So if you need money, why don't you drop in? There are two good reasons why you should, you know. The first is that our rates are lower on many friendly loans . . . the second is that loans up to $1500, are life-insured, for you family's protection, at no extra cost to you. We think that these features make our loans a better deal than you get down the street. Inquire, won't you?

2 Trains Collide 12 Injured; Coaches Derailed

STE. AGATHE, Que. (AP)—A slow-motion collision between a passenger train and freight caused injuries to 12 persons near here Monday night, but none was reported in serious condition.

The Canadian Pacific Railway trains crunched head-on north of this Laurentian town. The locomotives and several cars left the rails but all the passengers coaches remained upright.

A railway official reported that four of the 27 passengers-including a 75-year-old woman—aboard the north-bound train were injured, and two were taken to hospital. Five train crew members and three mail clerks also suffered hurts.

Train conductor Adrien Montreuil, 37, and baggageman Emurson Bullard, 39, were reported to have suffered fractures. Another trainman injured was E. W. Stenson, 58-year-old freight engineer.

SHAKING UP

Many of the passengers suffered merely a shaking up and superficial bruises. Miss J. Clement, 75, of Labelle, Que., suffered from shock.

The passenger train—No. 457—had left Montreal and was heading for Mont Laurier, Que., stopping at most way stations, when the accident occurred about 7 p.m. EDT. It had not reached full speed after stopping here when it collided with the freight.

All aboard were residents of Quebec province. There was no panic among the passengers. Three Ste. Agathe doctors hurried to the scene.

The unhurt passengers were taken to their destinations by diesel car.

Cause of the collision was not immediately determined, but one source said the freight had somehow been wrongly switched to the main line.

Gas Tank Explodes On Vessel

1 Dead, 30 Injured On Freighter As Gas Spreads

MONTREAL — (CP) — One man was killed and approximately 30 others were injured today when a tank of metal chloride gas exploded aboard the steamship North Gaspe in Montreal harbor.

The victim was identified as Lucien St. Pierre. He and those injured were identified as stevedores.

A spokesman for Clarke Steamships Company, owners of the ship, said approximately 30 men were taken to hospital for treatment. Nine were kept in hospital and the others were released following treatment. Two of the nine were considered in serious condition.

The spokesman said it was not immediately known what caused the chloride drum to explode.

FILLED WITH GAS

Following the explosion gas seeped throughout the 505-ton ship and she had to be evacuated immediately. The company spokesman said it is expected the ship will be cleared of the fumes by late today. The ship is due to sail tonight for point along the south shore of the St. Lawrence river.

Police said men working in the hold were most seriously affected by the gas.

Would Be Friends With All Nations, Must Be Sincere

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Churchill called today for "general and drastic reduction" of world armaments "under effective safeguards."

In a six-point statement of principles they also asserted their determination to try to bring about conditions in the world in which he "prodigious" force of atomic energy "can be used to enrich and not to destry makind."

At the same time they held out to all nations, including Communist nations, "the hand of friendship," on the condition that by "solemn pledge and confirming deeds these nations show themselves desirous of participating in a just and fair peace."

The statement was released by the White House an hour after Eisenhower and Churchill concluded their last meeting in the president's office and said goodbye on the south lawn of the White House.

The two men shook hands warmly.

Churchill planned to leave by plane this afternoon for Ottawa.

In five days of talks here, the prime minister and the president overcame some British-American differences but left many issues unsettled.

SIX-POINT AGREEMENT

Here are six points of the principles set out in their statement:

1. The two men will continue "in intimate comradeship" their efforts "to secure world peace based upon the principles of the Atlantic charter, which we reaffirm."

2. They extend "the hand of friendship" to all nations which prove they want to participate in a truce peace.

3. They promise to use "every peaceful means to secure the independence of all countries" whose people want it and are "capable" of maintaining it.

But, they said, "we will not be a party" to any deal confirming or extending the "unwilling subordination" of once independent states "now in bondage"—an apparent reference to Communist satellites. In this same connection the two men promised to try to unify through free United Nations-supervised elections, those nations divided against their will—evidently meaning Korea, Germany and Austria.

4. They believe that "the cause of world peace would be advanced by general and drastic reductions under effective safeguards of world armaments of all classes and kinds."

5. They called for the organization of regional security systems

Arrangements Being Made For Cease-Fire

MEXICO CITY (AP)—A diplomatic source in Guatemala City reported today that arrangements were being completed for a cease-fire in Guatemala.

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The Guatemalan radio announced today a new junta headed by an anti-Communist has displaced the one formed by Col. Carlos Enrique Diaz on Sunday night.

Col. Elfego H. Monzon, who resigned as Guatemala's interior in 1950 after being censured by Congress for cracking down on the Reds, was announced as the new leader.

Monzon was a member of the three-man junta which took over Sunday from President Jacobo Arbenz Gusman.

The radio said the other two members of the new junta were Jose Luis Salazar and Maurice Dubois.

SAY ANTI-REDS FREED

The rebels under Castillo Armas had threatened to keep up their fight against the regime headed by Diaz. The Guatemalan radio said Monday rebel planes had bombed Guatemala City, the capital. Then the station went off the air.

(Private advices reaching New York said Monzon was expected to negotiate a settlement of the civil war with Castillo Armas. They added the new government announced political amnesty for all anti-Communists who had been arrested by the Arbenz regime and the end of censorship.)

Two Children Badly Burned

SUDBURY (CP) — Five-year-old James Bellavance and his sister Paula, 13 months, of Gogama suffered severe burns to the face, arms and body Monday when a motor boat exploded and burned at Metagama Post, 16 miles southeast of Gogama.

Their father, Paul Bellavance, chief fire ranger of the lands and forests department at Gogama, about 120 miles north of here, suffered burns about the hands in rescuing his wife and children from the blazing 38-foot launch. The craft was moored in a department boat house.

The explosion, believed caused by a spark igniting fumes from gasoline seepage into the boat's bilges, blew Mrs. Bellavance and Paula, whom she was carrying, into the water as she was about to step aboard the boat.

The children were put aboard a train to Sudbury early today and their burns were treated by Dr. R. M. Mitchell of Sudbury who happened to be on the train.

Paul Bellavance, the father, was able to return to his home in Gogama after his burns had been treated.

Arrange Loan Of $40,000,000 For Power Plan

NEW YORK (AP) — The state power authority Monday announced it has arranged a short-term loan of $40,000,000 from New York banks to get construction under way on the St. Lawrence river hydro-electric power project.

The project, being undertaken jointly with the hydro-electric power commission of Ontario, will cost a total of $315,000,000.

Robert Moses, authority chairman, said the authority will arrange permanent financing within a year by selling bonds backed by revenues derived from the sale of electric power generated at the project.

BANK LOAN

In the meantime, he said, the loan from the New York banks, headed by the National City Bank and the Bankers Trust Company will allow construction to start in August.

The first contract, covering cofferdam construction for the Long Sault dam, will be advertised for bids within two weeks, Moses added.

The $40,000,000 loan is for one year at 1½ per cent interest, he said.

Lamport Made Member TTC Commission

TORONTO (CP) — Allan A. Lamport, 49, who resigned as mayor of Toronto, today was appointed a member of the five-man Toronto Transit Commission.

Mr. Lamport has been mentioned as a candidate for TTC chairman.

His appointment to the TTC was made by the metropolitan Toronto council by a vote of 19 to 3. Earlier in the day, the metropolitan council's executive unanimously nominated Mr. Lamport for the commissionership.

A vacancy on the commission was caused by the death last week of William C. McBrien, chairman.

PICK OWN CHAIRMAN

A new chairman will be named by the commission Wednesday.

Commission members are paid $8,000 a year. Mr. McBrien as chairman, received $15,000 a year.

Mr. Lamport's yearly salary as mayor and member of the metropolitan council was about $16,900.

Into the post of mayor moved Leslie Saunders, in his sixth term on the city's board of control, after Mr. Lamport resigned Monday.

Mr. Lamport told the city council his resignation decision had been influenced by the attacks of certain editorials in two newspapers.

"I don't think I should have to stomach these scurrilous attacks any longer," he said.

Total Eclipse Of Sun Reserved For Early Risers Seen Shortly After 7 A.M.

NEW YORK (AP)—A dragon swallows the sun Wednesday morning.

This at least was one ancient superstitious explanation of what millions of North Americans should be able to see soon after dawn—a total eclipse of the sun or a good portion of it.

The great celestial show, practically the last one this century for this hemisphere, will be reserved for early risers.

The total eclipse, will be viewed only by persons in a belt 69 to 96 miles wide from Holt county, Nebr., through South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Northern Ontario, Quebec and Labrador. Minneapolis and St. Paul are the only major cities in the path.

But other millions should catch a good portion of it if the weather is kind.

The total eclipse begins at 7:07 a.m. EDT near O'Neill, Nebr., and then the shadow of the moon will race across the earth at a speed of 3,000 miles an hour. It will dart through Canada, the tip of Greenland, Norway, Sweden, Russia and Pakistan, with a black sun setting in India 2¾ hours later.

TOTALITY BRIEF PERIOD

At Minneapolis, the sun will rise with the moon already taking a piece out of the sun, and the total eclipse will occur there about 30 seconds after it begins in Nebraska. Totality at the twin cities will last about 75 seconds.

A stern warning comes from medical experts and astronomers not to look at the eclipse through ordinary sun glasses, at the risk of serious eye damage. You must use heavily-smoked glass, welder's glasses, or strongly exposed photographic film. Be careful especially of children's eyes.

Hundreds of astronomers will work from dozens of sites over the world, and from airplanes flying in the path of totality.

One project will be making for more accurate measurement of the exact distance between North America and Europe.

Hold Out Hope Fishermen Alive

SIMCOE, Ont. (CP) — District residents held out hope today that three Hamilton fishermen feared drowned in Lake Erie may be alive in swampy bush country at Long Point.

Norman Morris, 35, his son Raymond, 16, and Daniel Lackman, 35, have been missing since they left Turkey Point Sunday.

Their red-bottomed boat was found capsized offshore at Long Point Monday but there was no sign of the trio. A search by air continued.

COULD BE IN BOG

Thousands of acres of boggy woodland covers the peninsula in the area where the boat was found. District folk say it is possible to be lost in the swamps for three or four days.

Both private and RCAF planes joined the Lake Erie fishing fleet in searching for the missing party. The U. S. Coast Gurad at Erie, Penn., also was put on the alert.

The 14-foot boat, believed to have been used by the party, was found Monday night on a beach on Bluff island in the bay. A hat, coat, glove and one shoe also were found near the overturned boat.

Early Monday afternoon pilot Reg Spence of Mount Hope sighted the overturned boat and said he thought he saw what could have been three bodies on a beach.

He led a search party to the spot but the "bodies" turned out to be seat cushions from the boat.

Order Inquiry Into Beating

TORONTO (CP)—Chief of detectives Alex McCathie said Monday an investigation has been ordered in a charge by a 26-year-old man that two Toronto detectives beat him with a small baseball bat Saturday night during a routine questioning.

The man, George Waridel of Toronto, went to a Toronto newspaper office and complained of the alleged beating by detectives Victor Pope and Alvin Sproule in a room over a police station. He displayed a back covered with bruises and red welts.

Waridel, who was not charged with any crime, said the detectives broke the bat hitting him with it.

Inspector McCathie said Waridel repeated the charge before him Monday at police headquarters. Sproule and Pope refused comment.

More Layoffs Ford Predicts

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—A continuing shrinkage in sales of automobiles will require further layoffs at Ford of Canada, the company's president, Rhys M. Sale announced today.

Effective June 30, when plants close for the long holiday weekend, 450 employees will go on indefinite layoff. The truck assembly line will not operate July 5 to 9. Departmental layoffs will also occur during that period. The truck line shuts down permanently July 30. Total employees affected as a result of truck line moving to Oakville will be about 750.

Today at Oakville, Ford workers received a letter from plant manager W. D. Walker announcing that Oakville workers would probably not be affected by the lay-offs.

Committee Leaves On Guatemala Inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP)—The inter-American peace committee after once calling off its investigation of the Guatemalan situation, changed its mind today and decided to go ahead despite the uncertainty as to the government situation there.

It was announced the delegates will leave for Guatemala by plane this afternoon.

A morning flight had been scheduled but at the last moment the committee announced it was postponing its investigation "until further notice because of further developments." Presumably the reason was the resignation of the military junta in Guatemala.

The decision came so suddenly that a four-engine U. S. Air Force plane was left waiting at the military air transport terminal where it had been readied to fly the committee delegates to Guatemala. Plans had called for three-day visits by the committee in Guatemale, Honduras and Nicaragua.

The committee went into a closed-door session at the Pan-American Union to hear a report by assistant state secretary Henry Holland.

Laredo Braced For Worst Flood

LAREDO, Tex. (AP)—Police in this storied border city hurriedly evacuated residents of low areas today in the face of the Rio Grande's greatest flood.

Police said an expected 64-foot crest would send flood waters boiling into the business section of this city of nearly 52,000 persons.

Across the steadily-rising, rampaging boundary river the twin Mexican city of Nuevo Laredo abandoned attempts to sandbag the levee. Workmen started moving everything possible, including the population, to higher ground.

Police expected the waters to envelop the already-closed international bridge at any moment.

Thousands of people on both sides of the U.S.-Mexico boundary fled to the hills. Nearly 100 miles north of the Rio Grande, in the rich oil-and-cattle country of far west Texas, 14 persons were believed dead after floods swept through Ozona, Tex.

Send 1,000 Soldiers To Save Cattle

FERRARA, Italy (AP) — One thousand Italian soldiers moved into the disordered province of Ferrara today to help prevent the starvation of 70,000 cattle in a two-month-long farm strike.

Army units from the Bologna district were ordered into the area as tension was heightened by a Communist-called general strike.

The troops will guard supply lines against strike violence and will feed cattle hungering because 100,000 strikers have refused to care for them unless they get higher pay.

At least 40,000 of the cattle were reported near death due to the long strike.

Report Passenger Ship Stranded On Reef

CAP-DES-ROSIERS, Que. (CP) The passenger ship N. V. Wilcox was reported stranded today on a reef near Carleton Point on Anticosti island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. All passengers were removed safely. The passengers were mostly tourists being carried to fishing sites in the area. The vessel rammed the reef Monday when its compass went out of order.

The Wilcox is a passenger-cargo vessel which circles Anticosti every three weeks.

One Cent In Pay Envelope Miner Kills 4 In Family

CANTERBURY, England (CP)—A debt-ridden coal miner murdered his wife and three children and then killed himself after he was given his pay envelope—which contained one penny — an inquest learned Monday.

The bodies of Frederick Richardson, 40, his wife Violet, 29, and his children, David, 10, Anne, 7, and Joan, 6, all dead of gas poisoning, were found by police who broke in Friday night.

In the house they found the pay envelope, the coroner said Monday, which showed a total salary of $3.61. Deductions left only the penny.

The envelope was for a week in which Richardson had worked only one day and received one-sixth of his normal weekly pay of $21.70. Deducted from this was a bill owed to the coal mine canteen, payment for a pair of boots, and the miner's regular payment to the national medical service.

LEFT TWO LETTERS

Richardson left two letters. One said, "I enclose a pay packet for a penny. Can any company beat that for audacity?

"I have destroyed the furniture because the services always taught us the scorched earth policy—that nothing shall fall into the enemy's hands."

The miner wrote that he had been given until the next day to raise $100. He added that he had taken the children's lives so they should not be left with the stigma of being a suicide's children.

Mrs. Knott Wins Curve Lake Chieftainship By 12 Votes

Mrs. Elsie Knott, 33, was elected chief of Curve Lake Indian Reservation by 12 votes on Monday evening. She won over Dalton Jacobs, the only male contender who polled 51 votes and Mrs. Reg. Muskrat, 20 votes.

Women not only featured in the running for chief but for councillors. Mrs. Elwood Coppaway, polled 93 votes, followed by Clifford Whetung and Merrit Taylor and the new chief's husband, Cecil Knott. All will remain in office for a two-year term.

It was obvious to the 270 voters —60 per cent of whom cast their ballots on Monday — that the women won because of their strong electioneering campaigns.

CHIEF'S PLATFORM

Mrs. Knott, who would not express any platform to the press before the election, now says that she will endeavour to:

1. Try to save money by cutting down on band expenses and holding to a tighter budget than has been the case heretofor.

2. Let all questions be put to a vote by the people instead of allowing the council to pass on measures as they have done in the past.

3. Visit the elderly people and take a personal interest in their problems.

Not only is Mrs. Knott a housewife with three school-age children, Cecil Jr., 15; Glenn, 13, and Rita,11, but is superintendent of the reservation United Church Sunday School, scoutmistress of the cubs, guides and scouts and owner and driver of a school bus. Mrs. Knott works through the summers at a cottage owned by Sidney Thompson of New Jersey, on Pigeon lake.

"I guess my relatives help put me into the chief's job," Mrs. Knott said today. "I am related to most of them."

The election, attended by district superintendent A. E. Adams and three Provincial policemen, ended with a buffet supper and dancing.

NEW CURVE LAKE INDIAN CHIEF, Mrs. Elsie Knott, 33, (left) and top council pollster Mrs. Elwood Coppaway, will rule not only the home but Band affairs for the next two years. They were elected on Monday evening by 60 per cent of the 270 possible band voters. Mrs. Knott is Sunday School superintendent, a cubmistress of cubs, guides and scouts and owner and operator of a school bus. Her platform policy will be, among other things, to tighten the spending of band funds, she said. (Examiner Staff Photo)

Doucett Disagreed With Deputy On Contract Prices

TORONTO (CP)—Disagreement between the Ontario highways minister and his deputy over contract prices during the last few years has been revealed to the legislature's highways investigation committee.

D. H. Storms, vice-president of the Ontario Road Builders' Association, testified Monday that he discussed the "ridiculously low" prices with both Highways Minister Doucett and J. D. Millar, former deputy minister and now deputy minister of public works.

"The minister agreed with me; Mr. Millar never agreed," said Mr. Storms.

The road builders, in a brief read by Donald E. McQuigge, president, charged the department had a "seemingly avid desire to award work at the lowest unit prices on the continent, without regard to the ultimate cost of the department."

LOW BIDS

Attorney-General Porter asked what the minister could do about the low bids. Mr. Storms said that under the present system "he couldn't do anything."

"He was in a difficult position and he has so stated to me."

Department policy is to award a contract to the lowest bidder.

Albert Wren (Lib-Lab—Kenora) said it would be reasonable to assume that Mr. Doucett should have recommended to the legislature that changes in the policy be made.

"We are treading on dangerous ground now," said Mr. Wren. "It is these things that created other difficulties."

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS

The day's session at Queen's Park also saw these developments:

1. Attorney-General Porter assumed full responsibility for the failure of highways department officials to appear before the committee in Fort William last Friday.

2. Committee chairman Kelso Roberts (PC—Toronto St. Patrick) expressed his displeasure at the absence of Mr. Doucett at Monday's session.

3. Mr. McQuigge said contractors' Christmas gifts to associates are offered "not as a bribe but as a gesture of goodwill and friendliness."

4. Mr. Porter revealed that some of the books of contractors seized during the highways investigation have not yet been released.

BECAME PROPERTY

Mr. Porter told the committee that when the warrants for seizure were issued the books legally became under the custody of the crown.

"Up to the present time some contractors have been investigated. There might be some still under investigation," the attorney-general said.

Mr. Roberts said during the committee's tour of northwestern Ontario last week that he understood all the books had been returned to the contractors.

Author Given $175,000 Libel Award

NEW YORK (AP)—Author Quentin Reynolds today won a tremendous cash award as well as a moral victory in a federal libel action against newspaper columnist Westbrook Pegler.

An award of $175,000 levied against Pegler, the Hearst Corportation and Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., was believed to be one of the largest, if not the largest libel award ever made in a U. S. court.

The jury also awarded Reynolds one dollar to compensate him for loss of earnings, damage to his reputation and mental anguish suffered over the past four years from a defamatory Pegler column on which the $500,000 suit was based.

Reynolds in the course of the seven week case had claimed he lost a fortune in the magazine and entertainment fields because of the Pegler column.

Federal judge Edward Weinfeld in charging the jury declared the column, published in 1949, was defamatory and libelous in itself as a matter of law.

"COMMON SENSE" URGED

He urged them to "use your common sense" in determining what compensation was due Reynolds for his principal claims of injury.

In effect, the jury which had been deliberating since noon Monday decided he was not injured gravely at all.

The $175,000 was awarded as punitive damages, which the judge had explained took in "actual malice . . . ill-will, spite, hatred, intent to injure" and was also designed to prevent repetition of the offence and serve as a warning to others.

For Pegler it marked the end of a carefully cherished claim that he has never been successfully sued for libel. Previous libel cases have been settled out of court with Pegler claiming he has never been assessed a penny in settlements.

CHARGES ASSESSED

The jury divided its $175,000 levy among the three defendants: $100,000 against Pegler; $50,000 against the Hearst Corporation, which distributes the Pegler columns to 186 newspapers; and $25,000 against Hearst Consolidated Publications which publishes the local Pegler outlet, the New York Journal-American.

Actually, because of protective clause in Pegler's contract, the Hearst interests and not Pegler will have to pay the fine levied against him.

Canadian Gov't Won't Take Sides On Asia

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian government will offer views to Sir Winston Churchill on the European Defence Community and the pooling of atomic information, but will not take sides on varying proposals for the defence of Southeast Asia, well-qualified sources said Monday.

Informants said the visit today of the British prime minister and Commonwealth watchdog is eagerly awaited by Prime Minister St. Laurent and his cabinet.

They are anxious to get a first-hand report of the conversations between the British statesman and President Eisenhower and make clear Canada's own views that there is an urgent need for getting France to approve EDC in order to strengthen the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

SEE ENDORSEMENT

The Canadian government, therefore, is likely to endorse heartily one aspect of the Churchill - Eisenhower communique in which they expressed determination to make West Germany "an equal partner" in the Western world, to put German soldiers into Western defences and to throw their weight behind an effort to get French approval of EDC.

Informants said the Canadian government will also endorse the Churchill - Eisenhower view that Britain and the U. S. would benefit from technical co - operation in atomic energy "to the fullest extent allowed" by U.S. law, and that this co-operation should be extended also to Canada.

Sir Winston, accompanied by Foreign Secretary Eden, is scheduled to arrive at suburban Rockcliffe airport at 5.45 p. m. EDT.

Crowds Give Churchill Big Ovation

By WARREN ROGERS, Jr.

WASHINGTON (AP) — They came by the hundreds to have a look at him, perhaps the last, and he obliged with all the rugged grace of a mellowed old bulldog.

They cheered and applauded from the picket fence of the White House to the sleek lobby of the Hotel Statler to the austere gates of the British embassy.

"Attaboy, Churchill!" they cried, forgetting his knighthood, his 79 years and the decorum due the prime minister of Great Britain.

They cheered the man and the symbol—the living pink and white, brandy-nipping, cigar - chomping legend of British-American solidarity.

"I am quite certain," he told them at a luncheon press conference Monday, "that half the evils of the world can be prevented by our going hand-in-hand together and, if necessary, standing shoulder to shoulder."

Sir Winston had ignored his cold meat and potato salad luncheon to prepare his replies to the written questions submitted. His shell glasses slipped halfway down his short nose, his lips pursed in concentration, he read the questions and sorted them in stacks in front of him.

The crowd of newspaper men and women applauded and laughed as Churchill chuckled through another of what he called "one of my regular luncheons with the Washington press corps."

As he worked through the questions, he quoted from a speech he had made years before in England. Quoting yourself, he confided, wwas a good idea. It not only saved you the trouble of making up something new—"also it shows what a far-sighted politician you are."

He also gave out with some political philosophy:

"I am not going to choose between Republicans and Democrats; I want the lot. . . ."

"Politicians who can't face unpopularity are really not worth having. They look like it for a time, but afterwards you will find that you have had much the worst of the deal. . ."

There was general agreement that he had lost none of his power over words, nor his charm with people.

Small Boy Escapes When Struck By Car

Ian Murray, eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Murray, 139½ Hunter St., escaped serious injury Monday evening when struck by a car at Sheridan and Hunter Sts., at 5:22 p.m. He was struck by a west-bound car and thrown to the north sidewalk.

The driver of the car, John Murnie 18, of R.R. 1, Cavan, said the child rushed from behind a car stopped in a line of traffic moving east on Hunter St. An unidentified woman, presumed to be a nurse at the Quaker Oats Co., applied first aid to the child who jumped up immediately after being struck crying, "I'm not hurt, I'm not hurt".

PCs Bob Menzies and W. G. Scott investigated and the child was taken to Dr. Ralph Clark for further treatment. He was not seriously injured but received a large bruise on the right side of the head when he was knocked to the pavement.

No Water Main On Maniece Ave. Board Decides

The board of works Monday night decided it would not be feasible to lay a water main on Maniece Ave.

At the request of the board of health, city council had asked the utilities commission how much the proposed water main would cost.

The commission replied that in view of the fact it had already undertaken to lay a water main to the Simpsons-Sears property on Lansdowne St. at the request of the city, they would lay a main on Maniece Ave., provided the city assumed the carrying charges for unoccupied property on the avenue.

The main would be 1,020 feet long with one fire hydrant, the letter stated, but there would be 1,368 feet of non-revenue-producing frontage. (Total frontage includes property on both sides of the avenue.) Cost to the city would be $260 a year.

City clerk E. A. Outram said it would be setting a precedent for the city to pay the carrying charges. City solicitor W. F. Huycke, QC, said he didn't think the municipal board would approve a bylaw authorizing the main if there were not sufficient revenue from adjacent property to pay for it.

Films Council Execs To Meet

Bill Graff, chief librarian at the city library, will attend the executive meeting of the federation of film councils of eastern Ontario, in Kingston, Saturday.

At present, 22 film councils are members of the federation which was formed in 1946 and of which Mr. Graff is president. The federation has about 450 films and in the last three years bought $9,000 of films.

However it now takes three years for each film to reach all councils, which is too long a period Mr. Graff said. Therefore the federation will establish two units for the purpose of purchasing and pooling films.

Mr. Graff will also direct a three-day film workshop, July 12-15 at Queen's University. Attending the workshop will be representatives from film councils, Home and School associations, service clubs, government departments, civic and rural groups.

Anyone interested in film showing can attend, said Mr. Graff, and should contact him.

The workshop is sponsored by Queen's University, the Ontario Association of Film Councils and the Department of education.

Chiang Getting Defence Pact

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP) — An influential Taipeh newspaper said today President Chiang Kai-shek and Gen. James A. Van Fleet have agreed tentatively on a mutual defence pact linking Nationalist China and the United States.

There was no confirmation from any source.

The usually well-informed United Daily News said:

1. Chiang and Van Fleet had agreed on a pact which would leave the Nationalists free to attack Red China and would not commit the United States to support such an attack.

2. The United States would agree to protect major offshore island bases such as Quemoy and the Tachens.

Quemoy, near Red-held Amoy, lies across the Formosa straits. The Tachens, northern anchor of the Nationalist island chain, lie roughly 200 miles north of Formosa.

Parks Commissioner Arrives In Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Oscar Pearson, city parks commissioner, today submitted his resignation to board of control.

He said the criticism of the parks department during the last few months had nothing to do with his resignation.

Mr. Pearson joined the city parks department six years ago. He became commissioner last year.

SUNDAY SPORT

Seldom known to duck an issue, Mr. Lamport was the only city council member to support Sunday sport when it came to debate in 1950.

Clergymen of major denominations and the city's three dailies voiced strong opposition to Sunday sports in Toronto. But when votes were counted the yes votes numbered 6,300 more than those against and Mr. Lamport had a board of control seat with a margin of 440 votes.

He started his political career in 1936 when he ran for alderman and was defeated. The following year he bounced back successfully. Later in the same year he became the first and only elected Liberal in the then-Tory Toronto provincial riding of St. David.

He lost this seat in 1943 but in 1946 returned to the political wars and was elected an alderman. He remained in that post two years before successfully contesting a seat on board of control.

under the United Nations charter and promised to support them with assistance "when desired by the peoples of the affected countries."

6. They declared their intention, jointly and with other allied governments, to build up and maintain "the spiritual, economic and military strength" necessary to persue the purposes they set forth and they said they would promote fuller and freer interchange of goods and services which would "benefit all participants."

Eisenhower walked with Churchill to the prime minister's waiting car.

WARM HANDCLASP

The two men shook hands warmly and Churchill told the president, "Goodbye and good luck."

"The same to you," said Eisenhower with a friendly smile, "and I'll send those documents over in 30 minutes.

The final Churchill-Eisenhower talk lasted about 45 minutes.

A joint statement was to be issued early this afternoon.

But it is unlikely anything in the statement will be more dramatic or significant that Sir Winston's remarks at a loudly enthusiastic press luncheon Monday.

There the ageing prime minister threw off his years, presented the wartime Churchill to an audience of more than 800 working journalists, radio and picture people and urged that all steps be taken to seek a peaceful co-existence with Communist world.

TO PLAN DEFENCE

But at the same time he said he and President Eisenhower had agreed to start planning for defence of Indo-China, should current peace efforts by France fail, and for preservation of the peace if a cease-fire is achieved.

Meanwhile he emphasized his belief that the great hope of world peace was in the maintenance of "the unbreakable unity of Britain and the United States."

Sir Winston and Foreign Secretary Eden are to fly to Ottawa today in an RCAF plane in company with External Affairs Minister Pearson.

Pearson flew to Washington late Monday and spent Monday evening in the company of Australia's foreign minister, Richard G. Casey, who is here en route home from the Geneva conference.

Sir Winston and his party were entertained at the British embassy at dinner. Today they will pay a final call at the White House and leave after lunch for Ottawa.

Allow Indians To Buy Drinks

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario's 36,000 Indians will hold the right to buy and consume intoxicating beverages in licensed public places effective July 1, R. J. Cudney, assistant provincial secretary, said today.

A proclamation to that effect, complying with a request made May 27 by the Ontario Cabinet, has been passed by the federal government. The proclamation is expected to be published in the June 27 issue of the Canada Gazette.

The proclamation does not extend to Indians the right to purchase beer or wine in Liquor Control Board stores, or in the stores of wine producers.

Directives have been mailed notifying licence holders in Ontario that the appropriate section of the Indian Act comes into force next Thursday.

The government action puts Ontario Indians on the same footing as those in British Columbia, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland.

The right of Indians to drink was recommended at the last session of the legislature by the select committee on Indian affairs. Committee members said at the time there is no medical evidence to suggest Indians are less capable of using alcohol properly than other races.

Arbenz, Rutledge said, was confined under heavy guard Monday to his private residence in the suburbs of Guatemala City, with an armored car stationed in front. However, the Guatemalan government radio in a broadcast later Monday said the ex-president was flying to exile in Argentina.

Rutledge messaged that developments in the capital were "so rapid that general confusion reigns." He said censorship, lifted Sunday night following Arbenz' resignation, had been clamped back on tight, "due mainly to the confusion."

He added that U.S. ambassador John Peurifoy was scheduled to confer with Diaz some time Monday.

Fred MacMurray Weds Actress June Haver

OJAI, Calif. (AP)—Actress June Haver and actor Fred MacMurray were quietly married Monday night by a judge in picturesque Ojai Valley Inn.

They slipped away from the film capital for a double ring, civil ceremony.

The civil rites, churchmen have said, will deprive the actress of the sacraments of the Roman Catholic Church, of which she is a devout member. This is because she was wed previously in the church to musician Jimmy Zito and the brief marriage ended in divorce. MacMurray is a Presbyterian.

BOTH EXPERIENCED GRIEF

For both Miss Haver, 28, and MacMurray, 45, the marriage culminated a romance each had entered after heartbreak. The actor's wife of 17 years, Lillian, died a year ago.

Miss Haver became engaged to Dr. John Duzik, a Beverly Hills dentist, after her divorce from Zito, but in 1949 Dr. Duzik died. Friends said grief over his death was one of the reasons she entered a convent early last year to study to become a nun. After seven months she decided to return to Hollywood.

770 Employees Idle At Plant

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Close to 700 employees of Kelvinator Company of Canada Limited ceased work Monday as 440 production workers went on strike and picketed a company plant and warehouses.

In a prepared statement the company later charged the strike by the United Automobile Workers (CIO) members is illegal.

The statement said the company is "preparing to take advantage of every legal remedy by application to the Ontario labor relations board, court injunction or criminal prosecution."

The company claimed a strike vote taken June 24 was illegal in that employees admitted to the meeting were "hand-picked" and many members of the bargaining unit were "refused" admission.

Union officials said the strike is the latest move in a demand for a work-wage agreement. Negotiations have been in progress for 10 months.

Summer Theatre Play Hit Excellent Entertainment

"A Lady Mislaid" or my missus is missing turned out to be excellent entertainment.

Presented by the Peterborough Summer Theatre, the play, second in the season, opened in Queen Mary auditorium Monday evening. The cast played to a full and responsive house.

This is the play's North American premiere and was first presented by H. J. Balow at the St. Martin's theatre, London, in 1950.

Written by Kenneth Horne, the play's dialogue is witty and the plot, dependent on situation for comedy, has many ingenious twists.

Its chief qualities are high spirits and suspense which develops into an amusing thriller-comedy.

There are no really electrifying performances, though, Margaret Braidwood, Margaret Griffin, Julia Hand, Robert Shirriff, Ronald Bailey, John Douglas and Peggy Spencer are all very pleasant to watch.

SEARCHING FOR BODY

Soon after the curtain rises you discover that the police are digging in the garden for the body of a missing woman. But the tempo of the play is set at the beginning with the appearance of the first character, a charwoman named Mrs. Small, and her opening remarks, "Well fancy that, 'avin a baby on a bus! What will they think of next?"

From then on its laughter all the way.

They play is set in an old manor in the English countryside, where two sisters, Jennifer and Esther, have moved hoping to find transquility. Jennifer is the artistic type, a writer, while Esther, is steady, reliable, and sympathetic to men. Mrs. Small is their garrulous cleaning woman.

Instead of finding quiet, they discover the police, including a handsome detective, digging for the missing body or the dismembered remains of the wife of the former tenant.

Esther is quite certain that there wouldn't be room in the house for a body to be hidden, until Mrs. Small observes, "Ar-- not in one piece there wouldn't".

Then Mr. Smith, the former owner of the house, returns and as Mrs. Small puts it, "Funny 'ow they always return to the scene of the crime". The audience is kept in delightful suspense until the surprise ending in the last scene.

MINOR CONFLICT

There is a minor confict in the play between Jennifer and her fiancee, who advices her to leave her writing, get married and raise children.

All scenes are staged in the living room—an ideal country room of oak beams and chintz—and the action is climaxed in 24 hours.

Of the players, Margaret Braidwood, as the sympathetic sister, Esther, succeeded admirably in capturing the proper mood. Miss Braidwood's low and musical voice is very easy on the ears. Twenty - three - year - old Julia Hand, in the character part of the Cockney cleaning woman, was very comic. Ronald Bailey was superb as the diffident mysterious Mr. Smith. Margaret Griffin did an interesting job as the lovely tempermental writer.

The others, Robert Shirriff, John Douglas and Peggy Spencer, obviously had their hearts in their work.

The play was staged by Harry Geldard, and the setting was designed and executed by Wilfred Pegg.

"A Mislaid Lady" has its lagging moments, but for the most part it has wit and style. E. S.

Rotarians Review Year's Work

CAMPBELLFORD (ENS) — Reports of committees comprised the business portion of the meeting of the Campbellford Rotary club here Monday, when committee heads told their fellow Rotarians just what the club had done during the past year.

Among other things, the club spent more than $1,000 on crippled children's work in the town during the past year, and a great deal of work was done free of charge. The club praised the cooperation they had received from the Northumberland and Durham Health Unit.

More than $1,300 was spent on community service, which embraces a number of worthwhile activities. The sponsorship of baseball, hockey and swimming cost the club about $400 during the year and members have planned a program along the same lines for this year.

At the present time, the club is launching classes in swimming in the town, under the supervision of Allan Taylor, a member of the teaching staff of Campbellford public school. Mr. Taylor is fully qualified as an instructor under the Red Cross requirements, and the Red Cross is co-operating with the Rotary club in sponsoring the classes and paying the instructor.

Registration for the swimming classes will be held in the Red Cross rooms on July 2 and 3 from 10 a.m. to 12 a.m. and from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. Classes will commence on July 6 with instruction in swimming from 10 to 12 in the mornings and supervised swimming under Mr. Taylor from 2 to 5 in the afternoon, Monday 5 in the afternoon. from Monday to Friday. Children between the ages 6 to 15 inclusive are eligible.

Monday was the last day in the chair for president, C. H. (Bud) Davidson, who will hand over his gavel to president-elect William McComb at the next meeting.

William Dawson reported that the scouts and cubs were doing well, and praised the efforts of Francis (Danny) Frederick, who had taken over the cubs and put them on a firm footing.

Tax Collector Enters Ministry

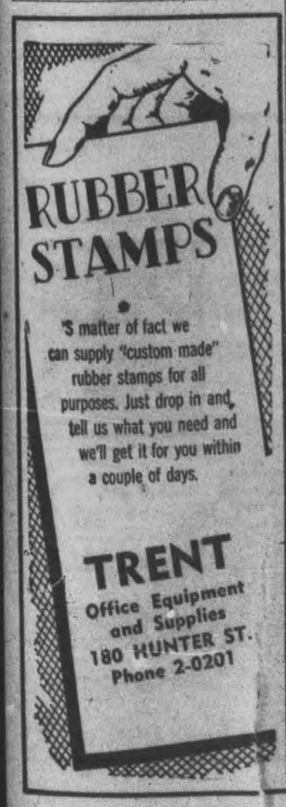
COBOURG (ENS)—E. A. Hircock, tax collector and assessor for the town of Cobourg last night advised the town council that he would be resigning his municipal post in September, in order to enter the ministry of the Presbyterian Church to satisfy an ambition that went back to when he was 10 years old.

Mr. Hircock has been tax collector for 17 years, of which he spent ten years as both collector and assessor.

"Since I was 10 years old, I have wanted to enter the service of the Lord," said the 66-year-old man.

"It is indeed a loss to the town of Cobourg", said Mayor John D. Burnett. "But the loss of the town of Cobourg will be a gain for the people in British Columbia, with whom he will be working and with spirit of the Crusader he will make a profound impression on the rel gious life of the people in that province. We wish him all success in his new position in life," said Cobourg's Mayor.

A bit of Cobourg goes with Mr. Hircock said councillor Jeff Rolph. Other members of the council spoke on similar lines. Mr. Hircock has been representative elder of the Presbyterian church here for many years and is also acting clerk of the Presbytery of Peterborough.



Firemen Extinguish Garbage Blaze

CAMPBELLFORD (ENS)—Firemen were called to the town dump again on Monday afternoon to extinguish an area of garbage which was blazing merrily. Two lines of hose were used off the booster pump on the truck, with water being drawn from the nearby Trent Canal.

Whether the fire was deliberately set, or cause by spontaneous combustion was a topic of discussion, but no concrete decisions were reached. Citizens have been asked not to light fires at the dump, but the fire department has been called to the spot four times within the past few weeks.

Open Centennial

KITCHENER (CP)—The week-long city centennial was officially opened Monday by Lieutenant-Governor L. O. Breithaupt of Ontario at a ceremony in front of city hall. Later Mr. Breithaupt, a native of Kitchener, cut the 800-pound birthday cake and girl guides distributed it.

Summer Torpor, Peterborough

People who live here think nothing of it; it is so usual to them. Outdoors and residents newly arrived can hardly conceal their astonishment when school is out and June ends. Peterborough is a sober-sided, hard-working industrial city three-quarters of the year, and with a highly-developed conscience about duty, the job, the church, the service club, the community. Then June comes and the town begins to seep out of its tight-sewn seams. The stern voice of duty becomes only a whisper—and, more astonishing, even the most moral of Peterborough people conscientiously turn their deaf ears to it, and listen instead to grass growing, heat rising from the back porch, lake water lapping at the cottage, and the cooing of the moon. They go through the motions of work, but it is the emotion of holiday which takes all their attention.

* * *

Other people in the other places dream of a two-week holiday, or of weekends at a resort, but until the fortnight of holiday or the weekend comes, they live life as usual. Our point is that here the whole city turns its back on the strenuous routine of the rest of the year. The place becomes fully what it in fact is in summer, a resort, and Peterborough people use it so, as well as their tourists. Even the store and restaurant folk, well-pleased with the tourist dollars that come in, and working hard to please the visitors, sweat most over the cottage cookstove, the outboard motor that refuses to start, or the boat they are refinishing. We suspect that one of the reasons that tourists like coming to this city and district is that the commercial people catering to their needs are really on holiday, too, and can share a fellow-feeling for sun, outings and shirt-sleeves.

* * *

The really remarkable difference between Peterborough and other cities is this: its citizens live in a resort and a fantastic number have their own cottages which they go to every day, not just on weekends, and which they reach every afternoon after work in less than an hour's drive. "Summer holidays" may mean only a fortnight to most other people but they mean the whole summer to all Peterborough people.

* * *

The relaxation of tensions, the moribund state of local organizations—religious, social, cultural and municipal (the Council meets only once a month in summer for instance)—the turning of the back on all routine save what is necessary to the maintenance of life and the pursuit of happiness; these are characteristic of summer Peterborough. And it is this that outsiders (other than tourists) find disconcerting. They know Peterburians to be hard-working, serious and responsible people. To find them acting as if it were unnatural, against Divine injunction, to do anything at all beyond an essential minimum, is startling. As well try to sell a toothpick to a hen as a brush at the door to a Peterborough housewife in July or August. In fact, no important piece of private or public business is ever transacted in Peterborough in summer. It would be positively immoral to do so.

* * *

This contrast between Peterborough in summer and winter, schizophrenic as outsiders may think it, is the saving grace of Peterburians. It is probably the only way their strong moral conscience and heavy sense of duty are prevented from driving them crazy. Not that they become immoral in summer and make of it a debauch. No, they have the happy faculty of making summer holiday all summer a moral necessity.

Well, the heat's on, school's out, Peterborough's summer torpor begins. Hurrah!

Canada In Asia

The situation in Southeast Asia carries risks of wider conflagration, as Mr. Anthony Eden told the British House of Commons recently. His full reference to the war in Indo-China was grave, "Seldom have I known a situation in which the risks of wider conflagration should be more apparent to all." The ominous undertones of this statement were immediately magnified in the public ear, and caught because of the failure of the Geneva conference to the present time. Yet because the risk of wider conflagration must be apparent even to Premier Chou En-lai, there is hope that the Indo-China war will be either contained or suppressed. The meeting of the Chinese and French premiers at Berne held out some prospect of a cease-fire, and so does the visit of Chou to Prime Minister Nehru in India.

The United States does not like many of Nehru's attitudes; in its eyes Indian policy is pink and therefore bad, and in its relations with Communist regimes India seems to be an appeaser. We hold no such view, nor, do we think, do Canadians generally. India is a great Asian country and Premier Nehru is not a fool. (His Government's strong measures against Communism within India show he recognizes the dangers inherent in political Communism.) There can be no settlement in Southeast Asia imposed by Western nations, and if India will take the leadership in negotiations about Indo-China, there is hope not only that they may be successful, but also that they will be liberal.

Canada has no military commitments in Southeast Asia. True, Canadian troops are in Korea, in response to U.N. requirements, but Canada will not, we hope, need to accept further direct involvement in Asia. Indirectly, Canada is strongly interested in Asia, her trade and problems (hence her support of the Colombo Plan), but politically, Canadian Asian interests should be funnelled through Asian members of the Commonwealth. It would be sound Canadian policy to support and attend a Commonwealth Foreign Ministers' meeting to discuss the immediate situation in Indo-China and particularly the long and large problem generally of Southeast Asia. Such a conference should assemble in one of the Asian countries, not in Canada. Canada should resist any pressure that it take the initiative.

Canada is not a Pacific power. It is not a Power at all. Because it has had certain diplomatic successes and has in the last decade achieved notable prestige abroad is no reason for it now to meddle in affairs which are in theory and in fact not its proper business. It is not Canada's duty to shuttle troops all over the world, or to use diplomatic threats which might make this unavoidable. Canada's NATO commitments and military promises are as much as she can fulfil. Let the goodwill of Canada be felt in Asia, but not its diplomatic teeth.

Guatemala And Panama

South of Guatemala—three small countries south of it—is the republic of Panama. Within that country is the Panama Canal Zone, an American treaty property vital to the security and commerce of the United States. It cannot be denied that the U.S. is pleased that the Communist-dominated government of Guatemala is being threatened by forces known as anti-Communist. It is uncomfortable to the American State Department that there should be a Red government on the North American continent, and particularly one so geographically close to the Panama Canal.

Jacobo Arbenz had been President of Guatemala since 1950, succeeding his friend and revolutionary colleague Arevalo. The course of the Arbenz government must have been a worry to post-war Americans who have had anything to do with Guatemala—for instance, the big coffee and fruit interests, and the State Department. For, increasingly, the party which has been in power since the revolution of 1944 has had to depend on Communists for support and even leadership since its land reform policies have been inimical to the powerful and rich estate owners. Working with the Administration, the Communists have been able to control the chief offices and means of propaganda, and thereby to gain their own ends.

The Guatemalan Government's tolerance of Communists has seriously disturbed the U.S., particularly in view of the American fear that Communists would use Guatemala to infiltrate into other Latin American countries, including Panama. Since the Spring the leftist Guatemalan Government has been buying arms from Czechoslovakia, a Communist country, and Washington has shipped large quantities of arms and ammunition to Honduras and Nicaragua, the two neighbouring republics which are in the pocket of the U.S.A. The whole affair has become a messy business.

The replacement of leftist Arbenz by the army chief-of-staff Diuz may spell the end of Communist influence, and of the popping civil war.

NOTES AND COMMENT

'Can You Live With Your Heart?' asks the title of a magazine article. Wouldn't be without it for the world!

How can it be explained that movie, radio and television comedians grow fabulously rich on the same jokes that killed vaudeville?

One way to take your mind off your troubles for a while is to go fishing and become the centre of population for the mosquitos of half the county.

Bulgaria now has a law which says that no woman can be compelled to push a wheelbarrow containing a burden of over 220 pounds. But of course some of those high-spirited Balkan girls will go on pushing each other around just for fun.

COMEDIAN SEES CRICKET

Groucho Marx At Lord's

SMART women, and men in dark suits for business lunches, strolled past the mirrors and pink sofas in the hotel lounge. Mr. Marx, with lady secretary following, came across travelling fast like a shark through the shoals of porters and pageboys — a small athletic figure with pale, blue suit, blue shirt, white tie, cigar between teeth and on his head a large white cap of the sort Gene Sarazen used to wear for golf. We greeted him, and together made for the door. As we approached it, he put a hand out to slow us down for a moment: "Cricket, eh?" he said flatly and then headed towards a taxi.

✧ ✧ ✧

OUR ATTEMPTS at ordinary conversation seemed unnecessary as Mr. Marx sat there, looking wary and sardonic, smoking away at his cigar. We said we hoped he wouldn't be bored coming to Lord's with us, that it wasn't a very important game, just the M.C.C. playing Cambridge University — like Yale and the Dodgers — and that Cambridge would be fielding.

"Fielding?" said Mr. Marx abstractedly. "Didn't he write 'Tom Brown's Schooldays'?" Well, no, he wrote "Tom Jones." "Tom Jones' Schooldays?" said Mr. Marx, looking out at the Edgware-road.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE TAXI drew up at the Grace gates. Mr. Marx was first out. He offered to pay for the taxi, holding out a neat brown hand with two florins in it: with this gesture somehow, everyone relaxed. We bought his and Miss Hartford's tickets.

"Come on, let's go," he commanded. We stepped forward into the grounds as he wheeled round, cigar held in front of him, travelling through the gates.

He accompanied us around the back of the silent stands, looking marvellously incongruous in his white cap. Could there really be a game on, he asked: a baseball game in New York could be heard blocks away. He glanced sideways as we passed at the notice on "Q" stand which says MEMBERS AND FRIENDS, remarking: "That's the most ambiguous thing I've ever heard."

✧ ✧ ✧

WE ROUNDED the back of the Pavilion and there it was. The ground was practically empty: a hundred people outside the Tavern, a few in the stands, twenty or thirty Members in front of the Pavilion. The players, one of them an Indian in a pink turban, stood in two motionless groups waiting for a new batsman. The scoreboard said 74 to 5. The place was quite silent. It looked like rain.

We sat down in the front seat of "A" stand: we were alone there. Mr. Marx's eyes went round. "Is it always as crowded as this? Does it get enough money to pay for the ball?" he continued, observing the scene. "What a wonderful cure for insomnia. If you can't sleep here you really need an analyst. Does Oxford do this too? Doesn't that Maharajah with the whiskers get tired pitching? Even the men in the tradesmen's coats are trying not to watch it. Umpires, eh?"

✧ ✧ ✧

HE NOTICED the small crowd in front of the Tavern, asked if that was where they put the dead bodies. We explained there was a bar there open all day. How long did the game go on? Eleven-thirty to six-thirty. "Boy, by six-thoity they must be really loaded," he reflected.

We began to talk seriously about sports: he asked whether we'd ever attended a ball game and, hearing that we once had, questioned us closely to establish exactly which one it had been. He was sure cricket was a good game, once you learned it. He discussed tennis, said his son had ranked twelfth in the United States. Mentioned that he'd seen Budge Patty, who is a friend of his, in Paris.

He questioned us on amateurs and professionals, then asked how English society had changed since the war; from that he mentioned the recent Supreme Court decision about the education of Negroes in the United States. We asked whether the Southern States would be able to get around it: the drift of the times was against them, he thought.

"And children don't think like their fathers," he remarked sagely. His conversation on such subjects was mellow and tolerant, with only the faintest hint of other possibilities.

✧ ✧ ✧

WOULD MR. MARX like to visit the Pavilion? On the way, a spectator leaned over with his score-card. "It is Mr. Groucho Marx, isn't it?" Groucho sighed with a sudden accusation: "Were you the guy making all the noise back there?"

As we approached the door of the Pavilion, we explained that this really was the altar of English cricket, a venerable place. "Don't worry," he said, advancing into the sanctum, "I've met stuffed shoits before," and we entered the famous Long Room, its air laden with a smell of linoleum and mellow dignity. Groucho sniffed and looked around.

"Where's Haabs?" he asked. "That's the only name I know in this business." We showed him the large painting of W.G. and other portraits. Suddenly he leaned forward, "I never knew girls played cricket." We asked what he meant. He gestured with his cigar at an eighteenth-century painting of a boy with fair hair standing among trees and leaning on one of those curved bats.

✧ ✧ ✧

GROUCHO inspected it closer. Under the painting was written: "Youth with Cricket Bat, c. 1790," "Youth, huh? 1790, eh? I guess this homo business started earlier than we thought."

From time to time, Mr. Marx glanced out through the closed windows at the game. "How long can they be without running?" We said it could be a matter of days, theoretically. "Is that so? And at night they play with phosphorescent balls?" He shook his head in slow amazement.

✧ ✧ ✧

MR. MARX was than introduced to a high official of the M.C.C. accustomed to dealing with visiting celebrities. "You over here on holidays, are you, Mr. Marx?" It came quite naturally, like an easy drive through the covers: "I was until I saw this game."

As we left, the doorman suggested that we show Mr. Marx the Museum. Groucho's eyebrows shot up. The doorman reminisced enigmatically: "We had Mr. Rockefeller here, too — he used a lot of baseball terms." Groucho, late-cutting through the slips: "But he was richer than I am."

✧ ✧ ✧

OUT IN THE street he bent down to make a funny noise to a child in a pushchair. He looked happy but he had never actually smiled the whole afternoon.

The next day we called to say goodbye. There he was with Miss Hartford, standing outside the hotel waiting for a car to take him to the airport. He had on a neat brown trilby and no one recognised him.

He and Miss Hartford climbed into a large car. They had not much time to get to London Airport. As they were leaving, Groucho flung open the door. "Can I drop you any place?" We said no, we were going in the other direction. "Cable me the result of that game," he called. (World copyright reserved. Special to the Peterborough Examiner from the London Observer.)

An American Opinion: HAY-MAKING

Letters To The Editor

SHALL THE GIRLS PAY TOO?

Sir: As you are no doubt aware, bachelors like myself are required to pay poll tax, amounting to $5 per annum. (Incidentally this might be cheaper in the long run; who knows?).

Be that as it may, my contention is this: Why not tax single girls as well?

Nowadays, girls in factories are demanding equal pay with men for equal ability — more and more girls are invading the once sacred precincts of men's activities; we find them taking up such careers as doctors, lawyers, business women, etc.. In short, they now expect in this day and age equal rights with men.

They claim, (and I have no quarrel with that), that they can do almost any job as good or better than a mere male. So why shouldn't these lady bachelors be required to pay Poll Tax?

I write this at the risk of stirring up a veritable hornets' nest! Thank goodness it is 1954 and not 30 or 40 years ago, or I might be visited by a delegation of irate females wielding long-handled gamps and long hat-pins, demanding, as Shylock once did, a "pound of flesh"!!

Yours truly (with heart in mouth!!)
GEAROID O'TUILLE
(GERALD TULLY)

OPPOSES FLUORIDATION

Sir: Your editorial of the 24th inst. entitled "Fluoridation Here and Now' would seem to indicate that you have only read up one side of the story, the "Sodium Fluoride" that it is proposed to put in our drinking water is a waste product of the aluminum refineries; it was at first allowed to escape from their chimneys in the form of gas which poisoned the atmosphere for miles around, and killed 19 persons before it was discovered what caused the so-called mysterious epidemic; so the authorities got busy and stopped them disposing of their waste in this way.

They then produced it in the form of a white powder and sold it as a cleaning agent to the cleaners; it was also sold as a very efficient poison for roaches, bed bugs, mice and rats, but it was being produced in such large quantities that some other wholesale outlet had to be found, so a subsidiary company was formed to convince the public that it was a preservative for children's teeth preventing tooth decay.

The floride that is beneficial to the teeth is an entirely different substance; it is "Organic calcium floride" and when absorbed by nature into the vegetation or into the water supply it is beneficial but is an entirely different substance to "Sodium Floride" useful for poisoning vermin and etching glass.

In Brantford a slight improvement in children's teeth has been observed in recent years due to the fact that parents have cut down somewhat in the amount of candies and soft drinks—that their children are allowed to do away with. On the other hand the death rate from heart trouble and cancer has greatly increased and quite recently a deputation waited on the Brantford city council asking that the practice of putting this poison be discontinued.

A Peterborough lady having relatives living there gets very sick every time she visits there, and blames her sickness on the poison in the drinking water. It is a well known fact that some of us are allergic to certain substances that do not affect others, so why in the name of common sense should the whole community be compelled to drink poisoned water that may shorten their lives in order that the aluminum refineries may benefit?

The juveniles under eight years of age who are supposed to benefit comprise only ten per cent of the population and the average child only consumes about half a pint of water per day but millions of gallons are pumped through the main every day so more than 10,000 gallons would be medicated for each half pint used for the purpose for which all this expense is entailed, one pound of floride produces 116,000 doses and this white powder is sold to the cleaners at 40 cents per pound; therefore it has been estimated that in one year less than one pound would be used by all the children in Peterborough and the cost to the taxpayers $8,000 or $10,000.

They succeeded in foisting the project on some 800 communities in the U.S.A., but some 200 have had it discontinued and when they did succeed in getting it into the water it was always done over the heads of the people. Any places where it was put to the popular vote it was defeated 3 to 1.

If some parents would like to experiment at giving their children rat poison, why not let them buy it in diluted form from the drug store if such procedure is not illegal?

Looked at from another angle, what a grand opportunity an enemy would have to subversively take over the water supply and poison the whole community by putting large doses in the drinking water from the supply that they themselves had so conveniently provided stored up in the waterworks power house.

Enclosed find a pamphlet on the subject by Dr. W. J. McCormick, M.D., of Toronto, who has taken the trouble to make a real study of the subject and gives facts and figures obtained by study, investigation and personal experiment. Too many medical and dental associations do not personally investigate but just repeat what some other so-called authority has stated who in turn is doing the same thing, as it is just human nature to want to jump on the band waggon and do what seems to be the popular thing to do at the moment for fear of appearing different or eccentric, and as the Chinese say "Losing Face."

TAXPAYER.

(Ed. Note: The pamphlet enclosed, written by a Dr. W. J. McCormick of Toronto, bears obvious signs of prejudice. Dr. McCormick's credentials as an authority on the subject are not established. We wish to mention again that both the Canadian Medical Association and the Canadian Dental Association have given their approval to fluoridation of municipal water supplies, in controlled measures. We hesitate to say that this is "jumping on the band waggon". The repeated references in the letter to sodium fluoride as a "poison" lead us to observe that many so-called "poisons" are frequently used by doctors and others, and are efficacious in proper amounts. Such use is made of the poison strychnine.)

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

David blessed the Lord before all the congregation: and David said, Blessed be thou, Lord God of Israel our father, for ever and ever. Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty: for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine; thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head above all. Both riches and honour come of thee, and thou reignest over all: and in thine hands is power and might; and in thine hand it is to make great, and to give strength unto all. Now therefore, our God, we thank thee, and praise thy glorious name.

But who am I, and what is my people, that should be able to offer so willingly after this sort? for all things come of thee, and of thine own have we given thee . . . O Lord our God, all this store that we have prepared to build thee an house for thine holy name cometh of thine hand, and is all thine own. (I Chron. 29:10-14, 16.)

✧ ✧ ✧

Thy way, O God, is in the sanctuary: who is so great a God as our God? (Ps. 77:13.)

✧ ✧ ✧

Then Paul stood in the midst of Mars' hill, and said, Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious. For as I passed by, and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, TO THE UNKNOWN GOD. Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you. God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands; neither is worshipped with men's hands, as though he needed any thing, seeing he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things. (Acts. 17:22-25.)

Psychiatric Ward

(Windsor Star)

Members of the Board of Control are to be commended for approving Metropolitan Hospital's plan for the erection of a psychiatric wing. It is a good deal for the city, from a straight financial viewpoint.

Federal and provincial grants in total of $300,000 will pay entirely for its construction. All that will be necessary here is the raising of $30,000 by private or public means to furnish it. Thus the community will be getting a $300,000 asset for an outlay of but $30,000. The province will supply and pay a psychiatrist, a graduate nurse and a clerk.

But this is a project the value of which cannot be computated in dollars and cents. There is a dire need in this city for psychiatric facilities. Many people are going without this sort of care, or with inadequate care, merely because of lack of facilities. The psychiatric ward long has been required. The need is so acute every possible haste should be made with its erection.

A BRITISH OPINION

Study Increased Remuneration For City Fathers

City Must Penalize Aldermen Who Miss Committee Meetings Solicitor Rules

City solicitor W. F. Huycke, QC, told the board of works Monday night that a recommendation of the legal and reception committee not to penalize aldermen who were absent from special meetings "would not hold water."

As an alternative, he presented a draft bylaw that provided for payment for each meeting, in place of an annual salary.

Mr. Huycke's alternative was described by Ald. Gordon Powell, chairman of the legal and reception committee, as a "figment of his imagination."

MIGHT REDUCE PENALTY

Explaining the purpose of his proposed bylaw, Mr. Huycke said that while council might reduce the present penalty for non-attendance from $10 to $5 a meeting, provincial legislation required that some deduction be made.

(Council members have said it was unfair to penalize members who missed special meetings. While there might not be an excuse for missing regular meetings, it has been argued, it was sometimes impossible to attend special meetings, especially on short notice.)

Mr. Huycke explained that the provincial legislature had passed an amendment in 1952, providing for a sliding scale of payments for each meeting, in place of an annual salary. For a city of Peterborough's size payments were not to exceed $12. (Aldermen are now paid $500 a year.)

Any change in the present bylaw would have to be approved by the minister of municipal affairs, Mr. Huycke said. Ministerial approval would not be required for the bylaw which he had prepared under the 1952 amendment.

"Under this new bylaw we would still be penalized if we missed a meeting," Ald. Harold Rehill pointed out. "That wasn't the intention of the resolution."

MUST BE DEDUCTION

"The resolution doesn't hold water at all," Mr. Huycke said. "You could pass another bylaw, similar to the one you have now, for a larger amount. But it would still have to be approved by the minister and there would have to be a deduction for non-attendance. This one doesn't require the approval of the minister."

"My understanding was that there was to be no increase in salary," Ald. Art Burrows said.

"I would think that to work out an equitable remuneration would require a little study," Ald. Gordon Farquharson suggested. He presented a motion empowering Acting Mayor John Dewart to appoint a committee to study the matter.

"Was it the thought of any member to increase the remuneration?" Ald. Rehill asked.

"It could come within the scope of the committee," Ald. Farquharson said.

NOTICE OF MEETING

Ald. Bill Beggs suggested that council might increase the length of time required to give notice of meetings. At present, 24 hours notice is required.

Ald. Stan McBride, who seconded Ald. Farquharson's motion, suggested a survey of other municipalities. The motion was carried and Acting Mayor Dewart named the legal and reception committee to study the matter.

Following the board of works meeting, Ald. Powell told The Examiner that Mr. Huycke had presented the alternative bylaw to council "without any reference to my committee whatsoever."

"He prepared it entirely on his own; it's a figment of his imagination. I have no idea what's in the bylaw; I haven't read it.

"His proposal is entirely irrelevant," Ald. Powell said. "It wasn't our intention to discuss any change in remuneration. It's in the record that my committee recommended to the finance committee that there should be no penalty for members who were absent from special meetings."

Recession Not Over Yet Bank Of Montreal Warns

MONTREAL (CP)—A recent upwing in business activity cannot e taken as an indication that the ecession in Canada is at an end, he Bank of Montreal says in the une issue of the Business Review.

Fragmentary statistics for April nd May indicate that orders reeived by industries have improved over their winter low, the ublication says. However in many nstances the improvement was easonal and in some respects less han seasonal. It was too early to ay that recessive tendencies have een reversed.

The review says that contours of he business recession are still being mapped. It began its downward rend in the autumn of 1953 after limbing steadily since 1946.

The volume of industrial production declines more than seasonally uring the first quarter of 1954, he bank said it was 2.1 per cent elow the same period a year ago, ith the textiles, clothing and steel industry hardest hit. Steel output for the quarter was 815,000 tons, nearly 22 per cent lower than during the first three months of 1953.

SAYS NOT TOO SERIOUS

The decline in business activity brought with it a more than seasonal decline in employment, the bank said. The situation was not too serious, however, with a bureau of statistics estimate in mid-April placing the total employed civilian working force at only 2.4 per cent below April, 1953.

The effect the lower employment might have on income was offset by a coninued rise in wage rates. Average hourly earnings in manufacturing averaged $1.40 an hour in the first quarter of 1954 against $1.34 in the same period a year ago.

There is nothing on the horizon to indicate a pick-up in business activity, the review said. Neither was there anything to indicate a drastic downturn.

WHAT NO TICKETS ????—City police are noted for giving away things, particularly tickets, but Monday they helped give away free soft drinks, hot dogs and ice cream. Queen Mary School Patrol Wins Miller Safety Award

The third annual safety patrol picnic held at Nicholls Oval, Monday, turned out to be some sort of a feast for the 399 junior safety officers representing 18 Peterborough schools.

A hot dog stand manned by four husky gendarmes was under constant pressure as the line of hungry children circled from front to rear in search of more food and drink. An estimated 800 hot dogs were washed down by 35 cases of soda pop and capped with 30 dozen dixie cups. Any room left after this was taken up with lolypops.

WIN AWARD

The Miller Safety award was won by Queen Mary school, judged the school with the highest safety record of the year. The award, donated last year by ex-Ald. Douglas Miller, is placed in competition each year, and, to retain it, the school must continue to head the list.

Other award winners included Capt. Barry Leroy of Queen Mary school who received the Boorman award, while Capt. Lawrence Wicks of Confederation school, received a second place cup, and Capt. Jim Minicola of St. Peter's school and Sheina McIntosh of Queen Alexandra, tied for third place.

The awards were given for patrol efficiency, teacher co-operation, total safety attitude and safety meeting and courts.

Following the presentation of awards Jim McClenaghan and Fraser Wade of the YMCA organized the children into teams and the rest of the afternoon was spent racing and laughing in the shady, green portion of the park.

Group Feels It Is Being Discriminated Against

Merchants Ask For New Street Lights

George St. merchants in the block between Hunter and Brock streets have learned "with dismay" of a proposal to install mercury vapor street lights between Charlotte and Hunter streets.

In a strongly-worded petition to city council, they have asked to have the new-type lighting extended north from Hunter St. Mercury vapor luminaires emit approximately three times as much light as ordinary incandescent lights.

The petition, which was read at the board of works meeting Monday night, pointed out that eight stores in the block between Hunter and Brock streets had gone out of business or changed hands.

NEAR CITY HALL

The petition reminded council of the block's proximity to city hall and asked if they wanted to see it become a slum area.

Ald. Gordon Powell urged very serious consideration of the petition. He said the block had a number of disadvantages, although he would not enumerate them, confining his remarks to the inadequate lighting.

(Installation of the new lights in the two blocks between Charlotte and Hunter streets was recommended by the utilities commission, who have placed underground wiring in that section and will have to put up new poles in any case. The old poles on the east side of the street are to be replaced and new steel poles erected on each side of the street.

(The suggestion was passed on to the fire, water and light committee of city council who gave their approval. The plan was authorized by city council a week ago.)

City clerk E. A. Outram pointed out to the board of works that it had been planned to hold a joint meeting of the fire, water and light committee and the PUC to discuss further installations of the new lights.

DANGEROUS INTERSECTIONS

The PUC had recommended installing them at dangerous intersections and the traffic committee had been asked to prepare a list of intersections where it would be advisable to install mercury vapor lights.

Mr. Outram said the traffic committee had prepared the list, so it was now feasible to call a meeting of the committee and the PUC to discuss further installations.

Referring to the decision to install the lights in the two blocks between Charlotte and Hunter streets, Ald. Harold Rehill said if the city was going to install the new-type lights, a start had to be made somewhere.

"This is a start," he said. "We could extend them in the future."

"I think these merchants feel there's no reason why they should be made to wait for a year to have the lights installed in their block," Ald. Art Burrows said.

"I understand there are only 300-watt instead of 500-watt bulbs in that area," Ald. Stan McBride said. "I think the block that needs it most should get it."

"Which block is that?" Ald. Burrows asked.

"The one in question," Ald. McBride replied.

It was decided to refer the matter to the fire, water and light committee.

Ontario Hydro $4,000 Expense

HASTINGS (ENS) — Ontario Hydro has approved an expenditure by the Hastings Hydro Commission of $4,000 to provide distribution, transformation and metering facilities to supply Breithaupt Leather Company, a new power customer of the commission.

Chairman M. A. O'Shea reported the work, to be financed from available funds, will be completed this year.

Such activities are part of a long range expansion program currently under way in the province, to provide improved electrical service to Hydro customers in both urban and rural areas.

Fire Destroys Home Family On Vacation

HASTINGS (ENS)—Fire completely gutted the new home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter McKinney of Hamilton while they were visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dodd at Hastings last week.

The blaze, of undetermined origin, was noticed by a neighbor, L. E. Jacques, who attempted to notify the fire department. The party line on which he phoned was also connected to the blazing house and the line was dead.

Petes Down Oaks 2-1 In 11th Of Fine Ball Fray

Clicking for two timely hits and cashing in on two errors in the bottom of the 11th inning here last night, the Petes yanked out a 2-1 VOBL victory over Oakville Oaks before some 500 fans to creep closer to third place in the standing and leave Oaks in the cellar. Garry Keans singled to centre in the 11th and raced to second when his hit was booted. Joe Lowrey's swinging bunt went for a hit to move Kearns to third, the latter tearing home when the first-sacker threw wild to his mate covering first.

It was a tense tilt all the way, with the Petes leaving a raft of runners stranded, failing time and again to get that winning run over when in scoring position. They even messed up a squeeze play which should have ended it in the 10th. But it was a fine fray to witness and a nifty one to win.

GOOD PITCHING

Joe Lowrey kept eight hits pretty well scattered in a dandy mound chore for the Petes. He walked but one and struck out 11, going strong in southpaw style right to the finish. His support generally was good, especially in the clutches. Lefty Ross Patton of Oaks also hurled well to whiff 15, though he was nicked for 11 safeties and three walks. His supported wobbled, none of the runs in the game being earned.

Bill Huntley had a perfect night at bat with a double and two singles in three official appearances. Bill Edger and Larry Foley each had two for four, and Kearns two in five tries. For the Oaks, Ken Pollock blasted out a triple and single in four, Ken Brown coming through with two in five trips, and Bob Salisburg clouting a double. A local double-play and a pickup by shortstop Pollock of Oaks were defensive features in a tidy tussle.

SCORED EARLY

Oakville scored their run in the second inning. Gykorey singled to right. Brown hit into a double play, short to second to first. Pollock smacked a single to left and stole second. He raced in from there on a two-base error on a high peg from third to first. Four times the rest of the route they got a man as far as third, but he died there in each case.

The Petes tallied the tying run in the fourth. Edger singled to centre and moved up on a single to left by Huntley. Both advanced a base on an error on Redmond's sacrifice by the pitcher, and Edger tore in on the throw. On several occasions after that they had runners on second and third, the bases being full with one out in the eighth, but not until the 11th did they push over the winning marker. The crowd stayed happily till the end. The box score:

300 Lbs. Medals To Be Given At B.C. Games

VANCOUVER (CP) — Officials estimated today that about 300 pounds of medals will be awarded during the British Empire Games, July 31 to Aug. 7.

The 1,137 medals are divided into two lots, victory and commemorative, for top-three placing competitors and team officials.

Those awarded for actual athletic recognition are gold, silver and bronze, with the event, competitor's name, and placing engraved on the back.

The commemorative medals will be presented to all non - placing competitors, team spares, managers and coaches, and visiting dignitaries. These non - athletic medals are similar to the third-place bronze discs, but will not be engraved.

The total cost of $7,400 includes a plastic stand, slotted to provide the medals with a paperweight-like platform, and an embossed, padded box, with a crest of the British Empire and Commonwealth Games Federation inscribed on top.

B. E. G. officials said there will be no parchments presented to athletes placing fourth, fifth and sixth, as was previously believed.

Lauderdale Dims Greco Hopes

MONTREAL (CP) —Billy Lauderdale of Hialeah, Fla., Monday night dimmed the comeback hopes of Johnny Greco by winning a split decision over the former Canadian welterweight champion in a 10-round televised bout here.

Greco weighed in at 151½ and Lauderdale at 151¼.

A crowd of about 1,300, capacity at east-end Mont St. Louis Auditorium, saw Lauderdale jolted several times in the opening rounds. The youngster came back to pile up points.

There were no knockdowns. The Florida scrapper came in strong in the seventh round, hitting the Montrealer with both hands from close in and from a distance.

The 30-year-old Greco fought from 1940 until 1952, when he retired after taking back the welter crown from Armand Savoie of Montreal.

STARRED IN WIN—Bil Huntley, left, and Joe Lowery at right shone in the Petes' neat 2-1 overtime victory against Oakville here last night. Huntley came through with three hits in three times at bat, while Lowrey struck out 11 while holding the Oaks to eight hits in a neat pitching chore. The win pulled the Petes up close to third slot in the VOBL standing and left Oakville trailing the field.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

Another month or so and playoffs will be starting in various lines of athletics around here, and elswhere. That's when thrills are a dime a dozen, playoffs underlining the importance of every play. Down the years we have enjoyed a hefty share of sports' thrills, a few in particular standing out. One of the biggest was that night in Vancouver when Petes beat the Combines to win their first Mann Cup senior lacrosse crown. Ah, what a night! Many eastern fans (transplanted to the Coast) helped celebrate the occasion in a big way. Some old familiar names popped up in conversations in arena hallways as the boys whooped it up. Names like Sandy MacDonald, Robbie Burns, Dewar, Johnnie Walker, Old Angus, John Robertson, old Parr, McNair. They all seemed to be there.

* * * * * *

That was a thrill down in Sarnia the night Legionnaires came from behind to capture the OHA senior "B" title without losing one game in group playoffs, OHA play downs, or Ontario semi-finals and finals. A great team. American war vets whisked the new champs across the line for a big "do" at a Legion Post in Port Huron. Going further back, we were in Ottawa the night Petes won the Eastern Canadian intermediate "A" title, the first and last time this particular crown was put on the line. A mighty fine squad that was, too. Hockey supplied many other thrills to this scribe in the past two decades, but those two stand out.

* * * * * *

Remember That One?

Who can forget Orfuns' upset 3-2 senior grid win o'er the mighty Sarnia Imperials that thrill-packed afternoon? Mike Loucks kicked the winning field goal to startle footballers across Canada. Our football upset over Cobourg on the lakeshore gridiron last fall was mighty nice, also. We can recall Joe Jakafby curving Niagara Falls to death to put Petes in Ontario senior ball finals, but Lefty McNally let our side down in the final with London Majors. Jakafby came up with a no-hitter another night in a Viaduct Loop tilt in Toronto. We remember police saving a Quinte umpire from a dunking in the river here years ago when fans mobbed his nibs. Yeah, the diamond game always has its exciting moments.

* * * * * *

So it goes, many thrills occur in sports but one only recalls a few in later years. We remember Isobel Bullock coming in cold in a relief role of a girls' softball playoff at Mountain View and whiffing 18! Len Minicola was badly outpointed in a fight at the Brock when he suddenly caught Toronto's flashy Frank Pidgeon with a knockout punch. There was shock that day in the oldtimers' ball game when Abbie Rose died of a heart attack. We will always remember men like Jack Deannard and Nagle Phelan slipping us in free to see Bailey & Co. at the Brock en route to a senior puck championship. And the time we stuck an elbow into a Chuck Bradley pitch to get on base and force in a run. Was he ever mad! Sports sure supply many thrills down through the years.

None Other Than Satch

Folks who aren't going away for the July 1 holiday can view an interesting diamond exhibition at Riverside under the lights. It's between the original House of David bewhiskered team — complete with trick artists and clowns — and Satchel Paige's touring Globe Trotters. The former major leaguer is a lanky, lean negro of uncertain age, probably nearing 50, who can still blaze that ball by top hitters. Or have 'em break their backs on his slightly illegal hesitation pitch. Passed up $20,000 in the Pacific Coast League this year to take his own team on tour, and packs them in wherever he shows. Comes good weather, and it might well be worth viewing.

* * * * * *

Petes came through with a dandy ball win at Riverside last eve, edging Oakville 2-1 in 11 innings. Skipper Joe Lowrey southpawed his way to the victory with an eight-hit chore, fanning 11 and issuing but one walk. Patton of the Oaks whiffed 15, walking three but was touched for 11 hits, two of 'em in the final overtime stanza. Kearns had singled in the 11th and taken second when hit hit was booted in the garden. oJe Lowrey attempted a sacrifice with a swinging bunt, which went for a hit, and the fielding first-sacker threw it wide of the base to let in the winning tally. A nice one to yank out. Bill Huntley was hot at the plate with three for three, one a double, Bill Edger and Larry Foley getting two for four each. Oakville errors hurt their cause in the keen contest. Dependables play here Saturday aft, not in the evening.

4,500 Fans Watch Racing Under Lights

OTTAWA (CP)—Some 4,500 fans turned out Monday night as Connaught Park held Canada's first thoroughbred racing program under the lights.

Week-day betting at the half-mile track just across the Ottawa river in Quebec was reported up and the larger-than-usual crowd seemed as enthusiastic as most of the horsemen over the experiment.

Cuban jockey Elicier Venero likely was the most pleased person of the lot. He rode in all seven races, won three, placed in one and earned the show spot in the other three.

Red Wings Whip Havana In 4-3 Triumph

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

St. Louis Cardinals haven't been able to make much headway in the National League this season but a little lesson they gave their Rochester farmhands Monday night helped the Red Wings move into a virtual tie in the International League.

The lesson was on the value of the home run.

St. Louis stopped off in Rochester for an exhibition and beat the minor leaguers 3-2 with the runs coming on a two-run homer by Red Schoendienst and a 420-foot clout by Stan Musial.

TOOK IT IN

Then in the regular game of the evening the Red Wings whipped the Havana Sugar Kings 4-3. And the winning run was a home run by second baseman Vernon Benson.

In winning the Red Wings pulled even with Toronto in the "games behind" column although they still trail by 13 percentage points. Rochester has played six more games than the Maple Leafs.

Toronto suffered a delayed 1-0 defeat by Richmond, then turned on the Virginians 14-9 with a 21-hit attack. The loss came with the completion of the final inning of a scheduled seven-inning game that ran afoul of the Sunday cur few back on May 2.

BLEW LEAD

In the slugfest the Leafs piled up a 7-0 first inning lead but were caught twice by the Virginians before pulling into a permanent lead in the seventh. Ed Mierkowicz hit a grand-slam homer for the losers.

Joe Black gave up only four hits as Montreal defeated Buffalo 7-0. It was the former Dodger hurlers' third victory against three losses. Black doubled home two runs. Rocky Nelson hit his 12th homer.

Ottawa's last place Athletics split a pair with Syracuse, winning 4-3 on a seventh-inning single by Hector Lopez after losing the opener 2-1. Kent Peterson won his seventh game for Syracuse with the help of timely singles by Joe Tesauro and Ben Tompkins. Lopez singled in the fifth inning of the second game as the A's tied the score, then drove in Tommy Giordano with the winning run.

Tommy Bolt Wins 18-Hole Playoff

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP)—Tommy Bolt, fighting desperately to protect a one-stroke lead, won the Insurance City open tournament 18-hole playoff Monday when Earl Stewart conceded on the final green in a heavy shower.

Stewart, 32-year-old golfer, on the decisive final hole socked his tee shot out of bounds by about 18 inches. He had to play another drive, which counted as his third stroke, and his next shot landed off the green.

Meantime Bolt, scoring his first major PGA tourney victory since winning the Miami Beach four-ball with Dick Mayer last March, was on the green in two, within easy rage of a par 4. Stewart pitched to the pin on is fifth shot, and quickly picked it up.

For the colorful Bolt, a transplanted Texan from Halworth, Okla., the action was worth top money of $2,400. Stewart collected $1,800.

Marlene Recovers Golf Form Wins 1st And 2nd Rounds

GANTON, Eng. (CP)—Marlene Stewart settled down after a bout of apparent nervousness Monday and marched through the first and second rounds in defence of the British women's open golf championship she won a year ago.

The freckle - faced, 20-year-old redhead from Fonthill, Ont., recovered her usual composure after trailing by two strokes at the turn to win a 3-and-2 first-round victory over Miss Anne Scarsgill of Yorkshire, England.

Then, as she warmed up, she swept through a 7-and-6 win over Mrs. Ruth Ferguson of Manchester without losing a single hole.

BIG TEST TODAY

Today Marlene has what may be her biggest test in the British open. She meets Margaret (Wiffy) Smith of Pasadena, Calif., a promising 17-year-old who weighs 161 pounds and is being hailed by some British sportswriters as another Babe Zaharias.

Marlene, who won raves for her cool play under fire at last year's tournament, is the favorite this year, took time out from studies at Rollins college in Florida to come to Britain to defend her title.

As usual, the five-foot-one swinger is the tiniest golfer in the field. Happy and laughing before Monday's play, she became silent and grim once she stepped out on the course.

SUFFERED FROM NERVES

Like other leading contestants, she suffered from nerves and played untidily against Miss Scarsgill who was two up at the end of the first nine. During that run she landed in seven sand traps. After the turn she quickly recovered her form and quickly overtook her opponent.

Against Mrs. Ferguson, Marlene was two up on the third hole, then hit two mighty shots on the long sixth to win the hole in four and go three up. She took the seventh and eighth, the latter with a birdie three, and finished the nine holes with a hot 35. She took the 11th and 12th with a par four and birdie three respectively to wind up the match.

Will Decide Bowling Squad

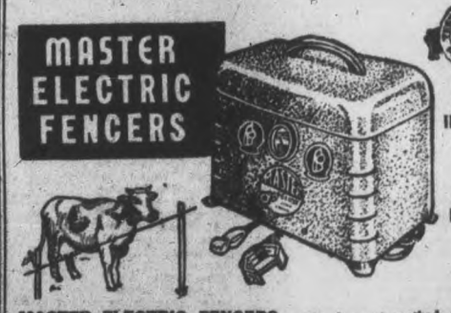
WINNIPEG (CP) — Canada's lawn bowling squad for the British Empire Games will be decided today on Winnipeg's Norwood Club greens.

There will be no doubt in the singles and rink events after today's third-round matches, but the officials will have to go into a huddle to decide the doubles winner on points if Manitoba beats Ontario, creating a three-way tie.

In the singles Manitoba's Jimmy Gibson takes on Quebec's Jack Linford. Both won their first-games matches over Walter Back of British Columbia. Gibson eliminated Back 21-16 Monday night after the B.C. star had lost 21-15 to Linford in the afternoon.

In the rink event, Quebec's Tommy Cruickshank was sidelined when beaten twice Monday. The Riverside Club aggregation from Lachine dropped a 23-12 decision to Manitoba's Billy Calder in the first round, then fell 23-20 to Alberta, skipped by Capt. James Little of Edmonton.

Yankees Look Weak



BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (AP) — Mickey Mantle's seventh - inning home run with a man on base was the only display of Yankee power Monday as the world champions bowed to their Binghamton Eastern League farm club 5-2 in an exhibition game.

Giants Hoping To Salvage One Victory To Keep Tie For Series Top Spot

By ED CORRIGAN, Associated Press Sports Writer

The team that finished 35 games out of first place last season fights for its slim one-game hold on the National League lead tonight against the scrambling defending champions.

And if Leo Durocher's New York Giants can salvage one victory in their three-game set with the Brooklyn Dodgers, they still will be at least tied for first place after the series.

Meanwhile, in the American League, the three teams fighting for the lead—Cleveland, Chicago and New York—all take on clubs that they hope to use to fatten their averages. The league-leading Indians play Baltimore. The White Sox, a game and a half back, entertain the Detroit Tigers in a doubleheader, and the Yankees, three games in arrears, journey to Boston.

JUST FOR RIDE

The rest of the two leagues are just along for the ride. The Philadelphia Phillies, in third place in the National League, are 8½ games out of the lead, while the Tigers, in fourth place in the American League, are a distant 15½ lengths back of the Indians.

This is an important set for both the Giants and Brooks, and, as a matter of fact, it is the first time since Durocher has been at the helm, that the polo grounds crew has started a home series against the Dodgers in first place.

For the first time this season, New York baseball fans are battling for tickets for "the" game. Giant officials predict a capacity house of between 48,000 and 50,000 at the Polo Grounds with about 40,000 seats sold in advance.

MAGLIE TO START

Ancient Sal (The Barber) Maglie, whose very scowl usually causes the Dodgers to roll over and play dead, probably will start for the Giants in the first game. His opponent will be Don Newcombe.

The Dodgers have had their ups and downs, but manager Walt Alston thinks the team finally has jelled. He won't come right out and say so, but the feeling is that if the club can sweep the series, the road will be cleared for its third straight flag.

"Some of the boys weren't hitting," Alston said. "But now that Carl Furillo and Roy Campanella have come around we have a much better attack. The pitching is straightening out fine, especially since Newcombe's arm trouble has left him."

See Batting History Being Repeated

NEW YORK (AP) — A decade ago the major league batting champions were a Cleveland Indians' infielder and an outfielder for Brooklyn Dodgers. It looks now as though history may be repeated in 1954.

In 1944 Cleveland shortstop, Lou Boudreau, now the manager of Boston Red Sox, won the American League batting title with a .327 average and Brooklyn outfielder Dixie Walker was the National League leader at .357.

Ten years later, as the season nears the halfway point, second baseman Bobby Avila of the Indians tops the American League batting parade with a .371 mark and outfielder Duke Snider of the Dodgers is setting the pace among National League batsmen at .368. Figures include games of Sunday.

MAKING RUNAWAY

Avila seems intent upon making a runaway of the American League race. The 28-year-old Mexican went five-for-20 last week but still holds a comfortable 31-point edge over runnerup Al Rosen, also of Cleveland.

Rosen, slugging first baseman, who leads the league in home runs with 14, has a .340 average.

Snider remains in front in the National League, but Don Mueller of the Giants has moved to within three points of him at .365. The 27-year - old Brooklyn flychaser slipped seven points in going 7-for-22. Mueller, advancing from third place, gained one point as he went 10-for-27.

Tigers Topple Athletics 8-7

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Tigers Monday night defeated league-leading St. Catharines Athletics 8-7 in a regular senior Ontario Lacrosse Association game here.

The game, played in three 20-minute periods instead of the usual four 15-minute frames, saw the third-place Tigers take a 7-5 lead in the second after trailing 3-2 at the end of the first period.

Jim McNulty, the league's top scorer, got two for Hamilton. His performance was matched by Tony D'Amico and other scorers were Jack Dorney, Chub Brown, Bob Dibbie and Skip Teal.

Ham Nelson and Weiners Croft paced the Athletics with two each. Other scorers were Derry Davies, Bill Bradshaw and Roger Smith.

Scull Champion Dies In Jet Plane Crash

NEW YORK (CP)—Maj. Joseph Angyal, 38, holder of many United States and Canadian scull championships, was killed Saturday when a jet plane he was flying crashe and exploded on Long island.

Angyal, a fighter pilot in the Second World War, was on a training flight as a member of the U.S. naval reserve when he was killed.

A past Canadian sculls champion, he had competed at the Royal Canadian Henley regatta at Port Dalhousie, Ont., where he won the Canadian championship in 1952.

Willie Mays Most Exciting Giant Player For Fans

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK (AP)—Willie Mays is not the greatest player ever to wear a New York Giant uniform—at least, not yet. But he certainly is the most exciting.

"This is the best looking kid I've seen in 25 years of baseball," says manager Leo Durocher. "I look at Willie and you know who he reminds me of? Pete Reiser. What could Reiser do that Willie can't? Run, that's all. There's nobody in the league got a better arm than this kid. There's nobody got more power. There's nobody can go and get 'em any better than he can.

"I've got no idea just how great this kid can be," the voluble Giant manager added. "He can be another Joe Dimaggio. He's got the disposition, the temperament, the ability. Trade him for Stan Musial? I wouldn't trade him for two Musials. If I had to win one game tomorrow, I'd have to have Musial. But for the future? How old is Musial? 34. How old is Mays? 23. That's your answer."

HE'S PREJUDICED

There is no doubt that Durocher is prejudiced. So are the Giant fans who once again are talking pennant mainly because of the young Negro's presence in the line-up.

"The stage always seems to be set for Willie to do something dramatic," Leo says. "He's not content to do things the normal way. He's got to be different. Take the time he hit those homers in five consecutive games. All he did was hit 'em all on his first time at bat. He makes mistakes, runs bases wrong sometimes. But I don't tell him anything. I let him do what he wants because, somehow, it always turns out right.

SURE WAS READY

"It seems every homer he hits or every great catch or throw he makes wins a game for us. I'll never forget the day he rejoined the club at Phoenix, Ariz., last March after spending two years in the army. He had been on a plane all night, flying in from Richmond, Va. We were in the middle of an intra-squad game when he arrived, got in uniform and said: 'I'm ready, Leo. When do I get in the game?'

"I sent him in as a pinch-hitter and he tied into the first pitch that must have travelled nine hundred feet for a home run. At the end of the inning he went out to centrefield and would you believe it? He made one of the greatest plays I ever saw, climbing up on the wall for a one-handed catch and following it up by throwing a strike to first to double up a runner. There's only one Willie."

Fox Comes To Voyles Asks To Sign Up

HAMILTON (CP) —Coach Carl Voyles ran into a bit of luck Monday in his long battle to get players for his Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Big Four Football Union.

Charlie Fox, 24-year-old former end with University of Illinois, walked into Voyles' office and said he wanted to sign up with Hamilton. The 195-pound, five-foot 11½-inch player was recently discharged from the United States Army after service in Korea.

Salvation Army Worker Becomes Mayor

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto's new mayor, 54-year-old Leslie Saunders, celebrated his move into the chief magistrate's chair by taking his wife to a Salvation Army meeting Monday night.

Mayor Saunders, who took office after the resignation of Allan A Lamport, preached twice Sunday at street-corner meetings in his Salvation Army sergeant-major's uniform, something he often does.

Until his political duties as a member of Toronto's board of control became heavy three years ago, the North Bay-born mayor played a cornet in a Salvation Army band.

DEEPLY RELIGIOUS

Friends say the new mayor is deeply religious, the type of man who makes prayer a habit. He neither smokes nor drinks and is militantly Protestant and a staunch Orangeman.

He plans to fly Thursday to Saskatoon for at least one day's session of the Grand Orange Lodge of British America, in convention there.

In contrast to Mr. Lamport, who vigorously supported the successful effort to introduce commercial Sunday sport in Toronto, Mayor Saunders is reported to have strong convictions against Sunday sport and cocktail bars.

"I'm strongly opposed to Sunday sports and if there's any demand to extend them, it will result in a vote on the whole question again," he said Monday at a press conference. "I think the people might not go for it this time."

OPPOSES BARS, TOO

He said he is opposed to beer parlors and cocktail bars and feels citizens should have had a chance to vote on the cocktail question before bars were introduced a few years ago.

He said he is not a prohibitionist but sincerely believes that all Christians should abstain from liquor.

"Liquor is involved in the majority of our highway accidents," he said. "Nothing good can be said for the liquor traffic."

Mayor Saunders operates his own printing firm, Britannia Printers. He publishes Protestant Action, a monthly magazine which he founded, and many other publications for churches.

The new mayor, Toronto's 50th, has three daughters and a son, all married and all members of the Salvation army, and nine grandchildren.

CUT SALARIES

MONTREAL (CP)—The Quebec Junior Hockey League Monday cracked down on runaway salaries and fixed a maximum of $60 a week for next season.

There was no official indication as to how high salaries of some of the prospective young stars have reached but one informant said "you can do your own guessing" and that $150 wouldn't be wide of the mark in some instances.

A league spokesman said the move was made to cut down drastically on expenses and to help clubs that have found the going tougher and tougher financially.

Critics Hail First Production On Festival Opening Night

Canadian Press Staff Writer

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — With the official ceremony of opening night behind them the cast of the second annual Shakespearian Festival settles today to an eight-week run in which two new productions still remain to be unfolded.

Critics from across Canada and from the United States greeted "Measure for Measure," the first-night production, generally with praise for Frances Hyland of Regina and Lloyd Bochner of Toronto, who carried the heaviest burden of Shakespeare's "bitterest comedy."

Tonight a change of theatrical pace brings to the unique Stratford stage a rollicking farce, "Taming of the Shrew," with Bill Needles of Kitchener, Ont., and Toronto and Barbara Chilcott of Toronto in the leading roles.

Third production in the festival, which closes Aug. 21, is the Greek tragedy by Sophocles, "Oedipus Rex," starring James Mason of Hollywood and London and Montreal's Eleanor Stuart.

Three first-string Broadway critics, Brooks Atkinson of the New York Times, Walter Kerr of the New York Herald - Tribune and John Beaufort of the Christian Science Monitor were part of a distinguished first-night audience for "Measure for Measure."

OPENED OFFICIALLY

Governor-General Massey officially opened the festival. Of the festival itself Mr. Atkinson said in an interview: "There isn't anything like it in the United States; it's making a real contribution to culture and to shakespeare."

Mr. Kerr said the festival "is stimulating the same kind of thing in the United States, particularly is it giving impetus to the theatre at Stratford, Conn. We need something like this in the United States."

The critics heaped praise on the tiny Miss Hyland, at 25 already an accepted leading lady on the London stage. She played Isabella, a novitiate nun.

J. Dorsey Callaghan of the Detroit Free Press said:

"What impressed me most about this play was this young and very lovely Miss Hyland, one of the most gifted young dramatic actresses that I have seen in many a year. The cast throughout was an inspired one."

Walter O'Hearn of the Montreal Star said the cast showed "first-night jitters and uneveness but theatrical skill and loving care have managed to sweeten the juices of Shakespeare's bitterest comedy."

GOOD, NOT GREAT

He called James Mason, who played the role of Angelo, "that tortured, merciless man." He is a good actor and perhaps I ask too much of him when I found fault with him for not being a great one."

Pat Pearce of the Montreal Herald said:

"Miss Hyland is a little thing but she packs an extraordinary punch."

Herbert Whittaker of the Toronto Globe and Mail said director Cecil Clarke has staged the play "with a flourish and some degree of excellence."

Costumes were designed by Tanya Moiseiwitsch of London. Original music was composed by Louis Applebaum of Toronto.

Tonight's play "Taming of the Shrew," is directed by Tyrone Guthrie of London.

WHEN THE CURTAIN WENT UP at the opening of "Taming of the Shrew" in the Shakesperian Festival at Stratford, playgoers saw the characters in the dress of the Gay 90s. In this wedding scene, Douglas Campbell of London, England, plays the role of Batista, William Needles of Kitchener, and Toronto (centre) is Petruchio in cowboy clothes, and Barbara Chilcott of Toronto is Kathrina.

TCP gives you up to 15% unexpected power from your engine

Blended into Shell Premium Gasoline, TCP* releases power locked in by lead and carbon deposits. It's the greatest gasoline development in 31 years.

You'll feel your engine's had a tune-up before you've finished your second tankful.

YES, your engine may be 15% more powerful than you think!

And the reason is this:

Lead and carbon deposits are constantly building up in your engine. They "lock-in" power that you should be getting.

These deposits get red hot and set off the fuel charge ahead of time . . . before the piston reaches its proper firing position. Power works against you—not for you. This condition is called pre-ignition, and automotive engineers consider it the biggest cause of power loss.

You also lose power when these deposits make your spark plugs misfire. Building-up on spark plug insulators, they short-circuit the spark.

Both of these power robbers—pre-ignition and short-circuited spark plugs—are at their worst when you need power most—when climbing a hill or accelerating.

Now, however, you can change all this. TCP, a Shell-discovered additive, blended into Shell Premium Gasoline releases the "captive power" in your engine.

First, it "fireproofs" the deposits in your combustion chambers—to stop pre-ignition. Second, by making the deposits non-conductive, TCP additive stops the short-circuiting of your spark plugs.

Shell Premium with TCP acts quickly, too. In fact, before you've finished your second tankful, you'll feel your engine's had a tune-up. But, remember, because these deposits accumulate constantly, continued use of Shell Premium with TCP additive is essential to retain its full benefits. It is the greatest gasoline development since the discovery of tetraethyl lead.

Shell Premium with TCP is available only at your Shell Dealer's.

*Shell's Trademark for this unique gasoline additive developed by Shell Research. Patent applied for.

Claims Assault By Son-In-Law

An amputee hobbled to a chair in the police court Monday and told Magistrate W. R. Philp, QC, how he had been assaulted by his son-in-law, Fred Rathburn, 42, of 190 Charlotte St.

Said elerdly John Waldron: "He (Rathburn) came home between 5:30 p.m. and 6 p.m. Saturday, and I was on the sofa. He scratched my face, throttled me—my throat's still sore—and hit me on the stump of my leg—it's not fixed yet.

"Was he drunk?" asked defence counsel John Currelly.

"Couldn't have been any drunker," replied Waldron.

Waldron admitted to Mr. Currelly that he was living at the house owned by Rathburn and wife, but said that he paid his way.

BOUGHT HIS LIQUOR

Mr. Currelly: "How did you pay him?"

Waldron: "I gave him whatever he wanted to drink."

Mr. Currelly: "You say he gets nasty when he's drunk, and yet you give him liquor."

Waldron: "Yes I do, but only when he's sober."

Rathburn's stepdaughter, Mrs. Doreen Reynolds, told the court that Waldron had used "some pretty abusive language" to Rathburn on occasions and that was the cause of ill-feeling between the two men. She added that Rathburn carried him about "like a baby."

Magistrate Philp placed Rathburn on a two-year suspended sentence.

Second Offenders

Three men pleaded guilty to intoxication offences when they appeared before Magistrate W. R. Philp, QC, in court Monday.

Horace Dickson, 41, or Keene and Joseph Gooley, 59, of 163 Princess St., pleaded guilty to second offences of being drunk in a public place and were each fined $50, costs $2.50, with an alternative of a month in jail.

Herbert Tripp, 47, of Fraserville, was fined $10, costs $2.50, for a first offence.

Howe leaving Montreal on a 12,000-mile journey to Canada's Arctic territories. The boys, seen here with RCMP Staff Sgt. G. Abraham, are accompanying their parents, an RCMP constable and his wife, on a three-year assignment in the north. The C. D. Howe, carrying replacement personnel, 14 homebound Eskimos and supplies, will do a summer tour of duty in the Arctic. —(CP Photo)

Pleads Guilty To 8 Charges

A 26-year-old undertaker's assistant, Arthur Wilfong, 133 Princess St., pleaded guilty on Monday to seven charges of forgery and one charge of false pretences. Magistrate W. R. Philp, QC, sentenced him to six months definite and four months indefinite imprisonment in an Ontario reformatory.

Wilfong actually received six months on each of seven charges, but the terms will run concurrently. A one month sentence, also concurrent, was given on the false pretence charge.

INVOLVED $273.96

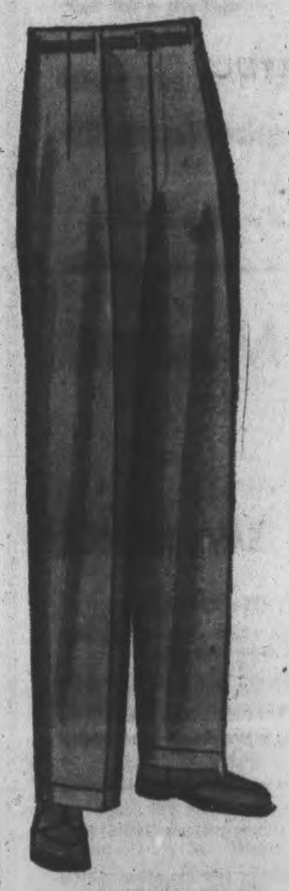
The offences, which were spread over a period between March 20 and June 15 of this year, involved a total sum of $273.96.

Wilfong admitted to forging several cheques puported to have been signed by Norman J. L. Nesbitt and payable to Fred LeRoy. Others were puported to have been signed by Fred Parsons and John T. Wolstenholme and payable to Fred LeRoy and Glenn Hunter.

Inspector of detectives William A. Clarke said that he had questioned Wilfong prior to his arrest and he had admitted seven of the eight offences.

NEEDS MEDICAL ATTENTIONS

Lawyer William Grant, representing Wilfong, said that his client had several people who were concerned about his future welfare and thought that he might need some corrective medical attention.



Crown Attorney John A. Bradshaw, QC, agreed that the court could recommend that Wilfong be examined by pyschiatrists.

"I don't think that calls for a penitentiary term, but in view of the fact that the offences were carried out over a considerable period of time, and not just an isolated case, Wilfong should receive a prison term."

Magistrate Philp said that a probation sentence was not possible under the circumstances.

Ex-Russian Police Commander Tells How He Helped Deport Million Subjects

By GEORGE BOULTWOOD

MUNICH, Germany (AP) — A former Russian secret police commander told in chilling detail Monday how he helped betray and deport a million of Stalin's subjects because they wanted independence from the Kremlin.

Lt.Col. Grigori Stepanovich Burlitski, 36, emerged into the glare of television foodlights to tell of racial murder in the Soviet Union. He deserted to the West last June but it was kept secret until he testified today before a U.S. congressional commitee on Communist aggression, now in session here.

As the tiny, blue-eyed Cossack left the crowded committee room for the lunch recess, chairman Charles J. Kersten told everyone to remain seated for one minute. This was to allow guards to whisk Burlitski safely away.

TRAPPED BY SOVIET

Speaking through an interpreter, Burlitski described how rebellious non-Russian peoples like the Chechen-Ingush mountain people in the Cacasus and the Tartars of Crimea were trapped by Soviet security forces in merciless "trojan-horse" operations.

He told how a million people were fooled into believing Soviet overturnes of friendship so that they dropped their guard. Then they found themselves herded into cattle cars for deportation to the wastes of Siberia under the guns of men they had been entertaining as guests.

Burlitski said the Kremlin could not tolerate any independence movements so simply wiped out whole regions, leaving the land silent and deserted until new settlers could be found.

STATE WIPED OUT

Burlitski said the Kremlin during the Second World War wiped out the tiny autonomous state of Czecheno-Ingush in the Caucasus. Its 500,000 independence - loving people were deported "to distant and unknown parts of the Soviet Union," he said.

He said the people were rounded up Sept. 23, 1944, under the ruse of a festival celebrating Red Army victories. Stripped of all weapons, they were given an hour to pack, then loaded in railroad cars which were locked and sealed.

Egyptian Tomb DiscoveredEmpty

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The recently uncovered "Saqqara sarcophagus" is empty but its discoverer thinks he will find the real tomb of an ancient pharaoh deeper within the pyramid.

Archaeologist Zakaria Goneim, who found the sarcophagus May 31 beneath a step pyramid he had discovered last December, said Sunday night it was a "symbolic tomb" and he expects "to find the real one somewhere else in the pyramid."

"Any possibility that the tomb had been robbed should be ruled out," he declared.

The tomb, about 20 miles south of Cairo, was opened amid great secrecy Sunday, but a communique from the education ministry said it was empty.

Goneim believed it to be the last resting place of Sankhet, a third dynasty monarch who reigned over Egypt about 2,750 B. C.

The seven-ton sarcophagus and the corridors leading to it were found sealed. Archaeologists said they were almost sure the pyramid had not been entered by ancient robbers who despoiled most such relics. Only the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen, young pharaoh of the 18th dynasty, had been found untouched.

Need New Approach To Canadian Housing

TORONTO (CP) — A new approach to "notorious and now accepted inadequacies in Canadian housing" is desperately required, Dr. Albert Rose told the Canadian Conference on Social Work today.

Dr. Rose, who is professor of the School of Social Work, University of Toronto, said the great majority of Canadians are not concerned about the stringent housing shortage and about the housing conditions of any family but their own.

"What is lacking in Canada today is not a suitable and impressive demonstration of need but an appropriate and impressive demonstration of initiative by the people in most municipalities."

Man Studying Sun For Years Least Likely To See Eclipse

By JOHN LeBLANC

SMOKY FALLS, Ont. (CP)—The Canadian least likely to see a piece of the sun's total eclipse Wednesday— sleepyheads counted out—is a man who has been studying the sun for years.

When the moon starts cutting across the sun's disc early Wednesday, astrophysicist Jack Locke will be looking the other way.

Chances are, though his big job of the last year has been to get set for a study of Canada's first sun blackout since 1945, that he won't be able to look up until all 90 seconds of it are over.

That's the time for complete eclipse in this mid-woods section of northern Ontario where the Dominion observatory has posted a party under Locke. Other Canadian groups are south of this 60-person settlement, 100 miles down from James Bay, lined up so that the moon-cast shadow will run over them in its 4,000 - miles - an - hour northeast course.

Here Dr. Locke, the observatory's top solar expert, will have his right eye stuck against a pocket - size microscope as the moon starts moving in on the sun just before the totality that occurs at 7:11:21 a.m. EDT. He expects to keep it there until the eclipse is completed, seeing nothing but a reflected image of the edge of the sun.

DUMPED INTO JOB

Dr. Locke, 32, says he got dumped into the job of focusing light from the sun's "chromosphere"—inner atmosphere—into a razor-thin slit at the front end of a camera that cuts up the light, sends it through an 80-foot series of mirrors and breaks it down into the violet rays that the party here wants to study.

"t tried to shove it off o nthe one of the other fellows," Dr. Locke said, "but no one would have it. So I guess I'm stuck. Maybe I'll be able to see the next one, though."

For this one, his chances are pretty thin. While the eclipse at this point is to last 90 seconds, he'll be working on a split-second schedule in getting the color photographs of the spectrum that will provide scientists with material for studying the temperatures of the sun.

As the moon swings across the sun and a motor-driven mirror keeps pace with it, Locke will be correcting the odd infinitesimal error that might have occurred in advance calculations.

If he's out one hundredth of an inch in slipping the chromosphre light into the camera slit, there won't be any picture.

But to Locke and his team a hundredth of an inch is a fair amount of leeway.

PRECISION IMPORTANT

They talk in thousandths of an inch. The "grating" they use to split up the light into the various parts of the spectrum, instead of being a glass prism, is a flat surface scribed off with diamond-marked lines. There are 15,000 to the inch. A California astronomer spent almost a lifetime perfecting the scribing method.

By this dividing up of the light from the edge of the sun, which can be caught only when the moon intervenes and blocks off the blinding main orb, the scientists expect to be able to get data that will help them estimate the outer heat of the sun and thereby aid their studies of many phenomena on earth.

One of the more immediate effects would be the impact of the sun on communications, especially radio and cable. Long-range effects, which are tied into the recurrence of sunspots, deal with cycles of animal and vegetable life, all rising and falling in some apparent sympathy with the dark spots on the sun that nourishes them.

Find Father Guilty

MONTREAL (CP)—A Court of Queen's Bench jury Monday found Charles Trudeau, 32, guilty of the attempted murder of his two children last February while he was of unsound mind. Mr. Justice Francois Caron ordered detention in a provincial government asylum. Trudeau's wife testified her husband told her he put poison in the bread of Jacques, 8, and Edouard, 6.

Need Better English For Jobs Conference Told

BIGWIN INN, Ont. (CP) — To get a job, improve your English—even if the job seems to call more for skilled hands than for a skilled tongue.

This advice, in effect, was given Monday by T. J. Emmert, of Windsor, Ont., in an address prepared for delivery to the annual convention of the Ontario Urban and Rural School Trustees Association.

Mr. Emmert, executive vice-president, Ford Motor Company of Canada, said the superintendent of Ford's trade school rejects any applicant with low marks in English, because he has found that use of sloppy English indicates a sloppy mind.

Further, in its program for selected students, the company had found it necessary to include classes on report writing, even though many of the students had graduated, with commendable records, from university arts courses.

FEEL CONCERN

Increasing concern was being felt by a great many people at the inability of numerous high-school graduates to write in straight-forward, convincing language.

"Often the unclear writing simply reflects unclear thinking; often and imposing array of syllables is strung together for sound effects, not for sense."

Mr. Emmert opposed too-early specialization in schools. Rather, formal-education years should lay a broad base for future development.

". . .The jack-of-all-trades so often deplored by the copy book will very frequently end up in a top executive position."

In business, when a man is chosen for an important job, a salary is paid which bears a fair relationship to the important of his assignment.

"Can we say we do as much for your teachers? In terms of salaries paid, we set teaching upon a very low rung of the professional ladder."

Hold Water Ski Show Dominion Day

A water sports day and carnival, sponsored by the Rotary club will be held in Fenelon Falls, July 1.

Featured in the afternoon program will be a water-ski show of champions under Gus McIntosh. Naval aircraft, Furies, Avengers, and possibly a helicopter and planes of the forestry branch will be on hand.

A demonstration of bush fire fighting equipment in action is planned. Information giving specific details of ratings of boats will be announced over a loudspeaker.

Herb Cardwell's canoe show is one of the acts arranged. Gordon Minty of the Peterborough YMCA will give the commentary. A trade fair will be held in Lakeside Park, where boats, tackles, motors, and tourist supplies will be exhibited.

The club is supplying free spaces in the trade fair section for approved exhibitors. Water equipment will be exhibited.

The grand opening of the Rotary arena for summer activities will take place in the evening. There'll be dancing, a stage show, games, display booths, and fun for all. The crowning of the queen of the Upper Kawarthas, winner of the beauty and popularity contest, will climax the day's program. Throughout the day lucky numbers will be drawn periodically for prizes.

Move Is Made To Increase Train Speed

Engineer Checks Signal Systems For Faster Trains

The CPR is planning to increase the speed of its trains through the city from 10 to 20 mph. Negotiations began with the city some time ago to ensure that the system of warning signals was adequate to the change.

City engineer A. E. Chalmers made a survey of the crossings and recommended changing the Monaghan Rd. crossing signal and lengthening the period of warning given by the signal at the Burnham's Point pedestrian crossing.

LENGTHEN PERIOD

A letter from the CPR was read at the board of works meeting Monday night. It stated that the Monaghan Rd. signal had been changed and the company would lengthen the warning period of the Burnham's point signal at its own expense. The city paid for installation of the latter signal.

The company asked city council for a letter saying they would be satisfied with the warning system once the change had been made at Burnham's Point.

City clerk E. A. Outram explained that the CPR would have to apply to the transport board for premission to increase the speed of its trains through the city and wanted to ensure that there woud be no opposition from the city.

The board of works recommended sending a letter to the company granting permission to extend the warning time of the Burnham's Point signal and expressing their satisfaction that all crossings would be adequately protected.

Little Lake Water Polluted Found Unsafe For Swimming

All waterways within the city limits have been tested for pollution by the department of health.

The department reports that the Trent canal is safe for swimming as is that portion of the Otonabee river from Hunter St. as far north as the city limits, opposite Hilliard St.

Little lake and the remainder of the river are not considered safe for swimmers.

Water samples were taken by public health veterinarian Dr. F. J. Harden and sanitary inspector K. G. Spencer. The results of the tests were announced on Monday by Dr. J. P. Wells, medical officer of health.

1,000 SAFE FIGURE

The provincial department of health considers 1,000 organisms in every 100 cubic centimeters of water an acceptable standard of purity Any higher concentration is considered unsafe for swimming.

Dr. Wells reported that the organism count, in the canal from the north city limits to a point just north of Maniece Ave. varied between 10 and 100, which made it safe for swimming.

South from this point to the outlet into Little Lake a number of samples showed counts of 1,000—just on the borderline—so that the entire canal, from Parkhill Rd. to Little lake, is safe for swimming, by provincial health standards.

The southern part of the river, from Little lake to the city limits at Concession road, is unsafe for swimming. A number of the samples from this section were "bad," according to Dr. Wells, particularly on the east side of the river and in the vicinity of the sewage disposal plant.

Several of the samples taken from this southern portion of the river had colnts as high as 100,000.

As was reported before, Little lake is considered unsafe for swimming. The tests also confirmed that the river was unsafe between the Hunter St. bridge and the railway bridge at Wolfe St.

In summary, neither Little lake nor any part of the river south of Hunter St. bridge is safe for swimming.

North of Hunter St. bridge as far as the city limits, opposite Hilliard St., the pollution is minimal and the quality of the water meets department of health standards.

POLLUTION EVIDENT

Some pollution was evident in this part of the river, Dr. Wells explained, but the current of the water and dilution of organisms minimized it.

However, where the water is stagnant, as in Little lake, the effect of this minimal pollution may have been to add to the pollution originating around the lake itself.

The department has also taken samples from the river above the inlet to the filtration plant north to the vicinity of Nassau bridge. This section of the river constitutes the source of Peterborough's water supply. Under provincial regulations, it comes under the jurisdiction of the medical officer of health, just as though it were within the city limits.

The results of these tests have not yet been published, but a report is expected soon.

Dr. Harden and Mr. Spencer will again test the waterways within the city limits about the middle of July.

Mrs. A. H. Heideman Sweeps Rose Show

Mrs. A. H. Heideman gathered up the major awards at the Horticultural Society's rose show Monday night at the YWCA with entries from her garden of some 75 bushes at Chemong Park.

Her Crimson Glory was selected as the champion, a full bodied dark red, without a blemish on petals and stem, a variety that has won many a prize and title. The award was the Ontario Rose Society's silver medal.

Second and third in the championship class were also from the Heideman garden. McGready's Yellow, in second place, carried the ORS bronze medal; and a Margaret Ann Baxter, one of the older whites as Mrs. Heideman classed it, placed third for with the prize of a 1955 membership in the Ontario Rose Society.

With that raid of the championship class, it was hardly surprising that the judge, Charles Stephenson, Toronto, of the Ontario Rose Society, found winning quality in the six-bloom section that won for Mrs. Heideman the Harry L. Beal Challenge Cup and a 1955 membership in the Peterborough Horticultural Society.

ENTRIES FEWER

Entries were not up to the volume of last year, but Mr. Stephenson said the season had been adverse to rose flowering. The Ontario show was down in the number of blooms, but in Toronto and here last night the quality was remarkably good.

Quite a number of the Peace variety, white with a faint touch of yellow and dark red fringe, were noticed, but most of them were too mature and loosely opened. Only a few perpetuals appeared. Stan Bucknell of Jackson Ave., showed four, winning a first and second. His first was good sample of the old white Druschki.

The classes for polyanthas and floribundas were exceptionally well filled with a range of varie-

Woman Plans To Swim Half Mile On 70th Birthday

Mrs. Bertha Hemphill, 70, will celebrate her birthday Wednesday by swimming half a mile in the YWCA pool.

A non-swimmer last winter, Mrs. Hempbill is one of the oldest ever to receive a Red Cross senior swimmer award. Among the requirements are 300 yards free style, 100 yards crawl, 75 yards on the back, 15 feet under water and 10 minutes of treading water.

Monday fellow-swimmers in the YWCA's adult swim class honored Mrs. Hemphill, who lives at 264 Aylmer St., with a surprise party. Mrs. Hemphill asked "What did I do to deserve all this?"

REFUSES TO GROW OLD

The ladies cheered as Mrs. Hemphil announced her formula for happy living, "I simply refuse to grow old."

Presentation of a brooch was made by Mrs. Lois Bonney, who also became a senior swimmer as the adult swim class closed Thursday. Under coach Mrs. Agnes Gordon a dozen or more ladies have been meeting weekly to swim and to relax.

Mrs. Marion Watts of the Red Cross water safety program said she hoped she would have "half as much pep as Mrs. Hemphill has when she reaches 70." She presented awards to Mrs. Hemphill and Mrs. Bonney and a senior swimmer's pin, to Mrs. Hemphill.

Also honored was Mrs. Gordon who was presented with a cup and saucer in the Gordon Tartan. Mrs. Hemphill, too, is Scottish having emigrated to Canada from Scotland in 1921.

Among those at the tea were Roslyn Stone, YWCA swimming instructress who examined Mrs. Hemphill (and who found her "very, very good") and Gordon Minty, YMCA instructor.

"Some of the people who read your story will end the summer at the bottom of a lake," Gord Minty told this reporter. "If every person would learn to swim as little as 50 feet, 90 per cent of all drownings would be eliminated."

But many accidents in the water, says Mr. Minty are caused by "so called strong swimmers." One such type is the person who swims 300 or 400 yards out from shore, then finds he is too tired to swim back in.

The job of professional swimming instructor or lifeguard is in many ways a thankless one, Mr. Minty says. Although they may save dozens of lives every summer, most instructors are paid less than half what they might make at a summer industria job.

SUMMER'S ACTIVITIES

Swimming programs in the district are listed below:

The Lakefield Red Cross has an outdoor water saftey program under Jack Stackhouse of Norwood and Toronto.

Miss Lorraine Rie will be instructing at Norwood.

The Bancroft Lions club will be launching their 10th swimming season, with Scott Pearton of the Peterborough YMCA returning as instructor.

In Lindsay, the Rotary club is sponsoring an outdoor pool for the fourth year. Carol Ann Webster of Fenelon Falls and Jim Heffernan of Peterborough will be in charge.

Feneon Fall Rotary club will begin its 9th year of instruction under Rotary chairman Lorne Northey and Terry Reid of Peterborough.

In Bobcaygeon, it's the Kinsmen's club that is providing swimming instruction.

In Port Hope the Lions club will be continuing their outdoor pool program and the Campbellford Rotary club will be supervising the village beach.

Closer to home, Mrs. May Blewett of Bridgenorth swimming club and Mrs. Velma wilson of the Highland View swimming club in Keene will be back for another year.

Locally, Miss Betty Thomson will instruct at the Lions pool and the recreation commission under Ken Robinson and swim coach Roslyn Stone will hold forth at Inverlea Park. Bill Lech will conduct a special evening class for adults at the Lions pool in August.

Mr. Minty will add a few more to the hundreds he has coached in Peterborough when he takes over the non-swimmers class at Fraser Wade's stay-at-home camp Pow-wow for three weeks during July.

Mr. Minty, summing up his attitude to water safety as, "He is only safe from danger who is on his guard even when he is safe.

Alderman Charges Attempt To Hinder Work On Jackson Park Creek

Second Letter Received By Council Holding City And McGillis Liable If Any Damage Results

Ald. Stan McBride charged at the board of works meeting Monday night that everybody was "taking pot shots" at D. A. McGillis for straightening out a curve in Jackson Park creek and channeling it through a culvert which he is building on his King St. property.

Ald. Gordon Powell said he thought the same people would eventually thank Mr. McGillis for cleaning up the site.

ANOTHER LETTER

The board of works received a letter from Jacob Low, writing on behalf of the J. T. Braund estate, which holds property on Charlotte St. immediately north of the McGillis project, The letter said the city and Mr. McGillis would be held responsible for any flood damage to the property caused by the project.

A week ago, city council received a similar letter from Walter Howell, on behalf of Cherney Brothers, whose property is southeast of the project on the opposite side of King St.

"I found that the channel is only 15 feet wide at the CPR bridge," Ald. McBride said. (The bridge he referred to is at the CPR station. According to information from city hall, it is 18 feet wide. Mr. McGillis' culvert will be 20 feet wide, according to the same source.)

"Mr. McGillis is straightening the creek out and now everybody is taking pot shots at him," Ald. McBride said.

"I think the same people will eventually thank him for cleaning that up," Ald. Powell said. "It was full of tin cans, dead animals, vegetables and all sorts of refuse."

Fired Air Gun From Auto Boy 11, Struck

Someone has been seeing too many movies, at least a recent incident in the city appears to have the flavour of oldtime Chicago's badlands.

Gerald Murphy, a 17-year-old youth from Orphington Rd., admitted to Magistrate W. R. Philp, QC, on Monday, that he had fired an airgun from a moving car on June 20 and hit Ronald Steele, 11, who was standing on a street corner. Steele was not injured.

However, Murphy said that he had not actually intended to fire the gun and certainly had not wished to hit the small boy. He had been playing with the gun and he had pulled the trigger, not knowing it was loaded.

The magistrate impressed on Murphy the serious nature of the offence he had committed — that of pointing a loaded or unloaded gun at a person. The offence carried a maximum fine of $100 with an alternative of up to 30 days in prison.

Murphy received a $10 fine (the minimum) with costs amounting to $17.50. The alternative was 25 days in the county jail.

New President Takes Over

Paul Irwin, former president of the Rotary club, turned over the gavel to the incoming president, Thomas Taylor, Monday, at the last luncheon meeting of the Rotary year.

Mr. Irwin thanked the members for their contribution to Rotary's progress in Peterborough, and the support and co-operation he received from them during the past year.

PRESENTATON MADE

He was given a long ovation and presented with a past president pin. He will be leaving the local club, since he recently moved to Ajax.

David E. Bell, secretary-treasurer of the club, in his annual report said that $10,446.02 had been apportioned to charitable funds in the past year. The club had contributed to the Crippled Children's fund, the Rotary foundation, and to the Charitable fund.

Father Hanged For Slaying Of Housekeeper

LETHBRIDGE (CP)—A 24-year old veteran of the Korean War and father of two children was hanged early today for the sex-killing of a housekeeper 15 months ago in Calgary.

Robert James Sim was reported to have showed no signs of emotion as he walked to the gallows for the murder of Mrs. Gharda Middlestadt, 55-year-old YMCA housekeeper whose brutally beaten body was found March 8, 1953, near railway tracks in east Calgary.

He was pronounced dead 15 minutes after the trap was sprung at 12:15 a.m., MST. He spent his last hours in meditation with Capt Samuel Nahirney of the Salvation Army and wrote letters to his mother and young wife.

The murder case was six months old when Sim was arrested on a charge of assaulting his wife. The murder charge followed.

RAPED AND BEATEN

The trial judge, Mr. Justice J. Boy McBride, described the slaying as "one of the most horrible" murders in his experience on the bench. Medical evidence showed Mrs. Middlestadt had been raped and her face smashed.

Sim was convicted of murder Feb. 9 but a stay of execution was granted to allow for appeal. The appeal was based mainly on evidence of three psychiatrists who said they found Sim subject to "alcoholic amnesia." But the Albert appeal court ruled there was no evidence of insanity or drunkenness.

Leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada was refused and the justice department refused Monday to interfere with the death sentence.

WALTER (WATTY) FORSYTH, 86-year-old Rapid City, Man., farmer, rolls into Calgary after he drove his tractor 900 miles from his hometown, 165 miles west of Winnipeg, to attend the Calgary Stampede starting July 5. The oldtimer made the trip in two-weeks and en route lived in the home-made trailer he is towing behind the tractor. Ever since the Stampede got under way in 1912, he had wanted to see the show and this was the first chance he got. He plans a lot of sight-seeing before making his way home on the tractor by way of the United States. —(CP Photo)

New Rain-Making Tests Continued By Scientists

NOTE: In one of man's earliest attempts at forcing rain from the skies, he angrily fired cannon balls at likely-looking clouds. But since a brilliant discovery in 1946, his attempt has been more scientific and is in progress on an impressive scale. Here, in the first of three articles, is the story of how he's going about it.

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP) — A scientist breathed into a home-type freezer eight years ago and started a miniature snowstorm that has grown into a blizzard swirling around this question:

"Can man control the weather"

Tests of rain and snow making have been hailed as milestones of a new era in man's relation to nature. The faithful think it may be possible to break droughts and hold back floods, side-track hurricanes, prevent tornadoes and hailstorms, and dissipate fog at airports.

Some even envision man using the weather as a weapon of war—bogging down the enemy's troops in mud, parching his food crops in burning sun, perhaps manufacturing storms to be infected with germs or radio-active dust.

WEATHER MEN SKEPTICAL

Skeptics—including scientists of the U.S. weather bureau—maintain that evidence is far from conclusive that weather control has any chance of being achieved on a practical scale.

There is no clear proof, these skeptics say, that when rain increased it was due to artificial techniques—it might have rained anyway.

A committee appointed by Congress to evaluate the tests has not yet reported, but The Associated Press has surveyed representative rain-making operators, clients and scientists.

Rain making projects were inspired by what happened in 1946 in the laboratory of Dr. Vincent Schaefer, then of the General Electric Co., in Schenectady, N.Y.

DRY ICE DID IT

Schaefer had been trying to duplicate in the laboratory one of nature's "super-cooled" clouds—clouds which contain water in liquid state even though the temperature is below freezing. The water doesn't freeze because it is perfectly pure. He wanted to find out how this "super-cooled" water is suddenly changed, in nature, into a snowstorm.

He produced clouds by blowing his breath into a freezer. But he couldn't produce snow even though he added to his clouds a variety of materials — soap powder, sugar, talcum powder and volcanic dust.

Then one day he was having trouble keeping the freezer at low temperature. He dropped some chunks of dry ice into the box.

A miniature snowstorm developed before his eyes.

The find touched off a host of experiments involving the "seeding" of clouds with dry ice from airplanes in an effort to make them yield snow or rain.

Schaefer and other investigators, both civilian and military, claim they produced precipitation by this means—or at least that precipitation quickly followed seeding.

Later it was found that silver iodide, dispersed from planes or generated as a kind of "smoke" from devices on the ground, could serve the same purpose. Crystals of silver iodide closely resemble those of dry ice.

The theory is that these substance provide "nuclei" for millions of tiny ice crystals in the cloud. As the natural crystals attach themselves to the nuclei, the formation grows and eventually falls to the ground as snow or rain, depending upon the temperature beneath the cloud.

In general, seeding works only on "super-cooled clouds." Fortunately for the rain makers, a lot of these are floating around, even in summer. But they are found only above altitudes of about 12,000 feet.

Silver iodide is supposed to have some advantage over dry ice because it can be dispersed in a sort of "smoke" over relatively large areas. Also, it can be dispensed from generators on the ground. Dry ice must always be dropped from airplanes.

Silver iodide costs more-a-pound than dry ice, but a little goes a long way.

3 TO 20 CENTS AN ACRE

Rain makers using one or the other of the materials usually charge farmers three cents an acre for "seeding" clouds over range land, 20 cents an acre for wheat land.

If an area suffers from too much rain, cloud-seeders believe "over-seeding" may be the answer. They say that with over-seeding it may also be possible to sidetrack hurricanes, break up small thunder clouds before they can brew tornadoes and clear fogs from airports.

The theory of over-seeding is that if enough artificial nuclei are fed into a cloud, all the water in it will be used up in making very small ice crystals, none of which will ever get big enough to fall as snow or rain.

OBITUARIES

The deceased was born in Marmora township, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lough and lived in Toronto and Hastings district prior to moving to Springbrook.

She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Gerald (Evelyn) Chapman, Stockdale; Mrs. Roy (Ethel) Thompson of Belleville; Mrs. George Molyneaux (Florence) of Campbellford; four grandchildren and seven great grandchildren.

Gamma Globulin Available On Prescription

MONTREAL (CP) — Gamma globulin, one of the antibodies against polio, soon will be available on doctor's prescription in all parts of Canada.

The first commercially produced supplies of gamma globulin have been sent from laboratories here to centres in Vancouver, Edmonton, Winnipeg and Saint John, N. B. From these points it will be delivered on order to hospitals and drug stores.

The gamma globulin has been produced by Lederle Laboratories, a division of North American Cyanamid Limited. Production was started in early March, but announcement of its availability was delayed until supplies were sufficient to service all of Canada.

Based on human blood, gamma globulin has been found by medical authorities to offer only temporary immunity. An injection has been found to offer protection from paralysis for periods of up to five weeks. It is considered chiefly useful during periods of high incidence of the disease when it either wards off the disease or reduces its severity.

Gamma globulin has been described as that part of the human blood which prevents an individual from catching some infectious diseases twice. When the blood from a thousand or more different individuals is pooled together, medical authorities say the pool is certain to contain antibodies against polio and possibly other diseases.

Says May Return

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP)—The Herald said Monday in a newspage story from its Ottawa correspondent that Agriculture Minister Gardiner is considering a return to Saskatchewan to lead the provincial Liberal party.

Drunken Driver Jailed Seven Days

A man who crashed his late model into the guard rail on the McFarlane St. canal bridge Saturday night, appeared before Magistrate W. R. Philp, QC, on Monday and pleaded guilty to drunk driving, Gerald Airey, 32, of 676 Park St., was sent to the county jail for seven days and his car impounded for three months.

Sergeant Andy Dalton told the court that Airey had had a very close brush with possible death and certain injury. The car had struck an iron guard rail at one end of the bridge.

"Had he travelled just two feet further, his car would have gone through a wooden railing and into the canal," said the sergeant.

Sergeant Dalton also testified that Airey had been in a very drunken condition when arrested. His car had sustained about $300 damage and there had been some damage to the bridge.

Airey was also fined $5 and $2.50 for failing to produce his driver's licence.

$1,600 Saving Made Arena Fire Insurance

Paige Rowell has been awarded the contract for fire insurance on Civic Arena. His tender was $6,723.06 for $86,000 coverage on a co-insurance basis.

Announcement of the award was made in a letter from the Civic Arena committee to city council. The letter was read at the board of works meeting Monday night.

Ald. Stan McBride, a member of the arena committee, said that as a result of their investigation of insurance coverage, the committee had been able to save the city close to $1,600 a year.

Ald. McBride said the committee had a letter on file from the company who had installed the ice-making plant in the arena, saying it was not necessary to insure the ice equipment because they didn't think it could be damaged.

He said about 10 local firms had submitted tenders for the insurance.

Acceptance of the tender for co-insurance means that Civic Arena will no longer come under the policy covering other city buildings. The property committee of city council has been directed to consider the advisability of applying co-insurance to other city properties.

Market Soars

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market soared to a 25-year high Monday largely because of an advance by Dupont of $15.50 a share. Dupont rose to $143.50 a share. There were unconfirmed rumors the stock would be split and that the company planned to distribute among its stockholders its big holdings of General Motors shares.

MARY MOORE SAYS:

Butka Or Polish Coffee Bread

Without portfolio Pete is a sort of roving press agent and material scout for me. For instance, when he ate Ponczki at Zeni's house, nothing would do but that Zeni give him the recipe. As for Zeni's mother's Butka (unwritable in English type) regardless of the 12 egg yolks required and after he had eaten his lion's share, he insisted "Mum would love to have that recipe".

Winsome Zeni is a medical student too, so after the exams, she wrote me: "I have constantly been coaxed that you are interested in having these recipes which I am sure are familiar to you, but at long last I have been convinced". And ". . .as for Bulka that was really a tussle, for you just can't imagine the difficulties in making a recipe out of something that has always been automatic and about which you have never given a thought. . .I was trying to get some definite measurements out of Moms "Well, I don't really know, dear. I guess I did put in about a pint of milk altogether—I'm not sure". "Mom had learned the making of yeast breads in Poland from her mother who never made any exact measurements. . .but they always turned out superbly. . .here's hoping the bread turns out just as well now that it is finally down on paper"

There are plenty of Polish folk in this audience who instantly will recognize this authentic recipe for a well-known Polish coffee bread. The alert English-cooking readers will recognize its worth and use the 12 leftover egg whites for an angel food cake, as I did.

BULKA—POLISH COFFEE BREAD

New Director YW Miss M. Munroe To Arrive Aug. 30

Appointment of Miss Marguerite Munroe of New Westminster, B.C., as executive director at Peterborough YWCA, succeeding Miss Leta Brownscombe, was announced Monday.

Personnel convener Mrs. T. J. Carley made the announcement at the board of directors meeting, advising that Miss Munroe will arrive August 30th to commence her new duties.

Miss Munroe is a graduate of the University of Saskatchewan and of the School of Social Work in University of British Columbia. She taught in collegiate for some years, then became girls' work secretary in West Vancouver Community Association, and for the past four years was executive director at New Westminster YWCA.

President Mrs. H. T. Rehill expressed the regret of the board that this was Miss Brownscombe's final meeting and spoke of the happy relations always existent between the executive director and the board in the past.

A review of the work accomplished by the YM-YW committee up to the present was given by Mrs. Rehill. She expressed hope that more definite action can be taken when the present survey of the south end of the city is completed.

The camp committee report by Miss Flora Metcalfe showed all preparations made for the 10-day camp on Clear lake, August 8 to 18, and a waiting list of girls wishing to attend.

Mrs. W.H. Perks, repair committee convener, told of plans for a new office for the swimming director and necessary repairs to the gym floor and the furnace to be made during the summer.

Result of a survey on housing for girls made by the public affairs committee was given by Mrs. Jack Nichols, convener. This suggested that good accommodation at fairly uniform rates is available in the city.

Plans for the folk festival in the fall and the requirements of entrants were outlined by Mrs. John Hornal.

Woman Pilot Crop-Dusting

CALGARY (CP)—Crop dusting by airplane is not a common Canadian occupation — especially for a woman.

At the controls of a Tiger Moth as it swept close over the 3,500-acre wheat fields of Walter Reich near Lethbridge, Alta., this week was Mary Willcox, 27, a partner in Skyspray of Canada, Ltd., of Calgary.

In the past three years, Miss Willcox has flown over 25,000 acres of grain in Alberta, dusting the crops with insecticide. She started flying at 16 in 1943 and has given flying instructions to students at Philadelphia, on the west coast, and in Hawaii.

Bastedo-Matthews

STIRLING (ENS)—A pretty wedding was solemnized in Holloway United church, Belleville, when Doreen Mildred, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Matthews of Belleville, became the bride of Charles Andrew Douglas Bastedo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bastedo of Stirling. The Rev. Sidney Larman officiated in the double-ring ceremony.

Mr. Clifford Templer, church organist, provided the music and accompanied the soloist, Miss Susanne Cavers, who sang before the ceremony "The Wedding Prayer" and during the signing of the register "Through the Years."

The bride was given in marriage by her father and was radiant in a gown of white Belgian lace and nylon tulle, fashioned with molded strapless bodice and empire waistline and a jacket of lace with vee neckline, Queen Anne collar and long sheath-like sleeves. The waltz-length skirt was of tiered tulle ruffles which cascaded from a draped overskirt of lace in Crinoline effect. Her veil of silk tulle illusion was caught by clusters of seed pearl orange blossoms to a pill-box hat, and she carried a hand bouquet of cascading lily-of-the-valley.

Mrs. Wm. Cone of Belleville, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor, and Mrs. Elmer Rodgers, sister of the groom, and Miss Nancy Matthews, sister of the bride, were bridesmaids. They were dressed alike in strapless bouffant gowns of nylon tulle with matching jacket effect cornflower blue stoles. Mr. Bert Bastedo, brother of the groom, was groomsman, and Messrs. Elmer Rodgers of Frankford and Donald Matthews of Belleville were ushers.

The reception was held in the church parlors where the bride's mother received, attired in Mogashel linen in pink tone, with white accessories and corsage of pink feathered carnations, sweetpeas and lily-of-the-valley. She was assisted by the groom's mother, who wore coral linen with white accessories and corsage of feathered carnations, sweetpeas and lily-of-the-valley.

Guests were present from Toronto, Frankford, Stirling, Kingston and Peterborough.

For travelling the bride chose a Wedgwood blue suit with white and pink accessories and wore a corsage of Demure roses and lily-of-the-valley. Mr. and Mrs. Bastedo will live at Stirling.

Graduation Held

Graduation exercises were held at the Central school on Friday afternoon with members of the Home and School Association serving the graduates cokes, ice cream and cake at the close.

Principal Mr. D. T. Crawford spoke to the class and presented the board of education prize of $10 for highest standing to Allan Paton. The prize for second highest standing of $5, given by the Home and School Association, was presented by President Mrs. Don Craig to Charlie Sorrie.

Mothers of the prizewinners, Mrs. N. D. Buchanan and Mrs. Wm. Sorrie, were special guests present.

Teachers of the school had been honored previously with a tea given by the Home and School executive. A gift was presented to Miss Ruth Lewers, who is leaving the staff to be married.

The cardigan sweater takes the place of coat or jacket on weekends this summer. Goes over everything, from dawn into evening.

Makes Trip To Stratford To See Daughter In Plays

NOTE: Following is from an article in the Regina Leader-Post.

By KATHLEEN KRITZWISER.

REGINA (CP)—The bell will clang throuhg the halls of Balfour technical school for the last time this term on Wednesday, June 30 4 o'clock. Streaking out the door before the last clang will be Mrs. Jessie Hyland, librarian, to catch the 6 o'clock plane to Stratford where her daughter Frances has assigned her a role with the Shakespearian festival.

"Frances thinks I should play a 'stage mother,'" Mrs. Hyland told us, a little apologetically, "but there are just two things wrong with that. A stage mother has to sit i nthe wings and knit. There are no wings to the Stratford stage of course, and I can't knit! The only thing I ever knitted in my life was a washcloth that turned out to be six feet long!"

The moment she gets to Stratford, it's more than likely Jessie Hyland will be kept busy enough playing herself. She is very much like Frances, the same brown shine to the eyes, the same surprisingly deep voice for such a little person, the same sudden coming alive of the same gamin face.

TO STAY TO END

Mrs. Hyland will be a charming and anchoring addition to the Stratford company. She plans to stay for the run of the festival and if nothing else is accomplished this summer, she vows to get a few pounds onto Frances. "I'm going to get some steaks into her, believe me!"

She is proud of Frances, but it's a humble kind of pride, as though she sat off the side and looked at this child and shimmered in the knowledge of what she has become.

(Frances Hyland, a native of Shaunavon, Sask., first became interested in Jrama in Regina where she attended drama classes. She went to England four years ago on an IODE scholarship for study at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art. Her appearances on television led to roles in H. M. Tennent productions.

(Miss Hyland interrupted a British tour to come to Canada for this year's Stratford Festival where she will have leading roles in Measure for Measure and in the Taming of the Shrew.)

Says Women Not Living Up To Responsibilities

BANFF, Alta. (CP)—Dr. Kenneth D. Wells said Monday that North American women are not living up to their responsibilities in trying to swing the undecided third of the world to the free way of life.

Dr. Wells, president of Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge, Pa., addressed the biennial convention of the American Federation of Soroptomist Clubs here. He spoke on the dynamics of women's affairs in the atomic age.

He said women should speak so clearly and so vehemently of their faith in free society that there would be no hesitation in those countries now toying with the idea of communism.

N.B. Senator To Talk On Women In Public Life

FREDERICTON (CP)— Senator Muriel McQueen Fergusson of Fredericton, New Brunswick's first woman senator, will address a session of the National Council of Women annual meeting here tonight.

The Liberal senator, who was appointed to the Senate last year, will talk on women in public life, a subject dear to the heart of the national council. One of the council's chief aims across Canada is to stand behind and get more women candidates interested in running for public office.

Senator Fergusson is distinguished on another count as she was instrumental in getting women qualified for jury duty in her province. This year the New Brunswick legislature lifted one more bar against women when it passed a law allowing them jury duty.

VARIOUS SUBJECTS

At Monday's session delegates divided into three groups to discuss housing, women in public life and the effects on homes and families of the working mother.

During housing discussions the council decided to act as watchdogs in their individual communities to make sure that new developments are properly planned and executed.

The council's stand on women in public life is that more Canadian women must be educated to their responsibilities in politics. Opinion was that too many women tend to stand aside and not inform themselves on vital political and civic matters.

As a partial solution to the problems of a working mother, delegates suggested more day nurseries and more guidance officials for communities where there are many such mothers.

C. E. Allen Pupils Heard In Recital

A piano recital from the studio of Mr Charles E. Allen was held on Monday evening in the George Street Sunday school auditorium. Those taking part in the recital were entertained afterward with refreshments and a social time.

Baskets of Canterbury Bells, Syringa and Sweet William decorated the stage attractively for the occasion.

Two duo piano numbers were heard, the first by Marion Trethewey and Mr. Allen and the second by Lorne Hale and Mr. Allen. Those heard in duets were Faye and Shirley Sharp, Elizabeth Latimer, Anne Wainwright, Lynn and June Tucker, Kathryn Magee and Barbara Ephgrave.

Solo selections were by Donald Hamilton, Anne Dainard, Betty Anne Holmes, Betty Rose, Susan Marrs, Karen Potts, Spencer Tucker Mary Whittington, Judy Masters, Judy Dawson, Ronald Butterworth, Beverley Garside, Bob Pammett, Richard Marrs, Shirley Skinner, Dianne Hutchison, Sandra Savigny, Diane Sue Delahaye, Faye Sharp, Catherine McDougall, Shirley Sharp, Kenneth McFadden, Betty Mitchell, Deanna Lefler, Bob Howson, Steven Thomas, Suzanne Shaw, Mary Jane Simmers, Margaret Earle, Stanley Dainard, Anne Wainwright, Gaele Porter, Mollie Pammett, Bernice Watkins, June Tucker, Lynn Tucker, Sandra Walsh, Dianne Cookman, Carolyn Loucks, Catharine Moebus, Elizabeth Lattimer, Mary Dainard, Beverley Millen, Kathryn Magee, Karen Hendry and Mary Hurle.

Murphy-Bleecker

At an evening ceremony in St. James United church, Evelyn Christine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Bleecker, Halloway, Ontario, became the bride of Albert Charles Murphy of Toronto in a double ring ceremony.

The Rev. Lloyd Shorten officiated. Organist Mrs. Charles Renaud played softly during the ceremony and the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in her foam white waltz length gown of embroidered tulle. The fitted bodice was strapless and from the waist, the very full skirt billowed over a crinoline. A brief cutaway bolero with long fitted sleeves and small soft collar was worn. Her hem-length tulle veil was caught with a mother-of-pearl tiara and she carried a cascade of pink Delight roses and lily-of-the-valley.

Attending the bride was her sister, Mrs. Gerald Frederick, as matron of honor in a gown of shrimp peau de soie with matching tulle gloves and tulle headdress caught with pearls, carrying a nosegay of tinted button 'mums and Sweetheart roses. Little Brenda Frederick, niece of the bride, was flower girl in a gown of debutante blue peau de soie with matching tulle gloves and tulle headdress held with pearls, carrying a basket of tinted button 'mums and fern.

Groomsman was Elmer Fisher of Toronto. Gerald Frederick and Richard Eggleton were ushers.

Following the reception and dance at Club Aragon the couple left for Toronto and points west. She donned a strapless flowered cotton dress of mustard wedgewood blue and white with mustard and white accessories.

MR. AND MRS. STANLEY E. J. FOWLER of Toronto, as pictured after their marriage in Port Hope United church on Saturday. The bride is the former Miss Dorothy Brenton, a graduate nurse. The groom was her patient following a bad auto accident about two years ago. He is holder of numerous swimming trophies in both United States and Canada (Photo by Norman Lilley, Toronto)

2 Blind Girls Working In Hospital X-ray Room

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Two girls who work all day at Victoria hospital's x-ray darkroom here claim the job is easy. The girls are blind.

Marion McMillan, 27, began working with the hospital's x-ray department 4½ years ago. She had never handled an x-ray before in her life, but now has complete confidence in her work and for a long time has been processing x-rays by herself.

She became so proficient that recently she took on another task—training another totally blind girl to become her assistant.

For 19-year-old June Fanson, the student x-ray worker, it is a step into an entirely different world. She had just completed 13 years at the Brantford School for the Blind, and now she is putting her education to work.

TRICKY TASKS

First came the routine requirement of finding her way from the darkroom to the x-ray washer unit and to the drier, so she could make the short trip quickly and confidently.

Now she faces the technical task of pinning x-rays to holders, washing them, putting them in the drier, timing the drying process and a dozen other chores—a difficult task even for a person with sight.

"It's kind of tricky," June says, "because there are so many things to learn and to remember."

Hospital officials are happy to have Miss Fansom with them and are convinced she soon will be an expert at her work. They point with pride to her teacher and co-worker, Miss McMillan.

GOOD SERVICE

"Marion has given very satisfactory service since she came here," says Dr. P. F. New, director of the hospital's radiology department. "This work seems particularly suited to a person whose sight is defective."

Both girls obtained their positions at the hospital through the efforts of Harold W. Land, placement officer for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind in the London district. They are the only blind girls in western Ontario who have been employed by hospitals, he says.

By showing in action what can be done without sight, he said, these two girls have encouraged more general acceptance of the idea blind persons should be permitted the greatest freedom of opportunity in developing their talents.

"Is there anything else I can get for you?"

DOROTHY DIX:

Divorced From Guilty Mate Visit To Son Irks Wife

DEAR MISS DIX: Two years ago I obtained a divorce, for infidelity, after being married 25 years. My ex-husband immediately married his paramour. We have a son, now 25, married, and the father of a new baby. I live by myself, have a good job, and no intention of poaching on the young people. My son and daughter-in-law have been accepting invitations from my ex-husband which hurts me. Furthermore, as friendly relations seem to have been established between the two families, I don't like to visit my son as I don't want to run into my successor. My daughter-in-law says this attitude is very silly. She contends that the modern thing to do is continue on friendly terms with all parties concerned in a divorce. How can I handle this situation?

Verna B.

✧ ✧ ✧

TACT REQUIRED

ANSWER: Unfortunately, at least for your daughter-in-law's point of view, emotions defy such categories as "modern" or "old-fashioned." An individual has feelings, and feelings are liable to be hurt. Being caustit and brittle may cover up a hurt, but won't avoid it. Your daughter-in-law is sitting on top of the world and from her invulnerable position as a happy wife and proud new mother she simply can't appreciate your difficulties.

It's natural enough for your son to want his father to see the new grandchild, the new home, and to meet a lovely daughter-in-law. But both young people should have enough sense to arrange the visits so they won't clash with yours. Problems like this beset every family involved in divorce and remarriage. They must be faced and handled tactfully. The fact that you were the innocent party throughout the entire divorce proceedings, unfortunately, doesn't spare you any of the unpleasant details. Probably it makes things worse, but it's one of those jolts in life that must be taken courageously. I'm sure your daughter-in-law will fall in with a suggestion from you that family visits be judiciously timed.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: My 19-year-old daughter is going out with a married man of 25. When his wife learned of the affair, she made him leave their home, and he's now living with a sister. We refuse to let him come to the house, but I know my daughter meets him on the outside. Would it be better if we let him see her here?

MRS. D.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: You might be able to kill the whole affair by having the young man visit your dau... at home. Very often the chi... not the entire, attraction of an affair of this kind is its clandestine angle. The excitement of secrecy sheds a glamor over what is actually extremely sordid. Perhaps, too, if you have the man call at your home, you can better show him the wrong he is doing the girl. The idea has definite merit.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: For eight of the 15 years of our marriage, my husband has been a heavy drinker. A few months ago, he began going to church with me and the children, although he hadn't attended church since our marriage. However, the drinking hasn't stopped. Do you think there's a chance that he'll reform?

RITA L.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: He is showing every indication of wanting to change and he needs every bit of encouragement he can get. Since he's returned to church, urge him to discuss the problem with your pastor. If he needs further help, by all means have him go to Alcoholics anopymous. This organization is of inestimable help in any case where a man sincerely wants to overcome drinking.

Butka Or Polish

½ teaspoon vanilla. Scald 1 cup milk and cool to lukewarm. Crumble yeast into milk together with 2 tablespoons sugar. Let stand for 10-15 minutes. Meanwhile sift flour and salt into bowl. Add yeast mixture. Then add the other cup of milk, the eggs beaten together with the 1 cup sugar, and the vanilla. Grated orange skin and the butter melted and cooled are also added now. The dough is kneaded thoroughly until it is smooth and elastic and does not stick to an unfloured board. Grease 2 pans (about 7x13x3 inches) and divide the dough into halves (for 2 loaves of bread). Place the pans in a warm place and let the dough rise until twice its bulk. When ready to be placed in oven brush surfaces gently with a beaten egg yolk. Bake in oven of 350 deg. for 1 hour or until bread is golden brown."

PONCZKI — POLISH DOUGH NUTS

(Courtesy Zeni)

As far as I can make out this is pronounced paunsh-kee.

"These are made out of the same dough as that for the Butka. Instead of milk, however, you can add 1 large can evaporated milk, and perhaps a little less flour. (Mom says that here you'll have to use your own judgment as to how much milk and flour to use to make dough of right consistency.) Instead of putting dough in pan to rise put on pastry board and roll out to thickness of about 1". Cut dough with a round glass —the size you wish, 2" or so in diameter. Set the ponczki aside on the board in a warm place to rise well.

Melt some good quality shortening in a large deep pot. Fry the ponczki in the hot deep fat and when placing them in turn them so that the side they had been lying on is on top and is given a chance to rise. When one side is brown turn it over (turn over only once, so that they are not given too much time to absorb a great deal of grease). Sprinkle with icing sugar. (To prevent grease from burning too quickly, Mom cuts a potato into chip size pieces and puts in a few pieces once in a while. This also causes the fat to bubble, thus helping the dough to rise).

These ponczki may be filled with plum jam."

. . . and I'm filled with pangs of hunger.

Thanks a million Zeni.

COLLINSON—In loving memory of a dear father, Mr. Joseph Collinson, who passed away June 29, 1945.
Beside your grave we often stand
With hearts both crushed and sore,
But in the gloom the sweet words come:

God knows how much we miss him,
He counts the tears we shed
And whispers, "He only sleeps,
Your loved one is not dead."
—Ever remembered by Harry and grandson Paul.

PETERSON—In fond memory of a dear mother, Beatrice M. Peterson, who passed away June 29, 1953.
Oh, how patient in thy suffering
When no hand could give thee ease,
God, the helper of the helpless,
Saw thy pain and gave thee peace.
—Ever remembered by Joyce, Frank and family.

WHETUNG—In loving memory of Howard Whetung who passed away June 29, 1945.

Europe Watches Results Of Conference

LONDON (Reuters) — Europe watched Geneva expectantly today to see whether the Eisenhower-Churchill meetings in Washington will breathe new life into the dragging Indo-China peace talks. Action at Geneva has been stalled during the White House conference.

In London, British cabinet met to study reports on the four-day meeting between President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Churchill.

The British press was overjoyed at the results of the talks, seen here as a diplomatic victory for Churchill, but other European reaction was mixed.

French premier Mendes-France said he read the joint statement on the talks with "much satisfaction." The references to Indo-China would give France "a very valuable support in the negotiations it is pursuing," he said.

Earlier, however, Mendes-France declared the statement will not change his plans to reach a compromise within France over the Treaty, before taking any further steps.

West German newspapers joyfully trumpeted the statement's stress on the need for German sovereignty. "West Germany is to become a real partner," the Frankfurter Rundschau declared.

But many agreed the statement was disappointing because it envisaged no definite step-up in plans to end the Allied occupation, now tied up with ratification of the lagging European Defence Community Treaty.

Shooting Spree At Race Track

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP)—The estranged husband of an attractive steamship heiress was in custody of police today following a shooting spree at Delaware Park race track Monday in which his wife and a trainer were wounded.

Fred Hammer, 45, a onetime assistant starter at various tracks, was charged with two counts of assault and intent to kill and one count of carrying a concealed deadly weapon.

Victims of the bizarre shooting were Mrs. Andrea Luckenbach Hammer, 33, and Woodrow W. Long. A two-year-old colt, Now Hear This, once owned by Mrs. Hammer and leased to Long, was struck by a ricochetting bullet.

Mrs. Hammer, struck in the chest and left hip, was described as in satisfactory condition.

Long was only grazed and did not require hospital attention.

Bridge Expert Divorced

NEWFANE, Vt. (AP)—Mrs. Ely Culbertson, wife of the famed bridge expert, was granted a divorce Monday on grounds of "intolerable severity." Windham court awarded Mrs. Culbertson, the former Dorothy Baehne, care and custody of their 20-month-old son, Alexander. Culbertson's first marriage also ended in divorce.

Drew Touring Europe

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Drew is making a four-week tour of Europe, Progressive Conservative party headquarters announced Monday.

Mr. Drew, accompanied by his wife and daughter, Sandra, flew to London Saturday where they were joined by their son, Edward.

Beer Hall Fight Brings $80 Fine

LINDSAY (ENS) — A "quarrel over some timber and a bar room brawl" resulted in a $50 fine and costs being levied in Magistrate's court Monday against a Lindsay man on a charge of assault, occasioning actual bodily harm.

Magistrate R. I. Moore registered the conviction against Hector Blair of Lindsay after hearing the conflicting evidence offered by the complaintant, Roy Junkin, and the defence witnesses. The assault occurred on June 19 in a local beverage room and Junkin suffered a fractured nose in the brief fracas.

An involved story of a dispute over some timber taken from the ruins of a freight shed here after a fire in January formed the basis of the testimony from Junkin and his witness, Cecil Cote, also of Lindsay. Junkin said that after a conversation with Blair and Jack Starr at their beverage room table, Starr struck him from behind, and Blair in the face.

The charges were then laid against both Starr and Blair. Both accused testified, however, that Junkin had started the argument over the timber ownership and two men sitting at their table, Lionel Tracey and Osborne Otto, corroborated their stories including the statement that Starr had not struck Junkin.

Magistrate Moore faced with the conflicting evidence acquitted Starr of the charge. He found Blair guilty of the assault over the argument of counsel J. A. McQuarrie that his client had had sufficient motive in his apprehension on assault and fined him $50 and $32.50 costs or 30 days in jail.

French Abandon Central Strongpoint

SAIGON, Indo-China (AP)—The French today announced abandonment of a strongpoint in central Viet Nam and admitted two days of Vietminh ambushes had mauled their withdrawing troops badly.

The high command said French and Viet Namese forces pulled out last Friday from An Khe, 250 miles northeast of Saigon and 40 miles west of the China sea coast. It had been in French hands since 1946.

The French said their forces suffered "serious losses" in an all-day fight with the Communist-led rebels last Friday and more damage in actions continuing into Sunday. But the high command asserted Vietminh claims of more than 1,000 casualties were greatly exaggerated.

On Sunday, the announcement said, the battered column finally reached the safety of Pleiku, 50 miles west of An Khe.

Will Exhume Body After Confession

HULL, Que. (CP)—Provincial police said Monday that the body of Claude Pare, 19, will be exhumed, probably today, because a Winnipeg transient, Allan Siemons, gave himself up to police at Calgary Saturday and said he killed a youth near Hull.

Police said a coroner's inquest will be re-opened after an autopsy. Siemons is expected to be brought here tonight.

Pare's body was partly decomposed when it floated to the surface of the Ottawa River. He was reported missing June 19.

Police at Calgary said Siemons told them he killed a youth named "Clyde" by beating him, then threw him into the Ottawa river near Hull two weeks ago.

Ask Comics Banned

BIGWIN INN, Ont. (CP) The Ontario Urban and Rural School Trustees Association Monday urged the federal government to stop the flow of objectionable comic books imported by Canada from the United States.

English Paper Says U.S. No Longer Leads

MANCHESTER (Reuters) — The Manchester Guardian said Monday the United States no longer is leading the world because of its own weak leadership and an honest divergence of view with other Western nations.

The Liberal newspaper says it is healthy that in the United States "more public discussion precedes the forming of policy than in other countries."

"But now we have the discussion without policy.

"The secretary of state (John Foster Dulles), who should give direction to the discussion, seems a prisoner of his own rigid prejudice.

"The president, who above all must speak with authority, is silent or ambiguous.

Licence Tests Called Farce

TORONTO (CP)—The examination of applicants for Ontario drivers' licences had become such a farce that for many examiners the issuing of a licence is like selling a ticket, the Ontario legislature's select committee on highway safety was told Monday.

Warren B. Hastings, general manager of the Ontario Motor League, presenting the league's brief to the committee, said about 50 per cent of the examiners are not conducting an examination worthy of the name.

Committee chairman W. M. Nickle (PC—Kingston) asked J. P. Bickell, motor vehicle registrar for Ontario, to comment on Mr. Hastings' statements.

"I think 50 per cent is a most unusual statement for Mr. Hastings to make. I don't see how anyone could make a statement like that without a check on all the examiners," Mr. Bickell said.

Out At The Kawartha

And now, after what seems to have been a long time, but actually not so long after all, considering the remarkable speed of pipe layers, the competitions are to get underway.

First, the draw for the qualifying round of the club championship has been made by the handicap committee.

The first round will be played on Saturday, July 3. A new draw will be made up for the second round which will take place on Sunday, July 4. Players are requested to note the starting times.

The Saturday draw:—

12.00 noon— V. Rawlence, M. Vermette, R. Buchanan, T. MacCaig.

12.10 p.m. — S. Whiddon, M. Akers; F .Todd, D. Ouimet.

12.20 p.m. — E. Reynolds, H. Woodcox; C. Menzies; D. Vitarelli.

12.50 p.m. —J .Raine, W. Harle, H. McLean, A. Rhodes.

The Sunday round will start at 10:00 a.m.

For all other competitions the first round must be completed by July, 11th. In view of the recent delay in getting the competitions started, all players are urged to get started pronto. For the benefit of those who may have forgotten, it is customary for the man in the lower bracket to contact the man in the upper in order to keep the schedule running smoothly.

Plans To Enter 8-Pound Trout

SUDBURY (CP)—Wilf McConnell of Sudbury caught an eight-pound speckled trout in Shoofly lake in this district and plans to enter it in the Field and Stream fishing contest.

It compares with last year's winner, a 9½-pound fish taken in Lake Nipigon last July 23 by James Warren of Fort William. The world record is held by the 14½-pound fish caught by the late Dr. J. W. Cook in the Nipigon river in 1916.

McConnell's fish was 23 inches long with a girth of 18 inches.

He caught it June 13 on a seven-pound test spinning line, using a small hook baited with a dead minnow.

Sportsmen say Shoofly lake appears to be an unusually good natural breeding ground for speckled trout. Springs in the bottom favor reproduction and the fish can find ample food along the shore. A recent check showed thousands of fingerlings in the lake, although it has not been stocked for several years.

France Ignores Graham's Visit

PARIS (Reuters)—Billy Graham, the youthful American evangelist who has preached to over 2,000,000 persons during his four-month tour of Europe, said here today that he had not been invited to address a single public meeting during a two-day visit to France.

Graham arrived in Paris by road early this morning from Frankfurt where he had been receiving treatment for a kidney ailment.

"I only go where I am invited, and here in France I was only invited to address religious workers," he said.

TOLD FRENCH DIFFICULT

The tall fair-haired preacher smiled broadly when a reporter asked him at a press conference: "Do you think you would have had more difficulty in winning converts in France than elsewhere?"

"Everybody told me in each city I went to that it was the most difficult and nobody would respond," Graham said.

"But I find the heart of man is the same the world over."

In contrast to the tumultuous receptions he received in London and some continental centres, Graham's presence in Paris went virtually ignored by press and populace.

St. Andrew's WMS Holds June Meeting

HASTINGS (ENS)—Mrs. Wm. Brooks was hostess to St. Andrew's WMS for the June meeting. The president, Mrs. Charles Dodd, opened the meeting with the call to worship the hymn "The Lord's My Shepherd", followed by the Apostles Creed. The scripture reading was taken from 11th Chapter of St. Luke and read by Mrs. Wm. Whitred.

Secretary Mrs. J. C. Taylor and treasurer Mrs. A. Sherwin presented their reports.

Roll call was answered by 13 members with a verse from St. John.

Mrs. Reta Johnson rendered a vocal solo, "God Hath not promised."

The topic "A voyage of Discovery" was delivered by Mrs. T. E. Kennedy, Mrs. J. E. Taylor, Mrs. Brooks and Mrs. John McMillan.

Final plans for the Bake Sale, to be held on July 3rd were completed.

It was decided that the August meeting would be at the home of Mrs. Allan Sherwen.

An observation contest was held with Mrs. J. C. Taylor, the winner.

Members sang closing hymn "Jesus the dying Love" and the Rev. Kennedy led in prayer.

End Strike

KINGSTON, N. Y. (AP) — An employers group Monday night announced settlement of a one-day strike of AFL laborers and hod-carriers which had halted work on a 75-mile stretch of the New York state thruway. Terms were not announced, but it was learned that the union would be granted a 12½-cent-an-hour wage increase it had sought.

Eddie Fisher Finds Timing Very Important

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — How do you figure a success like Eddie Fisher's?

Eddie, who was born Edwin Jack Fisher in Philadelphia almost 26 years ago, is the biggest record seller today. His fan following harks back to the harried heydey of Frank Sinatra. With appearances on his radio and TV shows and in the flesh, his take may reach a million dollars this year. All this without having been in a movie!

How has he done it?

"I've been lucky," he smiled.

Yes, but luck isn't everything. I suggested that perhaps the public was ready for a full - voice singer like Eddie after an era of crooners.

WOULDN'T CROON

"That might be part of it," he agreed. "I can remember when I got a job at the Copacabana in New York (at $125 a week). That was eight years ago, when Sinatra was at his peak of his first career, that is.

"I was belting the songs then, giving them everything I had. Even the love songs, although I didn't know anything about love then. People told me I should sing softer, that I ought to croon. I couldn't see it that way.

"Other things in my favor? I'd say timing. Timing and management. I was fortunate in coming to the attention of Milt Blackstone, my manager. He channeled my career in the proper direction, avoiding the mistakes I would have made by myself. He also steered me to Eddie Cantor, who gave me my first big break.

ARMY HELPED, TOO

"I think my army service helped me, too. I look back on them as two of the best years of my life. I got to troupe, which most young people don't have a chance to do these days. I sang before all kinds of audiences all over the world. I was a GI like the rest of them, but I was on a spot, too."

I tried to get a line on Fisher over lunch at the Ambassador Hotel where he is headlining the Coconut Grove show. Much has been said about his modesty, and it appears to be genuine. He seems to be earnestly trying to please.

He admitted that he had troubles out here on a previous visit. Some photographers got peeved at him when he declined to be photographed with a glamor doll he was squiring. But he said it was all a misunderstanding. He seems to be gracious to everyone, especially his young fans.

MISSED ON "THREE COINS"

Much of Eddie's success is due to his choice of songs to record. He gave much of the credit to Hugo Winterhalter, the musical mind of Victor Records. For every song he puts on wax, Eddie said he might listen to hundreds of prospective tunes.

His judgment is not infallible. While Eddie was vacationing in Florida, a song writer brought him a new song and urged him to record it. The singer listened and shook his head. The song: "Three Coins in the Fountain," today's No. 1 hit.

But he can be very right, too. As with "Oh, My Papa."

How does he choose a song?

"I'm a great title man. I fall in love with titles like 'Green Years.' I also look for high notes; I like something I can really belt. And I look for things that can make good arrangements. Like when I saw Hugo's arrangement for 'Lady of Spain.' I told him: 'This looks great for me. I can change keys four times.'"

IT'S OFFICIAL—Lovely Danielle Genault, 19, is the new "Miss Europe." She was selected after judges at Vichy, France learned Christel Schaak, the original winner was a widow and ineligible for title.

Road Builders Criticize 'Untidy Methods'

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Road Builders' Association Monday criticized the Ontario highways department's "untidy" methods of awarding highway contracts at "ridiculous" prices.

The association, in a brief presented to the legislature's highways investigation committee and read by association president Donald E. McQuigge, said then keen competition, unlimited credit and expansion have resulted in contractors bidding to get work, "come what may, that is without regard to the relation of the bidding to the cost of the work."

"This, coupled with the department's seemingly avid desire to award work at the lowest unit prices on the continent, without regard to the ultimate cost to the department, has brought about conditions that are not good.

"Work awarded at ridiculous prices and that fact known to both parties; and the work ultimately paid for at cost or little better, does not conform to the true spirit of tendering. It is this circumstance of the untidy method of mutual helping out — government to contractor and contractor to government that is so unsatisfactory to all concerned. A business basis of tendering and carrying out the work, to the satisfaction of all concerned, is within the power of the government to establish."

The brief said proper facilities, personnel and organization to ensure adequate pre - engineering would cure one half of the problem.

"Pre-determination of a contractor's fitness to bid, asked on prior experience, character, personnel, financial and equipment resources will correct the other half of the problem. They must be linked together."

The association urged the imposition of a penalty on contractors who fail to complete their contract work on time and conversely recommended an incentive bonus to contractors for all project completions which are made prior to the date stipulated in the contract.

Young Thief Killed

NEW YORK (AP)—A 14-year-old New York boy was fatally injured when he fell from the roof of a Bronx factory that he was attempting to loot for the second time Sunday night, police reported. Police said the youth, Martin Julian, entered the building through a skylight and then slipped when he tried to climb down a pile of boxes stacked there.

STREET SCENE—Clarabelle Byers, 16, and her brother, Ike, 14, pole their raft away from their home in a flooded section of Des Moines, Ia., after picking up a few of their belongings.

Holds Service In Memory Of Assassination

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP)—Inexplicably, the big open touring car stopped amid hundreds of spectators. A shot rang out and a large bemedalled man in the rear seat pitched forward, mortally wounded.

While the crowd gasped in horror, a pistol barked again. This time a beautiful white - gowned woman crumpled and rolled from the seat.

Fifteen minutes after the Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne, and his wife, the Countess Sophie Shotek, were dead.

The double assassination 40 years ago Monday, triggered the first of two great wars of the 20th century.

ASSASSIN HONORED

Monday as on every anniversary the people of this ancient Bosnian city held a service of remembrance —Not for the royal couple that died, but for the assassin, a student named Gavrilo Princip.

Princip, 20 years old when he fired the fatal shot, touched off a disastrous four-year war. But in Bosnian eyes he also accomplished his purpose—freedom from Austro-Hungarian rule. Yugoslavia became a united nation at the end of the First World War.

Princip was arrested on the spot on one of Sarajevo's main streets. Later 24 co-conspirators were rounded up and jailed. They had plotted the archduke's assassination to call world attention to what they considered Austro-Hungarian yranny.

DIED IN PRISON

The empire accused the little neighboring kingdom of Serbia of backing the plot, and a month after the assassination attacked the country.

The First World War began.

Of the 25 youths arrested in the conspiracy, three were acquitted and three were sentenced to death and hanged. The others, including Princip, were sentenced to jail terms ranging from 10 years to life.

Princip escaped the hangman's noose because he had not reached his 21st birthday. He died in an Austrian prison, as did many of his fellow conspirators. Three are alive and free.

Worth Remembering

In the running high and broad jump, Les Steers and Jesse Owens jumped 6 ft. 11 in. and 26 ft. 8¼ in., respectively! The world's records, however, are held by the gazelle, which can cover the ground in hops 12 ft. high and 40 ft. long!
A comparison worth remembering!

Soviet, West Can Live Peacefully

Hatred of Communism Doesn't Exclude Peace—Churchill

OTTAWA (CP)— Sir Winston Churchill said today that he still believes Russia and the West can learn to live side by side in peace.

The British prime minister said that he holds a great hatred for communism but that does not exclude the possibility of peaceful coexistence.

"We may have to learn to live with all sorts of people in this wicked world," he told a press conference following talks with the Canadian cabinet.

He made these other points:

1. He believes the prospects of world peace are better since his visit to Washington with Foreign Secretary Eden. He praised President Eisenhower and said "Thank God he is where he is."

2. He spoke with great emotion about Canada's great future and said the spirit of the Commonwealth might provide a solution to the Asian problem.

He had "jolly" discussions with the Canadian cabinet but the question of holding a Commonwealth conference on Asian affairs had not yet been brought up. Britain would favor such a conference if it is requested by a majority of Commonwealth countries.

BELIEVES IN STRENGTH

He was asked about his views on United States reports accusing Britain of trying to appease the Soviet Union as Hitler was appeased in 1939.

Sir Winston replied that he can only treat this accusation with contempt. He believed in "peace through strength," or as the New York Times had once put it—armed to parley.

There have been people who have said that you can't have it both ways but Sir Winston said there is no harm in trying.

He believed many Russians would prefer good times rather than slaughter.

CAN BE COMBINED

He said he believes the policies of negotiation and continuing defence build-up can be combined.

As for accusations that Britain is shirking her duty the best he could do was to treat them with the contempt they deserved.

Asked whether he plans to make another visit to Ottawa, he replied with evident emotion that he would

Doucett Denies Admitting Prices Ridiculous

TORONTO (CP)—Highways Minister Doucett today denied that he admitted highway contracts were being let at "ridiculously low" prices.

Testifying before the Ontario legislature's highways investigation committee, Mr. Doucett also stated that he did not authorize overpayments on 16 contracts on which the department claims it overpaid by $2,500,000.

The minister was on the witness stand for more than an hour answering a battery of questions by committee members after J. L. Zoller, the department's financial comptroller, revealed the $2,500,000 in overpayments which as yet the department has not recovered.

RECORDS WERE BURNED

A good part of the hour was spent by the committee in trying to determine what happened to the records of the Red Lake highway, completed in 1949. After questioning Mr. Doucett and W. A. Clarke, chief engineer, the committee finally learned from Mr. Zoller that Robert McEwen, Kenora division engineer, burned the records to make more room in his office.

In a statement read to the committee, Mr. Doucett "categorically" denied a claim made in a brief by the Ontario Road Builders Association Monday that work was awarded at ridiculous prices, and that the minister had admitted to D. H. Storms, the association vice-president, that contracts were being let at unrealistic prices.

"When the conditions of the tender are met, it would seem to me that I might be under severe criticism should a specific job be awarded other than to the lowest tenderer. Again, if jobs are let at 'ridiculous prices,' may I ask who makes these 'ridiculous prices'? . . . I suggest that here the fault, if any, lies not with the department of highways but with the contracting industry or perhaps I should say with certain members of the industry. . . ."

Mr. Doucett said if there has been falsification of records, "such action has been entirely without the scope of my knowledge, and most certainly without my approval.

Hastings Man Drowned In Night Swim

HASTINGS (ENS). — Jack Brundritt, 32 years of age, drowned at 12.15 a.m. today just below the lower locks in the canal when he jumped into the water for a cooling swim.

His body was recovered at 1.05 a.m., 150 feet downstream from where he entered the water.

Brundritt, originally from Wiarton, has been operating a meat and cold storage locker in Hastings village for two summers now. He is the father of two small children and his wife is expecting a third shortly.

Mr. and Mrs. Brundritt were walking along a footpath beside the canal, returning from a friend's summer cottage a quarter of a mile from their home, when he decided to go in for a swim. Mrs. Brundritt tried to dissuade him, but he jumped in anyway.

SOON IN DIFFICULTY

The water is swift there and he was soon in difficulties. His cries for help were heeded by his wife, who was handicapped because she is in an advanced stage of pregnancy.

At one stage she is reported to have caught hold of him briefly, but she had to let go. He was swept downstream in the strong current to his death.

Mrs. Brundritt ran across the road to a sports shop owned by Stephen Perchaluk to get help. Perchaluk returned with her and he and Ike Bonds located the body in 11 feet of water with a pike pole. They were assisted by Jack Reeves, veterinarian, who had a boat.

DRAG 30 MINUTES

Altogether the dragging lasted half an hour.

Dr. William N. Campbell of Hastings was called and he declared Brundritt dead as soon as he examined him.

Chief Constable Len Switzer is in charge of the investigation. He is being assisted by OPP Constable Archie Eady of Campbellford. Coroner Dr. D. W. Burgess has not yet decided whether or not there will be an inquest.

Unknown to Mrs. Brundritt there is a long chain hanging up near the lower locks where her husband drowned. Had she noticed

Say Short Circuit Touched Off Blast In Auburn Plant

Four men barely escaped with their lives when an explosion rocked the Auburn power house of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission on north Water St. Tuesday afternoon at 3:50.

The explosion was caused by a short circuit at the rear of the control panel at the west side of the building.

"I ducked my head and ran through a wall of fire," said Frank Cahill, operator in charge. Meanwhile Roy Dunbar jumped through a rest room window, losing most of his trousers, but emerged unhurt.

Also escaping were Cecil Searles and David Crews. A fifth man, James Belford of Campbellford, was just on the point of entering the building when the explosion occurred.

$100,000 DAMAGE

The plant and equipment were described by fire chief William Sorrie as an almost complete write-off. Total damages are not known but will likely be in excess of $100,000.

Peterborough was without power for 25 minutes after the explosion, which occurred in the middle of the Examiner's Tuesday run. A tie in with the Ross Dobbin station at Lily lake was made at 4:15.

The three huge turbo-generators still turned grotesquely, pumping power indiscriminately for some time after the explosion while firemen poured water into the building, wondering if it were to explode at any minute.

Led by Frank Cahill, several Hydro men worked feverishly to dam the flow of water away from the still-turning generators. They dropped stop logs down 15 feet into the Otonabee to check the flow of water.

EQUIPMENT POPS

Meanwhile glass bulbs and insulation equipment inside the building snapped, cracked and popped. It was a weird sound, unlike the hiss and crunch of non-electrical fires.

By 4:45 the fire was well enough under control so that James Belford could retrieve five years of electrical notes and one man could uncover a fishing rod from the power-floor sludge.

Firemen, photographers and hydro workers waded in in hip-boots to look over the stricken power monster. One bank of transformers on the control panel

8 Critically Ill After Gas Kills 3 On Ship

MONTREAL (CP)—Three men died when lethal liquid chlorine spilled through the hold of the coastal freighter North Gaspe Tuesday. Eight others were reported in serious condition in hospital early today.

Hospital authorities added three names this morning to the list of five in serious condition, including one whose condition was termed "critical."

Jean-Claude Dube, 21, of Quebec, whose condition had not been considered overly serious, suffered a relapse during the night and doctors feared for his life.

Other names added to those already considered serious were Andre Vallee, 25, of Montreal and Jean-Charles Dore, 27, of Beauport, Que.

Forty-eight stevedores and crew members of the small passenger-cargo vessel fought their way or were carried ashore when a liquid gas container slipped from a hoist and plunged 25 feet into the cargo well spreading a greenish-yellow poison mist through the ship.

Sweating dock workers climbed a sheer steel ladder up the sides of the hold while others, sleeping in their cabins, were rescued by firemen who donned respirators to forge through the deadly haze.

Ten men collapsed on reaching the deck and were carried to the pier where passing cars were commandeered to carry the injured to hospital.

Dead are Lucien St. Pierre, 34, who was nearest to the 150-pound cylinder when it crashed into the

Laredo Minus Water Supply

LAREDO, Tex. (AP) — Laredo awoke to business as usual—but minus water supply—today with the greatest flood in Rio Grande history surging past its doorstep.

Across the river, Nuevo Laredo showed no sign of life. It's on lower ground, and most of the 60,000 people there fled to the hills while water rose in the streets.

Upstream 85 miles, the situation at Piedras Negras, Mexico, a mostly adobe village of 35,000 across the Rio Grande from Eagle Pass, was described as desperate.

How many were drowned there —if any—nobody knew.

A state highway patrol man said he believed reports of 500 dead in the little Mexican city would be "grossly exaggerated."

"However," he said, "there are signs that a terrible lot of people took an awful beating."

Nearly 100 miles north of Del Rio, at Ozona, Tex., the latest count showed 16 persons dead and one still missing in a cloudburst like several Sunday that gorged the Rio Grande out of its banks.

Recommend Using Planes For Good Eclipse View

OTTAWA (CP)—Apparently the only way to be sure of seeing a total eclipse is to take to the air and even then it can be touch-and-go.

While scientific ground parties fumed helplessly at a heavy overcast which blanketed northern Ontario, two RCAF planes chased the elusive elliptical shadow in northern Quebec with better success.

One plane, a C-119 "Flying Boxcar" testing navigational instruments and carrying three reporters, missed the shadow of total eclipse by about 40 miles as the umbra sped in an arc from Lake Superior towards the Labrador coast at between 2,000 and 3,000 miles an hour. Observers saw the sun about 98 per cent blacked out.

The other, a North Star, bearing scientists from the Dominion observatory headed by Dr. P. M. Millman, chief of the stellar physics division, was believed to have met with better success. However, the North Star was based at Goose Bay, Labrador, and returned there for refuelling before coming back to Rockcliffe. Its results were not immediately known.

This reporter was aboard the Flying Boxcar when it intercepted the eclipse shadow at 52 degrees 30 minutes north, 71 degrees 65 minutes west—a point about 400 miles due north of Quebec City.

Defence research board and RCAF scientists were testing secret navigational instruments—the main purpose of the flight—so the eclipse observations were strictly amateur.

The pilot, Sqdn. Ldr. R. G. (Bob) Christie, 31, of Vancouver, planned to cross the path heading south at the exact time of totality.

The timing was perfect, Flt. Lt. Harry Morson, 30, of Cornwall, Ont., the navigator, had calculated perfectly.

But we missed the full shadow, despite the skilled manoeuvreing of Christie, one of the RCAF's crack pilots. On the approach, out of nowhere, came a ridge of light cloud directly in our path.

Spy Centre In London

MELBOURNE, Australia (Reuters)—Former Russian secret police agent Vladimir Petrov today told how a Russian spy centre covering the United States, Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa was run from the Russian embassy in London.

Sight Wreckage Of Giant Airliner

LONDON (AP) — A portuguese airliner pilot today reported sighting the wreckage of "a giant transport plane" floating on the sea about 25 miles south of the English coastal town of Bournemouth.

Search planes and helicopters immediately took off from British airfields to scour the reported wreckage area.

Captain Marciano Veiga, pilot of a Portuguese Skymaster, flew into London airport from Lisbon and said he caught two glimpses of the plane through a thick haze.

"It was lying perfectly still," Viega said, "and appeared to be a giant transport painted white as our civil airliners."

Queen First To Learn News

OTTAWA (CP) — Sir Winston Churchill today told a press conference that if he had any plans about his retirement he would "first impart them to Her Majesty the Queen."

The British prime minister was replying to questions prepared in advance and read to him by Nicholas Monsarrat, director of the United Kingdom Information Office here.

There has been frequent recurring speculation on Sir Winston's retirement.

AEC Nails Down Oppenheimer Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Atomic Energy Commission Tuesday nailed down the ban against atomic pioneer J. Robert Oppenheimer with a 4-to-1 declaration that he is unfit to handle America's nuclear secrets because of "defects of character . . . and dangerous associations."

The commission thus closed out late Tuesday its role in a long and wordy legal battle with the 50-year-old physicist who was once one of its most trusted advisers.

What the next act would bring was unclear. Neither Oppenheimer nor his counsel were saying what steps, if any, they contemplated. One possibility was an appeal to President Eisenhower.

The president has declined comment in the case since, on his orders, Oppenheimer's security clearance was suspended last December.

Tax Collector Evaded Paying

NEW YORK (AP)—Joseph D. Nunan Jr., senior tax collector in the United States for three years, Tuesday was convicted of evading payment of $91,086 of his own income tax.

The 55-year-old former commissioner of internal revenue faces a possible total sentence of 25 years in prison and a $50,000 fine. He was found guilty on five counts of an indictment covering the years of 1946 through 1950.

A key defence contention was that the money on which Nunan was accused of failing to pay taxes was an inheritance of his wife's and not subject to tax.

A highlight of the trial was testimony from gambler Frank Erickson that he lost an $1,800 bet to Nunan that Harry S. Truman would not be re-elected as president in 1948.

Asked by U.S. Attorney Leonard P. Moore why he didn't report that winning on his tax return, Nunan said other gambling losses during the year balanced it off.

Two Patients Tumble 100 Ft. Down Mountain

HAMILTON (CP)—Two patients from the Mountain Sanatorium were found this morning in an injured condition about 100 feet down the face of the escarpment by six attendants from the hospital who were going for a stroll on their day off. The men heard cries for help and found the pair.

Injured are Bertram Storey, 25, of Toronto, and Jean O'Hara, 21, also of Toronto. Both received bruises and lacerations from the fall and the woman suffered a cracked ankle bone. They are reported to be in good condition after being brought to the top of the mountain by a police rescue team.

A sanatorium doctor said he believed that the pair were knocked unconscious and did not regain their senses until this morning.

The two victims of the 100 foot fall said they went for a walk in the twilight and failed to see the edge of the mountain in the gathering dusk.

West Berlin Youth Leaders Shocked At Red Progress

BERLIN (Reuters)—The Communists' Whitsun youth rally in East Berlin has left West Berlin youth leaders shocked at the progress which Communist indoctrination of youth appears to have made since the last similar rally four years ago.

The new rally brought more than 500,000 boys and youths, aged 6 to 25, to Berlin and gave West Berlin officials their first chance since 1950 to sample the feeling of those who have lived all, or most, of their lives under Communist influence.

Unless Germany is reunited soon and East German youth given access to Western thinking, officials say, a generation will grow up which no longer appreciates that it is in Communist fetters.

SHY AND SUSPECTING

Gerhard Buwitt is one of the chief organizers of the West Berlin youth centre which entertained young East Germans who dared to cross the sector boundary. He said the overwhelming impression gained from them was one of shyness and suspicion.

"It is not that they necessarily believe everything they have been told: That they would be forcibly enlisted as spies and saboteurs or recruited into the Foreign Legion," he said. "But they all had a reserve and wariness of every move we made which frightened us."

The West Berlin youth centre treated the border crossers in the only possible and effective way. It steered clear of political counter-indoctrination and just gave them every possible opportunity to see West Berlin.

Lamport Loses Chairmanship

TORONTO (CP) — Ex-mayor Allan A. Lamport was passed over today when the Toronto Transit Commission chose its new chairman.

William Russell, one of the other four commissioners, was elected. He is labor's representative on the commission.

Mr. Lamport, 49, who resigned Monday after 2½ terms as mayor and was appointed a commissioner Tuesday, was named vice-chairman.

When Mr. Lamport stepped down from the mayor's chair with its salary of $16,900, he became eligible for the $8,000-a-year commissionership and it was predicted that he would probably be chosen chairman in succession to the late W. C. McBrien whose annual salary was $15,000.

Experts, Instruments Helpless

Overcast Blots Out Eclipse Completely

MATTICE (CP)—Canada's first solar eclipse in nine years was blotted out today from the sight of scientific ground parties trying to photograph the rare event from northern Ontario.

As the sun and the moon came together over this area, a low-lying overcast left three groups of astronomers with no target but an impenetrable cloud bank hanging about 600 feet off the ground.

The overcast was thrown up by a cold weather front that moved in from the west overnight. It meant that months of advance preparations, involving Canada's best astronomical minds and many thousands of dollars worth of intricate equipment, went for nothing.

The three teams strung out over 150 miles down the centre of the 80-mile-wide path of totality sweeping northeastward reported the same frustration.

SEE ONLY DARKENING

The Dominion Observatory's main group at Smoky Falls, about 50 miles north of this middle point, and others at Mattice and Hansen to the southeast saw only an early-morning darkening filtered through some 1,500 feet of clouds.

"We went through the motions but didn't get anything," said Dr. Jack Locke of Ottawa, solar specialist in charge of the party camped beside 110-foot Smoky Falls about 100 miles south of James Bay.

"All we can do now is pack up our instruments and go home," he said in a telephone interview. "It's pretty disappointing."

Dr. Locke and his crew spent a month setting up a high camera and other gear, and it will take them another four days to pull it down again.

SAME HARD LUCK

Astronomers at Hansen—from the Dominion astrophysical laboratory at Victoria—were out in the bush and could not be reached by telephone, but Ontario forestry officials there said they had the same hard luck.

"A washout," said one official. "All we saw of it was just a patch of darkness."

It was the same at Mattice, a little roadside community of 850 people that had been swollen by an influx of scores of observers and sightseers.

Astronomers here, who spent the night making last-minute adjustments to instruments pointed towards the rising sun, could only stand by helplessly when the time came.

As the moon started it's scheduled swing across the face of the sun at 6:10 a.m. EDT, nothing was visible here except an almost-imperceptable darkening through the 1,500-foot thick clouds, growing deeper with the approach of the 89 second period of totality starting at 7.10.21 a.m.

The main group of observers here from Toronto's Dunlap Observatory camped in a fenced-in enclosure outside the rectory of the Rev. Joseph Proulx, huddled over a battery of instruments in the priest's woodshed as the skies grew black.

But the group headed by Dr. John Heard, president of the Dominion Astronomical Society, didn't even bother setting up its 10-foot-long spectrographic camera with which it planned to photograph the sun's chromosphere.

The weather man had told the astronomers an hour before there was just about one chance in 1,000 that the eclipsing sun would break through—and that didn't materialize.

NEXT ONE IN 1963

"It's a pretty miserable wind-up after all the preparations," Dr. Heard said, "but that's astronomy. We can only hope that other parties will have had better luck."

"Anyhow," he said with a laugh, "we can settle down to getting set for the next one."

For Canada, that will be nine years from now. In the 1963 total eclipse, the ribbon of totality will stretch from James bay through the Maritimes.

Negotiate Truce For Guatemala; Leaders Meet

GUATEMALA CITY (Reuters)—Guatemala's new head of state, Col. Alfredo Monzon, meets rebel leader Col. Castillo Armas in neighboring El Salvador, probably today, to negotiate a truce in the 12-day fighting.

Diplomats here in the Guatemalan capital believed the two, anti-Communists both, would join in still another new governing junta. The general feeling was that Castillo Armas could dictate his own terms.

(The rebel's rear headquarters said late Tuesday Castillo Armas was ready to discuss truce terms but insisted on assurance that the anti-Communist drive would continue.)

AGREES TO ACT

The Vatican's nuncio to Guatemala, Msgr. Gennaro Verolino, has agreed to be the third party at the armistice conference.

The truce call came after a quick series of political changes which shoved Col. Carlos Enrique Diaz out of power less than 48 hours after he had ousted ex-president Jacobo Arbenz. Monzon was internal affairs chief under Diaz and minister without portfolio under Arbenz.

Diaz, first reported arrested, later gained political asylum. Arbenz, who yielded power to Diaz Monday, now is in the Mexican embassy with a large number of other refugees.

Fate Decided In Three Weeks

By LARRY ALLEN

SINGAPORE (AP) — France's shaky hold on the Red river delta, key to military victory in Indo-China, is crumbling rapidly.

Another three weeks may tell the tale as to how long the French can hold on to the highway and railway lifeline between Hanoi and the seaport city of Haipong, 64 miles to the east.

Within that period it appears there is either going to be a cease-fire agreement, or the Communist-led Vietminh will hit the French with a massive "human sea" attack.

Nightly for weeks the French have been losing strategic defence posts under attack by overwhelming numbers of Vietminh, or blowing them up themselves and withdrawing to bolster the Hanoi-to-Haiphong lifeline.

ACTING ON PLEDGE

French premier Pierre Mendes-France has pledged to get a cease-fire in Indo-China by July 20 or resign. Moves are now underway between the French and Vietminh high commands to discuss details of a possible truce.

Meantime, the French holding in the rice and mineral rich Red river delta, where 7,000,000 Viet Namese live, is shrinking fast.

The French high command already has announced a general withdrawal from the big Nam Dinh province and its textiles-manufacturing centre of the same name, a city of more than 100,000 on the Red river 55 miles southeast of Hanoi.

ship, Ronald Ducharme, 23, and Elmo Joseph, 22. They were all from Montreal. They died within four hours of the accident.

Four stevedores and a sailor were in critical condition when they reached hospital and doctors and nurses toiled round the clock feeding them oxygen to ease the burden on their gas-burned lungs. They all received the last rites of the Roman Catholic church.

The men are: Jacques Langlois, 17, Montreal, Maurce Dubois, 24, Longueil, Que., Pierre-Marie Cote, 31, Montreal, Thecphile Deschamplain, 20, Rimouski, Que., and seaman Leonard Gariepy, 37, Montreal.

Nine others still were in hospital.

The 505-ton Clarke Steamship vessel was loading the chlorine for shipment to South Shore St. Lawrence Mines in Gaspe when the accident happened.

Millar Accepts Responsibility

TORONTO (CP)—J. D. Millar, former deputy minister of highways, today accepted full responsibility for the $2,500,000 in overpayments on 16 Ontario highway contracts.

And Mr. Millar, now deputy minister of public works, said he had to take the full responsibility for any over-runs on construction projects.

Testifying before the Ontario legislature's highways investigation committee, Mr. Millar said that, after receiving policy instructions from the minister, he was responsible for the administration.

M. Millar said Highways Minister Doucett, after learning of the large over-runs, insisted that they be held down to the minimum.

"Do you justify these large over-runs?" asked Albert Wren (Lib-Lab—Kenora).

"Yes. The jobs were very complicated," replied Mr. Millar.

Steel Firms Sign Contract

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The CIO United Steelworkers had pen and ink ready today for basic steel producers to follow the lead of the United States Steel Corporation and sign contracts giving 600,000 men a five-cent an hour pay increase, higher pensions and improved insurance programs.

U. S. Steel, employing 190,000 USW dues payers and usually the contract pace-setter for the industry, was first to sign Tuesday.

A few hours later, the second largest producer, Bethlehem Steel Company, agreed to the same basic settlement and said it would sign for its 80,000 employees in New York today. Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation, the fourth largest producer with about 25,000 USW employees, signed the same agreement.

A spokesman for the big union said all other basic steel producers with which the union has contracts expiring at midnight tonight are expected to be in the fold soon. He explained they could either formally sign contracts or memorandums that they will agree to the basic pattern established by U.S. Steel.

Average hourly rates under the new U.S. Steel contract, which runs for two years, will be from $2.19 to $2.29. The five-cent increase becomes effective Thursday.

Oba Astronomers See Work Wasted

OBA, Ont. (CP)—A disappointed party of University of Ottawa astronomers sat by this morning and watched a heavy overcast block their view of a total eclipse of the sun.

More than three weeks' preparatory work was not entirely wasted, as the party was able to trace the rise and fall of light throughout all phases of the eclipse, using a photo-electric sky photometer.

The party, headed by James Hargreaves, a professor of astronomy, had hoped to study the outer corona of the sun. Other members included Mrs. Hargreaves, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Batchelder and Judith Hargreaves.

The same group has made previous eclipse expeditions, a fruitless one to Brazil in 1947, and a successful trip to the Sudan in 1952.

The observers were joined at this community 120 miles west of Timmins by a scientist from Rochester N.Y.

was melted almost completely away. The big turbo wheels were still.

The fire call came when Chief Sorrie was showing a group of Aldermen around the fire hall. Only an hour before Ald. H. Rehill had pulled an alarm at Arndon and Park Sts., in the city's annual test of fire-fighting efficiency.

"THE REAL THING"

The chief was explaining what steps would be taken in case of a genuine fire when the alarm came from the power plant. "This," said the chief, "is the real thing," and the aldermen were among the many citizens staring at the acrid bluish smoke pouring from the doomed plant. This smoke covered a large area in the north end of the city.

The St. John Ambulance had no casualties to treat, although there was a danger of an explosion or shock from loose live wires until the beating pulse of the plant was stilled. Citizens crowding around the building, had repeatedly to be told to stay back by firemen.

One official indicated the plant may not be rebuilt, since it is considered a "marginal" power station. Thus it might be more economical to utilize expanded power facilities at Niagara Falls rather than build a new plant. Turbo-generators alone are worth at least $30,000 apiece.

Share $15,000 Grant

OTTAWA (CP) — Eight Canadians will share a $15,000 grant to study language, literature, philosophy and history during 1954-55. The grant was made by the Carnegie Corporation to the Humanities Research Council of Canada. The eight include Flora Roy, professor of English in Waterloo College, Waterloo, Ont., to study in Toronto.

Vehicle Sale Down 75,000

WINDSOR (CP)—In announcing further layoffs at Ford of Canada's Windsor plant, president Rhys M. Sale said Tuesday total sales of cars and trucks in Canada for 1954 may be down 75,000 vehicles or more.

In a letter to employees, Mr. Sale said 450 men would go on indefinite layoff when the plant closes down today for the long holiday weekend. The truck assembly line will not operate from July 5 to 9 and there will be departmental layoffs for that period.

He said the truck line will resume July 12 but will close permanently July 30 when the truck assembly operation will move to the Oakville plant. This will throw another 750 out of work.

President Charles McDonald of Local 200, United Automobile Workers' union, said the announcement is proof that the situation in the Canadian automobile industry is getting worse instead of better "despite recent assurance by the company . . . that the condition is only temporary."

Mr. Sale said when 1954 production schedules were set up last fall, most manufacturers and dealers estimated cars and trucks of all makes sold this year would be equal to or not more than five per cent below the 1953 total. This would have been a drop of not more than 22,000 vehicles.

Police Check On Meter Use

There have been plenty of tickets issued and lots of complaining by the public.

This was the text of police chief John Thompson's comments today, when questioned about the progress of the white chalk and its effects on lingering cars.

Last week the chief warned the public that the police intended to strictly enforce the bylaw allowing vehicles only one hour parking at street meters. Evidently many motorists thought it was a joke . . . but they are not laughing now. Instead they are objecting most strongly to policemen giving them tickets for overstaying the hour at the meters. They figure they are entitled to several hours as long as they pay the money.

"This is not being done to increase meter revenue or anything like that" said the chief. "The bylaw was formed to keep any particular vehicle from staking a claim at a meter. By moving every hour, the motorists give others the opportunity to park in the downtown area."

So, in spite of complaints, the little pieces of chalk will continue tracking down offenders and keeping the wheels moving.

MINISTER QUESTIONED

Opposition leader Farquhar Oliver asked the minister how $2,500,000 in overpayments could be made without discovery by department officials.

"The only answer I know is that the employees in charge of the payment figured they were quite legitimate", replied Mr. Doucett.

Replying to Albert Wren (Lib-Lab—Kenora), Mr. Doucett said the authorization of an overpayment of $940,000 on three contracts held by the Wolfe Construction Co. of Timmins was an administrative problem which he could not now answer.

"Are you suggesting you don't know who authorized the payments?" asked Mr. Wren.

"The chief engineer, or Mr. Zoller could tell you. . . . I assure you it wasn't me . . . it was an internal matter," the minister replied.

Mr. Doucett said he believed the chief engineer first authorized the overpayments to Wolfe Construction. He said the question was not brought to his attention.

The 24-year-old Belgian girl reduced the margin by one hole before losing the 13th and 14th to end the match.

Stock Market Drops Slightly Lower

TORONTO (CP)—The stock market dropped a little lower in light early afternoon trading today.

At 1 p. m. EDT volume was just over 1,000,000 shares. However, International Paper, Burns A and Ford A, had gains of $1 or more.

Most losses on the western oil board were pennies but bigger losers were Federated Pete, Home Oil, Peace River Gas and Pacific Pete.

In gold issues Sullivan climbed 25 cents and hit a 1954 high of $3.60. Jellicoe, Joliet and Krayrand were ahead pennies. Lake Shore fell and hit a 1954 low of $5.20. Senior golds as a group were lower, as were holding companies and prospects.

Base metal price changes were small. Algom climbed 30 cents to counter a lower trend in uraniums. Bathurst and Manitouwadge stocks moved up a little.

Refused Leave To Appeal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Blair Fraser, Ottawa editor of Maclean's Magazine, was refused leave by B. C. Court of Appeal Tuesday to go to the Supreme Court of Canada to appeal an order striking out his defence in the libel suit of Gordon S. Wismer.

Man Acquitted Of Keeping Gaming House

Magistrate W. R. Philp, QC, today acquitted Robert McMaster on a charge of keeping a common gaming establishment at his house on Chemong Rd. The charge followed a raid at the house on the night of May 14 by members of the provincial anti-gambling squad.

McMaster, and 10 other men found on the premises, were arrested and charged under the gaming act. Crown attorney John A. Bradshaw, QC, withdrew the charges against them, following McMasters' dismissal.

Magistrate Philp said that he based his decision on the fact that no gambling had been in progress at the time of the raid and two defence witnesses, who were at the house during the evening, said that they had witnessed no gambling at all. There was no reason why the defence evidence should be rejected.

The crown had rested its case on the fact that several articles, which could be used in a bank gambling game, were found in a cupboard of the house. The magistrate found that the articles could be used in a friendly game just as well.

be very sorry if he never saw Canada again.

He was asked about exchange of information between the U. S., Britain and Canada. He said his visit to Washington seemed to have coincided with a strong feeling in the U. S. that "there is no harm in telling us what they knew the Russians already know."

Sir Winston was given a wild ovation from thousands of spectators as he made his way from his hotel to the Parliament Buildings for his conference with the Canadian cabinet.

The British prime minister was in excellent spirits as he emerged from his Chateau Laurier hotel room. He smoked a big cigar smiled and gave his familiar "V for Victory" sign to some 500 persons who waited patiently for more than an hour in the lobby for a glimpse of the British statesman.

He shook hands with some of the women and children; to others he merely wagged a finger good-naturedly; his eyes twinkling and his face clothed in cherubic smiles.

APPLAUSE ROLLS FORTH

Wave after wave of applause and cheers broke out from the crowds.

Close behind Sir Winston was Anthony Eden, Britain's foreign secretary; Sir Winston's other aides; and a small corps of RCMP officers and other police in civilian clothes.

Looking fit, Sir Winston decided to sit atop a folded-down canopy in the back seat of an open convertible on the way to Parliament's East Block. Mr. Eden watched the prime minister climb up to the top of the seat, then followed him.

A crowd of nearly 1,000 milled around the East Block as Sir Winston and Mr. Eden arrived for their conference with the cabinet.

POSE FOR CAMERAS

Sir Winston stepped out of the convertible unassisted and was greeted by Prime Minister St. Laurent. The two prime ministers and Mr. Eden paused for a few moments for cameramen, then entered the East Block for their conference.

The two prime ministers already had held initial talks of the current world crisis.

Though there was no disclosure of the details, it is believed the British prime minister gave Prime Minister St. Laurent an intimate picture of the nature of his conversations in Washington with President Eisenhower.

The 79-year-old statesman, making his second visit to Ottawa in 30 months, believes Canada has a special and important role to play in Western relations.

At suburban Rockcliffe airport, where he was given all the trimmings of a warm and friendly welcome, he described Canada as "the master-link in Anglo-American unity."

Within a few hours he plunged into conversations with Mr. St. Laurent at a small dinner in Sir Winston's Chateau Laurier hotel suite. Also there was Trade Minister Howe and Sir Archibald Nye, Britain's high commissioner to Canada.

Given 20 Days To Dry Out

COBOURG (ENS) — Charged with false pretences, George Irvine, of Toronto, was remanded for a week when he appeared in police court Tuesday. He is alleged to have obtained goods under the value of $25 from Gordon Hoselton of Cobourg.

Thomas Rogers of Warkworth, charged with assaulting David Wartman of Percy township, was committed to the Ontario Hospital at Kingston for a period not exceeding 60 days for mental observation.

Colin Campbell, Lakefield youth who is on a remand for sentence on breaking and entering and theft charges was remanded when Crown Attorney Harry Deyman stated that a psychiatric examination had been requested.

John Pethick of Port Hope, arrested Saturday by Cobourg police on a drunk charge, was very confused as to dates when questioned by Magistrate R. B. Baxter. He couldn't recall being drunk in Cobourg on Saturday and when asked by the magistrate where he had been the night before, he was also a bit hazy. The magistrate refreshed his memory for him.

"I saw you at eleven o'clock on Friday night, lying on the steps of the town hall in the rain. Chief Graham of Port Hope gave you a chance Saturday morning to straighten up but you came down to Cobourg and got drunk. I think you had better dry out for a while,' said the magistrate. Pethick went to jail for twenty days.

Driver Absolved Of Blame In Cobourg's Boy Death

COBOURG (ENS)—A coroner's jury Tuesday night found that seven-year-old Roy Halligan of Cobourg was killed on his way to school on June 9 when struck by the right front fender of Gordon Sherwin's truck. However, the jury absolved the Cobourg truck driver of all blame and found "that Mr. Sherwin had no knowledge of the accident."

The boy was struck not far from his home at the entrance to a lane which runs north off Queen St. The building at the entrance to the lane on the right hand side is almost flush with the sidewalk and the roadway is considerably higher on the right hand or west side than the other side, limiting more than average the view of a driver to the right, the evidence revealed.

Frank Ferguson found the body of young Halligan a few feet out from the sidewalk which passes in front of the lane entrance and went into a nearby cleaning shop and phoned the police.

Dr. J. F. Lesson said that he was called to the scene around 8:45 a.m. and found that the boy had died almost instantly from head injuries. However it did not appear that the wheel of a vehicle had run over his head.

Gordon Sherwin testified that he had gone up the lane to deliver some cans of milk to a dairy in his one-ton truck and came back down the bumpy lane at from five to 10 miles an hour. The lane is only 11 feet five inches wide and flanked by a building on each side at the entrance on Queen street. He said he stopped on the sidewalk to let a truck pass and then turned right and went up Queen street.

"I didn't see any child or hear or see anything. I don't think I hit a child. After I left the lane I went over to the Argosy yard to pick up a load and it was there that I heard about a boy being killed on Queen street and it bothered me. I didn't think I had hit anybody, but I decided to go down and see the chief," testified Sherwin.

Chief H. Pearse testified that Sherwin came to him that morning and told him that he had been there where the accident occurred, but that he didn't think he had struck anyone. However, he left the truck with the chief to examine.

Dr. Ward Smith, chief of the crime detection lab at Queen's Park, said he examined Sherwin's truck and found a brush mark on the right front fender which appeared to have been made by forcible contact with a clothed object and could have been caused by clothing such as worn by Roy Halligan. He found a human hair on the fender which looked like an eyebrow hair and a microscopic cross-section showed an unusual defect in the structure, such as would be caused by a dietary upset. He compared it with hair from the boy's head and found the same defect and at the same distance from the root, and it was his conclusion that the hair found on the fender compared exactly with that from the boy's head. A mark on the boy's head could have been made by the under curve of the right front fender, but the contact was made while the boy was falling. Dr. Ward Smith gave his opinion that it occurred at a point below the visibility of the driver of the car.

Constable E. Butler testified that on a level surface, for the driver of the truck to see an object opposite the right fender, the object would have to have its top 48½ inches above the ground level. The lane was higher on the right side than on the left and this would further limit the visibility on the right side of the truck, Constable Butler said. Height of the Halligan boy was 48 inches.

Claim Contractor Overpaid $940,000

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario legislature's highways investigation committee was told Tuesday that the highways department claims it over-paid one contractor $940,000 for construction work on the trans-Canada highway skirting the north shore of Lake Superior.

And today, it is scheduled to receive further figures on over-payments from J. L. Zoller, the department's financial comptroller.

Both Highways Minister Doucett and J. D. Millar, former deputy minister of highways, are expected to take the stand to shed some light on the over-payments. Also scheduled to appear is a representative of the U. S. Fidelity and Guaranty Co., a bonding firm which Tuesday was threatened with a speaker's warrant unless some persons from the company appears before the committee.

Mr. Zoller told the committee, after a heated argument among the members over the admissability of his evidence, that the highways department claimed $940,000 from the Wolfe Construction Co. for over-payment on three contracts. He said the department was seeking legal advice on what steps to be taken to recover the money.

UNABLE FINISH JOB

Wolfe Construction was turned over to the London and Lancashire Guarantee and Accident Co. of Canada when it was unable to complete its work.

One contract, let n 1949 for $291,000, was completed in 1953 at a final cost of $776,000. Another was let in 1950 for $423,250 and by last April 28 payments totalled $1,171,542. A third, let in the same year for $444,210, reached $1,110,323 up to last April 28.

Albert Wren (Lib-Lab—Kenora) asked who authorized the overruns on the contracts. W. A. Clarke, the department's chief engineer, said he did not know. Mr. Zoller said the divisional engineer would have sent in requests for them.

"Would the head office have no say?" asked committee chairman Kelso Roberts (PC—Toronto St. Patrick).

"Not unless it took time to scrutinize the figures," replied Mr. Clarke.

"It wouldn't take too long to look at the figures," said Mr. Roberts.

Mr. Clarke said he could not reply to that statement as he wasn't the chief engineer at the time.

"The department was just using horse and buggy methods in a streamlined age," interjected Mr. Wren.

Mr. Clarke said at the time the work "was so vast and widespread and there were so few people to check it."

Mr. Zoller said one reason head office officials may not have taken note of the over-runs was that the north shore highway had been raised to trans-Canada standards.

The threat of a speaker's warrant was made by Mr. Roberts, at the insistence of Mr. Wren, after U. S. Fidelity representatives failed to appear before the committee after being notified of the current sessions.

$80,500 Bylaw For New School

COBOURG — Second readings were given to the school debenture bylaw by Cobourg council Tuesday night. The debenture was for $80,500, to cover the cost of an addition to the east end public school. Council also had two tenders for the D'Arcy to Elgin street sewer, one for $74,000 and the other for $49,000. The lowest bid was accepted.

Due to the date available being unacceptable, the CGIT group wrote to council to advise that their tag day had been cancelled.

A letter from the Kinettes club said that the mile-of-pennies was also called off for the time being. Council tabled for further study the application of a local taxi firm for a taxi stand near the theatre. Members of council indicated that they considered the location too congested already for a taxi stand.

Application from Dave Vout to have the unopened St. Andrew's street declared officially closed, was tabled in order that the town clerk, town engineer and solicitor could look into it.

The department of planning and development wrote council in regard to the land assembly scheme and stated that the department was willing to defer annexation of the suggested 40 acres. The department was also willing to open up certain sections at a time but reserved the right to name the sections.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 30, 1954

O Canadians!

"Who will oppose—who are now opposed to our union? Only those who have a vested interest in their own insignificance". So spoke Canada's great orator of Confederation, Thomas D'Arcy McGee, three years before the Union for which he appealed was proclaimed on July 1st, 1867. Now, eighty-seven years later Canadians can look about them and far beyond their own borders and know that this country was not invested with insignificance. In energy, riches, balance and achievement it is a creation in which this people known as Canadians can take pride, and the world's praise pours over it. By 1867 Canada was in the rapids and had to go on. She did. The river of nationhood has been rough and forbidding, but it has been navigated.

* * *

The country stands strong and imposing; city and farm, factory and mine, forest and skyscraper, home and school. It has money in its pockets and ambition in its heart. O Canada! But what of Canadians? Who are they? Historically, a Canadian is an American who rejects the Revolution, as Northrop Frye of the University of Toronto, one of Canada's most brilliant thinkers, has observed. The facility of the remark does not lessen its profundity. Canada's wars of independence have been fought against the United States, not Europe and it is the un-American feeling rather than the pro-British emotion which has been the strongest influence in shaping this country's destiny and its people's character. Canadians are not Canada-firsters, or British-firsters, and while they are not now anti-American, they are distinctively and aggressively non-American. The British North America Act of 1867 was founded on this historical fact, her nationhood depends on it, much of the cost of it results therefrom, and her foreign policy is based on co-existence with Americanism, rather than acceptance of it. Whatever else they are, Canadians are not Americans, using the word in the United States' way.

* * *

Canadians are North Americans in the continental sense without being American in the national sense, and they have built a nation on the northern half of the continent. They have done it, not others. British money came in the last century and before, American in this, but the outside money has been the agent, not the creator, of Canada. The men and women who live here have planned and wrought Canada their home, if not their native land. Canadians are builders.

* * *

And Canadians are, when all is said and done, the people who live in the land they have made, and this is perhaps the second most important fact of Canadian nationalism. There are Canadians aged 87 and more who have lived all their lives with this country. And there are Canadians whose parents and grandparents and great-grandparents were born and raised here. But these are a minority of the adult population. Most Canadians are, significantly, new Canadians, for the majority of adults in this country are the children of parents not born here. They have not been the inheritors of a Canadian tradition and the Canadian land; they have been granted it, having come to it. From that grant they have made much, very much.

* * *

At this time of national holiday we pay tribute to the explorers, founders, pioneers, Loyalists, and the Fathers of Confederation. Recognizing the importance of their contribution, the breadth of their vision and the staunchness of their hope, we must not be blind to the fact that all that has gone before 1900 is little compared with what has been accomplished since. The Fathers of Confederation founded well, their constituents and children's children have built well and carried first in their hearts this land of their heritage, but it is the new Canadians of the last fifty years, the sons and daughter of immigrants and the immigrants themselves from Britain and Europe, who, more than the others (because there are more of them), have made this "Canada's century". And thus, because most Canadians are new Canadians, Canada has the virility of fresh growth from transplanted stock. Canadians are a different breed, and in their growth are the strains of the old but the bones are new.

* * *

It is fashionable to say Canadians are uninteresting, timid, small in vision, little-Englanders, village-pumpers, people with a name and no nature, and so on. We say it ourself upon occasion. The national habit of self-diminution is strong and truly Canadians are not at ease with themselves and their environment, and they have lacked confidence. For Canada has been built under superior shadows and by a people in their parts and their whole who have always been a minority. Yet does not this make their achievement so much the greater? Let Canadians think well of themselves as of their country which is their creation. Canada's future lies not so much in the land as in the people and the accuracy of their vision.

Sad Centennial

"Ottawa's highly-publicized centennial opening next week (July 1st) appears headed for one of the saddest showings in the city's first hundred years, which it is intended to commemorate. A bitterly disappointed Ald. Wilbert Hamilton, head of the civic committee 'in charge' said this morning that the city's part in the ceremonies for Dominion Day have been reduced to ribbons. The cancellations were not by his committee, he said. They have been first 'suggested' by Mayor Whitton". Here in the opening sentences of the Ottawa Citizen's story, is the indicated truth about civic Ottawa: it does not exist except in the mind of the Mayor.

Consider this fact: the city—as city not as Federal capital—plans a big celebration on its hundredth birthday. Because it is the capital it gets much financial support, as well as publicity, from national organizations like the Federal Government, the C.N.R., C.P.R., C.B.C., the Army and Air Force, etc., etc. That is right and proper, so long as civic Ottawa does not act altogether like a parasite on the national body and purse. But it always seems to do so. The forthcoming centennial celebration is an example. Alderman Hamilton, referred to above, reviewed what was left of the July 1st program after civic Ottawa backed away from it at the 'suggestion' of Mayor Charlotte Whitton. He said "Ninety-nine per cent. of it (is) provided by the Federal Government."

The rest of Canada cannot altogether blame Mayor Whitton for this sloughing off of civic responsibilities; municipal Ottawa has always been a leech on Federal Ottawa, in the matter of bridges, roads, streets, parks, hotels, beaches, city halls and even civic celebrations. Other Canadian cities look after these things almost entirely by themselves. As regards tomorrow's—or perhaps now abandoned—July 1st celebration, Mayor Whitton may bear a special share of blame, because she, personally, seems to have been displeased that she could not take the salute on the March Past, but that the Governor-General or some high military or Federal official must do so. Ottawa is the capital and July 1st is the nation's birthday before it is Ottawa's birthday.

From this distance we cannot be privy to all the reasons for Ottawa citizens' dereliction of civic responsibility. To do and spend nothing for civic Ottawa is a psychopthic compulsion both with old Ottawans still in love with Bytown and its village pump, and with the army of civil servants who irresponsibly feel, because they work for the Government, that municipal Ottawa is beneath their notice. Let the Government, not themselves, pay.

We have sometimes suggested that because of municipal Ottawa's record and its citizens' attitude, Ottawans should be disfranchized, and the place run as a branch of the Federal Government. Then in theory as well as in fact civic Ottawa would disappear. Considering what municipal Ottawa is not, this change would be greeted with thanksgiving by the rest of Canada.

Blow Out At The Power House

When the city's source of electrical power blew up yesterday afternoon Peterborough could have been laid dark and powerless for a long time. A few years ago the blow would have been crippling. Now, thanks to the Hydro's provision of both transformer stations and reserves of power, the city cannot suffer disastrously. The Otonabee plant went out of business in a burst of spark and flame and a stench of melted rubber and cable, but within a very few minutes power was being fed to the city from other sources, far beyond its usual reach. The Lily Lake transformer station (named after the former general manager of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, Mr. Ross L. Dobbin) had its arms directed to the city and different sources of power were brought within its orbit.

The post-war unification of the whole Hydro Southern Ontario system has been costly, but Peterborough's experience yesterday afternoon proved that the price was not too high. It is now possible to switch power between Niagara and the Ottawa and in any direction to any place in Southern Ontario—and even to get power in Peterborough from the United States, if necessity demands. Formerly the cross-country lines passing near Peterborough carried 25-cycle power to Toronto which could be neither tapped by Peterborough nor used, since this area is a 60-cycle one. Thanks to the frequency standardization program and the provision of stations like the one at Lily Lake, Peterborough got the power almost immediately, and on its own cycle.

COMMUNIST RURITANIA

San Marino: Toy Republic

By WAYLAND YOUNG

THE REPUBLIC of San Marino, population 13,000, is the most westerly Communist State in the world. But nothing could looks less like a Russian satellite. The toy republic, stuck right up on a rearing rock in Italy's Adriatic coast, exists mainly for the eighty thousand tourists who visit it every year.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE VIEWS are staggering (you seem to see half Italy crumpled and shining below); the history is picturesque and very long; add local drinks and cakes, a rash of souvenir shops, a loudspeaker blaring light music from the castle, and all is set for the tourist trade.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE SAINT who gives San Marino his name is supposed to have been a Dalmatian stonemason who despaired of human folly and in the year 301 built himself a hermitage on the top of Mount Titan, where the town now stands. You can tell he was a saint because one day a bear ate the donkey that was pulling his cart and then, instead of going on to eat Saint Marinus himself, assumed the donkey's harness and loyally pulled the cart for the rest of his life.

✧ ✧ ✧

EVERY YEAR on Corpus Christi day the saint's relics go round the town in procession. Behind comes the brass band, playing staid waltzes; then the army, fifty strong, with fine, long rifles. Then comes the Noble Guard, smothered in gold braid over blue and orange uniforms, with plumed hats and drawn swords. Between their files walk the two Captains Regent, who are joint heads of the State and are changed every six months. One is a Communist grocer, the other a fellow-travelling Socialist lawyer, and they are dressed like the boring uncles in a Shakespeare play. During the Festival Mass in the church they all keep their hats on. Outside the church a notice in English says: "No admitage to the people who is not decently dressed."

✧ ✧ ✧

THE Communist State passed a law some years ago against the sale of titles, but the exchequer found the loss too heavy and about £120,000 a year still comes from that source. "In a proud and ancient State," they say, "it is only natural that there should be a few contradictions." But they complain that the market is not what it was before the war. There are so few places where that particular export is still valued. San Marino is also the philatelist's heaven, every few weeks a gorgeous new multi-coloured series of stamps commemorates something.

✧ ✧ ✧

SAN MARINO'S Foreign Minister (appointed by the Captains Regent from among the sixty members of the legislature, the General Council) is active. There is a claim for £100,000 outstanding against Britain, who bombed the Republic during the German retreat from Italy. Britain says there were Germans there and offers £26,000 compensation as an act of grace. This San Marino refuses, and the haggling continues.

✧ ✧ ✧

RELATIONS with Italy, deep in whose territory San Marino lies, have been stormy. In order to avoid a Customs barrier San Marino imposes import duties at the same rate as Italy; they are collected at Italy's external frontiers by Italians and should be, but are not paid over to San Marino in proportion to the consumption there. In San Marino you can get a legal separation from your wife at a fraction of the cost and trouble it takes you in Italy, but now the Italians have got San Marino to demand a year's residence before granting the separation.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE HOTTEST DISPUTE was about the Casino. The Sammarinese built a lovely white modern casino on the mountain top. The Italian Government protested, saying there was a law against gambling in Italy and that the casino would corrupt the fabric of Italian life. They put police check-points on the roads at the frontier. 'But,' said the Sammarinese, 'there are four casinos in Italy in spite of the law. And moreover, we believe that why you protest is because all these four are further from Rome than ours is. We shall get the Roman gamblers.' The Italian police then closed the frontier to tourists. The Sammarinese bore the "blockade" as they call it, for nearly two years, and then in 1951 they capitulated. The casino is now shut and deserted but there are always stamps and titles.

✧ ✧ ✧

IN SPITE OF its astonishing views San Marino is not really beautiful. You can see it and its three towers from half over Tuscany and the Marches and Emilia and the Romagna and Venetia, stuck up theatrically into the blue sky. But, when you get there, you see that all the walls and castles and houses have been coarsely rebuilt in modern times. Keepsakes, bumpy jewellery and pretty-pretty majolica fill the shop windows, and the Palazzo Pubblico, where the Captains Regent work, was built in 1894. It is the only place in Italy where you can see notices saying: "medieval tavern," and one of the very few places in Italy where the tavern is not medieval.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE COMMUNIST GOVERNMENT has not changed the traditional political fabric of the republic, which is a medieval democracy, nor the economic fabric, which is liberal nineteenth century capitalism. The share-croppers in San Marino keep 56 per cent of the farm produce instead of the strict half, but then so they do in most of the Red Belt of Italy where San Marino lies. The Communist Prime Minister leads his people to church and sells baronies and marquisates. If they did anything which would keep the tourists away the standard of living would drop right back to that of any other hill-top town of central Italy; at present it is much higher. If Italy herself ever turns Communist it will be interesting to see how she gets on without her yearly two millions of tourists.

Parliament and Dullness

(OTTAWA JOURNAL)

MR. DREW, Opposition Leader, and Mr. Pickersgill, Secretary of State, describe the parliamentary session just ended as "the dullest on record."

But dullness is not something that can be recorded or measured — it can only be felt — and it may be that if Mr. Drew and Mr. Pickersgill had been around Parliament Hill longer than they have been they might have qualified their verdict. Over many years there have been a lot of dull sessions.

What makes a session of Parliament dull? Mainly its issues and actors — or lack of them. If a session is presented with exciting issues, and if there are members who can dramatise them, then the House of Commons takes on the aspect of a theatre; becomes glamorous, stirring.

Thus the sessions of the past which saw great debates over Riel, the Manitoba school question, the naval issue, reciprocity and conscription, and which had commanding figures like Macdonald, D'Alton, McCarthy, Nicholas Flood Davin, Laurier, Bourassa, Fielding, Sifton, Borden, Pugsley and Meighen to given them substance and passion, were great and memorable sessions. When dullness felt, it was when issues and actors were smaller.

In more recent decades there have been no great parliamentary issues, no deep controversies. No profound differences divided the parties on foreign policy, and in place of bitter battles over questions of conscription, railways, trade and schools there came mostly unexciting discussions over taxes, costs, administration.

Then, too, the passage of the years seems to see Parliament drifting more and more into what is called "decorum"; becoming more "respectable". Successive Speakers have made the House increasingly heavy with Blackstone, ruling "out of order" words which a generation ago would have been regarded as inevitable in controversy, and without which in fact the "cut and thrust" of debate become impossible.

There is always nostalgia for the past; for those who mostly belong to it, the men of days gone take on the stature of giants. Nevertheless it is true — a comparison of the old Hansards with those of today proves it — that there are no speakers in the Commons today who compare with the Lauriers, the Fosters, the Bourassas, the Michael Clarks or the Meighens. There are only those who speak the language of the Chancery lawyer, or of the board room, or worse, still ,those who do not "speak" at all but only read from manuscripts.

From the standpoint of democracy, which should be exciting, which should stimulate convictions and opinions, this is loss. For it is not enough for Parliament to do its work well with dullness. It may be competent, it may show devoted drudgery, but unless it compels public interest, stimulates debate and curiosity, it is losing something vital to democracy.

For in democracy, efficiency is not enough; there must be (as Churchill once put it) a sense of urgency, a touch of glamor and drama. Certainly it can be argued that the Parliament of England would not today have the place it commands without its stirring past, without the mighty issues, controversies and figures which form the warp and woof of England's glory.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord: and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might . . . Ye shall not go after other gods of the gods, of the people which are round about you . . . Ye shall diligently keep the commandments of the Lord your God, and his testimonies, and his statutes, which he hath commanded thee. And thou shalt do that which is right and good in the sight of the lord: that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest go in and possess the land which the Lord God sware unto thy fathers, to cast out all thine enemies from before thee, as the Lord hath spoken. (Deut. 6:4, 4, 15, 17-19.)

✧ ✧ ✧

All nations whom thou hast made shall come and worship before thee, O Lord; and shall glorify thy name. For thou art great, and doest wondrous things: thou art God alone. (Ps. 86.9, 10.)

✧ ✧ ✧

Is not God in the height of heaven? and behold the height of the stars, how high they are! . . . Acquaint now theyself with him, and be at peace :thereby good shall come unto thee. (Job 22:12, 21.)

Letter To The Editor

PAINTED THEIR TEETH

Sir: One point that does not seem to have been raised in this question of fluoridation, is the one of having children's teeth painted by the dentist. About 4 years ago we had the teeth of two of our children painted by a Peterborough dentist. These children are now 7 and 6 years old. The elder has only one small cavity and the younger has perfect teeth.

It is difficult to know whether this is due to fluoridation or to the fact that they have no soft drinks and candy only after supper, which is about 2 hours before they clean their teeth and go to bed. However, it certainly has done no harm and we intend having our other children's teeth treated in the same way.

As for "Taxpayers" letter of June 29th re the enemy poisons the water supply: I should like to point out that perhaps the biggest opportunity the enemy had to do this was during the various defeats in the western desert during the last war, when all troops were dependent on the desert wells. But the water was never poisoned. The worst that happened was that large quantities of salt were put into them. This made the water as salty as sea-water and very unpalatable — but I lived on this for a month.

Luckily we were able to get small quantities of distilled water which was used for the batteries of tanks which we used for making tea.

There is always the chance that the enemy may retake the lost water supply and need it himself.

'FATHER OF FOUR.'

Mr. Eden's Luck

(Hamilton Spectator)

It has been the personal misfortune of Mr. Anthony Eden to preside over forlorn hopes and lost causes. Not for him the laurel wreath of diplomatic triumph, but instead, the consolation prize for regular attendance and trying hard. The Geneva Conference is his latest personal disappointment. He remained in attendance long after it had become obvious, even to the outside world, that it was a deathbed waked and that the mourners were anxious to disperse and set about the serious business of attending to the living.

This ill fortune is due to the hard times in which Mr. Eden has to bargain and, in part, to his capacities. The centres of world power have shifted since Mr. Eden, then known as "Captain Anthony Eden," the world's best-dressed politician, tried to give the dictators an example of gentlemanly conduct. His voice at the conference table has been robbed of much of its bargaining power.

Off-Street Parking Problem Studied By City Merchants

Gordon Culham, Peterborough's town planning consultant, will speak to a supper meeting of local retailers on the off-street parking problem next Monday evening at the Empres hotel.

The request to have Mr. Culham express his views came from the newly-organized parking committee of the chamber of commerce, and was extended with the approval of the city.

TO PRESENT BRIEF

Since downtown retailers pay 25 percent of the city's property taxes, on about one per cent of the total city taxable area, retailers feel something should be done immediately. A brief urging a thorough study of the problem will be presented to Monday's council meeting by Chamber manager James M. Fraser.

The brief notes that parking congestion often depreciates downtown property values. Businesses sometimes are forced to re-locate outside the city limits, depriving the city of lucrative tax sources.

The brief does not note that some of the downtown parking congestion is due to the retailers themselves. An informal survey this morning showed at least six retailers parked in the most desirable spots near their stores, thus diverting potential customers The retailers claim that too-crowded streets are detrimental to their business, but few use parking lots.

FACILITIES INADEQUATE

The best minds available in the community must be put to work on the parking problem, the brief urges. In most cities parking facilities are "shockingly inadequate" and the result, says the brief, is economy dislocation.

Parking, too, is "everybody's problem, not just the retailers", Mr. Fraser said today. Representatives of industry and of the Peterborough automobile club also are asking for greater municipal interest in the problem.

The report suggests some "unfair criticism of police, because the congestion problem is much broader than one of enforcement."

This week Peterborough constables began to enforce the by-law which restricts metered parking on George St. to one hour. Motorists have been in the habit of inserting another nickel in meters at the end of an hour, but this is illegal and will henceforth be so considered.

One constable on the George St. beat Monday reported "an awful lot of complaints" from motorists ticketed for overtime parking even though meter time had not expired. Constables chalk both tires and sidewalks to catch offenders, though it is possible to avoid a ticket by moving one's car a few feet each hour It is hoped, however, that this extra inconvenience will discourage bottleneck motorists.

Decision to invite Mr. Culham to next Monday's meeting grew out of an organizational meeting of the new parking committee Monday night, chaired by chamber president Samuel J. Whitehouse.

Other members of the committee are Vern Selkirk, Ernest C. Braund, Clare Collins, Harry and Myer Cherney, Herb Jamieson, Jack Lewis (representing the Automobile club) and Noel Risher, for the city's realtors.

United Young People Attend Weiner Roast

PLAINVILLE (ENS) — The young people of the Plainville United church held a weiner roast at Oriole Beach, (Kings) at the weekend. During the evening Miss Lillian Barker was presented with a dresser set. Paul McKinlay read an address and Miss Joan Smith made the presentation on behalf of the group. Miss Barker of Cobourg has been teaching in the district for the past few years and is now leaving to take up another position. During her time spent here she has been very active on the young people's union.

After the church service on Sunday morning, 22 members of the Couples Club, their children and others went to Orono park for a picnic dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Don Herriott and Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Buttars were the two couples who were in charge of the outing.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Halligan who were recently married, were the guests of honour at a party at Harwood. They were presented with a bookcase table, electric clock and a sum of money. Over 100 attended the party.

Miss Mary Ellen Emmons of Campbellford is visiting her aunt and uncle Mr. and Mrs. William Herriott.

Annual School Picnic

The annual school picnic was held on Monday at Indian River of SS No. 5, Otonabee. The picnic was arranged by Mrs. Robertson, teacher of the school. All families in the section were present and many former pupils.

The dinner tables were set along the river bank. Immediately following the dinner hour, the pupils honored their teacher by presenting her with a pair of brass plaques, a rhinestone bracelet and ear-rings to match.

Jane Johnston and James Emery made the presentation. Ruth Davis read the address. Mrs. Robertson, who has taught for the past four years at sixth line will be taking the senior room at Woodview.

The winners of the races were as follows:

Sack race, Joan Edwards; three-legged race, Rosemary Delong and Shirley Lang; junior race, Rita Davis, Gail Donaldson; wheelbarrow race, Rosemary Delong, Shirley Lang.

Trailermen Earn 10-7 OLA Win Against Mimico

MIMICO (CP)—Sparked by Bob Curtis who scored four goals, Peterborough Trailermen defeated Mimico Mounties 10-7 in an Ontario Lacrosse Association senior "A" game here last night.

The win lifted the Trailermen into a first-place tie with St. Catharines Athletics who lost to Hamilton Monday night. Each team has 20 smooth passing, speed and alertness of the Trailermen were too much for the Mimico squad.

The Mounties pleased the gathering of home town fans in Drummond Bowl by jumping into an early two-goal lead; Al Garbutt opened the scoring at the 2.25 mark taking a pass from Les Digby and blasting a close-in shot past Peterborough Goalie Moon Wootton.

Peterborough forward Bob Batley went off for slashing and 17 seconds later Pop Chard scored, with Digby and Garbutt assisting, to make the count Mimico 2, Peterborough 0.

CAUGHT FIRE

Then the Trailermen caught fire. Lou Nickle picked up the first Peterborough goal at the seven-minute mark on a pass from Bob Thorpe.

Russ Slater and Harry Wipper then combined on a neat passing play with Wipper firing the pay off shot to tie the game two-all.

Peterborough went into a lead they never relinquished on one of the slickest plays of the night. Bob Allan ran the length of the field and then laid a pass into the stick of Bob Curtis who was standing in front of the net. Curtis flipped the ball home for the first of his four goals.

With only 11 seconds to play in the period Peterborough made the score 4-2 when Curtis took a pass from Fitzgerald and faked to Tomchisen twice before denting the twine. Harry Wipper started the scoring play.

Peterborough dominated the second period, notching five markers while the Mounties replied with only one goal. Mimic forward Les Digby went off for two minutes for slashing four seconds after the period began and Batley scored for the Trailermen on a pass from Lou Nickle just as Digby came back on the field.

Curly Mason took a pass from Gerry Fitzgerald and made the score 6-3 for Peterborough.

SCORED BUT ONE

Ken Dickson scored Mimico's only goal of the stanza when he blasted the ball past Wootton on a pass from Chuck Simpson. Don Ashbee scored one goal and Bob Curtis picked up two more goals in the next ten minutes and Peterborough held its 9-3 edge for the rest of the period. Curtis' final goal of the evening was a beautiful back-hand shot in close after a pass from Bob Allan.

Wootton looked good during the second frame, coming up with smart saves on Meeke Sandford, Dickson and Kapalsky when they got in close.

The Mounties came back strongly in the third period and narrowed the margin to 9-6 with three quick goals.

Harry Wipper scored Peterborough's last goal of the night on a pass from Denny Peterson and although Dixon scored his second goal of the game for Mimico, with Chard and Tomchisen assisting, Trailermen held onto their lead for a well earned win.

Peterborough were full value for their win. Their passing was sharper and their defence sounder. Mimico had difficulty breaking in for close shots on Wootton.

Curtis with his four goals, Wipper with two and Fitzgerald with three assists looked good for Peterborough. Dixon paced Mimico with two goals and played a sound two-way game.

Paige Pitches All Year On Ball Tour

It is only proper and natural that the most travelled man in baseball—Leroy (Satchel) Paige—should be playing with the team that travels more and farther than any other in the game, Abe Saperstein's famous Harlem Globetrotters.

Satchel, hailed by millions as the peer of all pitchers, will stop off here July 1 with the Globetrotters when they play the House of David at Riverside.

One of the reasons they call him Satchel is because the ancient hurler has been living out of a suitcase most of his life, pitching all over the world. Satchel says:

"I have pitched in every state in the union. More people have seen me pitch than any pitcher in baseball history . . . and thousands more will see me this season with the Globetrotters.

THE YEAR AROUND

"I've been out there on that mound throwin' that old ball for more than 25 years, and when I say years I mean 365 days. I've been pitching 130 to 160 games, with the exception of the time I spent in the big leagues with Cleveland and St. Louis, for so long that it's just a habit now.

"I figure I have pitched over 2,000 games, travelin' about 30,000 miles a year. I used to pitch down south in the spring, all over the country during the summer and in the late fall I'd go out to California and play. Then in the middle of the winter I'd take off for South America."

Why does this famous baseball figure continue to pitch? Why doesn't he quit and live a life of ease?

"Well," Satchel says, "I don't quit baseball because I love it. I like to get out there and let that fast ball fly. I love to see the hitters swing and miss Ole Satch's fast ball and hesitation pitch."

No one doubts Satch's love for the game . . . but it should be added here that his love (baseball) brings him a salary, too. He will make no less than $30,000 pitching for the Globetrotters this season.

Leaf Protest Now Upheld

TORONTO (CP) — President Frank Shaughnessy of the International League Tuesday upheld a Toronto Maple Leaf protest and decided to give further consideration whether to order replay of a game which Leafs lost 4-3 to the Bisons in Buffalo last Thursday.

Before the game started Leaf manager Luke Sewell had filed official protest when umpire Max Felerski threatened him with forfeiture unless he withdrew second baseman Loren Babe from the lineup.

"The umpire was wrong and Sewell was right," Shaughnessy ruled.

The episode resulted from a clerical error Sewell made in preparing his line-up before the game. In making the required duplicate of his proper line-up Sewell inadvertently omitted Babe's name as leadoff hitter and named pitcher Frank Barnes to both the leadoff and ninth positions in the batting order on the second copy.

Snider, Reese Out Of Line-up

NEW YORK (AP) — Centre fielder Duke Snider and shortstop Pee Wee Reese will be absent from the Brooklyn line-up when the Dodgers tackle New York Giants in the second game of their important series today.

Snider was hit on the right elbow by Marv Grissom in the 10th inning of Tuesday night's game which the Giants won 4-3. An examination showed no break, but Snider could hardly lift his arm later. He probably will be out for several days.

Reese aggravated an old leg injury running from first to third on a single in the 12th inning. He will take only a day or two off.

Minor Ball School Registering Boys

Boys wishing to enroll in the Peterborough Minor Baseball School, conducted this summer in Riverside, are asked to register at Riverside from 10 a.m. Friday until noon. They are also registering today. Those not having their contracts, may receive them when registering.

Classes there being Monday and go five afternoons a week, each day starting at one p.m. Monday class is for boys nine and 10 years of age Tuesday for those 11 and 12; Wednesday for 13 and 14; Thursday 15 and 16, and Friday 17 and 18. There will also be a class Tuesday evenings for boys working.

Australia's touring cricket team which included such notables as Don Bradman and Stan McCabe walloped an eastern Canada team by nine wickets, 22 years ago today at Toronto. The Canadians had 176 for eight, declared, and 103, the Aussies replying with 225 for eight, declared, and 55 for one wicket. McCabe scored a century while Bradman was limited to 40 and 52.

TAGGED BY TOBY—Ed Baily, Redlegs catcher, is tagged out at home by Pirate catcher Toby Atwell. Ed tried to score from first base on infielder Bobby Adams' double in the first game of last Sunday's double.

GRANT'S SPORT CORNER

By DON GRANT

Don't hand anything to Bobbie Thorpe today, he'll probably drop it.

It's not that the genial Trailermen coach has the dropsy: It's just a case of having his hands full; right now they're overloaded.

Added to his burden of strengthening the Trailermen for the drive to the Eastern Canada and Mann Cup finals, is the coaching chore of the younger lads who form the Peterborough minor lacrosse association.

Now the school kids are out for two months' holidays, they'll have oodles of leisure time, apart from swimming, hiking, boating, and perhaps the odd errand for mom. Bob hopes they'll find time for some instruction in lacrosse at Miller Bowl.

Ideal Coach For Minor Teams

Following in the footsteps of former minor league coaches, Jack Foote, Jerry Fitzgerald, Harry Wipper and Don Ashbee, our friend Bobbie is ideally suited for his new post. The kids like him and respect him. Besides, although still young, he has years of experience both in playing and coaching to back his instruction.

Walter Murphy, the minors' strongest supporter and worker, is enthusiastic about Bobbie's appointment.

"It's a wonderful opportunity for the boys to learn the game from a very, very good coach. The facilities are there and it's now up to the boys. If they want to learn a good fast game, the opportunity is theirs."

Walt is really interested in seeing your lad playing at Miller Bowl. There he will join some 300 others, ranging in age from five years to 16, playing in tadpole, peewee, bantam, midget and juvenile leagues.

Bob will be grouping the boys into teams and leagues for play throughout the summer months. Also he will be instructing on fundamentals such as passing, catching, defensive play and other points of Canada's "national game."

As a parting note, we like to point out that you can become a part of the minor program by buying a lifesaver next Saturday (July 10). The lacrosse lads will be selling lifesavers for funds to provide equipment, travelling expenses and such for this season.

Jimmy McNulty Going Strong

It's too bad that plans to make Jimmy McNulty a Trailerman this season fell through. The former Pete and West Yorker appears destined for his best year in senior company with the Hamilton Tigers.

Jim and company dropped the Mann Cup holders at Miller Bowl last week and Monday night tripped the league-leading St. Catharines Athletics. Both games saw Jim playing the leading role with his scoring.

If the Tabbies continue at the hot pace they've been travelling, they just may make some lacrosse experts eat a few words. Those men "who are in the know" said it would be a two-team league this year; they overlooked the Tigers.

Jim's two goals in the 8-7 victory over the Athletics puts him well out in front in league scoring with 46 points (that's unless Rustly Slater went on a scoring spree Tuesday night in Mimico). Slater, with 37 points (after Saturday night), was Jim's closest competition.

The Moon, Lloyd Wootton, regained his position as top goalie in the league again with a goals-against average of 8:23 in 12 games. He's just shading Doug Favell by .07.

Turning to other sports for a minute we'd like you to mark July 6 in red, that's an important date for the Peterborough lawn bowlers. They will be matching the skills of 29 British lawn bowlers that day as the group begin their tour across Canada.

29 English Bowlers To Visit Club

Incidentally, it's the English bowlers third test, playing first in Ottawa and Toronto, and after Peterborough, Western Ontario centres, then the West, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Victoria and the British Empire Games in Vancouver.

Orfuns' president, Jack Harris, is busy these days in the west, drumming up a tie-in wtih a WIFU team, possibly Winnipeg Blue Bombers with whom he is an old friend.

Dr. Don Aitken is expected back from the west coast almost daily and may have some good news for football enthusiasts. It was previously reported he was talking tie-in terms with the BC Lions.

Next week will see the Orfuns' lasses selling the quarterback club memberships.

Rumors about town and in Lindsay have several top junior "B" hockey stars heading across the border next season. Recently a coach and player from a United States university interviewed the boys, offering a sports scholarship if school marks were high enough. They were interested primarily in a goalie.

P.G. & C.C. Chip Shots

Fred Hollowell finally accomplished what, for two years, has not been done. He nudged Les Reid to the sidelines in the first round of club championship play, ending Les' hold on the trophy. Others advancing to the second round were Stu Williamson over Al Baxter 4 and 3, Jim Clarkson over Gord Whatman on one extra hole, Don Vyse over Ted Cragg 4 and 2.

Winners in the first round of Westclox Trophy play were Hip Hardill over Slim Pearson, Dude Brady over Joe Frost, Ron Wyllie over Mack Campbell, Jack Murray over Ted Flummerfelt, Bill Burnie over Ira Dundas, Frank Jackson over W. R. Fleming and Harry Harrington over Tem Temesey.

One week from today will see the renewal of the mixed two-ball foursome event. Everyone may enter with the draw for partners being made on the first tee. Your match and handicap committee is looking to another bang-up show so plan to be on hand early.

J. LARMER WON

Jean Lamers won the competition, player vs. par, in the regular Tuesday field day of the ladies' section. Low gross honors were split between Jean Stacey and Em Selkirk who tied. Jean Lamers and Jean Stacey tied for low net with Doreen Lawrence second. Weather was perfect for the ladies and all players enjoyed the afternoon.

Monkey golf was the feature of the BGs' Tuesday meeting. The nine and 18 hole sections teamed for the nine-hole competition with a draw for clubs and partners being made. Golf balls for hidden holes were won by the teams of Nancy Pridham and Marie Battle and Muriel Adams and Agnes Bowler. The prize for low score on the 5th, donated by the captain, was won by Eleanor Collins and Jean Castle. The break from serious golf was thoroughly enjoyed by all contestants.

A goodly crowd attended the second dance of the season which was held Friday night. Strictly informal, the ball featured loud sport shirts and gay dresses. Good music, good food and good fellowship joined hands to make the evening a huge success.

Don't forget the mixed sweepstake which will be run off July 1. The sweeps are gaining popularity and are an excellent way to replenish those diminishing supplies of balls. See you then.

Seabrooke, TPT Gain Tilts In Men's League

Seabrooke Motors racked up their ninth victory of the men's senior softball [illegible], Tuesday night when they defeated Kingdon Lumber of Lakefield 11-8, in the opener of the regular twin bill; the win consolidated the Sullivan men's position atop the city loop, three games ahead of UEW and Transports, tied for second place. TP Transports outscored Marines in the nightcap, 16-8, to move into a virtual tie with UEW, separated by only two percentage points.

Thursday, July 1, the city leaguers will stage their regular scheduled games in the afternoon as part of a booster program for the league, with draw prizes a feature. First game at two p.m. features Kingdon Lumber vs. TPT's, the nightcap pits Seabrooke Motors against UEW.

REAL SLUGFEST

Lefty Jack Doris twirled for Seabrooke's last night; and though not in top form, hurled sufficiently well to eke out the victory in a general slugfest. He allowed 11 hits, fanned one and walked four. Red Wasson, versatile athlete of an athletic family, opened for the Lumber Kings; but quickly yielded to the polished hand of hard-working Dick McCracken in the fourth, with Kingdon's facing an 8-5 deficit. Despite a gallant effort by the Kingdon ace, too much damage preceded his entry, and though Kingdon's batted Doris freely in spots, the league-leaders had enough steam to carry through, on a small margin.

Leading the winners at the platter was the redoubtable Red Sullivan, leading Seabrooke slugger, to date, with a 420 average. Red hit four for five, a double, and his third homer of the campaign, to score three runs, and drive home a fourth.

Following came Buster Jensen with two for four, both triples, one scored and two batted in; Neil Thompson two for four, a double and triple plus three RBI's, and two scored; Speed Curry two for five. For Lakefield, Phil Elmhirst and John Richlark homered, the latter having three RBI's; Dean Wasson hit three for five; Perc Elmhirst two. Jack Burger fielded exceptionally will in left for Kingdon's.

STARTED ON SLAB

Reg. Gordon started for Transports in the afterpiece, but quickly yielded to the veteran Guilfoyle in the second as Marines greated him like a long-lost cousin. Guilfoyle weathered doubtful seas in a couple of frames and held Marines well, and, aided by neat support and an insatiable offensive displayed by his mates, came through in fine style.

Ron Akers toiled the route for the Leether squad, was shelled freely, though he hurled effectively in spots. Transports rapped out a total of 19 hits, including three doubles by Junior West, a triple and double by Castle, and drew four passes. Marines garhered but eight bingles off TP pitching, with doubles by Hayes and Kimball.

Leading Transports' offensive were Hermie Castle, Teeder Collins and Joe Stewart, each with three RBI's; the first named had four for four. Junior West had three for four and fielded in his usual style, save for one miscue. For Marines, Jack Kimball batted in three, Bill Corrigan two, Mongraw, Hayes, Burt Gordanier and Morgan, one each. The fielding of Joe O'Brien in right field thrilled a good crowd.

Police And Bell Get Wins In Tight Frays

Herb Payne's Police Transporters edged Bill's Lunch 14-13 in the curtain raiser of the regular [illegible] twin Civic League softball set, to stun the crack Monaghan Road squad with the letter's second defeat of the season in 11 starts — a sizzling duel, Chum Gillespie's merry laddies from the Bell Telephone Company, took a neat 9-8 verdict over Army in the nightcap, another sparkling battle.

As a result of their games, Seabrook Electries now occupy first place by a few percentage points with Bill's Lunch in second spot; Police are third, three games back, with Bell a half-game away in fourth; Army, Fairviews and Watercraft follow in that order as the schedule approaches its second half.

GOOD PITCHING

Slater twirled winning ball for the Coppers, opposing Peters and Sanderson. A hectic battle ensued but Police were not to be denied and a four-run rally in the fourth proved sufficient as, led by Rowe, Slater, Coach Healy and Payne, who homered over the right-centrefield fence, the men in blue showed their ability to come from behind with a winning punch; but the Welsh men made it close to the finish.

Burt Harrison toiled the route for Bell's in the nightcap, opposing Art Smith, and the Cardwell Army lads seemed headed for victory near game's end, but a sharp rally in the final seventh gave the Gillespie men their vital margin. Keith Harrison, Dick Hughes and Ray James led Bell's offensive with all hands good — Army likewise. A good crowd thrilled at the two evenly-matched struggles.

Giants Achieve Another Miracle Edge Dodgers 4-3

By BEN PHLEGAR, Associated Press Sports Writer

The New York Giants appafently are going to stay in first place until they run out of miracles. So far the supply has seemed almost unlimited.

They pulled another one out of the hat Tuesday night, beating their bitter rivals, the Brooklyn Dodgers, 4-3 in 13 innings when Dusty Rhodes delivered a two-out pinch hit single with the bases loaded and the Giants a run behind.

This was the 10th time since the season opened that the Giants have triumphed in their last chance at bat. And since they moved within striking distance of the lead they've used the Frank Merriwell finish so often that poor Frank is about tuckered out.

They are two lengths in front of the Dodgers.

CUBS LOSE FOURTH

Roy Campanella and rookie Don Hoak hit homers for Brooklyn.

Elsewhere in the National League the Chicago Cubs lost their 11th in a row, 7-0 to Milwaukee; Philadelphia whipped Pittsburgh 4-0 and Cincinnati crushed St. Louis 11-4.

Cleveland picked up half a game on Chicago in the American League and now leads the White Sox by two games. The Indians beat Baltimore 5-1 but Chicago had to settle for a split in a twin bill with Detroit, winning 5-0 after losing 10-3. The New York Yankees stayed 3 games back with a 14-5 triumph at Boston. Philadelphia shaded Washington 3-2.

Art Houtteman of the Indians broke a five-game Baltimore winning streak with a five-hitter. One of the Orioles' hits was a single by Dick Kryhoski who stretched his streak to 19 games, longest in the majors this season.

HALTED BY CURFEW

Detroit jumped ahead of the White Sox in the first game as Harvey Kuenn opened with a home run and the Tigers added a dozen more hits in piling up their seven-run winning margin. Sandy Consuegra checked them on three safeties in the nightcap which was shortened to eight innings by the league curfew. No inning can start after 12:50 a. m., local time, in any major league city.

Mickey Mantle paced the Yankee assault on the Boston pitching corps with four hits in five times up including a triple.

Arnold Portocarrero, a likely looking rookie, won his fifth straight for the Athletics with the help of a Washington error by Mickey Vernon and a triple by Bill Renna. The Philadelphia right-hander now has a record of 6-6.

MUSIAL, MAYS TIED

Jim Wilson of the Braves, who was on the market for $10,000 with no takers until he pitched a no hitter earlier this month, turned in his fifth victory without a loss and his third shutout in beating the hapless Cubs. Eddie Mathews hit his 14th homer.

An inside-the-park home run by Richie Ashburn with two mates on base broke a scoreless tie in the eighth inning at Pittsburgh as Herman Wehmeier pitched a seven-hit shutout. It was Wehmeier's second victory and second complete game since joining the Phillies from Cincinnati.

Stan Musial hit his 24th home run, tying Willie Mays of the Giants for the league lead, but the Cardinals continued to sink deeper into second division. Gus Bell led the Cincinnati attack with a home run and two singles and the Redlegs took advantage of two errors and three hit batsmen.

Remember When—

Bobby Jones won his third U.S. Open golf championship in the most decisive playoff in history 25 years ago today. Tied with Abe Espinosa at 294 in the regular tourney, Jones scored 141 to Espinosa's 164 in the playoff. That was the year before Bobby scored his grand slam—the U.S. open and amateur, British open and amateur.

Marlene Stewart Reaches Golf Quarter-Finals

GANTON, England (AP)—Tiny Marlene Stewart of Canada reached the quarter-finals in defence of her British women's golf championship Tuesday with a thrilling 19-hole victory over Irish champion Philomena Garvey.

Miss Garvey was runner-up to the 20-year-old Fonthill miss in last year's British championship. She lost 7 and 6, then, but Tuesday she carried Miss Stewart to an extra hole after Marlene ran into a series of errors on the back nine.

Earlier Miss Stewart eliminated the only American entry, Margaret Smith of Pasadena, Calif., 4 and 3, in the third round.

SQUARED AT 16TH

Against the experienced Miss Garvey, Marlene shot a 36 on the front nine to lead two up. She was outdriving her opponent and playing a better short game. Marlene went three up at the 12th, where Miss Garvey was bunkered.

The match entered a new phase at the 12th where Miss Stewart, who had so far played perfectly, made the first of many errors. She drove into some trees there and three-putted the 13th to lose both holes.

Miss Garvey squared the match at the 16th.

On the extra hole, Miss Garvey sent her drive into a bunker and Marlene won it with a four.

Miss Stewart plays Arlette Jacque of Belgium today.

Havana Scores Two Wins Over Red Wings

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pedro Formental, 36-year-old rookie, made the most of his first game in organized ball by driving in eight runs for the International League's Havana Cuban Sugar Kings.

Havana won the twilight opener 8-5 as Formental drove in seven of the runs and a pinch single by Bob Ortiz in the 10th inning gave the Kings a 5-3 victory over Rochester Red Wings in the nightcap Tuesday night.

Formental, a native Cuban who was rushed to Rochester to replace outfielder Angel Scull, who suffered a fractured cheek bone Monday night, had played all his baseball in Latin America. He led the Mexican league in 1953 and the Cuban winter league last year in batting.

Lefty Niles Jordan was the loser in both ends of the doubleheader, the first double defeat for Rochester this season.

INCREASE LEAD

Meanwhile, Toronto Maple Leafs nipped Richmond Virginians 4-3 and increased their first-place lead to 1½ games over the Red Wings.

Home runs by catcher Elston Howard, with a man on in the fourth, and Sam Jethroe in the same frame provided the Toronto margin.

Righthander Ed Blake went the distance to earn his seventh victory of the season against three losses.

Righthander Ed Roebuck limited Buffalo Bisons to two hits as he pitched Montreal Royals to a 3-0 victory.

Sandy Amoros walloped his 11th homer of the season in the third inning and Montreal scored two runs in the eighth off loser Ken Johnson.

Syracuse Chiefs spoiled Taft Wright's managerial debut as they defeated Ottawa Athletics in a doubleheader 8-5 and 5-2.

See Grim Battle Shaping Up For Cycling Title

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dominion bicycle racing supremacy, to be contested at the Canadian cycling championships here July 1-2, may well be decided only after a grim east-west battle.

The list of 45 shows about half the competitors from eastern Canada and half from western Canada.

Being touted as strong contenders for the aggregate title are Pat Murphy of Delhi, Ont., and youthful Jim Davies, and up-and-coming Vancouver racer.

Murphy won the Canadian title in 1953 and holds the 1954 Ontario championship. Twenty- year- old Davies has no national titles but was crowned B. C. champ after a grulling 1953 road race and holds a number of local sprint records.

Western fans looking for Davies to best Murphy in the meet were gladdened last week when the two were clocked for the last 200 metres of a sprint race at 12:01. Their time was slightly more than one second away from the Canadian record.

Not a dark horse but still comparatively unknown is Peter Hanslow, also regarded as dangerous competition for the all-round title.

Hanslow won't be able to race for any country in the British Empire Games, July 31-Aug. 7. The rangy, 22-year-old is one of four Australian cyclists who came to Vancouver a short time ago, and, because of immigration and residence laws, are not qualified to race for either Australia or Canada.

Majority of the distance betting is on Eric Fellows of Toronto, and Bill Johnson, another of the "homeless Aussies." Johnson gained recognition last week-end, when he cracked the Canadian-unpaced 4,000 metre mark, with a time of 5:20.3-5. Previous record was 4:31.

Also on hand, and highly regarded will be Lorne Atkinson, who represented Canada in the 1952 Olympics and the 1950 British Empire Games.

Making a comeback—and a good one—is Johnny Millman of Vancouver, who has been absent from the tracks and road races for a couple of years.

Will Appeal

TORONTO (CP)—Notice of appeal was filed Tuesday against conviction of seven fine paper mills, 20 merchants, and the secretary of a wholesalers' trade association. The group was convicted June 14 by Mr. Justice W. F. Spence of the Ontario Supreme Court and sentenced June 22 to fines totalling $242,000 on charges of operating a combine.

Ontario Out Of Bowling Championships

WINNIPEG (CP)—Quebec, British Columbia and Manitoba captured the singles, doubles and rink titles respectively at the Canadian lawn bowling championships at Winnipeg's Norwood Greens Tuesday and will represent Canada in those events in the British Empire Games at Vancouver.

Lefthanded Jack Linford of Lachine, Que., won the singles with a 23-15 victory over Jimmy Gibson of Winnipeg.

British Columbia's Sam Gardiner and Dick Williams took the doubles when a three-way tie was broken by the best plus score. Billy Calder's foursome from Manitoba also gained the rink title by having a better plus score than Alberta's J. Little after the two rinks each won one game and tied one in two starts.

Best match of the final day of the two-day tournament came in the doubles, Stan Townsend and Jock Dickie of Manitoba, who lost 28-15 Monday night to B. C., needed a wide-margin victory over Ontario to create a three-way tie and win on the plus scores. The Manitobans staged a comeback after being down 13-0 at the sixth end to nip Bill Duncan and Dick Edey of Kingston 19-17, making a three-way tie. However, British Columbia, who lost only 21-16 to Ontario, were declared the winners of the meet.

400 Golfers Win Hogan Medals For Play

TORONTO CP)—Bill Hamilton, secretary-treasurer of the Royal Canadian Golf Association, said Tuesday about 400 golfers in Canada won "I beat Ben Hogan" medals by posting a net score of lower than 64 on National Golf Day, June 5.

Hogan, 1953 U. S. open champion, shot his 64 on the Baltusrol course at Springfield, N. J.

Hamilton said receipts from National Golf Day, which will be divided equally between the Red Cross and the Canadian junior golf development program, will probably be about the same as last year. In 1953 final total receipts were $12,166.

Golab Posted To RMC Staff

HAMILTON (CP) — Sqdn. Ldr. Tony Golab of the RCAF, one of Canada's all-time football greats, said Tuesday he has been transferred from Hamilton to the directing staff of Royal Military College at Kingston.

Commanding officer of the Mount Hope RCAF station here for 2½ years, Golab said he plans to leave July 14.

Coach of Hamilton Partners, champions of the Intermediate Ontario Rugby Football Union for the last two years, Golab said his duties as cadet commandant at RMC will be to co-ordinate the school's sports activities and coach the football squad.

Golab, a product of Windsor's Kennedy Collegiate, compiled an outstanding record in high school and professional football. He played for Sarnia Imperials and Ottawa Rough Riders and was selected to all - Canadian teams seven times before retiring from the game in 1949.

U.S. Players Score Tennis Win

WIMBLEDON, England (AP)—Maureen Connolly and three other Americans made certain Tuesday the United States will take at least one Wimbledon tennis championship— the women's singles—when they won easy quarter - finals matches.

Three of the girls, defending champion Miss Connolly and former champions Doris Hart and Louise Brough, won as expected. But the fourth, Mrs. Betty Rosenquest Pratt, came in with an upset over Shirley Fry, another American.

In mixed doubles play Lorne Main of Toronto and Mrs. L. Alvensleben - Rigollet of Switzerland were defeated 6-2, 6-1 by Vic Seixas of Philadelphia and Miss Hart in fourth round play.

Mrs. Hannah Sladek of Toronto and Miss E. G. Atwood of New Zealand lost 6-1, 3-6, 6-1 in a second-round match in the women's doubles.

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Golf Association Tuesday announced final plans for the international competition for the Simpson Cup between junior golfers from Ontario and Washington, D. C., to be held at the Toronto Mississauga course July 13.

Each team is made up of eight players, two each from the age groups of 14 and under, 15, 16, and 17. Foursomes will play an 18-hole round in the morning while in the afternoon there will be singles play over another 18 holes.

Wins Boxing Crown

SAINT JOHN, N. B. (CP)—Charlie Chase of Montreal won the Canadian middleweight boxing championship Tuesday night with a unanimous 12 - round decision over Charlottetown's Harry (Kid) Poulton. The title had been vacant. Chase weighed 157 and Pulton 156.

Judge Gerry Donovan gave seven rounds to Chase, two to Poulton and called three even. Danny Lee saw it as seven one and four, in the same order, and the other judge, J. O. Johnson, favored Chase in every round.

The bout was sanctioned by the Canadian Boxing and Wrestling Federation which ordered the winner to meet Lou Lawrence of Vancouver or another suitable opponent within 30 days.

Willie Mays Gives Giants Terrific Boost

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK (AP)—Leo Durocher was driving home from the Polo Grounds after a particularly exhausting doubleheader one afternoon a couple of summers ago.

In a Harlem street, he nearly ran over a sport-shirted figure dashing madly for a manhole cover which marked second base in a street game.

"Hey, you numbskull," the New York Giant manager shouted. Suddenly a look of recognition came to Leo's face and he screeched his car to a stop.

"LIVES" BASEBALL

"What's the matter? You nuts or something?" Leo bellowed at his centre fielder.

Willie Mays looked puzzled.

"Why am I nuts?" he asked blandly. "It ain't dark yet."

Durocher never tires of talking about Mays.

"Willie rooms with Monte Irvin. At 6 a.m. every morning he's nudging Monte. 'Wake up, roomie,' he says, 'let's talk baseball.' "

Durocher isn't the only member of the Giants family who likes Willie. The ball players like his odd mixture of boyish naivete and brash confidence. They laugh at his habit of opening every conversation with the words, "say hey," and mimic the way he talks in a high-pitched, soprano voice.

PHENOMENAL PLAYER

Despite all the buffoonery, Mays unquestionably has a terrific impact on the Giants and nobody knows just how far he can go. Mays became a spark plug on a pennant winner after only 16 games in the minors.

Mays did things naturally which cannot be taught or learned. He was such a stickout in 1951 that he easily ran off with the most valuable rookie award.

This year, with a batting average hovering around .330, a league leading total of 24 home runs and more than 50 runs batted in, Willie definitely is one of the leading candidates for most valuable player honors.

Mays has the knack of being on the winning side. The Giants still were in the second division when he joined them in May, 1951. They went on from there to win the pennant with an incredible stretch run.

ONE-MAN TEAM

The Giants were in first place when Willie left them to join the army the following May. It was downhill from the day he departed until the day he came back. Willie is back now and the Giants are back in first place.

"Sometimes I wonder what his presence does to the guys," said Durocher. "All I know is that he makes my job a lot easier. All year the club has shown the kind of spirit and life it never had last year. The guys have been hustling every step of the way. One man is responsible. That man is Willie Mays."

Voyles Signs Three Canadian Players

HAMILTON (CP) — Tiger - Cat coach Carl Voyles Tuesday announced the signing of three Canadian players, Ray Truant, Bob Garside and Bob Butter. Only Butter is new to the Hamilton team of the Big Four Football League.

Truant, a Brantford school teacher, was a defensive back for Tiger - Cats last year. Garside came to Hamilton from the Ottawa Rough Riders mid - way through the 1953 season and filled in as linebacker.

Voyles said that Truant and Garside were signed "at an increase."

Announce Golf Team

TORONTO (CP) — The Royal Canadian Golf Association Tuesday announced the seven-member team of blind golfers which will represent Canada in the international blind golfers team championships at the Toronto Lambton course July 21-23.

They are Phil Lederhouse, Prince Albert, Sask.; Nick Genovese, Dundas; Charles Tooth and Harold Mitchell of Hamilton; John MacPherson, Regina; Roy Meehan Burlington; and Claude Pattamore, Hamilton.

Canadian and American players will compete.

Costly Rides

VICTORIA (CP) — The British Columbia education department will study transportation in an effort to halt increasing costs of carrying children to school in buses. Last year the province paid $2,186,000 and the annual increase is almost a quarter of a million dollars.

Rain or Shine

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dancers from six years up are competing in the annual meet of the B. C. Highland Dancing Association at the University of British Columbia stadium July 1. If it rains, they move into the campus gymnasium.

Capsule News

KAMLOOPS, B. C. (CP) — Ten thousand scrolls, each in a small capsule, will be given the high school band for distribution on its forthcoming trip to eastern Canada and Europe. The scrolls bear information about the Kamloops area.

Fourth Bishop

OTTAWA (CP)—The Rt. Rev. Ernest Reed, 45, Tuesday became the fourth Anglican bishop in Ottawa's 100-year history at a consecration ceremony in Christ Church cathedral. Most Rev. Robert J. Renison, metropolitan of Ontario and archbishop of Moosonee, conducted the consecration.

Here And There In Sports

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

EDMONTON (CP) — Clamping down on rough soccer play, the Edmonton District Football Association has suspended one player for life and banished another for the remainder of this season and all of 1955.

The suspensions, imposed at an emergency meeting Monday night, resulted from a wild playoff game Saturday when police were called to quell an outbreak among players and spectators.

Jerry Iwanyshyn, left fullback of the Ukrainian Lions, was suspended for life. The shorter sentence went to outside right Karl Weidle of the Edmonton Victoria squad.

Iwanyshyn was banished from the game after punching and breaking Weidle's nose, when the latter allegedly attempted to kick or trip him.

Winfrey and Alfred Vanderbilt, owner of the grey colt, visited England and France and are considering flying the Dancer to Paris for the Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe at Longchamps Oct. 3.

Native Dancer suffered a bruised foot in May.

UNUSUAL HAZARD

PERTH, Australia (AP)—Kangaroos have become a regular hazard to golfers at Halfway Creek in the eastern goldfields area and some players carry rifles in their golf bags.

Near-drought conditions in the northeast have driven the kangaroos to the Halfway Creek area where feed is plentiful.

POPULAR IN RUSSIA

MOSCOW (AP) — The world champion shot putter, Parry O'Brien of the United States, has become quite a boy in the Soviet press.

Perhaps it's because they like strong athletes here—men who can out-strong their own.

That is probably why O'Brien is given a two-column headed story and picture in the latest issue of Soviet Sport, leading sports paper of the Soviet Union.

The article stated that twice in a young season O'Brien broke his own world record and pointed up that Soviet track and field athletes must make haste to catch up with the Americans.

TRAIN FOR GAMES

LONDON (Reuers) — Eighteen athletes from Northern Rhodesia, including a quadruple-threat track and field star, are training here for the British Empire Games in Vancouver next month.

The team is captained by marathon runner Johnny Kay. He will be accompanied in track events by Edna Maskel, an 80-metre hurdler with a best performance mark of 11.3 seconds.

Northern Rhodesia will also enter boxing in four divisions, wrestling, weight-lifting and bowling.

Swimming Ace Plans To Wed

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Distance swimming ace Florence Chadwick announced she soon will take the big plunge—into matrimony with F. Wallace Taber, African game hunter, lecturer and former newspaperman.

Miss Chadwick, 34, made the announcement Tuesday night at a cocktail-buffet in her honor.

Miss Chadwick and Taber, 38, both from San Diego, will wait until fall for the wedding.

The swimmer and her mother head today for Victoria, B. C., where she'll swim the straits of Port Angeles Aug. 12. On Labor Day she will make a distance swim at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto.

Miss Chadwick, among her many feats, has swum the English channel both ways and has crossed the rough Catalina channel of southern California.

Mad At Pitcher Gets Winning Run-Rhodes

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK (AP)—"Leo told me to stop fighting the umpire. He said if I had to get mad at anybody, I should get made at the pitcher. So I did."

A jubilant Jim Rhodes was trying to explain how he won the game for New York Giants over Brooklyn Dodgers.

It was Rhodes' pinch-hit with the bases loaded and two out in the bottom half of the 13th inning that scored two runs and gave the Giants their thrilling 4-3 victory that increased their league lead over their inter-borough rivals to two games.

"Loes (pitcher Billy Loes) threw me two fast balls, both way inside," he detailed with gestures, "but the ump (plate umpire Frank Secory) called 'em both strikes. The second one missed the plate by the length of this coca cola bottle.

"Sure I was mad, and I guess I told him a thing or two. That's when Leo (Giant manager Leo Durocher) came out to talk to me. 'Forget the unipire, get ready for the pitch,' he said as he was walking back to the dugout. I sure was ready. It was a real good fast ball—real good. It was the most important base hit I ever got in my life."

The Dodgers, after tying the score in the ninth, 2-2, on Roy Campanella's two-run homer off Sal Maglie, had taken a 3-2 lead in the top of the 13th when Don Hoak hit a two-out, two-strike pitch into the lower right field stands.

Loes, the fourth Dodger pitcher, walked Whitey Lockman to open the Giants' 13th. The next two batters were retired. Loes walked Willie Mays and Irvin on full counts, and fired two strikes past Rhodes. Rhodes didn't miss the third one.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN
by Elmer Ferguson

There are bigger fish caught than the luscious 30-pound lake trout hauled from the waters of Lake Superior in the unique Rossport Annual Fish Derby. But we doubt that there's a more truly sporting crowd, or a greater gathering of fishing folk and assorted tackle anywhere in the world than that poised for the crack of the starter's gun each year on the shores of this little Ontario town.

On July 25, Rossport will once again be the scene of an event in which many a fisherman's dream may come true. Expert and novice, amateur and veteran can fulfill the ambition of winning an angler's prize.

The Rossport Derby attracts more entrants than any other fishing derby in these Dominions. Last year, there were 756 boats and 2,186 contestants from the United States and Canada.

Rossport is a picturesque village surrounded by some of the most scenic areas of Northwestern Ontario. It nestles in the shelter of the high hills, with their forested slopes sweeping down to the lovely shores of Lake Superior.

A flare-gun fired on the big day at the stroke of 8 a.m. will send the myriad craft racing toward "The Gap", where the big lake trout lurk deep in Superior's waters. There are power-boats, sail-boats and even row-boats in this motley cavalcade, and lines and lures are flung into the waters by the hundred.

Lake trout are big, hard-fighting fish. The winners are judged by the poundage of their catch. Last year, trolling from the same boat, Maurice Thompson, a drug store proprietor from Nipigon, Ontario hooked the winner. It weighed 32 pounds, 11 ounces. Mrs. Rita Ray, from Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, took second-place laurels with a beauty tipping the official Derby scales at 29 pounds, 15 ounces.

It's a real sporting event, for sports-minded folks. It grows in volume and interest every year, ranking with the best fishing derbies anywhere, and it is certainly one of Canada's most picturesque sports events.

ECLIPSE'S PATH—This artist's sketch shows part of the path of the moon shadow during the eclipse of the sun today. In North America, the shadow first hit the earth in northeast Nebraska, crossed the twin cities, Minneapolis and St. Paul, moved over Lake Superior and Upper Michigan, then across Northern Ontario skirting James Bay. The shadow left North America on the Labrador coast. In this sketch the percentage figures denote the various degrees of totality which were seen in different parts of the country.—(CP Photo).

Girl Scoops 40 Reporters Covering Guatemala War

NOTE: Evelyn Irons, only woman correspondent covering the rebel invasion of Guatemala from Honduras, has scooped 40 of her male competitors. She was the first reporter to enter Chiquimula, the insurgents' Guatemalan headquarters. How she got there is part of the story, written for the London Evening Standard and The Associated Press after her return to Tegucigalpa.

By EVELYN IRONS

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) The toughest aspect of the Guatemalan war is getting there, as the invaders found. I travelled as they did—25 miles by mule and on foot from the Honduran border village of Nuova Octopeque to Esquipulas.

It was reputedly a six-to-eight-hour trip but it took me 13 hours.

A lean desperado in a battered straw sombrero agreed to supply himself as guide and two mules for $15.

But he turned up with only one mule and the statement that not for $1,000 would he go farther than the border, as he feared for his life in Guatemala.

So we started up the boulder path leading to the mountains with Enriques, the guide, trotting ahead. I, on the mule followed.

It was a brilliant, hot morning and at first the adventure had charms.

Enriques in sandals larruped up mountains until I thought my heart would burst.

BORDER UNGUARDED

Five hours after the start we reached the border. Nobody was in sight and I wondered how to find my way from there. The place seemed deserted—just a monolith on a mound with "Guatemala 1936" carved on it.

But round a bend I found a hut shared by a family with their pigs and hens. In the hut were a reconnaissance party of five rebels led by a hard-bitten farmer, Capitan Jose Santival, whom I had met on an airplane from Tegucigalpa.

But now the rainstorm, which is fittingly called "tormenta," broke. We sheltered in an empty customs but (the borders were often and unguarded) thus wasting valuable daylight time.

TOOK HUTS EMPTY

The path was even more difficult here than on the Honduras side. At first we took off our boots to cross swollen rivers but later we did not bother—we were soaked anyway. We interviewed peasants about their politics. And time marched on faster than we.

After dark there was no more path—just a river in spate up which we plunged, our way dimly lit by two inadequate flashlamps.

Life's best moment was walking over the solid stone bridge into Esquipulas at 10 o'clock that night.

From Esquipulas I got a lift in a truck to Chiquimula, now headquarters of the rebels.

Chiquimula is a sprawling mountain town of white, pink and purple-washed, red-roofed houses. Now it is milling with picturesque, unwashed soldiery. From a loudspeaker on the bandstand records blare, peppered with broadcast exhortations to "join the patriotic army of Col. Castillo Armas and defeat the Communist menace.

The only damage done when Col. Armas and his rebels captured the town last Thursday was a few smashed lamp globes and a broken arm on a statue labelled "Tragedy."

People are so poor and living conditions so primitive that it was surprising to hear that the retreating government troops took with them around $80,000 of public money from the agrarian bank.

EL MICO REBEL HERO

Hero of the Chiquimula fight was "El Mico"—the monkey—a big, brawny, prematuredly-balding dentistry student who grabbed a machine-gun after his two companions were killed and stormed alone through the town's centre.

But today El Mico was missing on a guerrilla expedition in the hills round Zacapa. If he is alive he will get the first rebel medal of the war.

Information about the fighting is wildly inaccurate. Even the commanders disagree on how many were killed and wounded in the fight for Chiquimula. Col. Georges Barrios was shot through the knee leading the rebel attack. He said: "I saw 17 bodies, but I do not know from whose side."

The colonel also said several government soldiers threw off their uniforms and joined the rebel fighters.

The rebels took more than 40 prisoners, including Col. George Hernandez, who now is imprisoned at Esquipulas.

Barrios said: "He is no Communist. He said he fought because it was his duty as an army officer."

INTERVIEW WITH ARMAS

After dark an important convoy rolled up. It was Col. Castillo Armas, commander-in-chief of the rebels. In the candlelit post-office he telephoned orders to his Chiquimula headquarters.

Castillo Armas is slim, in immaculate khaki cotton uniform, with a revolver stuck in his belt, and a white ski-cap over his thin face which was covered in black, stubbly beard. He said:

"We have about 800 men up there—we will soon search out the enemy skulking in the hills."

He couldn't say when the rail junction town of Zacapa, which is defended by 900 or 1,000 government troops and surrounded by rebels, would be attacked and taken.

He couldn't forecast when the war would end, but he said: "I am satisfied with the way volunteers have rolled up to support us."

NO BIG GUNS

The rebels have plenty of small arms but no big guns and the government has six batteries in Zacapa alone. The rebels have plenty of field telephones but for some reason they do not use them and their groups are unco-ordinated.

The rebels offered me a lift back to Esquipulas in a truck with her name, "Lady of the Orient," painted on the bumper. Above a mountain precipice we ran into a small rebel van. As the vehicles were disentangled, the crew of the van yelled "Quick—turn—go back! We have been ambushed by 500 government troops just down the road. . . ."

"Lady of the Orient" swung around.

Later we went back to where we first were told of the ambush. There was no sign of the government troops.

MENDOZA WARNS OF DIAZ

I went in a jeep the rest of the way to Esquipulas. There I found Castillo Armas's seconud in command, handsome greying Col. Miguel Mendoza, who was beaten by Jacobo Arbenz in the 1950 presidential election.

Mendoza has come to direct operations against guerrillas threatening the shaky line between Esquipulas and Chiquimula. He had heard that President Arbenz had resigned and was naturally pleased. He knew, too, that Arbenz had been replaced by a milltary junta led by Col. Carlos Diaz.

"Diaz," he warned, "is more dangerous and a tougher Communist than Arbenz. From our viewpoint it is a change for the worse."

Diaz, in his turn has since stepped down from leadership of the junta.

Parish Honors Walter Dyer

CAVAN (ENS) — A large congregation gathered in St. John's church, Ida, on Sunday evening to hear the Rev. Walter Dyer preach his first sermon after his ordination, which took place in St. John's church, Peterborough, on Sunday morning.

He is the son of Mrs. Florence Dyer, Peterborough, and has spent most of his life since leaving school in business there. For some years he felt the urge to enter the ministry and after coming to Cavan where he kept store for three years, it was made possible for him to attend college and fulfill his dream. He graduated from Wycliffe College in May and was given the responsibility of the parish at Creemore. He and Mrs. Dyer and their family moved there the first of June where he took over his duties.

At the service on Sunday evening, the rector, the Rev. Mr. L. R. Pocock took the opening exercises and Mr. Clare Winslow read the first lesson. Mr. Dyer read the second lesson and preached the sermon.

He took as his text, Proverbs, 3-6: "In all thy ways acknowledge Him and He shall direct thy paths."

The choir sang the anthem, "Lead Me Forth," with Donald Winslow taking the solo part.

Miss Jean Lough was at the organ.

PRESENTATIONS MADE

After the service, everyone spent a social hour in the parish hall where refreshments were served. Mr. Pocock made a brief speech expressing the pleasure it gave him and the members of the congregation of St. John's and also of the other churches of the parish to welcome Mr. Dyer as a Deacon of the church. He called him to the platform and Mr. Allen Spicer of St. Thomas' church, Millbrook read an address and Mrs. David Fowler made the presentation of a leather-bound prayer book bearing the inscription, "To Walter Dyer in recognition of faithful and devoted service to the parish of Cavan during the years 1952-1954 on the occasion of his ordination to the office of Deacon by the rector and wardens and friends of St. Thomas church, Millbrook." Ted Gray of Christ church, Bailieboro, then made the presentation of a stole and Clare Winslow presented a stole from the congregation of St. John's.

Mrs. Harry Freemantle presented Mrs. Dyer with a silver tray, and Shirley Morton made the presentation of a prayer book to each of the children.

Mr. Dyer thanked everyone sincerely for their kindness and spoke of the warm feelings they had for St. John's where he and his wife and family have attended during their stay in Cavan and of the splendid support he had received from each of other churches of the parish.

Paved Lawn Proves Surprise

WOODSTOCK (CP)—A woman in nearby Norwich had a paved lawn Tuesday — and highway officials and town residents worked feverishly to restore the grass.

It happened when a dump truck ran off the highway and upset in front of the home of Miss Matilda Depew. The truck was carrying 7½ tons of cold pack, used for highways, which spilled on the lawn.

Frederick Myke, 19, of Hagersville told police he had fallen asleep in the truck which travelled into a ditch about 150 feet, came back and crossed the highway, sheared off a signpost, nicked a telephone pole, turned on its side, skidded, jackniffed, lost its load and came back on its wheels again.

Myke was unhurt but damage to the truck was estimated at $3,000.

Voluntary Agencies Pioneer Social Welfare

Speaking at a Kiwanis Club luncheon meeting Mr. Hees said "the increased health, education, recreation and welfare we enjoy today are directly due to the work done by organizations like yours."

Vaudeville-Type Staging Features Festival

By JOHN PATERSON

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP)—The inventive brilliance of London director Tyrone Guthrie is at the full in "Taming of the Shrew" second production of the annual Shakespearian festival which opened Tuesday night.

He has used the theme and words of the sturdy farce as a springboard for comedy on various levels, from dumping a pan of water on the hatless head of a chef who burned the meat — to having his leading character Petruchio clad in buckskin and flourishing a pair of six-guns.

Governor-General Massey and a fashionable near sell-out audience saw the celebrated play within a play transferred in costume and design from 16 century England to North America.

Bill Needles of Kitchener and Toronto is an uncertain bully as Petruchio. Barbara Chilcott of Toronto gets a man-sized manhandling as the tamed shrew Katharina.

A quartette of comedians, some of whom do double and triple duty in various roles, is made up of Eric House and Don Harron of Toronto; Douglas Campbell of Toronto and Robert Goodier of Montreal.

Costumes were designed by Tanya Moiseiwitsch of London in keeping with the comedy mood. Musical director was Louis Applebaum of Toronto.

Third play in the festival is "Oedipus Rex" a Greek tragedy which opens July 15 starring James Mason of Hollywood and London and Eleanor Stuart of Montreal.

The festival opened Monday night with "Measure for Measure" called Shakespeare's "bitterest comedy" and which starred Mr. Mason and Frances Hyland of Regina.

Miss Hyland also played a prominent role in "Taming of the Shrew." She was Bianca, sister of Katharina.

Herbert Whittaker of the Toronto Globe and Mail said "the second year of the festival is safely home with a hit on its second night although Shakespeare himself comes in a poor second."

He said "if at times the piece exhibited Tuesday night in Stratford's tent seemed to be an invention of Tyrone Guthrie lightly based on a theme (and words) by Shakespeare, well that's quite alright with this playgoer."

Jack Karr of the Toronto Star said "with his imagination leaping from point to point like an acrobat Tyrone Guthrie has staged a wildly flamboyant show . . . and it has turned out to be a tremendous amount of fun."

Cast for "Taming of the Shrew," includes William Shatner of Montreal; Edward Holmes, Calgary; Bruno Gerussi, Vancouver; William Hutt and Bruce Swerdfager, Ottawa; Marionne Johnston and Brian Gill, Stratford; Douglas Rain, Winnipeg; Roland Bull, Neil Vipond, Robert Christie, Peter Mews and Lloyd Bochner, all Toronto.

Canada Marking 87th Birthday As Nation

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada on Thursday celebrates her 87th birthday as a nation, recalling the historic days of 1867 when Confederation joined the provinces of upper and lower Canada (which became Ontario and Quebec) with Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

The Canada of today with 15,000,000 people in 10 provinces is a great contrast to the year of Confederation. The entire area now included in Canada had only 3,689,000 population in 1871, and only a portion of that was among the federating provinces.

The province of Manitoba was formed and admitted to confederation in 1870. British Columbia joined in 1871, Prince Edward Island in 1873. Canada remained seven provinces for a little more than 30 years until Alberta and Saskatchewan were established and admitted to the confederation in 1905.

The youngest province and oldest colony, Newfoundland, formally joined Canada as its 10th province on March 31, 1949.

HISTORIC HOLIDAY

One of the few holidays that have not been switched to a Monday observance, Canada's birthday retains the official title of "Dominion Day."

A bill to change the name to Canada Day was introduced in Parliament by Phileas Cote, then Liberal member for Matapedia-Matane, Que., in 1946. After lively debate it was given third reading and then aroused another warm discussion in the senate, which could not agree, and sent it back to the Commons where it died.

Mr. Cote tried again in 1950 with a private members bill to make it Canada Day. The bill was rejected 73 to 39 on second reading, in a vote that split through the ranks of the Liberals and CCF parties. The Progressive Conservatives and Social Credit voted against it.

Even the cabinet split on the 1950 vote. Prime Minister St. Laurent was not in the House, but Works Minister Fournier voted for the measure while Resources Minister Winters and Veterans Minister Gregg voted against it. Labor Minister Mitchell was paired with another member, but said he would have voted against it. George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, and CCF leader M. J. Coldwell both voted against it.

Canadians marking the day across the country will be joined in spirit by Canadians overseas, including Canadian soldiers and sailors still stationed in Korea, and soldiers and airmen stationed in Europe under NATO.

Canadian diplomatic representatives broad will commemorate the day in many parts of the world—in 24 embassies, eight legations, even high commissioners' offices in nations of the Commonwealth and 10 consulates-general.

Hastings Man Jailed For 2 Months

Charges of keeping liquor for sale illegally brought a conviction and two months in the county jail to Albert Wesley Scriver, of Hastings village, when he appeared before Magistrate W. R. Philp, QC, in court Tuesday.

Defence counsel R. D. Humphreys, QC, of Oshawa appealed to the magistrate to consider a fine instead of the prison sentence, but Magistrate Philp adamantly refused to consider the application. It is understood that Scriver will appeal the decision.

Star witness in the Crown's case against Scriver was Hastings' farmer Alexis Fox, who told the court of buying a part bottle of liquor from Scriver near midnight on June 7. In company with Donald Wynn and Earl George Fox said that he had left a dance hall at Hastings after 11 p.m. and travelled to Scriver's house just outside the village.

Arriving there he had gone into the house and upstairs to Scriver's bedroom. There, in exchange for $3, he had obtained a partly filled bottle of whisky.

OPP constable Archie Eady said that he had apprehended Fox as he left the house and climbed into Wynn's truck. He had confiscated the bottle of whisky.

Constable Eady, in company with OPP Cpl. Godfrey and two other officers, had been keeping a secret watch on the Scriver abode about two hours. A few cars had arrived and the occupants had been seen to enter the house.

After hearing a suspicious "clinking sound" from one party leaving the house, the corporal followed the clinking one's car to the dance hall in Hastings. A man known as Aylmer Beaver was in the car and was relieved of three bottles of beer.

Later the four policemen entered the Scriver house. Corporal Godfrey said that his party had just established their identity to several persons drinking in the kitchen, when Scriver's son, Gordon, came into the room shouting, "duck the beer, the police are here."

CHARGE OF OBSTRUCTING

There had been a little trouble with Gordon Scriver, who had resented the police entering the house. The policemen told Magistrate Philp that he had charged them with breaking and entering. Scriver Jr. had appeared more than prepared to attempt an eviction of the four burly policemen and his attempts resulted in a charge of obstructing peace officers being laid against him Tuesday. For this the magistrate fined him $25, costs $2.50.

The policemen said they had pacified the younger Scriver and after showing the appropriate warrant, proceeded to search the premises.

Produced in court were two cases of beer, one found under Mrs. Scriver's bed and another in a shed at the rear.

Mr. Humphrey made detailed cross-examination of the officers to satisfy the court that no whisky had been found on the premises.

The defence alleged that crown witness Fox was drunk at the time he had supposedly purchased liquor at Scriver's house. Two members of the staff of Hastings' Royal hotel testified to throwing Fox out of the beverage room about 11 p.m. because he had partaken of more than his share.

One of the barmen, York Kelver, said that he had seen a bottle of some kind tucked in Fox's shirt. Albert Scriver also told the court of a bottle which Fox had allegedly produced while at his house. Instead of buying beer, Fox had instead offered Scriver a drink of whisky. The defence maintained that this was the bottle which was allegedly to have been bought at Scriver's place.

However, Fox's companions, Wynn and George, told Magistrate Philp that Fox had not had a bottle in his possession before going into the house.

Albert Scriver said that the beer had been brought to his house by his son, who had been entertaining some friends. The case found under his wife's bed was a Mother's Day gift left some weeks previously by another son. Gordon Scriver agreed with his father's testimony.

Charges against Gordon Scriver of having liquor for sale illegally were withdrawn by acting crown attorney V. J. McElderry, QC.

IT STARTED IT ALL—A simple test fire alarm started Tuesday a hectic afternoon for firemen. Taken to see how long it would take the department to reach Arndon Ave., it was followed by fires at the Auburn power house and McManus lumber mill in Lakefield. Chief Bill Sorrie reached the Arndon corner in 3.20 minutes and the first fire truck (above) in 4.10 minutes. Water was pouring through the lines in six minutes.

Top Marks For Firemen; Aldermen Lose Speed Bets

Nobody had much faith in the fire department.

Tuesday a group of aldermen gathered at the fire box at Arndon and Park Sts., pulled the alarm and laid verbal bets as to how long it would take the department to respond to the call. No alderman would go lower than five minutes, one thought it would be nearer ten.

Three minutes and ten seconds after Harold Rehill pulled the alarm, Chief William Sorrie's car screamed to a stop. Fifty seconds later the first fire truck arrived. Just six minutes from alarm time, firemen were pouring four hoses into the Otonabee, at least 700 feet from the nearest hydrant.

Only Chief Sorrie knew the test was to take place. For the rest of the firemen it was a break in what had been a slow day. (But as one fireman said an hour later at the power plant: "It's certainly no test this time.")

One excited young citizen at the alarm box was Cooper Holt, eight-year-old son of Ald. Mrs. Alene Holt. It was planned to have Cooper pull the alarm but at the last minute Ald. Rehill thought "it wouldn't look very good." So Cooper, who has just been promoted to Grade III, won't realize a childhood dream after all.

SOUTH REASSURED

"South end residents have been alarmed that they might not be getting enough fire protection," said Ald. Stan McBride. The test was held from what Mr. McBride called "the heart of the stench district" to assure citizens that firemen can move quickly to any area.

Firemen seemed confused and uncertain what to do when they arrived at the corner, but Chief Sorrie felt "they would have known what to do if there had been a fire." The chief yelled instructions and hose lines were laid from the hydrant, and from the pumper, to the Otonabee.

Among the citizens approving the firemen's work were acting Mayor John Dewart, Ald. Stan McBride, Mrs. Alene Holt, P. J. Anglesey and Harold Rehill.

A huge swarm of children did not just come to the scene of the "fire." They simply materialized seconds after the fire, stared with awe at the mackintoshed firemen.

FIRE IN RIVER

One quite young lad was skeptical that this was just a practice. "There must be a fire in the river," he knowingly told his younger sister. The sister, a solicitious type, wondered if all the extra water would not choke the fish.

All firemen except a skeleton fire-hall staff responded to the call at 2:35 Tuesday afternoon. The all-clear was sounded half an hour later. Firemen were barely settled back in the fire hall, and the chief was explaining to Mrs. Holt just what happens in case of a real fire, when the power plant alarm sounded.

But that's another story.

Find New Canadians Often Better Voters

TORONTO (CP) — New Canadians with a poor knowledge of English are often better voters than long-time residents in elections held to determine union certification in a plant, the chairman of the Ontario labor relations board said Tuesday.

Prof. Jacob Finkelman made the observation after rejecting a proposal by Norman Mathews, counsel for Liberty Ornamental Iron Ltd., that ballots be printed in Italian for about 70 per cent of the Toronto firm's employees.

The machinery of the labor board would be hopelessly bewildered if Mr. Mathews' suggestion was followed, Prof. Finkelman said.

Expect Holiday Traffic To Hit Peak

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadians will head for beaches, summer cottages, ball parks and race tracks Thursday for the Dominion Day holiday. In many parts of Canada they face the prospect of cool and cloudy weather.

It will be largely a day for family celebrations and local sports events with few large-scale celebrations planned. Highway traffic is expected to reach a mid-summer peak and police and safety officials have urged the public to take it easy.

Fifteen persons died violently during last year's one-day holiday, most of them victims of traffic accidents and drownings.

Transportation officials predict crowded buses and trains but airline traffic is expected to be normal in most centres because of the short holiday.

BORDER TRANSPORT BOOKED

In British Columbia, all forms of transportation to the United States border and interior resort centers are heavily booked. Main attractions are the Canadian cycle championships at the British Empire Games oval in Vancouver and a cherry festival at Chilliwack. The RCMP will use ghost cars for the first time in the province in an attempt to hold down the traffic toll.

Alberta, like B. C., probably will have cloudy weather with risk of showers. Plainclothes highway patrols in Alberta and Saskatchewan are expected to reduce traffic accidents and officials expect July 1 will be fatality-free in both provinces as it was last year.

The Highland Games Association annual track meet is scheduled for Edmonton along with a Western International League baseball game, and Calgary will hold its annual motorcycle hill climb on the Banff highway. Many children and military cadets will leave Saskatoon for summer camps.

WATCH FLOOD WATERS

Manitoba also was fatality-free last Dominion Day but Brandon area residents will have their eye on another danger—rising flood crests on the Assiniboine river. The weatherman promises hot and sunny weather and tourists will flock to Flin Flon where the annual week-long fishing festival is in progress. The angler catching the biggest one wins a new car.

There will be the provincial exhibition and Western Canada Trade Fair at Brandon, a $10,000 Canadian derby for three-year-olds at Winnipeg's Polo Park race track and many golf club tournaments.

In Toronto and Montreal, where cloudy weather and possible showers are forecast, International League baseball games will be the feature. A Dominion Day invitation tournament has been scheduled at Hamilton's Chedoke Golf and Country Club.

Quebec province traffic officials fear a high accident toll on the highways with thousands of Montreallers flocking to the country and the mountains.

In Ottawa, the governor-general's foot guards will troop the color on Parliament Hill and there will be a marchpast of the Cameron Highlanders, but civic ceremonies will be confined to a fireworks display at Lansdowne park in the evening.

Chicken barbecues will be a highlight in the Maritimes. Barbecues at Truro, N. S., and Fredericton each are expected to draw close to 5,000 persons.

Harness racing and baseball will be top sports events in both provinces. Schools close today in New Brunswick and the exodus to beaches and summer cottages will be in full swing.

The Canadian Legion arranges celebrations in most Nova Scotia small towns but Halifax had its big fling on Naval Day June 22 and has no plans except for baseball games.

Ground Crews Learn To Fly

NORTH LUFFENHAM, England (CP)—The ground crews of the RCAF's No. 1 fighter wing are learning to fly.

They have formed the RCAF North Luffenham Flying Club with more than 70 members, purchased three Tiger-Moth biplanes and started taking lessons from FO. Al McCallum of Hamilton.

The flying club was established after Cpl. Les Sawyers of Victoria and LAC. Gerry Groto of Sudbury, complained about the high cost of flying lessons and decided to do something about it. It is estimated the cost of learning to fly on the North Luffenham station will be about $4.50 an hour.

Now Sawyer is secretary of the club and Groto, along with LAC. Patrick Fisher, a British ground crewman, are responsible for keeping the training aircraft in flying condition.

The first of the three Tiger Moths —costing $650 each—arrived last week and the next two are expected to be put into service soon.

Nationalist China Intends To Assault Mainland

NOTE: In March, 1952, Bill Boss of The Canadian Press was the first Canadian to talk with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek since the leader of Nationalist China withdrew his forces from the Chinese mainland to Formosa. Today Boss, travelling in the Orient on leave from his three-year assignment with Canadian forces in Korea, interviewed Chiang again. This is his exclusive story.

By BILL BOSS

TAIPEH, Formosa (CP)Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek today said Nationalist China is irrevocally committed to an assault on the Chinese mainland as its ultimate objective regardless of what the Communists gain in Asia meantime.

The 30-minute interview he granted me was the first the spry, wiry "Gimo" has permitted since his induction May 20 for a second term as constitutional president of Nationalist China.

Referring through an interpreter to his message to the armed forces last Nov. 10 that "1954 will be a year of decision," Chiang said:

"I didn't mean that 1954 necessarily will be a year of counter-attack. The timing of attack is a military decision depending upon many factors.

"I meant it would be a year in which we would formulate concrete plans for counter-attack, including the question of timing.

"The decision for counter-attack has been taken and remains our over-all objective. Only the timing has not been decided.

"When political and international factors become favorable, we could attack at any moment.

"Our armed forces are ready for attack the mement it is ordered."

NATIONALIST FORCES

The Nationalists are estimated to have more than 200,000 front-line soldiers in an army of 400,000 and strong navy and air forces. These forces are at present under assessment by a United States mission headed by Gen. James Van Fleet, former United Nations commander in Korea.

Asked about the U. S. team, Chiang said "they're here to check on requirements of our forces in the light of their mission," and added that no conclusions have yet been reached. He declined further comment.

A senior American officer who witnessed a demonstration for Van Fleet today by the Nationalist marines division and a tank battalion termed them "impressive."

"If the Communists attacked here, they'd be clobbered," this officer said. "It would be the best thing that could happen."

He refused comment on how a Nationalist amphibious operation against the mainland would make out except to say the Nationalists "would fight magnificently."

Nobody here talks about transport and support for such an attack. Indeed, although counter-Attack is the persistent theme of Nationalist propaganda, the visitor sees no sign of organization toward that end.

BETTER GOVERNMENT

A series of interviews I have had with Chinese and American officials convey the impression that the accent is on bringing better government to Formosa, with industrial, economic and social activity geared to that end.

In my interview with him, Chiang hedged on how a counter-attack could be supported if it were ordered now.

"Everything accomplished here builds support both here and on the mainland for the ultimate operation," he said, smiling.

Asked whether it would be fair to assume 1955 also would be ruled out as a year of attack because a logistic support organization could not be organized by then, he said he couldn't say.

To a suggestion that Communist successes in Asia might ultimately doom all Nationalist hopes of a successful assault, he said:

"That is not our way of looking at it.

"Please tell your fellow Canadians that the armistice in Korea and any eventual armistice in Indo-China represent only temporary halts while the Communists consolidate strength and prepare new attacks.

"The only effective answer to them is our projected attack on the mainland."

Critics Deplore Choice Of Play At Stratford

By ED SIMON

NEW YORK (CP) — A playwright named William Shakespeare takes the brunt of the punishment from two Broadway critics who attended Monday night's opening of the Shakespeare festival at Stratford, Ont.

As they are called upon to do frequently during the New York season, Brooks Atkinson of The Times and Walter Kerr of The Herald Tribune commend the British and Canadian talents involved in the production but deplore "Measure for Measure" as an inferior vehicle for their work.

"An inconclusive play," Atkinson called it in his review which appeared in The Times today. "Presumably at this low point in his spirit Shakespeare did not have energy enough to finish the play on the level where he began it."

"The plot thickens without becoming tastier," Kerr comments, agreeing with his colleague that "in spite of a brilliant and sharply staged production," the play does not present the bard at his best.

James Mason's performance as Angelo, the sanctimonious regent of Vienna, draws mixed praise. Kerr finds the British actor possesses the physical attributes for the part and, working directly with other actors, "seemed consumed by fire."

But in soliloquies "the part loses force, color and excitement . . . thoughts swirl by but they are gone before we can grasp them."

Atkinson comments that the British actor's performance possibly loses in part because he lacks a voice of sufficient volume for the size of the theatre.

Frances Hyland, the 25-year-old Regina actress who plays the leading role of Isabella, is also found by Atkinson to have too light a voice, although she "moves with grace and spontaneity and looks entrancing in the flowing costumes designed for her."

Kerr finds her "a spitfire in her scenes with Angelo and a stubborn little realist the rest of the way. Both praise Lloyd Bochner of Toronto for what Atkinson calls "an admirably pithy and lucid performance in excellent voice" as the duke.

Of the Canadian players generally Kerr says "it is remarkable how much vitality and belief" they are able to bring to the play.

"Whether the play is good or bad, a basic principle obtains," Atkinson writes. "The Stratford festival as an institution is a contribution to the cultural life of North America . . . and the professional standard of the acting is high."

Without the banner, the farmer's vehicle is often hidden from view until a speeding motorist is on top of it. The Missouri Farmer's Association is furnishing the flag to all farmers requesting them.

43 Squatters Living In Filthy Building

OTTAWA (CP)—Mayor Charlotte Whitton Tuesday reported to board of control the discovery that 43 squatters are living in conditions of "indescribable filth" in a dilapidated building owned by the Canadian army.

The mayor said the settlement is located on Porter's Island near the mouth of the Rideau river adjacent to the lower town residential area.

"There is a terrible threat of typhoid to these people themselves and the citizens of Ottawa," she said. There was only one toilet serving the 16 adults and 27 children living in the building.

Board of control appealed to the defence department to demolish immediately the building, abandoned some time ago by the army. An army spokesman said the army shared responsibility with the city for the situation and would co-operate in seeking a solution.

Mayor Whitton said the squatters are not residents of Ottawa. They were people from points outside the city and Montreal.

HOW TO PULL OUT OF A SKID!

Turn your front wheels in the same direction as the skid.

- Don't turn wheels too far in direction of skid. This may throw rear end into dangerous reverse skid.
- Keep your foot lightly on the accelerator to keep rear wheels rolling, and maintain traction.
- Keep your foot off the brake. Jamming on the brakes locks your wheels so that they act like sled runners.
- When you have car straightened out, pump the brakes gently to bring the car to a stop.

Skid turns into dangerous spin.

Skidding stops and car straightens out.

$2,000,000 Project Planned In Irrigating Cavan Swamp Developing Market Gardens

Conversion of 2,500 acres of the Cavan swamp into an expansive system of irrigated market gardens of black muck, on the design of the Holland marsh, is an estimated $2,000,000 project in the stage of preliminary consideration.

Forty farmers in the northeastern section of the township, extending from the vicinity of Ida and Mt. Pleasant easterly to the North Monaghan boundary, are directly interested in the proposed development.

General outline and details of the plan were presented at a meeting in Millbrook town hall last week by two former residents of Holland.

PLAN FOR 250 FAMILIES

Founding of a new settlement of some 250 or more Dutch farm workers in that section of Cavan is one of the possibilities of the use and controlled irrigation of the swamp.

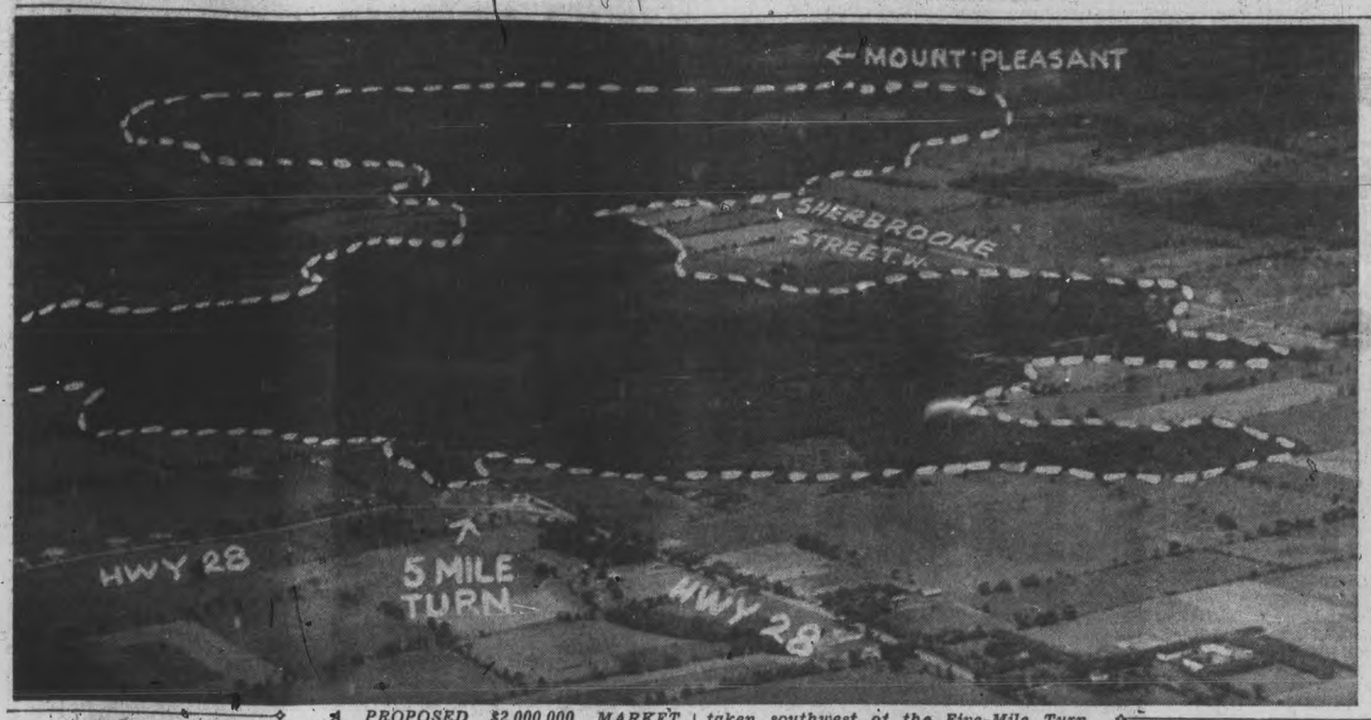
The plan was outlined by Pieter Grumstra, Toronto, formerly an engineer (with Timber Structures of Canada, who was accompanied to the Millbrook meeting by H. Rupke, engineer of the Holland marsh undertaking near Bradford in the northern area of York county.

Owners of the swamp property, members of Cavan municipal council, Major John Foote, VC, MPP, and a few others attended the recent meeting. Ald. J. A. Dewart and Wilson Gemmell, of Peterborough, were present. The township has several phases of concern in this proposal, including a bylaw of nearly 50 years ago authorizing the dredging of a drainage course through the swamp. That work was done in 1905 at a cost of $8,000 of which $3,000 was a grant from the provincial government.

NAME COMMITTEE

Immediate result of the meeting was a recommendation that Cavan council of which Lloyd Hooton is reeve, appoint a committee to be composed of property owners and one or two members of the council to bring the marketing plan into sharper focus of discussion and study of matters that may be involved in it.

Enquiries yesterday suggested that there would probably be questions relating to conservation, water levels and rights and possibly some other issues which might be brought forward in deliberations properly concerning the municipality.



In the event of a new community of people being established in the area, the provision of school accommodation would be a requirement. Present overtures have intimated that the Cavan swamp project would be established by a syndicate with support from the Holland marsh establishment, and that school costs would be chiefly assumed by them.

DEVELOPMENT A SUCCESS

Incidentally the Holland marsh development has been a remarkable success in large volume production of potatoes, celery, lettuce, carrots and generally garden vegetables. And, on a modified scale that would be the objective of the Cavan syndicate which would be more or less co-operative organized.

The Cavan reclamation idea was conceived by P. Grumstra, during his residence in Peterbor-

Ross Dobbin New Chairman Of Community Centre Body

Ross L. Dobbin, retired manager of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, was appointed general chairman of the Memorial Community Centre at a meeting of the general committee Tuesday evening in the city hall conference room. He succeeds D. A. McGillis, who resigned as general chairman.

Mr. Dobbin's appointment followed a recommendation to the general meeting by the executive committee, and was unanimously agreed upon. The city council will be asked to concur in the appointment.

CONDITIONS SUBMITTED

Agreement by Ross Dobbin to accept the appointment, when approached by a nominating committee, hinged upon a number of conditions, and these were discussed by both the executive and the general committees in detail with the conditions accepted in their entirety.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE

The chief condition stipulated by Mr. Dobbin was that all other committees but a special seven-man one, headed by himself, be dissolved. The general committee will continue to serve in an advisory capacity. The new chairman asked that he be permitted to name six persons to work with himself— three of whom must have approval of the city council to meet the City of Peterborough Act of 1945 approving erection of the Centre . . . and that this special committee assume the duties of the building, finance, executive and publicity as set up earlier this year.

BUILD IN SPRING

Promising to start actual building in the spring of 1955, Mr. Dobbin emphasized in his letter to the executive committee that the Memorial Centre would be of sufficient size and style as to accommodate entertainment. He said that his committee would start a financial drive this fall and would appeal to the council for a debenture bylaw at the next civic elections in order that the required funds, when building plans are completed, might be raised and a start on building made in the spring.

While there was considerable discussion on various points by members of the general committee, there was no dissenting voices. The feeling was that a smaller and stronger special committee spearheading the project would accomplish more and sooner than the previous unwieldly general committee and its subcommittees. C. Ray was chairman.

U.S. Dollar Finds Own Level In City Stores

How do American tourists feel when they find their dollar is worth only 98 cents in Canada?

In Peterborough this an unanswerable question because many stores do not discount American money at all, others charge from two to three per cent and others charge or fail to charge depending on the size of purchase and range of profit (or loss).

"We can't have a set policy on this thing," says Robert Hamilton, assistant manager of the chamber of commerce, "because for many years it was our dollar that was discounted in the United States. We're just getting back a little of the money we spent then."

"But if I were a retailer," Mr. Hamilton continued, "I'd want to think in terms of good customer relations." Merchants, he said, "should use discretion and good judgment with each individual sale." They should, too, be extra-friendly to American customers to lessen the shock of exchange disparity.

Crane Hitcher Suffers Head Injuries

A 35-year-old crane-hitcher, John Lavery, 631 Park St. North, suffered serious head injuries in an accident at the CGE on Tuesday. He was rushed to Civic hospital and operated on for a skull fracture.

Lavery was hurt when a small steel frame structure toppled over and struck him on the head. He did not lose consciousness, and was given oxygen while awaiting transport to hospital. Dr. R. K. McGee operated immediately and reported success.

Civic hospital authorities said today that Lavery's condition was slightly improved.

This is the second serious accident to occur at the CGE in three weeks. The other one proved fatal to William J. Jones, a pipefitter who was electrocuted on touching a 550-volt wire.

Board Makes New Proposals

To night the non-medical employees at Civic Hospital will consider a compromise contract proposal from the board of governors.

George Linsdell, president of Local 19, National Union of Public Service Employees (CCL), said the special membership meeting was called for 8 p.m. The union are bargaining agents for 106 kitchen help, maintenance employees, orderlies, ward aides, nurses aides and laundry staff who are trying to negotiate a new contact.

Max Swanston, chairman of the board of governors, called a board meeting on Tuesday. One result of this was a meeting early today, lasting nearly 45 minutes, between the negotiating committees of the union and the board.

It is understood that the new proposals from the board of governors will be passed along to the membership tonight for acceptance or rejection.

Because of Clouds Only Half Shadow Visible

Clouds Hide Sun's Eclipse

Planning to be in Siam June 20, 1955?

If you are, note well that sunglasses are not worth the proverbial hoot for watching eclipses of the sun. This reporter was one who refused to believe what he read.

You had to be in just the right place at just the right time to see the moon - covered sun peep through the clouds.

It was just after seven o'clock when the eclipse entered its total phase. For 2.7 minutes the moon shadow over the sun was at its peak. Because of the clouds, not much more than half the shadow was visible, but what was was beautiful.

CLOUDY BACKDROP

Clouds provided a fitting enough backdrop for the sky show. They shimmered out from the sun like the mushroom from a hydrogen bomb, looking as if they would explode in a burst of white heat.

As the sky darkened over Peterborough, the disc of the new moon made the sun seem more and more crescent shaped. Then the long streamers from the sun's corona became more visible and the moon seemed girded with sparkling rhinestones.

Eclipse experts will tell you that as eclipses go, this was no world-beater, at least in Peterborough. The landscape was never totally dark, this reporter could see no planets or stars, though there was enough of a shadow to make crescent-shaped images on the ground.

ON ARMOUR HILL

Many citizens were on Armour Heights hill, but whether or not they saw anything depended not so much on where they were but when they were looking. Simcoe St. near Queen's hotel was as good a place as any. A few feet either west or east and the sun was behind the clouds again.

Const. John Hayes, pounding his George St. beat reported an unusual volume of pedestrian traffic. Many hardly knew what they were supposed to be looking at, and there seemed more without dark glasses than with.

TWO TO SEVEN ANNUALLY

Every year there are from two to seven eclipses of various kinds. This may come as a shock to those who think eclipses are a once in a century rarity. There are more eclipses of the sun than of the moon. (The lunar phenomenon is caused by the moon's entry into the shadow of the earth.)

But since this is a big world, and since the heavens do not always co-operate with the astronomers, some eclipses are more observable than others. Solar eclipses from now to 1960 will be visible in Siam, the Antarctic, Argentina and Ethiopia.

Annular eclipses of the sun occur about every 20 years. Then the moon is not large enough to cover the sun, so that a narrow ring of the sun is seen around the moon. Next annular eclipse is in 1966.

CRICKET MATCH SATURDAY

The Peterborough Cricket Club will be hosts in an invitation match with a team of cricketers from the 50 H.A.A. Regiment, RCA. on Saturday at 2.00 p.m. at Nicholl's Oval. The officers intend to attack boldly and are known to have one or two good players. They also hope for a return match with the club in the form of a softball game.

LOST GLASSES

The Auburn power plant burned but this was of minor importance to one eight-year old lad who visited fire chief Bill Sorrie at the fire hall Tuesday. He announced that his glasses had slipped from his nose as he was leaning over the Hunter St. bridge. He asked that the frogmen come along and dive for his glasses.

BLAST STOPS SWIMMING

Swimming at Inverlea beach was stopped Tuesday after the explosion at the Auburn power house. Extra stop-logs caused the water level to drop south of the Auburn and later it was observed that some oil or acid had got into the water.

BLOSSOM BLUE

In these days of blossom time, nature is accenting its blues. In the marginal fields doubtful of soil value, the blue weed is putting on a great show in some places. Of more persistent blooming for the rest of the season there is the wild chicory, the blue sailors along town and country roadsides, and, in the gardens, delphiniums are dominantly blue but with grand spikes of white and some of pinkish blue.

REGIMENTAL TOURNAMENT

It was tournament night after parade at the Armouries Tuesday night. The members of the officers' mess, the sergeants' mess and the gunners' mess, of 50th H.A.A. met in friendly competition in ping pong. Three tables were kept lively with keenly contested matches. The best match was between Capt. D. Whittaker and Craftsman Paul Harding of RCEME. The Officers' team emerged victorious in 11 of the 12 contests. Coffee and weiners were served at the conclusion. Major H. Cardwell was in charge of the tournament assisted by RSM Hugh Davidson.

Solar Eclipse No Interest To These 2 Pals

For the benefit of future Peterborough historians we pass along this conversation around 7 a.m. today as three young Peterborough intellectuals viewed the solar eclipse from the third floor of a George St. hostelry.

(To avoid any embarrassment and to forestall any security snooping or sanity checks we refer to them by initials only. So: LD, DW and JH).

Rushing into DW's room and trembling, either from the after-effects or scholarly excitement, LD says:

"Get up. It's 7 o'clock. Do you want to miss the solar eclipse?"

DW (sitting up suddenly): "Gad, it is dark, I can't see my hand in front of my face."

LW: "No wonder. Open your eyes.

SCIENTIFIC ONE

They go into an adjoining room where the third member has painstakingly assembled the scientific equipment for viewing the phenomenon — three layers of overdeveloped negatives, a reminder of a former holiday.

JH (the scientist): "There it is. Look through the negatives. You can see a big bite out of the sun already."

DW (confused): "Who's the cute doll on the negative?"

JH: "You just look at the sun."

Both DW and LD look at the partial eclipse, struck silent by it all. LD finally speaks:

"It doesn't beat TV."

DW: "Who's the doll on the other negative?"

LD: "There goes a cloud over it . . . can't see anything."

JH: "The path of totality starts in northeastern Nebraska where the moon will eclipse the sun at it rises at 5:08 a.m., C.S.T.

LD (moodily turning over the pages of Life magazine suddenly becomes enthusiastic): "Look at that cover girl, Kim Smith. A Las Vegas chorus girl that gets $128 a week."

Dr. Norman D. Buchanan, Retired Specialist, Dies

Dr. Norman D. Buchanan, retired specialist surgeon, died suddenly of a heart attack at his home at Water and Murray streets, Tuesday at 9 p.m. He was in his 73rd year.

In February, 1952, Dr. Buchanan quit the practice of his profession, which was confined to the eye, ear, nose and throat branch of medicine, at the height of his career. He had won a notable reputation among Canadian surgeons, and he had developed an extensive practice in a wide area of Central Ontario. Nowhere was he more respected than here in Peterborough in his personality, citizenship, for the aid he brought to a great number of the people of the city and county, and also for his fidelity to his profession.

BORN IN HURON COUNTY

Dr. Buchanan was born near Zurich in Huron county. His father was a physician in general practice. Educated in Clinton and London schools, he was a graduate in 1903 from the faculty of medicine, University of Toronto. He was one of seven in honors, from a class of 120 students, and associate with that group of men who later attained a high place in accomplishment. One of them was the noted Dr. John Oille, a great heart specialist; Dr. Edward Gallie, one time professor of surgery at the University of Toronto; and Dr. Frank Neal of Peterborough, a founder of the Peterborough Clinic. He used to recall with nostalgic satisfaction his honor graduation when he was 22, and his remark at the time of his retirement indicates that the memory of it remained with him. He said to The Examiner: "It all goes to show that a good standing class does mean something after all in later years."

That early sense of responsibility in his university course stamped the work of his life time of 44 years in this city.

Peterborough had a population of about 16,000 when Dr. Buchanan opened his office in the Lendrum block, Charlotte St., now occupied by the Buehler Brothers store. Later, he mover across the street to a building on the site of the present A & P store, and 1912 built his spacious residence, including office accommodation, on Water St., now overlooking the city hall square.

ACADEMY MEMBER

Dr. Buchanan became a member of the Academy of Medicine, Toronto, in 1914, and also in that year was elected chairman of the eye, ear, nose and throat section of the Ontario medical association. He was elected president of the Peterborough medical society in 1919, and 1924, by examination, was received into the academy of opthalmology and otolaryngology of America. He was the first chief of staff of the new Civic Hospital, appointed in 1949.

While in Great Britain in his post-graduate days he was awarded the L.R.C.P. of London University, and became a member of the Royal College of Surgeons, receiving also the F.R.C.S. from University of Edinburgh. His distinction in his profession won him many honors abroad and the appreciation of his friends and fellow citizens of Peterborough.

PROMINENT MASON

His advancement in Masonry extended over 30 years. He was a past master of Corinthian Lodge No. 101, AF & AM, and TPGM in Peterborough Lodge of Perfection (Scottish Rite; a member of Peterborough Chapter of Rose Croix. In 1939 he was asked to become a member of the Royal Order of Scotland, which was confined to 70 members in Ontario. He was a member of Corinthian Chapter, RAM, Rameses Shrine, and was a 33rd Degree Mason, and member of the Supreme Council, Scottish Rite Masonry for Canada.

He had been a member of Peterborough Rotary Club, resigning in 1932.

Dr. Buchanan had long worshipped at George St. United church, served on its Board of Stewards 25 years, and continued after his professoinal retirement to act as a trustee.

In a retrospect of his surgical ministrations he said that he had visited nearly every house in the city before its broader expansion of the last decade, and his calls took him as far afield as Huntsville and Tweed and through the lakeshore counties.

Dr. Buchanan was a man of broad culture, including keen appreciation of symphonic music. He attended from Peterborough many of the concerts in Toronto by visiting orchestras from the United States.

Dr. Buchanan leaves his wife, the former Edna Isabel Beer, and two sisters, Misses Pearl and Clara Buchanan of Toronto. The funeral will be from his late residence Friday, July 2, at 2 p.m. to Little Lake cemetery. Rev. A. A. Matthews of George St. United church will conduct the service, and the committal service at the cemetery will be of Masonic rite.

DEATH CAME SUDDENLY Tuesday evening to Dr. Norman D. Buchanan, specialist surgeon in Peterborough 44 years. He was in good health two years ago when he decided to retire from the practice which had won a high and respected place in this community and district of Central Ontario. He had prepared himself for that branch of surgery which comprises treatment of eye, ear, nose and throat. He had developed a most successful career in Peterborough, and won many honors in his profession in three countries: Canada, the United States and Great Britain.

Dean Of Legislature Holds New Brunswick Records

FREDERICTON (CP)—J. Andre Doucet, 74, dean of the present and two preceding New Brunswick legislatures both in age and length of service, holds two records not only for this province but probably any Canadian legislative bod

The veteran Gloucester county Liberal is believed to be the only member of a provincial legislature to have attended 32 consecutive sessions and the only one to be receiving the old age pension while having a child of family allowance age.

First winning his seat at a 1923 by-election, Mr. Doucet retained it in every succeeding provincial general election. He was elected to his seventh legislature two years ago.

A former New Brunswick record of 27 consecutive sessions was held jointly by the late Hon. Dr. H. F. Taylor, conservative from Charlotte, and the late A. J. Bordage, Kent county Liberal. Marks of 23 and 22 consecutive years were set respectively by the late Scott D. Guptill, Charlotte county Conservative, and former Liberal premier A. A. Dysart.

A legislative member five years longer than any other New Brunswicker, Mr. Douret has served during seven administrations. He entered the House as a supporter of the late premier P. J. Veniot's Liberal government in 1923 and was a government back-bencher until 1925. For the next 10 years he sat as an opposition member through the Conservative regimes of the late chief justice J. B. M. Baxter, Chief Justice C. D. Richards and the late premier L. P. D. Tailley.

After Liberals returned to power in 1935 he was again a government back-bencher during the administration of Premier Dysart.

Premier J. B. McNair took over in 1940 and Mr. Douset became successively New Brunswick electric power chairman, minister of health and labor and minister of industry and development until 1952 when the Liberals gave way to a Progressive Conservative government headed by Premier Hugh John Flemming.

Joseph Andre Doucett was born on Anticosti Island, Que., of French and French-Acadian parentage. He has two daughters from a first marriage and one from a second in 1940.

J. ANDRE DOUCET, 74, dean of the New Brunswick legislature, has been a member for 32 consecutive years, believed a record for any Canadian legislature. He also is believed the only member of a provincial legislative body receiving both the old age pension and family allowance. He has a daughter by his second wife whom he married in 1940.—(CP Photo).

They're delicious ... sparkling. Made in one-third the time. Cost less per glass.

WHY CERTO RECIPES ARE SO QUICK—SO EASY—SO FREE FROM GUESSWORK

WHAT CERTO IS — Certo is fruit pectin —the natural jellying substance in fruit—extracted and refined to help you make delicious tasting jams and jellies quicker and more easily.

ONE-MINUTE BOIL SAVES TIME, WORK — With Certo you can actually make a whole batch in 15 minutes from the time your fruit is ready. It turns jam and jelly making from a chore into a pleasant task.

Certo jams and jellies need only a ONE-MINUTE full, rolling boil. No long, tedious boiling and stirring over a hot stove. It's remarkably easy.

50% MORE JAM OR JELLY — Since there is no long "boiling down" with Certo, hardly any precious juice wastes away in steam. So you get up to 50% more yield from your fruit. That brings costs way down.

Lakefield Mill Lost In $10,000 Fire

LAKEFIELD (By Staff Reporter) — Within 20 minutes fire completely destroyed the McManus lumber mill at the dockside in Lakefield early Tuesday night. Leaving only charred beams and blackened equipment, the blaze caused an estimated $10,000 damage.

This is the third fire at the mill, owned and operated by Jack and Mickey McManus, in recent years. About four years ago a serious blaze was prevented on New Year's day. During the war the mill and yard were completely destroyed.

Deputy Fire Chief Gordon Scriver pointed out that the tractor, sawmill carriage and trimmers couldn't be replaced for $6,000.

At the same time owner Jack McManus said, "$10,000—Betcha we won't start up again for $10,000."

"I didn't leave until 5:30. A lad was filing a saw and I was waiting to lock up. I usually come down after supper but didn't get down tonight until called," McManus said.

Mr. McManus couldn't say how the fire started and only knew what others told him, "they say it started in the front end, that's all I know."

NOTICED FIRE

Deputy fire chief Bill Hamblin who was "bringing the kids to the dock for a swim" was the first to notice the fire.

"I saw a ball of fire in the peak of the building, rushed home and turned in the alarm," said Hamblin.

By the time the firemen had reached the mill, flames were completely out of control. All firemen were able to do was confine the flames, preventing the fire from spreading to nearby lumber piles and boathouses.

During the height of the blaze a group of men, led by Ted Webster and his son, Donald, went into boathouses and freed the craft. Actually these small frame shacks were only 40 feet from the fire, but only one or two were scorched. One boat had "a little hole burned in it."

Firemen kept playing for sometime three lines of hose on the charred, smoldering remains, smothering the fire still burning about the mill, tractor and trimmers. One pile of lumber, recently owned by Bert Mace of Burleigh Falls and sold last week to a Toronto firm, was burned.

$10,000 DAMAGE was caused early Tuesday night when fire gutted the McManus lumber mill near the dock in Lakefield. Firemen (top photo) confine the the smouldering fire to the blackened ruins, a tractor standing in the foreground. Meanwhile, working from a ramp, other firemen pour water around the ruined trimmers. The old mill, owned and operated by Mickey (left) and Jack (right) McManus, went down in about 20 minutes.—(Examiner Staff Photos).

Opinion Mixed About Value Of Rainmaking

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP) —The debate over whether to renew a contract with a rain-making firm was getting hotter and hotter at a meeting of officials in San Diego county, Calif.

Mayor Lloyd Harmond of Coronado threw in this comment:

"A day of prayer would be more effective and would save taxpayers' money."

His honor later qualified the remark to some extent, but it underscores the mixed reactions turned up in an informal Associated Press survey of rain makers and rain making.

Commercial cloud-seeding firms have been in operation since shortly after Dr. Vincent Schaefer succeeded in producing man-made snow in a laboratory experiment at Schenectady, N. Y., in 1946.

SCIENTISTS IN FIRMS

Some of the firms are manned by top-flight scientists. They have been hired by local communities, farmers' organizations, public utilities and others. The firms generally claim they're able to produce, through seeding clouds with dry ice or silver iodide, increases in precipitation of up to 50 per cent above what might normally be expected.

The AP survey shows the reactions of clients vary. Most are simply undecided as to whether they got their money's worth, but of these some still are stringing along. In other instances rain-making firms have been rehired for several season.

Property owners who suffered damage from excess rainfall insist upon taking the rain makers' claims at face value. Suits totalling $2,000,000 have been brought against cloud seeders by some residents of New York state who claim they were hurt by too much rain. Three damage suits are pending against a prominent western cloud seeder as the result of a flood in El Reno, Okla., in 1953.

On the bouquet side for the rain makers, the survey turned up such remarks as this one by president A. S. Cummins of the California Oregon Power Co., the first power company to launch an organized long-term plan of cloud seeding in hope of raising water levels in its reservoirs:

"We have had three good years. We think we've seen definite results. We can't prove it statistically, but we're satisfied. We expect to continue the experiment for another two years."

In the Sacramento area of California the number of farm groups sponsoring rain making ventures has dropped from eight to four since 1951. But all three major power companies in the area are continuing full-scale rain-making efforts.

MINES MINISTER PRUDHAM holds a five-pound chunk of titanium sponge. Titanium is a metal which is stronger than steel and only slightly heavier than aluminum. The metal is finding increasing use in engine parts subject to high temperatures such as jet engines. The cost of the sponge, one of the steps in the refining process, now is $4.50-$5 a pound and experiments are being conducted to reduce the cost. Huge deposits of ilmenite, titanium ore, are found north of the St. Lawrence river.—(CP Photo).

English Actress Fulfills Promise To Be On Radio

Amber colored hair, blue-green eyes with freckles dotting the bridge of her nose, describes the vivacious face of Julia Hand, an English actress with the Peterborough summer theatre this season.

Miss Hand was cast as Ethel in "Peg of My Heart" and is playing the character part of a Cockney cleaning woman in the present play, "A Lady Mislaid."

She arrived in Canada about two months ago, having decided to come on her 23rd birthday. She auditioned with CBC in Toronto and as a result played "Electra," in the Greek tragedy by that name, on Trans-Canada Dominion Radio Theatre.

It was in Toronto she again met Harry Geldard and his wife Margaret Braidwood with whom she had worked in Blackpool Repertory Theatre, England, and this led to her being asked to join Michael Sadlier's cast in Peterborough.

Miss Hand was born in Wallasey, Cheshire, England, the daughter of a sea captain, who at one time was president of the Mercantile Marine Association.

She recalls an incident that happened when she was about six years old. She was listening to the radio, and suddenly said to her father, "Someday you're to hear my voice on the radio."

She was to fulfill that promise before her father died.

While in high school she played the part of Saint Joan, and proved to be a success. She decided then to become an actress. Her parents were sympathetic and very helpful and sent her to drama school in Liverpool, where she studied fencing, ballet dancing, singing, and voice production.

When she was 17 she joined the Liverpool Playhouse Group, a top repertory company in England. After nine months she was advised by her agent to join the Ipswich Arts Theatre company in London, where a play was brought out every two weeks.

MISS JULIA HAND

Her next role was in Noel Coward's "Ace of Clubs," a musical. According to Coward's standards the play was technically a flop. It ran three months on the road and six months in London.

From the play she received vast experience in the musical approach of thrusting the lines at the people, which is so different from the subtle approach of straight theatre.

After this London experience she did more repertory work in Lincoln. Then she did her first BBC radio broadcast at the age of 19 in "Trafalgar Square," followed by "Dickens of a Christmas" and "Smith of Smiths," in which Peter Ustinov appeared.

In London she was in another musical show, "Glorious Days," with Anna Neagle whom she understudied as well as playing a principal part. She also acted in pantomimes and has played a nurse in a movie called "Blondie."

Miss Hand says, "I'm one of those mad people who slept all night on the eve of Coronation, in Piccadilly Circus, on a rostrum next to the statue of Eros. There were 10 of us. We kept warm by drinking hot liquids from flasks which we had prepared previously.

"Next morning we stodd from 9 to 4 in drizzling rain with people cheerfully grumbling on all sides. If you lifted one foot you couldn't put it down again. Churchill's carriage stopped right beside us, when his horses got panicky."

Like most actresses, she carries a small memento for luck. Hers is a small black kitten, a bit moth eaten now since it was given to her when she was nine by the Mother Superior of her convent.

As for the future, Miss Hand said, "I could feel the tremendous vitality of this comparatively new country as soon as I came and I want to stay here."

The bride's father and two brothers officiated in a wedding in Bethel Pentecostal church, Sarnia, when June Rachael, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. R. Norcross of Sarnia, became the bride of Ronald Edward Stevens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allin L. Stevens of Peterborough.

Assisting Mr. Norcross in the ceremony were his sons, the Rev. K. R. Norcross of Strathroy and the Rev. D. O. Norcross of Dresden.

The church was decorated with mauve and white flowers for the occasion. Miss Sylvia Birtwell of London, Ontario, played the wedding music and Mrs. B. Crichton of Toronto was soloist. Maid of honor for her sister was Miss Laura Norcross. Bridesmaids were Miss Doreen Stevens of Peterborough, cousin of the groom; Mrs. Freda Norcross and Mrs. Betty Norcross, sisters-in-law of the bride.

Their dresses were of pale yellow taffeta with tulle overskirts and they wore matching headdresses and carried posies of mixed flowers. Candle lighters were Robert Norcross and David Stevens, brothers of the bride and groom, wearing navy suits and bow ties.

The groom was attended by his brother, Melville Stevens. Ushers were Claire and Doug Ferguson of Peterborough, uncles of the groom, and Wilfred Rose of Toronto.

At the reception following, the bride's mother was receiving in a lilac shantung dress and white straw hat and white accessories and wearing an orchid corsage. The groom's mother was dressed in Queen's blue satin dotted bengaline and wore a navy straw hat and an orchid corsage.

DOROTHY DIX:

Husband Becomes Penitent After Some Philandering

DEAR MISS DIX: I have been married six years and have two children, four and five years of age. The first years of marriage was blissfully happy; then followed four years of constant quarrels and, as I learned later, infidelities. There was one particular girl with whom my husband lived while I was in the hospital having our second child Eventually he admitted he loved her and wanted a divorce. Then something happened between them; what it was, I never knew, but he said everything was over, he realized what a heel he had been and knew that I was the only woman for him. That was a year ago, and he has been simply wonderful ever since. However, I cannot get the thought of this girl out of my mind. I go out of my way to pass her house, ask people about her, think about her constantly. It's a form of mental torture that I cannot stop. Should I tell my husband how I feel, or will that bring the whole story back to him? DOLORES M.

ANSWER: Your husband, having duly reformed, certainly will not welcome continued reproaches on his past conduct, or a reminder of it. He exercised will power in giving up the other girl; you must exercise yours in forgetting about her. Of course, your husband was guilty of outrageous conduct and moralists would insist that he deserves no credit for his last action. However, not every wife has the satisfaction of an erring husband's return; you have been fortunate in that. Now it's up to you to put the past away, to give your man every reason to be thankful he was repentant, and to look forward to continued happiness together.

Suppose you try going out of your way to stop in at church, instead of detouring to your ex-rival's house. Say a prayer or two for the strength and wisdom to shift your thinking from the past to the future. You now have the factors that make for complete domestic happiness—lovely children, a pleasant home, a husband and father who lovingly appreciates his family. Do make up your mind to enjoy them.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: Last summer, just after I graduated from high school, I met Matt, who is five years my senior. During the year we've been going out together we've planned marriage, then broken off, made up, become engaged again, then another break, and the whole cycle starts again. After every quarrel I'm the one to call or write and ask for another chance, yet more often than not the quarrels are of his making. Should I go on like this or hot? GENEVIEVE

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: It's a good thing to apologize when you're in the wrong, but very foolish to put yourself always on the defensive. It doesn't seem logical that all the fault would be yours, therefore all the conciliations should not be up to you, either. Your relationship with Matt is too one-sided to be happy. While you're in the present state of separation, it would be a grand idea for you to go out with other boys and, whatever you do, don't crawl back to Matt again.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I've been in love with Gerald for the past year—since I was 15 and he 16. We had often talked of being married, but now his family is moving clear across the country and we won't see each other for a year. Can our love survive this separation? W. W.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: True love can survive just about anything, and this is just as good a test as any for you young people. You are both very young; Gerald has his education to finish, so your future together is quite a way off. It will be best for you both to make new social contacts, and let the future decide whether you are truly meant for each other or not. It probably will be "not."

Nine Teachers Complete Tour Of Wales

CARDIFF, Wales (CP) — Nine Canadian schoolteachers recently completed a three-day tour of central and south Wales, thanks to the efforts of a Canadian housewife now living in the land of the Celts.

The trip for 26 teachers from Canada, Australia, South Africa, New Zealand and the United States was arranged by Mrs. Margarette Bradshaw, 45, and sponsored by the Welsh tourist and holidays board. Mrs. Bradshaw, born in London, Ont., was for 25 years a resident of Vancouver.

Canadian teachers on the tour were: Stella Lendon and Doris Welham, Montreal; Helen MacKay, Saskatoon; Alice Polishuk, Vancouver; Grace Shennan, Ottawa; Rosemary Allen, Halifax; and Audrey Edey, Pearl Buik and Ruby Kitay, all of Toronto.

Starting at Shrewsbury, Shropshire, the group went on to visit 16 Welsh towns and cities, winding up at Newport, Monmouthshire.

This tour and a later one scheduled for September are products of Mrs. Bradshaw's one-woman campaign to persuade Canadian travellers to visit Wales.

"As far as Canadians are concerned Wales is an unknown country," says Mrs. Bradshaw, who settled in Cardiff in 1946 and who formerly worked for radio stations in Vancouver and New Westminster, B. C. "They hear nothing about it at home, and don't include it when they plan their trips."

She decided to correct this situation and went to work on the Welsh travel board for more publicity in Canada. The two subsidized tours resulted. Now Mrs. Bradshaw hopes to interest the British Travel and Holidays Association in her campaign.

Wins Scholarship

TORONTO (CP)—Margot Rowland, 20, of Toronto has been named this year's winner of the Eaton graduating scholarship of $1,000. A graduate of the Royal Conservatory of Music's artist diploma course, Miss Rowland started her piano studies at the age of five. In 1949 she was awarded highest marks of the piano class in the Kiwanis music festival.

MARY MOORE SAYS:

Serve Boiled Squash On Special Menu

Chilled Tomato Juice with Lemon Juice, Boiled Fresh or Cured Beef Tongue, Raison Sauce, Boiled Pepper Squash, New Baby Beets and Tops, Shredd[illegible]bage and Peppergrass Salad, Emem's Orange Ambrosia Jelly, Iced Coffee.

This meal was prepared more or less in absentia. I was getting ready to go to the National Press Conference for a week and had to keep my nose to the typewriter. But guests were coming for dinner, so willy-nilly I had to get cooking.

I put the tongue (weight 3¾ lbs; cost $1.59) in the deep well cooker, covered with water and let it simmer with a bay leaf for 4 hours. In the hot weather I like a tongue for slicing cold and serving for a salad plate meal on the next day.

The Raisin Sauce was simplicity itself: I had the beets boiling in the bottom of the double boiler, so in the top of the double boiler I mixed well together 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, shake each of salt and nutmeg, and stirred in 1 cup boiling water (over the boiling beets) until thick. Then I added ¼ cup sultana raisins and juice of ½ lemon and let it cook covered 15 minutes. Delicious spooned over the tongue slices.

I usually bake pepper squashes but it was a hot day and the prospect of heating the oven was too much for me, so I just plain boiled it whole and when serving time came I gingerly quartered it, scooped out the seeds and smothered the quarters with butter, salt, pepper and a little nutmeg. It was ever so good and a change. It was 21c.

The tops of the new beets are so tender and delicate in flavor right now they should be used by all thoughtful cooks, for they are rich in vitamin B and minerals. (Do you leave the stumps of the stems on your beets when you peel them? They are attractive and taste good too and stretch the servings, especially when the beets are carefully cut in halves).

The only edible product in our garden (besides the peaches and apricots that ripen in August and September) is a little row of peppergrass. I enjoy going out with the scissors and clipping off a little climp to add to my salads. It is especially god in slaw—we like it in potato or any salad though.

EMEM'S ORANGE AMBROSIA JELLY

This is another quickie — the kind of dessert that is dear to my heart and I think it is a find. After putting the tongue on to boil I made this in 3 minutes flat, and put it in the refrigeraor to chill and set. Then I went back to my desk for 3½ hours, allowing myself 30 minutes to prepare the rest of the meal—with one quick break at 5 o'clock to put the squash on to boil.

This serves 5 generously, but if you slice a few large strawberries over each serving it will stretch for 6.

Into a bowl put 1 package lemon [illegible] flavored jelly powder. Dissolve it in 1 cup boiling water. Add 16-oz. can orange juice concentrate frozen, and 1 can mandarin oranges. Stir until frozen juice melts. Chill until set. This is not a stiff rubbery jelly—a quality which I like. It has a natural orange flavor and is rich and perfectly delectable as a cool as-frost dessert for a summer meal. Next time, instead of the can of mandarin oranges, I will try fresh fruit such as strawberries, sliced bananas, halved sweet cherries, but think that without the syrup from the canned fruit more water will have to be added.

Don't discard a soiled white straw hat without investigating the possibilities for restoring its beauty. You may be able to have it cleaned and blocked for a couple of dollars.

She was born in the slums of London, became one of the theatre's most famous stars . . . glamour, sparkle, high emotion—the stuff of which legends are made. He was a stuffy Boston blue-blood, shocked at her gay extravagances. Yet between them they shared a love that comes tremblingly alive. Highly-Sensitive Equipment Used By Seismic Crews

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—One of the oil industry's most vital jobs is that of the seismic crews who sound the earth's rock strata for structures which might bear petroleum.

They work with precisely-engineered, highly-sensitive equipment which records the vibrations set off by dynamite-created "earthquakes."

Their instruments must be delicate enough to detect a sound as soft as a raindrop on the ground, rugged enough to withstand extremes in weather and topographic conditions.

They are the result of painstaking research by engineers and careful manufacture by skilled machinists and wiring men in laboratories such as Carter Oil Co. maintains here. In it custom-designed seismograph equipment is made for use all over the world solely by affiliates of the Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey).

Last year $750,000 was spent equipping or servicing 27 seismic crews for Imperial, Creole, International, Standard Vacuum and Carter.

CLIMATIC CHALLENGE

A complete set of seismic equipment includes geophones, amplifiers, geophone and inter-connecting cables, cameras and communication instruments.

Nearly every piece must be custom-designed to meet the challenge of climate and topography where it is used.

In one section of the laboratory equipment is "tropicalized" to work in the tropics' intense heat and humidity. Other instruments are tested in a "cold chamber" to determine whether they will operate properly in an arctic winter's sub-zero temperatures.

Carter-designed machinery takes some strange shapes to cope with the various conditions under which it will be used. There's the swamp vehicle, a metal canoe with stern wheeler drive to push it through Venezuela's swamps. The same drive can move it over dry land.

A muskeg vehicle, a barge-like boat with caterpillar treads, transports seismic crews over thousands of acres of muskeg country from southern Canada to the Arctic circle.

Solar Eclipse

DW: "We're back to the usual subject."

OCCASION FOR SCIENCE

JH: "Esteemed colleagues, remember this is an occasion for science. Do you know that the shadow of this eclipse is travelling over 8,000 miles at 3,000 miles an hour?"

LD: "It says here that Kim 'works hard indoors and plays harder outdoors.' Anytime she wants to play up this way . . ."

JH: "The shadow crosses Lake Superior and heads for Labrador, touching the southern end of Hudson Bay. I wish that cloud would go away."

He ocntinues to squint hopefully through negatives.

LD: "They've got this Kim Smith waterskiing, boating . . . and look at that girl roll in the snow. Ahr-r-r-r-r-r."

JH: "The next total eclipse visible here won't come till 1963. And we're not seeing much of this one. There . . . the cloud's lifted and the sun is just about blotted out . . . It's getting dark."

DW: "I don't know why I got up. My stomach gets a bit queasy when I'm up this early in the morning."

JH: "According to the chart we're in an area of between 80 and 90 per cent total eclipse. About 85 per cent, I guess."

LD: "Under this picture of Kim Smith jumping in the air it says she has no fear of too little or too much masculine attention. 'You have all these interesting people here and there are guards,' she says. Let her try the Kawarthas."

JH: "Here comes the cloud again. Anybody want a last look?"

LD: "Look at this Kim Hunter 'getting warm in front of the ski lodge fire'."

DW: "I shoulda stood in bed. Good-night all."

Stirling Choir Entertained Monday

STIRLING (ENS)—Mr. and Mrs. Walter Warren entertained members of the senior choir of St. Paul's United church Monday evening. Approximately 50 people attended.

The tea table was laid with hand-crocheted lace cloth. A silver rose bowl of roses made up the centerpiece.

Jack Bush, vice-president of the choir, was master of ceremonies. He read an appreciative address to the parsonage family (Bakers') who are leaving here soon for South Rock Falls.

Miss Marlene Carlisle presented Mrs. Baker with a leather music portfolio. Mr. Baker received a leather billfold and Mr. Irwin, Mrs. Baker's father, also received a gift.

Mrs. Warren and Mrs. S. J. Elliott, assisted by Janet Ann Good, Donna Carlisle, Rose Ann Vanderwort, Janet Reynolds and Wendy Warren served the luncheon.

CONDITIONS APPROVED

The resolution as prepared by Mr. Dobbin and accepted by the committee was in brief:

That the present general committee be considered an advisory committee and a new building committee be named of seven members, including the general chairman, and that this committee be given authority to make decisions in respect to all details of the building final and when these plans are approved to proceed to have the building erected.

That a time schedule be authorized which would permit the preparation of plans and the securing of firm bids in order that an appeal may be made to the citizens of Peterborough city and county for additional funds towards the Centre building this autumn (this appeal being particularly aimed at new citizens of the city), and to request the city council to submit a debenture bylaw to the vote of the ratepayers at the next civic election in December, the debenture bylaw being for sufficient funds, which when added to all funds would be sufficient to permit the letting of a contract in the building season of 1955.

Mr. Dobbin wishes to be able to assure the citizens that actual construction of the building will commence in the spring of 1955.

That the Memorial Centre building be so designed and planned to be of utmost use and service to as many people and as many varied purposes as possible so that all the people of the city and district may be certain that it will be of fullest service to them.

OFFICE HELP

That an office be provided in the city hall for the building committee and particularly the general chairman, and that secretarial help be provided to assist in all the details of organization, fund-raising campaigns, etc.

That without touching the present moneys in the hands of the city treasurer allocated to building purposes only, an expense allowance of $100 a month be made available to the general chairman for the use of the committee, this allowance to be strictly accounted for by vouchers and receipts.

That the general chairman be permitted to select and nominate for the approval of the general committee and the city council the members he chooses to serve with him on the building committee.

In the planning, design and construction of the Centre greatest care will be taken that its financial success will be certain and that its operation will not be a financial burden to the ratepayers.

It is understood that the decisions and activities of the general chairman will conform with the conditions set forth in the private bill of the City of Peterborough, passed by the Ontario Legislature, known as the Peterborough Memorial Centre Act; and that the executive committee, site, building, finance, promotion and publicity committees, as presently organized, be dissolved to permit the more effective operation and quicker realization of the aims and objects of the Centre committee.

Housing Project Plans Announced

TORONTO (CP) Plans for a $15,893,000 government - sponsored housing project to be built in suburban North York were announced Tuesday night by chairman Fred Gardiner of the Toronto metropolitan council.

Plans call for 101 apartment buildings to accommodate 7,600 persons.

The federal government will contribute 75 per cent of the cost, the metropolitan council $1,191,000 and the provincial government the remainder.

The announcement said tenants will be selected from the $50-$77 weekly wage group and those with children will receive priority. Rents will range from $58 to $78 with the average $68.

No Complaints Says Cherney

Nobody is "taking pot shots" at Donald A. McGillis for straightening out a curve in Jackson Park creek to build a parking lot, Harry Cherney said today.

It was Mr. Cherney's letter to city council, to protect his riparian rights on the creek, which inspired other citizens to write and brought Ald. Stan McBride and Ald. Gordon Powell to Mr. McGillis' defence at Monday night's council meeting.

"Mine was just a routine letter, written on the advice of my lawyer," said Mr. Cherney. "Mr. McGillis is not being persecuted by anybody."

"Nobody is quibbling," said Mr. Cherney, about Mr. McGillis's plan to divert the creek. "There can be no argument that it will be a great improvement in the area."

But if he had not written to council, said Mr. Cherney, he would "not have had a leg to stand on" if the creek should flood, even if this is a "remote contingency."

2 College Professors Consider Appealing

CONCORD, N.H. (AP)—Lawyers for two college professors today considered an appeal from a Superior Court ruling that the state's attorney-general has a right to inquire into the context of lectures given at any school in his investigation of subversion.

Judge Robert F. Griffith also ruled Tuesday that the attorney-general's powers allow him to determine if there is Communist infiltration into any political party.

The question was appealed to the courts by University of New Hampshire professor Gwyne Harris Daggett, 46, and former Harvard professor Paul M. Sweezy, 43.

Says B.C. Tories Rebel Against Drew

VITORIA (CP)—Deane Finlayson, British Columbia Progressive Conservative leader, said in a statement Tuesday night that sections of the provincial party are rebelling against the national leadership of George Drew.

In another statement to the Victoria Colonist, Ma. - Gen. G. R. Pearkes, PC member of Parliament for Esquimalt-Saanich, said reports of a possible alliance between the Progressive Conservative and Social Credit parties are "nonsense."

Both men admitted there is a rift in the party in B. C. They pinpointed the trouble as disagreement over party organization.

Paper's Co-Founder Mrs. Livingston Dies

GRIMSBY, Ont. (CP) — Mrs. James A. Livingston, 90, resident of Grimsby for the last 69 years, died this morning in hospital. She had failed to recover from injuries suffered in a fall in her flower garden five weeks ago.

She was the co-founder of the Grimsby Independent which with this week's edition starts on its seventieth year of publication. Her son, J. Orlon Livingston, is the present publisher.

The former Isabella Trew, she was born in the Port Hope district Oct. 17, 1863, a daughter of the late John C. and Sarah (Beattie) Trew. As a child, she moved with her family to Nottawasaga township, and attended collegiates at Collingwood and Stratford.

Favor Suggestion To Annex Beach

HAMILTON (CP) — City council members today proved receptive to a suggestion from W. J. Orr, deputy minister of municipal affairs, that Hamilton Beach should ask to be annexed by the city of Hamilton.

"It is not at all unreasonable," said controller Jack MacDonald, acting mayor. "We should be prepared to consider such an application and find out just what it involves but I think the application should be made by somebody other than the city."

In the opinion of controller Sam Baggs, annexation of the Beach to the city was "bound to come with the development of the St. Lawrence seaway."

CHARGED WITH MURDER—Rafaele Esposita, 30, has been charged with murder in the sex-slaying June 19 of Mrs. Hedwig Kopplin, 28, at the lonely bush-settlement of Kelly Siding, 80 miles west of Fort William, Ont. In the embers of Mrs. Kopplin's burned-out cabin police also found the charred bodies of her son, Reinhart, 5, and daughter, Rita, 10 months. Esposita, who came to Canada three years ago from Italy, was remanded eight days to give psychiatrists an opportunity to examine him.—(CP Photo).

U.S. Dollar Finds

CAN'T BE BOTHERED

Most stores dealing in higher-priced items say they can't be bothered assessing two or three per cent on each American sale.

A jewelry store operator said it would be "too much work altogether" to assess exchange discounts and might, moreover, boomerang at the expense of the retailer. Markups, this source said, are sufficiently high in any case to absorb a two per cent loss without difficulty.

"Why should we kill our trade for only two cents," asks Herb Shacher, who operates a men's wear store. He felt most clothing stores would agree that extra business would nullify any losses, and that American customers could be given change in U.S. currency in any case.

It would be "dangerous" however, says Mr. Shacher for retailers to advertise that they accept U.S. funds at par. "Then you would have a lot of Canadians coming in wondering why they could not get two per cent off on their purchases, for they would think the Americans were getting cut rates."

A Grafton's official said that it would be "a waste of time" to charge for small purchases. On all large checks and money orders, however, the two per cent charge would be levied.

Opposite view was expressed by Ed Alberico of the Kawartha cigar store. Margin of profit on smaller items is too slim to allow storekeepers to take an exchange loss comfortably, he said, but on larger items, such as sunglasses and fishing-tackle, "we don't worry about the exchange."

Grocery stores, restaurants and drugstores almost all charge, but varying rates. One restaurant levies anywhere from two to four per cent, depending largely on the volume of trade. One druggist says their charge is three per cent, "but we wish we didn't have to charge anything."

PROFIT MARKUP

Whether or not the exchange is collected depends on the profit markup. Some firms which handle a large volume of American business must be the most unaccommodating to tourists because of a relatively thin profit margin.

A Tem Travel official noted that much of the money crossing his counter every day is American, "but if we didn't charge two per cent we'd be throwing away half our profit." He said 95 per cent of all money collected by this agency goes to the airlines and other transportation agencies which sell tickets through Tem.

Harry Cherney, president of the retail section of the chamber of commerce, doubts if "there will be any uniformity in exchange because there is no uniformity in markups." At most Peterborough stores, he said, no discount is being taken."

At Mr. Cherney's own store, customers tendering American currency are given change in U.S. funds. Stores so operating would take neither a profit or a loss from tourists.

One retailer thought stores would be more generous in accepting American funds at par "if so many Canadians didn't try to have it both ways." He was referring to resort operators and other retailers who receive American money, charge a discount, then try to pass it at par at stores where no discount is levied.

Americans seem to be getting used to discounts. One man from Indiana, climbing into his car at the city parking lot, shrugged and said: "It's not my country. I'm not complaining. Our dollar does better here than yours does back home."

Canadian money, though more highly rated on world money markets than that of the United States, is generally looked up with the same suspicion as Confederate money south of the border.

Chamber of commerce manager James Fraser recalls paying 25 cents at a toll bridge in Ohio, then being hauled back to add two cents of "real money" to his Canadian quarter. Others, sometimes unable even to spend one Canadian cent, have been less fortunate.

In Canada our $2 bill is avoided, and many tourists refuse to accept them. A susperstition has developed in the U.S. that two dollar bills are unlucky, and U.S. twos are seldom seen.

So seldom seen, in fact, that one American native told this reporter she would eat any American two dollar bill he produced. She hooted at the idea that they even existed.

It was an unpalatable lunch.

Millions In U.S. Watch Great Eclipse Spectacle

By JOE F. KANE

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Millions of North Americans got up early this morning to watch one of nature's greatest spectacles of the skies—a total eclipse of the sun.

Early risers in perfect weather turned out in everything from pyjamas and dressing gowns to going-to-work clothes.

Roof tops and high spots throughout the eclipse areas were crowded with persons armed with a weird assortment of eye protectors.

Although the total eclipse covered only a 70-mile-wide strip through parts of five states and three Canadian provinces as it headed for India, partial eclipses were seen in most sections of the nation except on the west coast.

TELESCOPES HELPED

Crowds stood awed during the 76 seconds of totality and greeted the reappearance of the sun with an audible, drawn out "Oh" like a crowd after a tense moment in an athletic contest.

Some of the most spectacular portions of the eclipse could be seen only by scientists and others using powerful telescopes.

One scientist who watched the celestial show from a plane 20,000 feet over Minneapolis and St. Paul reported the sun belched a fiery spectrum just before totality was reached.

A definite shadow path was visible from planes and observers said a pink hue lit the horizon on both sides of the totality strip.

Dr. Donald Menzel, director of the Harvard Observatory, who watched from a plane over Minneapolis, described the eclipse as "the most beautiful" of the four he has seen.

Television audiences saw the total eclipse on programs fed to networks. Television films made from planes were seen later in the day.

Weather conditions varied greatly in other sections where the eclipse was partial.

At Cleveland, the eclipse amounted to two dawns because of rain and an overcast. There was a lightening dusk as the eclipse advanced and then a clearing as it passed. There were clouds over most of New England, but a partial eclipse could be seen from time to time through breaks in the cloud layer.

Scientists hope observations being made at various checkpoints along the path of the eclipse will give them more accurate measurements of distances along the earth's surface—the exact width of the Atlantic ocean, for example.

These measurements, with others to be made in the future, also may help determine whether—as some scientists believe—continents are moving, relative to each other.

Observations also may reveal more information about the character of the corona the brilliance visible when the moon hides the sun, and its effects upon the earth.

In what appeared to be a giant struggle for dominance of the heavens, the moon chewed away at the sun for half an hour.

Slowly, the moon kept nipping at the sun that rose one-fourth eclipsed. Within 13 minutes, half the sun was blacked out as darkness followed dawn.

At 5:07 a. m. CST (7:07 a. m. EDT) the moon completely obscured the sun and an eerie darkness fell across a path 70 miles wide.

Light jutted from behind the black moon during totality as the corona or outer halo of the sun spilled out to two extended points like two steps from a giant onion.

MILLIONS SEE IT

Millions watched the celestial spectacle as the sun broke from behind the moon, the first razor-thin crescent of sunlight splashing an astounding amount of light on the path of totality.

Within 56 minutes after totality, the phenomenon that will not be seen for another five generations in many areas was over and the sun was again the undisputed sovereign of the skies.

Unidentified Gunman Shoots Garageman

VERNER, Ont. (CP) — Andre Beaudry, 63, was shot in the left leg by an unidentified gunman Tuesday night at his service station in this village 35 miles west of North Bay.

Doctors at Sturgeon Falls hospital said later that, although he had lost considerable blood, his condition was not serious.

Police said Beaudry closed his station at 11:30 p. m. and started to walk to his house 50 feet away. They said a man met him and demanded that Beaudry open the station again. When Beaudry refused, the man drew a revolver and wounded him in the leg.

Evangelist Suffers Second Kidney Attack

PARIS (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham today suffered another kidney attack that sent him into hospital for an examination.

But doctors told the American evangelist they didn't think it was serious and Graham went ahead with conferences which had already been scheduled.

Graham's kidney ailment put him in a hospital for a brief time in Germany last week but did no prevent him from appearing in Berlin Sunday.

Need Change In Approach To Advertising

NEW YORK (AP)—Psychologists for some time have been studying the reactions of potential buyers to various products.

They're coming up with new ideas on what really makes customers tick. Gadget makers, for example, are being cautioned against their long-time practice of selling a woman that their products can do her job many times better than she can. The woman may say she likes the idea, but subconsciously she resents it.

"Gives her an inferiority complex," say the psychologists. "She rejects ads that imply she's no longer of any importance around the house and that her place can be taken by a gadget."

GETTING SECOND LOOK

The idea that a woman buys clothes, cosmetics and perfume just to catch a man is getting a second look from the ad managers, too. Psychologists—according to a Chicago advertising agency, Weiss Geller—say what she's really after is the chance to admire herself in a mirror and get envious stares from other women.

Probing of the consumer's subchologists has led the Chicago chologists as led the chicago agency to question some of the time-worn advertising come-ons. Female authorities in radio and TV commercials, for example, are resented by other women—reminds them of a "nagging mother," and anyway listeners always suspect "women who know too much."

Atomic Power Plant Operating Reds Claim

LONDON (Reuters) — Moscow radio announced today that the first electric power station using atomic energy began working in Russia three days ago.

Quoting an official statement by the Soviet Council of Ministers, the radio said the station has a capacity of 5,000 kilowatts and supplies electric power for industrial and agricultural purposes to the surrounding districts.

The radio did not say where the station was situated.

Britain is now building an atomic power plant in Scotland which officials hope will be feeding electricity into power lines late in 1956. Several other countries, including Canada and France also have announced plans for similar projects.

FOR ONE POINT landings

WITH THE increasing hazards of highway travel, there may be a big market ahead for a new lightweight aluminum crash helmet developed in Europe. It not only takes unnecessary weight off your mind; tests proved that it also exhibits less "dent depth" when objects are dropped on it — with no one underneath, we should add.

Sounds like a sensible chapeau for construction workers too. Certainly lots of aluminum articles developed for one use have been quickly adopted for others . . . a process which has helped build heavy demand for Canadian aluminum both at home and in foreign markets. Giant CIL Firm Becomes Two Companies

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian Industries, Ltd., giant Canadian chemical firm, becomes two separate companies at the close of business today.

The new companies, which will divide CIL's present operations, are Canadian Industries (1954) Limited and Du Pont of Canada, Limited.

Not only assets, but executives and personnel who have worked together for years, will break old associations and go their separate ways — along with their accounts and records, and their products with near-unpronounceable names. Some will take one plant or office and some another.

Of CIL's two Montreal office buildings, the present CIL House becomes the Du Pont building, and the present Confederation building becomes the CIL, 1954, home.

Hundreds of telephones have been moved, more than 1,500,000 documents handled, and more than 1,000 employees will work in new quarters here or across Canada. Other thousands will remain in present quarters.

TAKE OVER CHEMICAL END

CIL 1954, with about 6,000 employees, will operate the chemicals, agricultural chemicals, explosives and ammunition, paints and coated fabrics and plastics departments of the former CIL, with plants at Halifax; Shawinigan Falls, Bronsburg, Montreal and Beloeil in Quebec; Cornwall, Chatham, Copper Cliff, Hamilton, New Toronto and Nobel in Ontario; Brainerd, Man.; Calgary and Edmonton; and James Island, B.C.

CIL 1954 also will handle certain resale products including acrylic sheeting; fungicides; mercurial wettable spray; seed treaters; and other chemical products.

H. Greville Smith, president of the present CIL, will be president of CIL 1954.

Du Pont of Canada, with about 3,000 employees, will take over films and textile - fibres plants at Shawinigan Falls and at Maitland and Kingston in Ontario, which manufacture cellophane cellulose film; polythene film; cellulose sponges and nylon filament and staple fibre. Resale products will include pesticides; orlon acrylic fibre; dyes x-ray film; petroleum chemicals; neoprene; refrigerants and plastic moulding and extrusion powders.

Herbert H. Lank, at present CIL vice-president, will be president of Du Pont of Canada.

The division of CIL results from a United States court judgment ordering Imperial Chemical Industries, Ltd., and E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company, the two principal shareholders, to separate their interests in the Canadian company.

$2,000,000 Project

ough. Some how he learned about the extent of the swamp while he was engaged with Timber Structures. He made a preliminary survey of it, was impressed by its garden potential, and enlisted the interest of other Hollanders in Toronto, particularly Mr. Rupke and several others.

They saw the feasibility of bringing the swamp into control by a system of dams, irrigation ditches and pumping equipment.

Interviews with members of Cavan council were begun last year and resumed this spring by Mr. Grumstra and Mr. Rupke. Interest of property owners quickened, resulting in the meeting. It was said by the two visitors that the completion of the plans for turning the swamp into a broad garden co-operative could hardly be compleetd in less than 10 years and that the eventual investment would exceed $2,000,000.

The swamp develoment would be subdivided into ten acre lots, each operated by a family, and that the workers would be brought from Holland.

Mr. Grumstra was at one time employed wtih a Dutch firm in South America, but it is understood he decided the political atmosphere was not to his liking. Eventually he arrived in Peterborough.

DRAINAGE EFFORT

As to the drainage course and the general location of the swamp, the Examiner obtained information from George Hooton, a former Reeve of Cavan and Warden of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham.

"Before the water course was dredged out through the swamp," Mr. Hooton said, "traffic could not be opened westerly on the 13th concession, where I live, and also on the 14th concession, the next one to the north."

Two streams in that northeastern area of the township were brought together. One was up near the Emily border. Their juncture was in the neighbourhood of lot 18, concession 14, where there are three or four Hooton farms. Reeve Lloyd Hooton owns at least one of them, Roy Hooton another and George Hootton a third, with approximately 150 acres in the swamp.

Other farms close to the swamp and the course are those of Neil Millen, Mrs. Fred Johnston, Albert Sanderson and so on through a property owned by Ira Robson, and thereabouts reaching the North Monaghan boundary. The William Hooton farm is a little to the west of the former Warden's home.

"Altogether there are at least 40 farmers with land that would be affected by purchase of the swamp," Mr. Hooton said. "I understand that the promoters are not interested in that extent of the swamp beyond the boundary between Cavan and North Monaghan.

ENDS UP IN JACKSON PARK

"Even Peterborough should be somewhat interested because the water from the Cavan swamp flows off to the east and a little to the north and becomes the Jackson Park creek, flowing through the city."

Mr. Hooton outlined the swamp area which he estimated at 2,500 to 3,000 acres or thereabouts. Generally, the limits of the swamp are about eight miles north of Millbrook and about 1½ miles east of the middle line of the township.

"It starts about 1½ miles west of Ida," Mr. Hooton said.

That is the neighborhood of the western end of the swamp, a mile or so from Ida and Mt. Pleasant.

The Long Swamp, as it has also been called, reaches easterly by northerly, crossing into North Monaghan.

The boundary road between Cavan and Monaghan extends north from Scott's Corners, past the former Owen Murray farm where Veterans Land Act houses are being built.

The creek draining the Cavan side crosses that road under the McIntosh bridge which was built in 1931, a joint expenditure by the United Counties and Peterborough county. George Hooton was Reeve of Cavan and the late Charles Tanner of Lakefield, Reeve of Peterborough. Other names recorded there are the late John McIntosh, and Adam Humphries and Willard G. Waterman of Peterborough.

The creek meanders easterly from the bridge, and flows off in the general direction of the north end of the city. It crosses the westerly extension of Sherbrooke St., turns back again under the road, and recrosses it. The direction then slants off more to the north flowing under the boundary road between Monaghan and Smith, the extension of the Jackson Park road, and is turned easterly by the roadbed of the CNR to Lindsay, a short distance south of the Ross L. Dobbin substation of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

Merely to follow the creek into the city: it parallels the railway past Lily lake and on down through Jackson Park then southerly under the Parkhill road bridge and through Hamilton Park. There may be another feeder creek from the north, but the main part of the stream can be traced from the valley out near Ida and Mt. Pleasant, and north of the Hooton farms.

That, however, is only an incidental interest. Mr. Hooton said he thought the Cavan owners of swamp property would be willing to sell if they could get what they considered a fair price.

To them the swamp has afforded continuing value in its supply of standing wood. Some timber has been cut into lumber and used in the building of houses, a resource that is still available.

Mr. Hooton said it was obvious that the big gardening project would involve quite an engineering job. Rich black muck has been forming in the swamp during more years than the Cavan people know. It was there before their ancestors settled in that northeastern corner of Durham county, and with a system of canals for irrigation the property should produce volume crops comparable proportionately with the yields from the Holland marsh development.

"It would be quite a change for this section of the township if they brought in 200 to 250 families," Mr. Hooton mused. Once a veteran leader in the United Counties, he is still interested in their affairs and especially in his own township.

With the letting of the contract for the provincial reformatory on the 50 acres west of the CNR Station, and the preliminary discussions about developing the swamp, the Cavan community is visualizing rather swiftly descending alteration in their outlook around their long familiar countryside.

Resuscitation Apparatus Demonstrated At Lakefield

LAKEFIELD (By Staff Reporter) — The latest apparatus in drowning resuscitation was demonstrated by assistant provincial Sea Scout commissioner Kenneth E. Jakins and a team of scouts at their "ship" on Tuesday evening. Many members of Peterborough senior YWCA swimming club comprised a large part of the audience.

Before the demonstration started Mr. Jakins explained the various popular methods of resuscitation. There is the best known Schafer method, the most-efficient Sylvester method and the latest Holger-Neilson. None of these, Mr. Jakins said, was efficient as the latest and best-proven method called the Eve's rocker table, developed during World War II and standardised through British and Commonwealth navies. The demonstration began.

Four scouts, Albert Hudson, David Payton, Jim Galvin and Robert Williams, trussed Payton to a stretcher and hoisted it to a pyramidal stand, made by Mr. Jakins, and rocked the "patient" back and forth on the allotted count of seconds. The quick jerky stops and starts are apparently the necessary movement to start up ebbing life in a victim, doctors say.

Folowing the scout team workout, Lakefield beach councillor Nancy Doubt demonstrated the table under direction of Mr. Jakins.

The Eve's rocker table, together with a portable oxygen tank for use with it when necessary, is to be stored at the Scout building and available to any water crisis that may arise in the immediate or surrounding district. The stretcher part of apparatus was presented to the community by Dr. Hugh E. Gastle. Most of the Lakefield public pool team captains, under Mrs. Roy Farrell, were present at the demonstration. The Peterborough club were invited to attend by Mrs. A. R. Garlepy.

ONE-FAMILY INVASION—Mr. and Mrs. William A. Meehan and their eight children arrive in Montreal from England to set a record, so far as known, as the largest English family to emigrate to Canada since the Second World War. They formerly lived in Southport, near Liverpool, where Mr. Meehan, 45, was a mail-order supervisor. He felt the children would have a brighter future in Canada so he sold his home, car and furniture and set out. Some Animal Babies Need Helping Human Hand

NEW YORK (AP)—Some animal babies need a helping human hand when it's feeding time at the Bronx zoo.

Right now the bottle-and-formula "club" consists of Kenneth the Wanderoo monkey; Rough and Toughy, two baby seals; a pair of recently born eagles, and a Japanese sika faun whose mother died after its birth.

The case of Kenneth has the personal attention of Miss Mary Murphy, a nurse at the zoo's hospital. Kenneth was born 11 days ago and his mother—from Ceylon—wouldn't have anything to do with him.

So Miss Murphy mixed up a regular baby formula for the tiny monk, which he gets every two hours. He spends his day on Miss Murphy's desk. At night, he accompanies her home on the subway.

Roughy and Toughy the seals were fished out of Alaskan waters about a month ago. Although they weigh between 20 and 25 pounds, they're not old enough to know how to eat.

For them it's a formula concocted of one can of evaporated milk, a pint of salad oil, 1½ tablespoonsful of cod liver oil and seven finely ground smelts. A zoo keeper hand-feeds them with a syringe and rubber tube.

When they learn to eat the smelts, that will become their diet. Too little to occupy the big seal pool, Roughy and Toughy splash around in a pond designed for ducks.

The eagles? They were hatched on June 11 and 12, and don't even know how to stand up. They're being hand-fed on chopped eggs, meat and fish.

Council Refuses Pay Probe Waste Problem

LINDSAY (ENS) — Lindsay council Tuesday night balked at contributing to the cost of a provincial department of health experiment at the sewage disposal plant into the algae problem in the local river and lakes.

The council decided not to help pay the cost of the experiment which is being conducted by a team from the department to discover whether seepage from the disposal plant beds is causing some of the algae formation in the river and lake. The theory advanced earlier this year was that phosphates from the seepage were causing the growth of the algae.

Mayor Hick was the only one of the council to support paying part of the bill. Other councillors objected that the algae problem existed before the disposal plant was installed and that since the department forced installation of the plant is should pay for any business concerning it.

Dead Dogs, Chickens Unburned In Lindsay

LINDSAY (ENS) — Alderman Russell Lamb notified Lindsay council Tuesday night that a local man who was given special dumping privileges at the new town dump for the disposal of dead animals was abusing the privileges.

"There are dead dogs, cats and a pig lying on the surface of the ground out there," said the alderman. He also stated that hundreds of dead chicks and thousands of rotting eggs were attracting millions of flies "as big as bumblebees."

Council agreed that the condition should be investigated and the man be forced to abide by the regulations agreed to — that all such refuse be buried when dumped.

Bishop Begins His New Duties

OTTAWA (CP)—Bishop Ernest Samuel Reed today began his new duties as head of the Anglican diocese of Ottawa.

The 45 year-old former Archdeacon of Quebec became the fourth Anglican bishop in the capital's 100-year history at traditional ceremonies in Christ Church Cathedral Tuesday.

He succeeds Rt. Rev. Robert Jefferson, who has retired.

Most Rev. Robert J. Renison, Metropolitan of Ontario and Archbishop of Moosonee, Ont., conducted the consecration. More than 1,000 persons watched the two-and-a-half hour service in the morning. Six other bishops from Ontario and Quebec took part in the consecration of the bishop-elect by the laying-on of hands.

In afternoon services the newly-consecrated bishop was enthroned.

Television cameras recorded the rites for the CBC.

NEED MONEY

to stock your coal bin NOW?

You would probably save yourself money, and inconvenience too, if you picked up your telephone now and ordered your winter coal supply.

But, what with other expenses, you may find that there's not enough in the family treasury to stand a sudden coal order at present — even with the cheaper summer prices.

If you are short of cash for such a purchase, why not see the manager of your local B of M branch? Provided you have an assured income, and can repay a loan in ten monthly instalments or less, the Bank of Montreal will gladly lend you money for your winter fuel.

And with your 'coal money' from "My Bank", you'll pay your coal-bill with one lump sum... you'll catch the seasonally lower prices... you'll have your coal delivered dry and you'll avoid the last-minute rush on the coal dealer.

So, to be nice and snug next winter, see the B of M today!

Now Housemaids Must Pass Examinations

BONN (Reuters)—German love of order and legal tabulation has reached new heights with government recognition of examinations for housemaids.

A housemaid who has scrubbed and darned for two years in a household may take an examination for a certificate as "qualified domestic assistant."

If she passes, she may describe herself as such on her identity card or passport. But the real prize is a finely engraved certificate with stamps, seal-wax and red ribbon which she can display to any future employer.

CAREFULLY OUTLINED

The conditions for the examination have been carefully set out in two pages of official language which the federal labor minister, Anton Storch, has sent to local authorities.

The ministry recommends that housemaids should conform to the following ideal physical type: "medium to strong build, with properly functioning muscles, joints and sinews." It lays special emphasis on a "straight, well-articulated load - carrying spinal column, good sense of smell and taste, normal hearing."

Maids should have "adaptibility, resourcefulness, frank, companionable natures, conscientiousness and a sense of responsibility."

Transcontinental Trains Serve Liquor

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario liquor board announced Tuesday night that Canada's two main railways have been granted licences to serve liquor on transcontinental trains crossing the province.

The licences to the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National railways will permit sale of liquor, beer and wine in dining and club cars. The applications were heard by the board at a public hearing in Toronto June 4.

A railways spokesman said sales probably will start about mid-July.

Liquor will be sold to passengers in sealed bottles containing 1.6 ounces. The seal will be broken by the waiter who must account for all empty bottles.

The licences will apply to four transcontinental trains of each railway—westbound trains starting from Toronto and Montreal and eastbound trains starting from the Pacific coast.

After performing at the stampede, to be held from July 2 to 10, the team will go to Vancouver for the British Empire Games.

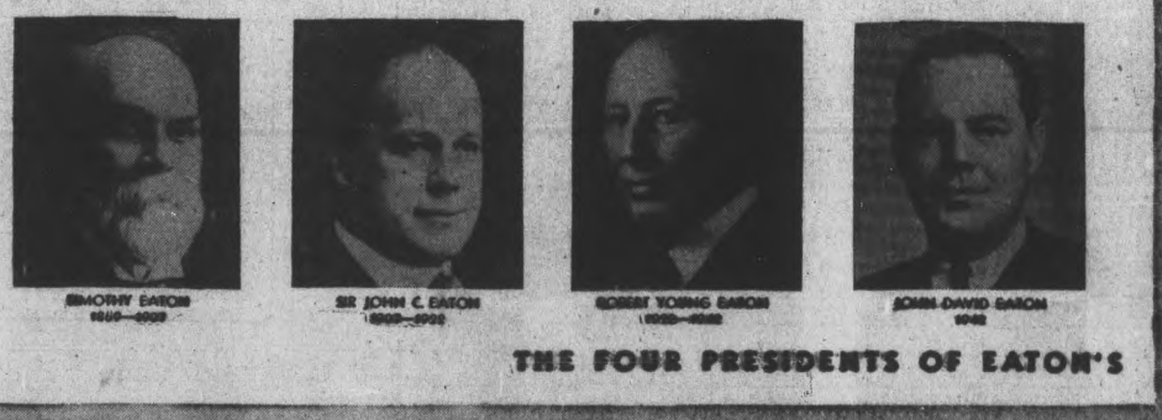
Obituary

MISS HELEN HUGEL

The passing of Miss Helen Hugel on Tuesday, June 27, leaves a great gap in the life of the members of many of Peterborough's older families.

Although Miss Hugel had to live in the hospital for some years, she always retained her interest in her friends, a visit to her was a pleasure, something to be looked forward to.



Miss Hugel was a daughter of Baron Adolph von Hugel, who was president of the old Midland Railway of Canada and who lived with his family in Port Hope.

Miss Hugel for many years resided with her friend, Miss Mary Archer at 300 Rubidge St., Peterborough.

She was a member of St. John's (Anglican) Women's Auxiliary, the King's Daughters, the Thursday Club and the Otonabee Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire.

In the death of Helen Hugel, Peterborough loses a very great personality.

EATON'S

THE FOUR PRESIDENTS OF EATON'S

Canada's 87th Birthday Finds EATON'S in its 85th year of service

Almost as old as Confederation itself, Eaton's catches and reflects the gleam of Canada's shining future. To stores, mail order, factories and order offices comes fresh opportunity for service in a land spanned by great railways, where distance is being slashed by new highways, airways, and seaways; where oil and ore are being found in rich abundance; where the promise of a better life brings New Canadians by the thousands to its shores . . . Eaton's has become an integral part of the Canadian scene, its story a thick chapter of Canadian history. It is a wholly Canadian institution, owned by Canadians, supported by Canadian funds, run by Canadian methods in the interests of Canadian shoppers . . . On the completion of the latest Eaton's of Canada in Charlottetown, P.E.I. Eaton's will have stores in every province from sea to sea—a total of 57 stores, almost 300 Order Offices, besides factories and Mail Order distribution centres. Eaton's keeps pace with Canada's progress. Blending cherished principles with new ideas, linking traditions with modern methods, the Company moves forward to serve Canadians in every walk of life, in every part of the country.

On Canada's birthday we are proud to emphasize that over 85% of the goods sold in Eaton's are bought in Canada.
